IV. If the board had thoroughly reconsidered, according to the decision of the supreme court, the various county returns for the purpose of throwing out in tote all that could be shown to be irregular, false, or fraudulent, instead of purging the re-turns of their illegalities and retaining the true vote, there should be thrown out the returns from the following counties—

Counties.	Tilden electors.	Hayes electors.
Baker Clay Hamilton Jackson Manatee	238 287 617 1, 397 262	143 122 330 1, 299 26
Total	2, 801	1, 920

leaving a majority for the Hayes electors of 791.

V. If the vote of the State were to be estimated according to the honest and true vote of the people at the polls, without regard to precinct, county, or State canvassers, the result would be, according to the judgment of the minority, a larger majority for the Hayes electors than the declared majority of 925.

CONCLUSION.

rassers, the result would be, according to the judgment of the minority, a larger majority for the Hayes electors than the declared majority of 925.

CONCLUSION.

The minority, in conclusion, deem it but just to state that they entered upon the performance of their daties deeply impressed with the importance of the task enjoined upon them by the resolution of the House of Representatives creating the committee. We endeavored, as far as the infirmities of human nature would permit, to divest ourselves of all partisan prejudice and report truly the facts from the evidence, regardless of political consequences. We entertained the hope that the report of the committee would be unanimous, believing that the selemn judgment of all its members, composed as it was of men of both political parties, might tend to calm the public mind and aid in the solution of the vexed presidential problem. But the many proofless and extravagant claims made by the majority defeated the consummation of our wishes.

Feeling that we have been animated by the spirit of truth and justice in reaching our conclusions, we court an impartial but rigid examination of the evidence which influenced the judgment of the State canvassing board in rejecting the returns from certain preclinets when canvassing the votes east for presidential electors, our report, as well as that of the majority, must be necessarily imperfect. Significance should be attached to the failure of the committee to inquire into the conduct of the election in many counties wherein gross irregularities and frands were alleged to have been committed.

We now call attention to the following extract from one of the closing paragraphs of the majority report, which is as well substantiated by the evidence as almost every other conclusion reached by the majority:

"There was not the slightest proof that the colored people of that State were in any manner restricted in the enjoyment of their political rights, but your committee were impressed with the very apparent disposition manifeste

"1. That we pledge ourselves, each to the other, by our sacred honor, to give the first preference in all things to those men who vote for Reform; and that we give the second preference in all things to those who do not vote at all.

"2. That we affirm the principle that they who vote for high taxes should pay them, and that in employing, or hiring, or renting land to any such persons as vote for high taxes, that in all such cases a distinction of 25 per cent, or one-fourth, be made against such persons. That merchants, lawyers, and doctors, in extending credit to such persons, make the same distinction.

"3. That in all such cases we extend as little credit or use of our means as possible, leaving them to their chosen friends.

"4. That in the ensuing year we positively refuse to re-employ one out of every three who may then be upon our places and who voted against Reform and low taxes; and that a list of all such persons be published in the Constitution, in order that we may know our friends from our enemies.

"5. That we will consider it dishonorable and unneighborly for any farmer, planter, merchant, lawyer, doctor, or other person to violate any of the foregoing resolutions."

resolutions."

The evidence shows that these resolutions were extensively circulated and were posted in conspicuous places at each poll, for the inspection and information of the colored voters.

The next paragraph opens with the emphatic declaration that "there is no more doubt that the State of Florida cast her vote for the Tilden electors than there is that Massachusetts cast her vote for the Hayes electors." If this allegation is no better supported than that contained in the preceding paragraph, we are quite certain that bald assertions will have but little influence on the public mind.

For the reasons hereinbefore set forth, and from the evidence before the committee touching the action of the State canvassing board in counting and declaring the vote for presidential electors and the conduct of the election in the State of Florida, the minority of the committee recommend the passage of the following resolution:

Resolved. That at the election held on November 7, A. D. 1876, in the State of Florida, F. C. Humphries, Charles H. Pearce, William H. Holden, and T. W. Long were fairly and legally chosen as presidential electors by the legal voters thereof, and were duly declared elected; and that the said electors having on the first Wednesday of December, A. D. 1876, cast their votes for Rutherford B. Hayes for President and for William A. Wheeler for Vice-President, they are the legal votes of the State of Florida, and must be counted as such.

WILLIAM WOODBURN.

MARK H. DUNNELL.

The SPEAKER. The chairman of the committee suggests that the resolution of the majority be read.

Mr. CONGER. Not if that brings it before the House.

The SPEAKER. In presenting that suggestion to the House the Chair will see that no possible advantage is taken of the rights of any

Mr. PAGE. I move that the House do now adjourn.
Mr. THOMPSON: I do not yield the floor.
The SPEAKER. The chairman of the committee simply asks that the resolution attached to the report of the majority of the committee shall be read for the information of the House.

Mr. CONGER. It will be in the RECORD to-morrow, and I would rather see it there than hear it read now when we are all tired.

Mr. PAGE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. PAGE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the receiving and reading of the report was made under the condition stated by the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER.] The Chair is apprised by the clerks that it will take full an hour to read the remainder of the report. The Chair thinks the gentleman from Massachusetts has in fact occupied his hour, and the Chair therefore recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. PAGE] to make a motion to adjourn.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will not the report come up as unfinished business to morrow?

to-morrow?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and on a divis-

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and on a division there were—ayes 71, noes 109.

Mr. PAGE. I call for tellers.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose there would be no trouble about this matter if it was understood that the resolution appended to the majority report would come up to-morrow as unfinished business. If that agreement be made there is no reason why the session of to-night should be prolonged.

The SPEAKER. The Chair must allow the House to judge whether it will adjourn or not.

it will adjourn or not.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is not this the unfinished business after the reading of the Journal to-morrow? I ask that as a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER. Certainly it will be the unfinished business.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. PAGE and Mr. SPRINGER were ap-

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 50, noes 109.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, forty members voting therefor. The question was taken; and there were—yeas 47, nays 144, not voting 98; as follows:

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 47, nays 144, not voting 98; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Bagby, George A. Bagley, John H. Baker, Ballou, Beebe, Bradley, Horatio C. Burchard, Cannon, Conger, Crounse, Dobbins, Dunnell, Flye, Fort, Foster, Haralson, Benjamin W. Harris, Hatborn, Hubbell, Kimball, Lapham, Lawrence, Lynch, MacDougall, McCrary, Miller, Monroe, Oliver, O'Neill, Page, Pierce, Pratt. Kobinson, Sampson, Smalls, A. Herr Smith, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Tutts, Waldron, John W. Wallace, G. Wiley Wells, Andrew Williams, William B. Williams, James Wilson, and Alan Wood, jr.—47.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Ainsworth, Ashe, Atkins, John II. Bagley, jr., Banning, Bell, Blackburn, Bland, Bliss, Blount, Boone, Bradford, John Young Brown, Buckner, Samuel D. Burchard, Cabell, John H. Caldwell, William P. Caldwell, Candler, Carr, Cate, John B. Clarke of Kentucky, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Clymer, Cochrane, Collins, Cook, Cowan, Cox, Culberson, Cutler, Davis, Dibredl, Douglas, Durand, Durham, Eden, Egbert, Ellis, Faulkner, Felton, Finley, Forney, Franklin, Fuller, Gause, Glover, Goodin, Gunter, Andrew H. Hamilton, Hardenbergh, Henry R. Harris, John T. Harris, Hartridge, Hartzell, Hatcher, Haymond, Henkle, Abram S. Hewitt, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hill, Holman, Hooker, Hopkins, House, Humphreys, Hunton, Hurd, Jenks, Frank Jones, Kehr, Lamar, Franklin Landers, George M. Landers, Lane, Le Moyne, Levy, Lewis, Lord, Lynde, Mackey, Maish, McFarland, McMahon, Mctcalfe, Milliken, Mills, Money, Morgan, Mutchler, Neal, New, O'Brien, John F. Philips, Poppleton, Potter, Powell, Rea, John Reilly, Rice, Riddle, John Robbins, William M. Robbins, Miles Ross, Savage, Salve, Scales, Schleicher, Sheakley, William E. Smith, Southard, Sparks, Springer, Stanton, Steneger, Stevenson, Stone, Swann, Teese, Terry, Thomas, Thompson, Throckmorton, Tucker, Turney, John L. Vance, Robert B. Vance, Charles C. B. Walker, Gilbert C. Walker, Walling, Walsh, Ward, Warner, Warren, Erastus Wells, Whitehouse, Whitthorne, Alpheus

So the House refused to adjourn.

During the roll-call, Mr. RÖBBINS said: My colleague, Mr. Yeates, is detained from his seat by sickness.

Mr. CONGER. I move that the House take a recess until half past eleven o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. That motion is in order.

Mr. PAGE. I move to amend the motion of my friend from Michigan by substituting half past ten for half past eleven.

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division there were—ayes 105, no 1.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum voted.

The SPEAKER. No quorum has voted and no motion is now in order except a motion to adjourn or a motion for a call of the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose there is no reason why the House should remain in session at this hour in the evening. I understood the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] wanted to ask the unanimous consent of the House to submit some proposition; but, if not, should be myself in favor of the motion to adjourn, and would make that motion.

Mr. CROUNSE. I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and thereupon (at eleven o'clock and thirty-five minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By the SPEAKER: A copy of the proceedings in information in nature of quo warranto in the case of The State of Florida exrel Wilkinson Call et als. vs. Charles H. Pearce et al., to the committee on the recent election in Florida.

Also, an authenticated copy of an act passed by the Legislature of Florida, entitled "An act to declare and establish the appointment by the State of Florida of electors of President and Vice-President,"

to the same committee.

By Mr. GEORGE A. BAGLEY: The petition of citizens of Herkimer County, New York, for the repeal of the statute limiting the time for applications for pensions, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BAKER, of Indiana: The petition of Elmore Wyatt and others of De Kalb County, Indiana, that pensioners receive pensions from the date of their discharge from the Army, to the same com-

By Mr. BRADLEY: The petition of T. W. Nevins and 60 other citizens of Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CROUNSE: The petition of citizens of Nebraska for a postroute from Plum Creek to New Helena, Nebraska, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of A. D. Williams and others, for a post-route from Kenesaw to Riverton, Nebraska, to the same committee.

By Mr. DE BOLT: The petition of R. G. Whetmore and 44 other persons of Hamilton, Caldwell County, Missouri, for cheap telegraphy, to the same committee.

to the same committee.

By Mr. FORT: The petition of O. A. Corwin and 300 other citizens of Ford County, Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the same committee. By Mr. GAUSE: The petition of the trustees and superintendent of the Institute for the Blind at Little Rock, Arkansas, that an appropriation be made in aid of the printing-house for the blind at Louisville, Kentucky, to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. HARTZELL: The petition of William H. Conner and 29 other citizens of Randolph County, Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HOUSE: Memorial of the Historical Society of Tennessee, that Congress purchase the papers of the General Count de Rochambeau, to the Joint Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HUNTER: The petition of citizens of Indiana, that Con-

By Mr. HUNTER: The petition of citizens of Indiana, that Congress fix a uniform rate of interest upon money throughout the United States not exceeding 6 per cent. per annum, to the Committee on States not exceeding 6 per cent. per annum, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. KIMBALL: The petition of James H. Marsh and 15 others, that the statute limiting the time for applications for pensions and preventing the payment of arrears of pension be removed, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LORD: Two petitions, signed by Henry W. Renell and others and A. A. Smith and others, of New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, two petitions of James C. Knox, A. B. Green, Daniel Eaton, J. W. Bates, and others, and Silas L. Snyder, George W. Brown, Alexander H. Campbell, O. S. Kenyon, and others, of New York, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. By Mr. MORGAN: The petition of M. A. Gill, J. M. Gill, and 20 other citizens of Sarcoxie, Jasper County, Missouri, of similar import to the carry convents.

port, to the same committee.

By Mr. NEW: The petition of citizens of Indiana, of similar import, to the same committee.

Ry Mr. O'NEILL: The petition of citizens of Philadelphia, for the repeal of the law limiting the time for applications for pensions and preventing the payment of arrears of pension, to the Committee on

By Mr. PAGE: Memorial of Ed. F. Tyler, of Sacramento, California, that soldiers be granted additional bounty-land warrants, to the Committee on Public Lands.

Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. ROBBINS, of North Carolina: The petition of citizens of North Carolina, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WALSH: The petition of Enos Ray, Alfred Ray, B. C. King, Henry Hoyle, J. W. Barker, W. B. Beall, and A. G. Osborn, trustees of Emory church, Brightwood, District of Columbia, for compensation for the use and occupation of said church property by the United States Army and for wood taken and used by said Army. the United States Army and for wood taken and used by said Army, to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WELLS, of Missouri: Remonstrance of citizens of Missouri, against granting permission to build a bridge over the Missouri River at or near Glasgow, to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of New York: The petition of E. W. Hunt, M. N. Nichols, and others, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

IN SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Byron Sunderland, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. No. 3370) to amend the statutes in relation to damages for infringement of patents, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Patents.

REPORT OF DISTRICT BOARD OF HEALTH.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health of the District of Columbia for the year 1876 be printed for use and distribution by said board.

DISTRICT POLICE COMMISSIONERS-VETO MESSAGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives upon the bill (H. R. No. 4350) to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia; which was read, as follows:

In the House of Representatives January 30,

January 30, 1877.

The President of the United States having returned to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, the bill entitled "An act to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia," with his objections thereto, the House of Representatives proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the same, and it was *Resolved*, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

GEORGE M. ADAMS, Clerk.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The motion was agreed to.

PROCEEDINGS OF ELECTORAL COMMISSION.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask unanimous consent out of order, for the reason that I am obliged to leave the Chamber, to offer the following resolution, and I ask for its present consideration:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That the public proceedings of the electoral commission appointed under the act of Congress approved January 29, 1877, as taken down under the direction of the commission, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; and also that a number of copies of the same, equal to the number of copies of the RECORD and of uniform size therewith, be printed separately; 500 copies thereof for the use of the commission, and the residue for the use of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to ask the Senator if that will embrace the debates before the commission?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, sir; it is understood, just as the proceedings of the Senate it will embrace everything that takes place in public.

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand that it is contemplated by the reso-

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand that it is contemplated by the resolution that all the proceedings shall be published and printed in the RECORD, and that the same proceedings shall be printed separately in uniform size. What is the object of having that done?

Mr. EDMUNDS. It was stated by several gentlemen in considering the subject that they desired to have, just as in the impeachment trials that have occurred, the daily RECORD containing the proceedings and also, as was done in the impeachments, a separate volume of the same size that should contain those proceedings and nothing else. That was the object. I am told that is the way that has been usual. usual.

The resolution was agreed to.

GOVERNMENT OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I present resolutions adopted at a mass-meeting of the white and colored voters of Barnwell County, South Carolina, which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. These resolutions were offered by Mr. E. Mercer Sumpter, a prominent colored man of that county, and unanimously adopted, a large number of colored men being present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read if there be no objection.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read as follows:

BARNWELL COURT HOUSE, SOUTH CAROLINA January 15, 1877.

At a mass-meeting of the citizens of Barnwell County, South Carolina, held this day at Barnwell Court House, the following resolutions submitted by Mr. E. Mercer Sumpter were unanimously adopted:
"Resolved, That the 700 colored voters who enrolled their names in the democratic clubs, and the 976 who cast their ballots for General Wade Hampton and the candidates on his ticket, did so to secure to their native State honest government and home rule, and to free her from the thicking government under which she has so long suffered, from corrupt carpet-baggers and infamous scalawags"—

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to inquire what the paper is and how it is before the Senate.

Mr. ROBERTSON. These are resolutions presented by a prominent colored man of Barnwell County, South Carolina, and adopted at a large mass-meeting there, and sent to me for presentation to the Senate.

Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. Is the paper a petition addressed to the Senate?

Mr. ROBERTSON. It is sent to me to be presented to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the resolution of a mass-meeting and is not in the form of a petition.

Mr. SARGENT. I object to its reading. It is not addressed to the Senate. We certainly have had enough of vituperation in every form.

I presume persons could be got together in any corner of this country to pass language intemperately abusing those they do not like politically.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I will state to the Senator that the resolution was adopted at a mass-meeting presided over by Judge Maher.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California objects to the reading. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate, Shall these resolutions be read?

Mr. SARGENT. I understand that this is not a petition addressed to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands.

Mr. SARGENT. The order of business is the reception of petitions. Therefore, I insist that it is out of order, and I ask the Chair to rule upon my point of order.

Mr. MORRILL. And it is not in respectful language.

Mr. SARGENT. It certainly is not in respectful language. It is grossly abusive. I raise the point of order that it cannot come under the present order, which is the reception of petitions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not under the order of petitions in any form; and, therefore, it will be ruled out of order, not coming in the form of a petition. It is not a petition, and does not purport to be a petition.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask if the paper does not request the Senator to present these resolutions to the Senate?

Mr. DAVIS. Let the Clerk read the beginning of the paper.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not addressed to the Senate.
Mr. ROBERTSON. I was requested to submit these resolutions by a mass-meeting of citizens of Barnwell County, South Carolina.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands there is a resolution asking the Senator from South Carolina to present the paper to Congress.

Mr. DAVIS. There is such a resolution, I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands, a resolution asking the Senator to present it. It is not in the form of a memorial, is not signed by any Senator or party, and does not come

Mr. SAULSBURY. With all respect to the Chair, I submit that it is not important that the resolutions composing the paper should present the formula of words to make a petition. I apprehend it does not require any particular formula of words to bring it within the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will answer the Senator from Delaware that there is no signature to the paper. If the Senator appends his name or any Senator, the Chair will entertain it as a memorial to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. Is it not indorsed by the Senator who presents it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not signed by the Senator from South Carolina who presented it.

Mr. DAVIS. If it were, which would only take a minute, it would then be in order, I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If any will then be in the form of a memorial. If any Senator signs the paper, it

Mr. DAVIS. Then I submit to the Senator from South Carolina to indorse his name on its back and let it be read, as such papers have been read in all cases when the reading was asked for by the Senator presenting them.

Mr. WALLACE. Do I understand that it is the rule of the Senate that when a Senator rises in his place and presents a memorial, in-dorsing it as from his own constituents, with its substance, that in dorsing it as from his own constituents, with its substance, that in addition thereto it requires the signature of the Senator before the Senate will entertain it? We every day present memorials from boards of trade and other organizations, conched in proper language and asking that they may be presented to the Senate. Why is a different rule to be made to apply to the Senator from South Carolina when he presents what is simply a memorial? He rises in his place when he presents what is simply a memorial? He rises in his place and presents to the Senate as a representative of his people a memorial, as is his right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will remind the Senator from Pennsylvania that the ruling of the Chair is precisely as was ruled before in the case of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Bogy] who presented a paper here and it was required that he or some other party should sign it, for otherwise such a paper is not in the order of petitions and memorials. The Chair stated that if the Senator from South Carolina or any individual would sign the paper the Chair would receive it as a petition. The Senator from South Carolina stated that he had not signed it. The paper shows that he did not sign it.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I have signed it.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has now signed it, and it is now in order.

Mr. WALLACE. I do not specially rise in reference to this case, but to learn the rule. Here is a memorial which is required in its very terms to be presented to the Senate. It has been the practice of the Senate so long as I have been here to receive such memorials. The case of the Senator from Missouri differed from this. That was a private paper, and in it there was nothing that suggested that it should be presented to the Senate. It was a report to other parties.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will remind the Senator that it was a counter statement, and reported from a special commit-that it was a counter statement, and reported from a special committee or a portion of a special committee.

Mr. WALLACE. I understand that; but I desire to learn whether in the case of a memorial, for instance, of a board of trade of the chief city of my State, presented by me, containing a resolution asking that I should submit it to the Senate, when I rise in my place and present it to the Senate I am required also to place upon it my indorsement that it is such a memorial.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not required, because it bears the signature of some officer. The Chair did not understand that there were any signatures to this paper. The Chair is now advised that it bears the signatures of the president and secretary of the meeting. It therefore comes within the ruling of the Chair. The Chair ing. It therefore comes within the ruling of the Chair. The Chair was not so advised before. The memorial is now fully in order, as the Senator from South Carolina has appended his signature. The Secretary will now read the paper.

Mr. SARGENT. A memorial should be respectful in its terms?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Certainly.

Mr. SARGENT. It should be decorous in its language, no matter to whom that language may be applied. I understand that it can to whom that language may be applied. I understand that it cannot be read in any event without unanimous consent. I object to its not be read in any event without manimous consent. I object to its reading on that ground, not that it is presented by the Senator from South Carolina, for whom I have very high respect. I should object to language like this if read in the presence of the Senate by any one, unless the Senator had a right to have it read, and then of course my objection would be of no avail. We have heard a partial reading of this paper. I find that the terms "carpet-baggers" and "scalawags" are sowed through it, peppered all the way through it. Who are meant by "scalawags?" Persons of southern birth who dare to be republicans are "scalawags."

meant by "scalawags." Fersons of southern birth who dare to be republicans are "scalawags."

Mr. ROBERTSON. I am a republican.

Mr. SARGENT. Who are "carpet-baggers?" Men from my State, from Massachusetts, or from Illinois, or any other State, who may go to South Carolina or to Florida or some other State and entertain republican principles. I say that language like that is not fit to be read in the presence of the Senate. It would hardly be decorons in the debates of the Senate; but that would have to be left to the taste of the Senator speaking. If I have a right to object to the reading of a document made up of vile and abusive language to large classes of people of some portions of the country with whom I sympathize in political sentiment, then I interpose that objection; and I desire the Chair to rule whether I have a right to object to the reading of the document. Mr. INGALLS. I

Mr. INGALLS. I call for the reading of Rule 15.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will read Rule 15:

When the reading of a paper is called for, and the same is objected to by any enator, it shall be determined by a vote of the Senate, and without debate.

The Chair had already said he would put the question to the Sen-

Mr. SARGENT. I ask for the yeas and nays on the question.

Mr. SARGENT. I ask for the yeas and nays on the question.
The yeas and nays were ordered.
Mr. PATTERSON. What is the question?
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions of a mass-meeting in Barnwell County, South Carolina, were presented by the Senator from South Carolina, [Mr. ROBERTSON,] who asked to have them read. The question is, Shall the paper be read?
Mr. ROBERTSON. And I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California has ob-ceted to its reading. Under Rule 15 the Chair submits that question

The PRESIDENT protempere. The senator from Carlotha has objected to its reading. Under Rule 15 the Chair submits that question to the Senate, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have not heard the paper read at all, but I hope it will be read. I have no objection to having it read. Let it be read. I want to have everything read that the people of South Carolina want read in this Hall, on both sides. I hope it will be read. I shall vote to have it read.

Mr. SARGENT. If the Senator from South Carolina desires that foul language like this, emanating from his State and applying to his State, shall be read, I withdraw my objection if I may be allowed to

Mr. PATTERSON. I do not know what is in the paper at all; but if any persons in South Carolina have sent anything to the Senate that is not respectful let it be read, and let the Senate form its own

Mr. SARGENT. If I am allowed to do so, I withdraw my objection to the reading.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I will state that it is respectful in its language.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina states that the paper is respectful in language. The objection of the Senator from California is withdrawn; and if there be no objection the resolutions will be read.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Then the country can judge of its language.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

At a mass-meeting of the citizens of Barnwell County, South Carolina, held this day at Barnwell Court-House, the following resolutions, submitted by Mr. E. Mercer Sumpter, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the seven hundred colored voters who enrolled their names in the democratic clubs, and the nine hundred and seventy-six who cast their ballots for General Wade Hampton and the candidates on his ticket did so to secure to their native State honest government and home rule and to free her from the thieving government under which she has so long suffered from corrupt carpet-baggers and infamous scalawags.

Resolved, That we indignantly repel, as a vile and malicious slander, that charge that intimidation was used to force us to the performance of this wise and patriotic duty; that we cast our ballots as free and independent citizens, and that the only threats made or violence used in the canvass were made and used against us by radical partisans to prevent us from going to the polls and exercising this franchise.

Resolved, That Senator ROBERTSON, of South Carolina, and Representative SMALLS, of this congressional district, be requested to present these resolutions to their respective Houses in the Congress of the United States.

President.

ANDREW C. DIBBLE, EDWARD M. LAWTON,

Mr. BOUTWELL. I will ask the Senators from South Carolina whether they have knowledge of the persons whose names are appended to this paper; and, if so, that they will give us some statement in regard to it

Mr. ROBERTSON. I have knowledge of the gentleman who presided at the meeting and the gentleman who presented the resolution. The gentleman who offered the resolution is a prominent colored man who lives in the county, and I have been informed by persons whom I have a right to believe, and whom I do believe, that the resolutions were adopted unanimously.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I ask whether the persons whose names are appended are colored men or white men?

Mr. ROBERTSON. They are very prominent citizens of South

Mr. BOUTWELL. Are they colored men or white men?
Mr. ROBERTSON. A colored man offered the resolution and both white men and colored men composed the meeting.

Mr. BOUTWELL. But the persons whose signatures are appended to this paper?

Mr. ROBERTSON. The chairman is a very prominent and distinguished citizen of that county, a white man, and both the secretaries

Mr. PATTERSON. I should like to ask my colleague if Mr. Maher is the name of the president in Mr. ROBERTSON. John J. Maher.

Mr. PATTERSON. He is a brother of Judge Maher?

Mr. ROBERTSON. He is Judge Maher him Mr. PATTERSON. He is a good democrat. He is Judge Maher himself.

Mr. ROBERTSON. And a good man.
Mr. PATTERSON. He is a good democrat; that is all.

Mr. ROBERTSON. And a good man too.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The paper will be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. BOGY presented a resolution of the Legislature of Missouri, in relation to the construction of the Southern Transcontinental Railway on the thirty-second and thirty-fifth parallels of latitude; which was referred to the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. KERNAN presented the petition of Mrs. A. P. Miles, praying for legislation that will authorize payment to her of certain amounts due her from the eastern band of North Carolina Cherokee Indians; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, that committee having charge of the Indian appropriation bill.

AFFAIRS IN LOUISIANA.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I am requested to present a printed memorial of bankers, merchants, and clergy of Louisiana in relation to the late election in that State; which I ask may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the memorial will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Memorial of bankers, merchants, and clergy of Louisiana to the President, Senate, and House of Representatives.

The undersigned, citizens of Louisiana, not office-holders, nor office-seekers, nor

The undersigned, citizens of Louisiana, not office-holders, nor office-seekers, nor consulting with either class, but representing the opinions and sentiments of the thousands of good citizens in the State, desire in justice to themselves, as well as a the good fame of Louisiana, your serious and unbiased consideration of this address. By the politicians of one party the white people of Louisiana have been held up to their fellow-citizens as virtually barbarians, continually engaged in acts of violence and cruelty against the virtuous and inoffensive colored people of the State. In ex parte, partisan, and interested statements such representations have been hastily and indecently thrust before Congress and the country as a reason for disfranchising the whole people of this State and continuing over it a government which it has repudiated.

An issue produced by such action is no longer political. It is one which calls upon citizens of Louisiana to vindicate their good name by resenting a gross and reckless slander. That in our misgoverned State crimes of violence are common, we are only too well aware. That the great mass of our people deplore them and would have them punished and suppressed is the fact here as in all civilized communities.

The misfortune of Louisiana has been, and is, that the political exigencies of the usurped government imposed upon the State against the people's will demand rather the fostering than the suppressing of crimes. The first function of government is the protection of life and property by doing justice. A government existing upon frauds and sustained against the people's will by force is barred from this primary function because it is itself an organized injustice.

Such a government, also, if sustained by a power from without, finds itself tempted to encourage lawlessness and crime among those it governs, in order to find an excuse for calling upon the continued help and interference of that power. This is the condition of the existing government of Louisiana. By the evidence which it chose to addince before the returning board it showed what all intelligent citizens of the State know, that it does not perform the first function of government. It does not protect life nor property. On the other hand, it exhibited iself in the attitude of profiting by crimes of a certain class. It has use for them to sustain itself. Instead of pursuing them by the sheriff and punishing them by the courts, it summons them by political agents, gives ex parte accounts of them before a political canvassing board, and demands their market value in votes.

For some years past crime has thus been at a premium in Louisiana. A certain class of it has been encouraged and not suppressed; when violence has been perpetrated and whites were the victims, there was little said and as little done; when black men were the victims, quite as little was done, but a great deal was said; and the representation always made if possible that the crime, no matter by whom perpetrated, or with what purpose, had a political meaning, and was worth so many votes and so much Federal interference. The course of the late "count of votes" must be evinced to thoughtful people of this unheard-of perversion of the functions of government.

The reckless use of the pardoning power in partisan interests has been another.

must be evinced to thoughtful people of this unheard of perversion of the functions of government.

The reckless use of the pardoning power in partisan interests has been another wrong under which we have suffered until certain of the criminal class have come to feel that they possess an almost total immunity.

As a specimen of this, we would state that two years ago Acting Governor Kellogg, in the space of a few weeks, pardoned sixty-nine convicts, among whom thirteen were murderers, five were convicted of rape, two of assault with intent to kill, two of perjury, six of manslaughter, three of burglary, four of robbery, and two of arson. In some cases, as of arson, citizens have spent large amounts in obtaining the arrest and conviction of the guilty, and have thereafter seen them turned loose again upon society and helping to decide the politics of the State. To complete the climax of injustice these crimes so fostered by political necessity and so pardoned when imperious public opinion demanded conviction, have been proclaimed as evidence that the people of Louisiana are no better than barbarians and incapable of self-government.

dence that the people of Lomisiana are no better than baroarians and incapanie or self-government.

We deem it due to ourselves and to the thousands we represent who desire to pursue our honest callings in peace with all men and to have justice administered by a civilized government, to protest solemnly before our countrymen and the world against the representations made by interested adventurers here, and partisan reckless politicians from abroad, virtually charging the good people of Louisiana with fostering or even tolerating murder or violence. We protest against being held responsible for the imbecility and fraud of a usurpation which lacks the confidence of honest men and which to sustain stself offers a premium to violence as political capital, and encourages murder by using it as a factor in the counting of votes.

political capital, and encourages murder by using it as a factor in the counting of votes.

The people of Louisiana cannot believe that their friends, relatives, and fellow-citizens of other States can seriously think them so lost, not to deceney or civilization only, but even to self-interest and common sense, as to encourage a reign of violence and bloodshed about their own homes and those of their children.

That which exists of these in Louisiana above the ordinary average of settled well-ordered communities they charge plainly upon a government holding its place by fraud and force by the tenure of making one class and one section of the country distrust and detest another. We appeal for simple justice in their judgment as to the calm good sense of the unpartisan masses of our fellow-citizens. We only desire to have good order, peace, and justice established among all classes, and crime, no matter by whom perpetrated, resolutely put down and punished. We are not barbarians, but civilized men and Americans.

By the late elections, everywhere peaceable, as we have reason to believe, and that not from any act of the usurping administration here, whose interests would rather have been served by violence, no matter how excited, but by the calm self-restraint of conservative and sober-minded people, have in strict conformity and in obedience to those of the United States, relieved ourselves of a rule which we have patiently endured for years in all its imbecility and anarchic tendencies, we now carnestly appeal to our fellow-citizens in all the States of the Republic not connive at the reversal of our lawful action, and to force us to confront against the evils of a government fatal alike to our interests and our good name, which exists by fraud and stands by hatred and prejudice and the destruction of interests which should be common, and is compelled to defend its shameful imbecility by charging indescriminately upon a whole community the guilt of crime it profits by and does not punish.

Mr. WEST. Let us have

Mr. WEST. Let us have the names.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The names of the signers will be read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

J. B. Lafitte, Ang. Bohn, Samuel Boyd, G. W. Sentell, Emory Clapp, John T. Hardie, Carleton Hunt, A. H. May, James I. Day, Jules Aldige, Edw. Toby, Henry Abraham, E. P. Rareshide, W. B. Krumber, J. C. Morris, J. Buckner, F. N. Ogden, James McConnell, G. R. Preston, J. J. Gidiere, C. G. Johnson, R. M. Waldesley, C. A. Conrad, C. L. Chace, R. Herrick, D. Urquhart, E. J. Hart, S. Hernsheim, J. M. Lewis, E. Connery, H. Galley, John Phelps, A. Schreiber, Lionel C. Levy, R. H. Devan, A. Baldwin, John Cheffe, S. B. Newman, E. J. Hamilton, Henry Renshaw, H. Frellsen, A. Carriere, Sam. Jamison, S. M. Bickham, Victor Meyer, Sam. Flower, Alf. Moulton, W. F. Halsey, P. N. Strong, R. Renshaw, jr., C. Chism, Wm. C. Black, J. S. Groves, T. C. Herndon, Scott McGehee, E. Conery, jr., J. U. Payne.

Mr. WEST. That will do.
Mr. SAULSBURY. Ithink that memorial is indorsed by the clergy of the city of New Orleans, and as the names have been called for we may as well have the names of the clergy read.
Mr. HOWE. If any Senator is ambitious of advertising the gentlemen whose names are signed to that paper, I hope he will have an opportunity to parade them here in the Senate. I hope the Senator from Louisiana will withdraw his objection to the reading of the names until it is concluded.

Mr SAULSBURY. He called for it.

Mr. WEST. I do not object. The petition was read without any of the names being stated, and we wanted to know somewhat of the of the names being stated, and we wanted to know somewhat of the character of the gentlemen signing it. I recognize them as men of high standing and I have no objection now, if it will not occupy the time of the Senate much longer, to have the entire names read, but I should like to say in response to my friend from Delaware that very likely the entire clergy of the city of New Orleans do not attach their names to this petition.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I will say that I know nothing of the names of the parties appended to the memorial. I was requested to present it this morning, and I stated that I held in my hand a printed memorial which I was requested to present, addressed to the President, the Senate, and the House of Representatives, and I complied with the request of my fellow-citizens in presenting their petition without desiring to add one word of remark. I think the Senator from Wisconsin conveyed an imputation in his remark that there was a desire on my part to have the names of these parties paraded, whereas sire on my part to have the names of these parties paraded, whereas the reading of the names of the petitioners was called for by the Senator from Louisiana. Inasmuch, however, as we had certain of the names, knowing that there was an indorsement by a respectable portion of the clergy of New Orleans, I called likewise for the reading of the names of the clergymen appended to it. That was my whole connection with the petition; nothing more.

Mr. HOWE. I do not find any fault with the Senator's connection. I wish to aid him in his relation to this paper so far as I can. I thought he was unwilling to have the reading of the names stopped until the names of the clergymen appended to it had been paraded before the Senate. I sympathize with that view of the Senator and wish to have these names read if there be no objection anywhere.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Let the reading begin at that point.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Let the reading begin at that point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do Senators desire further names to be read?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Yes, sir; let the names be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reading of the names will con-

The Chief Clerk resumed the reading, as follows:

Samuel H. Kennedy, president State National Bank; George Jones, president Canal Bank; Thomas A. Adams, president Crescent Mutual Insurance Company; Edward C. Palmer, president Louisiana Savings Bank; I. N. Marks, president Firemen's Insurance Company; John G. Gaines, president Citizens' Bank of Louisiana; Lloyd R. Coleman, president Mechanics and Traders' Insurance Company; H. Peychaud, president Hope Insurance Company; L. B. Cain, president Germania National Bank; Ed. A. Palfrey, president Factors and Traders' Insurance Company; C. Kohn, president Union National Bank; P. M. Schneidan, secretary People's Insurance Company; Pike Brothers & Co., bankers; S. Hopkins, jr., president Bank of La Fayette; F. Rickert, vice-president Teutonia Insurance Company, and many others.

National Bank; Ed. A. Palfrey, president Factors and Traders' Insurance Company; C. Kohn, president Union National Bank; P. M. Schneidan, secretary People's Insurance Company; Pike Brothers & Co., bankers; S. Hopkins, jr., president Bank of La Fayette; F. Rickert, vice-president Teutonia Insurance Company, and many others.

The attention of the undersigned has been called to the following expression embodied in the statement of the case of the republican committee presented to the committee of the United States now in session in New Orleans.

After reciting several cases of murder and atrocity, and presenting an exparta account of the circumstances attending them and the motives for which they were perpetrated, they add: "There has been no condemnation of these acts by the press, by public meetings, or by the clergy."

Ariaigned in this way publicly, the undersigned desire to say that their uniform teachings is love to God and love to man; that on all occasions they condemn crime and violence, and deplore their existence; that the burden of their teaching and preaching is in the interests of justice, mercy, righteosaness, and truth.

They add that to have attacked and condemned specific and individual crimes, would have been to attack and condemn a government which by its lack of utter confidence, and from the necessities of its peculiar condition, is, by its own confession, unable to put down crime among the people, and is really fostering and increasing it by its peculiar treatment every day of its existence.

In no sense politicians, nor destrings on hix ourselves with political affairs, and In no sense politicians, nor destrings on hix ourselves with political affairs, and In no sense politicians, nor destrings on hix ourselves with political affairs, and in recasing it by its appeal of the destring to mix ourselves with political affairs, and our silence misrepresented, we are compelled in self-respect to speak and we do so by this explanation, and by adopting as a general fair-setting forth of the causes

Mr. HOWE. I think that paper ought to be referred. The several gentlemen who have signed it have secured immortality in this world, or something very like it. They will live as long as the Record lives. Whether they have secured an immortality here which is worth having is a question which interests them and ought to interest us all. They have put their names to a paper which contains a great many very serious charges and which are true or false. I think Senators will agree with me that, if they are false, it is about the heaviest and most atrocious lying that has been done this century, and there has been a good deal of that.

heaviest and most atrocious lying that has been done this century, and there has been a good deal of that.

Of course I do not pretend to say whether these charges are true or false. I know the reputation of a great many of the signers of that paper. I know a large number of the clergymen of the city of New Orleans have put their names, deliberately or otherwise, to that paper. Some very remarkable gentlemen have lent their names to that paper. I recognize the name of one man there, under whose preaching I sat myself while I was in the city of New Orleans, and I have rarely in my whole life listened to a man in the pulpit or elsewhere who I thought was equal, intellectually, to this gentleman. Nevertheless, those gentlemen undertake to tell us and to tell the world, and to urge as an excuse why they have not protested, as they otherwise would, against murder, even, that they could not very well do it without attacking a government. I think it is rather an unwholesome sort of ethics, to say nothing about religion, which would deter a man from attacking crime, such crimes as are referred to in that paper, even although they have to say something rather disrespectful of a government. But I rather thought I heard some language in that paper which indicated that the signers to it had not the utmost respect, in fact, for the government of Louisiana and were really not adverse to saying as much in their way. And if they are willing to attack that saying as much in their way. And if they are willing to attack that government directly, I should not think they need hesitate to attack such crimes as murder, although they are committed in spite of that government.

But I do not mean to detain the Senate by commenting on that paper or by criticising it. I think the country ought to know how much of this accusation hurled against the government of Louisiana is true and how much of it is untrue; and I therefore move that the paper be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections with instructions to subpœna such of the signers of that paper as they deem advisable to give avidence mean the accurations made in the paper.

advisable to give evidence upon the accusations made in the paper.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not know that I can second the motion entirely. I am perfectly willing that the petition should be referred and that the Committee on Privileges and Elections should take such and that the Committee on Privileges and Elections should take such action upon it as in their judgment is proper. Without expressing any opinion as to the facts stated in the petition, I think, from what has been said by the Senator from Wisconsin, that he at least indorses the fact that it is signed by gentlemen of very great respectability, gentlemen of talents and character; and I apprehend that a thorough investigation into the affairs of Louisiana referred to in the petition will substantiate the general correctness of the allegations contained in the recognition. in the memorial.

I shall not deem it necessary to enter into any defense of these gentlemen's character or to say that what they utter is true. Their high character precludes any other idea than that they themselves believe every fact that they have stated to be true and beyond question. I was a little surprised, I may be permitted to say, however, that the Senator from Wisconsin should think it necessary on the presentation of a single memorial to indulge in any remark either in reference to the facts asserted in the memorial or in reference to the character of the signers of that memorial. acter of the signers of that memorial. I should be glad to have this memorial referred, but I shall not second the motion that these parties be subpænaed to appear, because I see no good to result from such a course.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, as the Senator who presented this memorial declines to second the motion made by the Senator from Wisconsin to refer with instructions, I rise to second the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin.

We have here a large number of persons, citizens of Louisiana, who have appended their names to a memorial to this Senate embodying certain facts which they state to be true. In connection with that statement certain ministers of the gospel of Christ append their names to an additional statement in that memorial. Now, Mr. President, there are two ways of telling untruths, each of which is culpable; one is a statement of fact as true which is known to be false; the other is a statement of fact as true which the party making the statement ought reasonably to know is false. If these ministers of the gospel do not know the facts to be true which they have stated, then let that be ascertained. If these men, filling the pulpits of the Christian churches of New Orleans, have made statements here which are not sustained by the facts as they ought to have known, then let us understand that. We can have from them their statement; and it does seem somewhat singular that the signers of this memorial should have instructed the Senator from Delawaret o present it upon the day on which the commission appointed by Congress to memorial should have instructed the Senator from Delaware to present it upon the day on which the commission appointed by Congress to count the presidential votes meets and upon which the Congress of the United States is to count the presidential vote, although the memorial has been spread before the country in the public prints of the nation a long time since. Here the Senator is instructed to present it to the Senate upon this morning when we meet to count this vote. Can it be that it was intended to produce any effect upon the nation particularly at this time? If so, certainly the motive is far from a worthy one. I hope the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin will be agreed to and that this paper will be referred with the instructions agreed to and that this paper will be referred with the instructions included in his motion.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Mr. President, but for the reference of the Senator from Minnesota to the fact that I have been instructed to present this petition on this morning, I should not have added another word.

I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that the petition was placed I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that the petition was placed in my hands this morning, not until this morning; and my habit is, when a petition is placed in my hands for presentation, to do it on the first opportunity. I do not desire to indulge in any remarks upon a mere presentation of a petition; but it seems strange to me, exceedingly strange, that the Senator from Minnesota and the Senator from Wisconsin, upon the mere presentation of a petition, should rise in their places and impliedly at least attempt to create the impression that the assertions contained in the memorial are false. Why, sir, I take it for granted that the gentlemen who appended their names to take it for granted that the gentlemen who appended their names to this memorial, or petition, know whereof they testify much better than either the Senator from Wisconsin or the Senator from Minnesota. It is true that those gentlemen have been honored recently with a commission to go to the State, and spent a few weeks in the State, of Louisiana; but could they have had the same facilities in arriving at the facts as gentlemen who are domiciled there, who were born on the soil, and who are familiar with all the facts of which they speak? I say again that it is exceedingly strange that upon the mere presentation of a memorial Senators living in a far-distant section of the country should feel it incumbent on them to rise in their places and indulge in criticism, impliedly at least calling in question the assertions contained in the memorial.

I felt called upon, after the remarks which have been indulged in, to make these suggestions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin moves the reference of the memorial to the Committee on Privileges and Elections with instructions. Mr. HOWE. I want to say one word to my friend from Delaware, that while I do not dispute the correctness of his statement, that the signers of the paper know much better what has transpired in Louisiana than myself, yet he will see that that is the very reason why their testimony should be taken, because when they are put under the obligations of an oath and they have testified I shall either know as much as they do about what they testify or they will not tell what they know. I think that is the very reason why we should make that reference

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to refer with instructions.

The motion was agreed to.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. MAXEY submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved. That the President pro tempore of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized to fill the vacancies on the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and on the Committee on Education and Labor heretofore filled by David M. Key, whose term of service has expired.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed Mr. Bailey to fill both va-

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning hour has expired. The Chair will lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. No. 984) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

DESTITUTE POOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. WINDOM. I appeal to the Senator from Ohio to let me call up the bill for the relief of the destitute poor of the District of Columbia. It will take but a very few moments, I think, to dispose of it. Mr. THURMAN. Subject to call of the regular order, I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order will be subject to

By unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. No. 4473) for the relief of the destitute poor of the District of Columbia was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not know that any remarks I could submit could make this case any more clear than it is as presented by the reading of the bill itself. If the Senate is ready, I ask for the vote. The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, and

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted-yeas 45, nays 9; as follows:

45, nays 9; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs, Allison, Anthony, Bailey, Barnum, Blaine, Bogy, Boutwell, Bruce, Burnside, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Christianey, Clayton, Conkling, Conover, Cragin, Davis, Dawes, Dorsey, Eaton, Edmunda, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Goldthwaite, Hamilton, Ingalls, Johnston, Kelly, Kernau, Merrimon, Mitchell, Morrill, Morton, Paddock, Patterson, Robertson, Sargent, Sherman, Speneer, Teller, Wallace, West, Whyte, Windom, and Wright—45.

NAYS—Messrs. Alcorn, Booth, Cockrell, Cooper, Hitchcock, McCreery, Maxey, Ransem, and Withers—9.

ABSENT—Messrs. Bayard, Cameron of Peunsylvania, Dennis, Gordon, Hamlin, Harvey, Hereford, Howe, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Logan, McDonald, McMillan, Norwood, Oglesby, Randolph, Saulsbury, Sharon, Stevenson, Thurman, and Wadleigh—21.

So the bill was passed.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. CHAFFEE presented the credentials of Henry M. Teller, elected by the Legislature of the State of Colorado a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which were read and ordered to be filed.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN presented the credentials of John R. Mc-Pherson, elected by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey a Sen-ator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which was read and ordered to be filed.

THE ELECTORAL COMMISSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore submitted the following communica-tion from the commission on the count of the electoral votes; which

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 1, 1877.

Sm: I have the honor to inform the Senate that the commission consistence of the act of Congress approved January 29, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877," has met and (the members thereof having taken and subscribed the oath prescribed by law) organized, and is now ready to proceed to the performance of its duties.

Very respectfully, yours,

NATHAN CLIFFORD

NATHAN CLIFFORD, President of the Commission.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The communication will be placed

REPORT ON INELIGIBILITY OF ELECTORS.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, the Committee on Privileges and Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, the Committee on Privileges and Elections, on which was imposed the duty by a resolution of the Senate introduced early in the session by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] of inquiring into the eligibility to office under the Constitution of the United States of any persons alleged to have been ineligible on the 7th day of November last, or to be ineligible as electors of President and Vice-President of the United States to whom certificates of election have been or shall be issued by the executive authority of any State as such electors, assigned that duty to a subcommittee. The subcommittee has authorized me to submit a report, which I now present. I desire to have the report read; and subcommittee. The subcommittee has anthorized me to submit a report, which I now present. I desire to have the report read; and inasmuch as a good portion of it was hastily prepared and is in my own handwriting, in pencil, I ask the privilege of reading it myself

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator will read the report.

Mr. MITCHELL proceeded to read as follows:

Mr. MITCHELL proceeded to read as follows:

The Committee on Privileges and Elections beg leave to report that on the 5th day of December, 1876, the Senate adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas it is provided by the second section of the fourteenth article of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States that 'Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be a reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.'

"And whereas it is alleged that in several of the States, and particularly in the States of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, the right of male inhabitants of said States, respectively, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, to vote at the late elections of the electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, and for Representatives in Congress, and for the executive and judicial officers of such States, and for members of the Legislature thereof, has been denied or greatly abridged: Therefore, "Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, when appointed, be, and it hereby is, instructed to inquire and report as soon as may be—

"I. Whether in any of the elections named in said amendment in said States in the years 1875 or 1876, the right of any portion of such inhabitants and citizens to

"6. By what authority or pretended authority has such denial or abridgement been exercised.

"Resolved further, That the said committee have power to employ such number of stenographers as shall be needful, and to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during the sessions of the Senate, and to appoint subcommittees with full power to make the inquiries aforesaid and report the same to the committee. "Resolved further, That said committee, in order to the more speedy performance of its duties, have power to provide for the taking of depositions, on the subjects aforesaid, before any officer authorized by the laws of the United States to take depositions, and to receive and consider the same.

"Resolved further, That the said committee be, and is hereby, instructed to inquire into the eligibility to office under the Constitution of the United States of any persons alleged to have been ineligible on the 7th day of November last, or to be ineligible as electors of President and Vice-President of the United States, to whom certificates of election have been or shall be issued by the executive authority of any State as such electors; and whether the appointment of electors or those claiming to be such in any of the States has been made, declared, or returned, either by force, fraud, or other means, otherwise than in comformity with the Constitution and laws of the United States and the laws of the respective States; and whether any such appointment or action of any such elector has been in anywise uncenstitutionally or unlawfully interfered with; and to inquire and report whether Congress, or either House thereof, has any constitutional power, and if so, what, and the extent thereof, in respect of the appointment of or action of electors of President and Vice-President of the United States, or over returns, or returning to errificates of votes of such electors; and that said committee have power to send for persons and papers, and to employ a stenographer, and have leave to sit during the session of the Senate."

In discharge of the duties imposed upon the committee by the last of the foregoing resolutions, the committee have examined the questions touching the alleged ing resolution

Mr. MERRIMON. I wish to ask the Senator whether the report he proceeding to read is from a subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections ?

Privileges and Elections?

Mr. MITCHELL. I stated distinctly when I rose that it was the report of the subcommittee to which was intrusted the duty imposed upon the general committee by the resolution of the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. I submit that a subcommittee has no right to make a report without the sanction of the committee.

Mr. MITCHELL. I submit that they were authorized to make the report by the action of the committee.

Mr. MERRIMON. I would thank the Senator to read that clause in the resolution which supports the making of such a report in the resolution which authorizes the making of such a report.

Mr. MITCHELL. I say that as matter of fact the subcommittee was authorized to submit this report by the action of the committee

Mr. MERRIMON. As the report of the committee or the subcommittee?

Mr. MITCHELL. As the report of the subcommittee, as a matter of course

Mr. MERRIMON. It seems to me this report ought to have been submitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and that committee ought to have considered it and consented to the report before it is brought to the attention of the Senate. It ought to be the report of the committee, not of the subcommittee, which is under the direction of the Committee on Privileges and Elections all the time.

Mr. MITCHELL. The subcommittee was authorized to make this report to the Senate by the action of the whole committee just as in some other cases that I could call attention to.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Oregon to one fact. I understand him to say that this report of a subcommittee was authorized to be made by the general com-of a subcommittee was authorized to be made by the general committee. Am I correct?

Mr. MITCHELL. That is correct.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Then it follows, I suppose, that that would be the report of the general committee on that subject. Now, as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, I want to say in this connection that I have never had the pleasure of listening to any report from the subcommittee on this subject in the general committee. committee.

committee.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Just one moment. And therefore I do not wish to be held responsible as a member of that committee for this report in any respect. If it is true, as I have no doubt it is, that the Senator from Oregon has the permission of that committee to make the report in the Senate, it becomes tipso facto the report of the committee itself; and I wish here to enter my disclaimer, as a member of that committee, from having any responsibility for or any knowledge whatever of the report.

Mr. MERRIMON. I wish to say—

Mr. MITCHELL. I decline to yield at this time further on account of the time—

Mr. MERRIMON. I think this is a matter that members of the

Mr. MERRIMON. I think this is a matter that members of the committee ought, at least, to be heard upon.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I stated—

Mr. MERRIMON. I wish to say—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. MITCHELL. For a moment.

Mr. MERRIMON. I will raise the point of order that this report is not in order, that a subcommittee of a committee has no right to make a report, and that the committee itself has no power to empower a subcommittee to make a report directly to the Senate. Any report a subcommittee to make a report directly to the Senate. that has been agreed to by a subcommittee must be submitted to the committee recognized by the Senate, and that committee must act upon it and determine whether it shall be submitted to the Senate or

I wish to make a further remark in raising this point of order, that I know nothing in the world about this report; I do not know whether I concur in it or otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina raises a point of order.

Mr. SARGENT. On the point of order, I should like to state, if it is proper to state, that the Senator seems to imply by his remark that the other fact exists that this matter was submitted to the committee as a whole and the subcommittee were authorized to report for the committee to the Senate. They certainly were authorized. As to the power of the committee so to authorize them, I think there can be very little question under the resolution under which these subcommittees have been acting, which was that the subcommittee should act as committees of the Senate. They had exceptional powers given to them in that direction.

Mr. MITCHELL. By special resolution.
Mr. SARGENT. Yes, sir; special privileges given to them under the direction of the Senate; but, not content with that, the subcommittee laid before the general committee the subject, and after an interchange of views they were directed by the general committee

(and I dare say it so appears on the minutes of the committee) to report directly to the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. I should like to see the resolution that passed the Senate which recognized these subcommittees as committees of the Senate.

Mr. KERNAN. I should like to inquire of the Senator from California if he can state whether there was authorization except from mr. SARGENT. That was the time the action took place.

Mr. KERNAN. It is probably due to these other members to say that I was there and none of the members who have spoken was there, and I think the Senator from California will remember that there was not a quorum of the whole committee there.

Mr. SARGENT. On the contrary, my recollection is that there was

Mr. KERNAN. I think there was not a quorum of fifteen. My recollection is that I suggested at the time that there was not a quorum of the whole committee present.

Mr. SARGENT. There were some twelve there. During the morn-

Mr. SARGENT. There were some twelve there. During the morning fourteen were there.

Mr. KERNAN. When this question came up yesterday?

Mr. SARGENT. Yes, sir; when this question came up yesterday.

Mr. KERNAN. I will not go into any question of fact.

Mr. SARGENT. It was debated by the Senator from North Caroline himsel?

lina himself.

Mr. KERNAN. He was not there yesterday.
Mr. SARGENT. He subsequently left, stating that he had to go.
Mr. MITCHELL. The important part of the thing is that the Senator from North Carolina did not remain until the meeting of the ommittee came to a close.

Mr. SARGENT. Here is the resolution the Senator calls for—
Mr. MERRIMON. The Senator from California is utley mistaken Mr. MERRIMON. The Senator from California is atterly mistaken as to myself; for yesterday morning I called by the chamber of the Committee on Privileges and Elections to notify the committee, and left word with him, he being the only member then present, that I was obliged to attend a meeting of the Committee on Rules and I was absent there absent there.

Mr. SARGENT. The Senator is correct except as to the number of members present. There were seven or eight there at the time the Senator called. The chairman was present; the Senator—

Mr. MERRIMON. That was the day before yesterday; but, sir, that is apart from the point of order that I make. The point of order I make is that a subcommittee has no power, nor can any power than the point of the power of the property of the power be conferred upon it by the committee, to make a report as a sub-committee. Where the Senate has charged the Committee on Privi-leges and Elections to consider a certain matter specified in the reso-lution ordering the inquiry, when they consider it and agree to a report, then the committee make the report to the Senate. This report purports to be, as it is, a report from a subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. I raise the point of order that such a report cannot be entertained by the Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. On the point of order I wish to read the resolu-

On the 11th of December the Senate adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the several subcommittees of the Committee on Privileges and Elections authorized and instructed by the resolution offered by Mr. EDMUNDS (being Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 1, of this session) to inquire and report concerning certain matters relating to elections, and any other subcommittees into which said first-named subcommittees may be subdivided, shall be committees of the Senate, so that the chairmen thereof shall be authorized to administer oaths under the provisions of section 101 of the Revised Statutes.

If that does not make each subcommittee a committee of the Senate, I do not know what does.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon having the floor, and proceeding to read a report, the Senator from North Carolina raises the point of order that a subcommittee cannot make carotina raises the point of order that a succommittee cannot make a report to the Senate. That the Chair understands to be the point of order made by the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. MERRIMON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORTON. I desire to make a statement. The labor thrown upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections has been so great upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections has been so great that it became necessary to appoint a number of subcommittees. The committee was divided into five subcommittees. Two of them went to Louisiana, one to South Carolina, another to Florida, and one remained here. The action of the committee, as I understand it, was that when these subcommittees came to make their reports, while in form they would be made to the general committee, they were in fact to be made to the Senate. Accordingly the Senator from California who went to Florida made his report directly to the Senate, and it was understood that the Senator from Tennessee would ate; and it was understood that the Senator from Tennessee would make a minority report also to the Senate. I think the Senator was present and had that understanding.

Mr. COOPER. That was presented by the chairman, and it was understood I should have leave to make a minority report.

Mr. MITCHELL. The same understanding was had in regard to

Mr. COOPER. Permit me to say that I understood that as being a report from the subcommittee to the general committee at the time it was made, but that it was presented simply to be printed, but I saw differently after reading it. My understanding was that it was a report to the committee.

Mr. MORTON. My understanding was that the report was to be made directly to the Senate. The fact was that there was not time for the general committee to take up these different reports of the subcommittees and go over them; and, therefore, the subcommittees were given the right and also the responsibility of making their re-ports. The Senator from North Carolina under this understanding has a right to make a report and to make it directly to the Senate from the South Carolina subcommittee.

Mr. MERRIMON. Let me remind the Senator from Indiana, the chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, that the resolution read by the Senator from California a moment ago was adopted, not for the purpose of giving these subcommittees a distinctive character apart from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but for the purpose of enabling the chairmen of those several subcommittees to administer oaths, and I have never understood that it was contended until now that the subcommittees could report directly to the Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. They are called "committees of the Senate."
Mr. MERRIMON. I know they are, and for the purpose I mentioned, to enable the chairmen of the several subcommittees to administer oaths. We do not get at the voice or the judgment of the Committee on Privileges and Elections by a report of this sort; and if the power exists that the Senator from California contends for, this subcommittee did not need to have said a word to the Committee on Privileges and Elections at all. They have a right to make a report if they are independent committees of the Senate without talking to the Committee on Privileges and Elections one word about whether they shall make a report or what its character shall be. I maintain that the orderly and the lawful course is for these several subcommittees they have a property of the several subcommittees. that the orderly and the lawful course is for these several subcommittees to make their reports to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, that their reports shall be considered by that committee and agreed to or disagreed to, and if a majority of the committee shall disagree to the report the whole committee will make a report satisfactory to itself and submit the same to the Senate, and any minority report will be the minority report not of the subcommittee but of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, one recognized by the Senate and charged with this important duty.

If this report shall be accepted by the Senate and it shall express any opinions upon questions of law or fact, those opinions will be the opinions of three members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections which at this time consists of fifteen members, and if there shall tions which at this time consists of fifteen members, and if there shall be a minority report from this subcommittee the opinions contained in it will be those of one or two members of the Committee on Privi-leges and Elections only. So that outside of the fact that it is illegal to make this report and out of order to make this report, it will not matters to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. What the Senate desired was the judgment of the whole committee.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I do not wish to be placed in any false position by any statement of the Senator from North Carolina, I desire to submit a statement of the senater from which Caronia, to the effect that it is illegal and out of order to make this report. I desire to submit a statement of the facts in a very few words.

I stated in my opening when I arose that I proposed to submit the report of the subcommittee. I called the attention of the Senate to the fact that the duty imposed on the general committee had been assigned to a subcommittee. I now state, in addition to that, that this subcommittee was authorized by a unanimous vote of a quorum of the whole committee to make this report. At that meeting the democratic member of the subcommittee, the Senator from New York, [Mr. Kernan,] was present, and made no dissent. He has also concurred in this report; that is, in the fact that the report shall now be made, although the Senator from New York on the subcommittee does made, although the Senator from New York on the subcommittee does not concur, as I understand him, fully in all the conclusions of the subcommittee; and that I desired to state before taking my seat after having finished the reading of the report.

Now then, Mr. President, these being the facts in the case, I maintain that it is the report of the committee; and if the Senator from North Carolina or any other Senators had desired that this matter should take any other course them it was their duty to attend the should take any other course, then it was their duty to attend the meetings of the committee and to raise the objection then and there. But when the committee by unanimous vote authorized the subcommittee to make this report directly to the Senate, then I say that the report that I am now submitting becomes to all intents and purposes, so far as the making of the report is concerned, the report of the committee. As a matter of course any individual members of that committee can dissent to any extent that they may see proper afterward from either the findings of fact or the conclusions arrived at by the

Mr. MERRIMON. May I ask the honorable Senator a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly, two or three if you like.
Mr. MERRIMON. Has this report ever been submitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections at all?

Mr. MITCHELL. I have never said it was submitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. There can be no room for misunderstanding what I did say on that point. I said that the subcommittee was authorized by a unanimous vote of the whole committee, a majority of the committee being present, to proceed and prepare their report and make it directly to the Senate, instead of to the com-mittee. That is what I said. I do not wish to place the honorable Senator from North Carolina or any other member of the committee in any awkward position, and I do not propose that any statement made by him shall place me in any false position.

Mr. MERRIMON. I have no such desire; but the Senator from Oregon now changes, it seems to me, the ground that he occupied at first.

Mr. MITCHELL. Not at all.

Mr. MERRIMON. He insisted that he was making a report from the subcommittee, and that the subcommittee had a distinctive existence that was recognized by the Senate, and in such a way as to enable that committee to make this report; and the Senator from California, coming to his support, cited the resolution, which he read. That resolution was not adopted for the purpose of giving this subcommittee a distinctive character; but, as I said a moment ago, it was adopted for the purpose of enabling the chairman of a subcommittee to administer an oath; and it is provided expressly in that resolution to that effect. It says—I will read the whole resolution:

Resolved That the several subcommittees of the Committee on Privileges and

Resolved, That the several subcommittees of the Committee on Privileges and Elections authorized and instructed by the resolution offered by Mr. EDMUNDS (being Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 1 of this session) to inquire and report concerning certain matters relating to elections, and any other subcommittees into which said first-named subcommittees may be subdivided, shall be committees of the Senate—

Now see what follows-

so that the chairman thereof shall be authorized to administer oaths under the pro-visions of section 101 of the Revised Statutes.

Not for the purpose of making a report; and the only committee for the purpose of making a report recognized by the Senate, I contend still, is the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and these several subcommittees of that committee must make their reports to the whole committee. Those committees must consider what is submitted to them. They may adopt, if they will, the report agreed to by the subcommittee; but when that shall be done, it will then be the report agreed to by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and in that form only, may it he submitted to the and in that form, and in that form only, may it be submitted to the Senate.

Senate.

Now, sir, I am as far as I could be from desiring to place the honorable Senator from Oregon in any false position. I think he has taken an erroneous view of his power as chairman of that subcommittee, and I raise the point of order and am content that the Senate shall decide it. I have explained why I was not present at the meeting yesterday. I was called away to attend a very important meeting of the Committee on Rules; but whether I was present or not makes no sort of difference if there were a quorum of that committee present, and I would not complain one month if that course had been adopted. But it seems that this is not the report of the committee provides it. But it seems that this is not the report of the committee, nor does it purport to be. And the other point that I make is that the Committee on Privileges and Elections, a quorum being present, had no power to authorize the subcommittee to make a report. It had power only to do what it was charged to do, and to exercise the powers devolved upon it, as they were devolved upon it; that is, to consider whatever matter might properly be brought before them and agree to a report and submit that to the Senate.

Further, the Senator says this report never was submitted to that ommittee.

Mr. MITCHELL. All I desire to say in reply to the Senator from North Carolina is, that so far as I am concerned as chairman of the subcommittee, I am only doing precisely what the whole committee has directed me to do, including the democratic members as well as the republican members. If there is anything wrong about it, that must rest with the whole committee.

Mr. SAULSBURY. The Senator says it was done by the whole committee, including the democratic members. That assertion would imply that we were present at the meeting.

ply that we were present at the meeting.

Mr. MITCHELL. Not at all; because I have already stated that certain members of the committee were not present when this action was had. I stated at the same time that there was a quorum of the committee present, and that certain democratic Senators were pressent, including the democratic Senator who is a member of the subommittee.

Mr. MERRIMON. It did not embrace me.

Mr. MITCHELL. It did not; but the Senator should have been there attending to his duties as the rest of us were.

Mr. MERRIMON. I was attending to another committee quite as important at that time.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask for the ruling of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will restate the question.

The Senator from Oregon rose, without objection, to make a report from the subcommittee. The Senator from North Carolina makes the point that a subcommittee has no authority to make a report. The Senator from Oregon states that the subcommittee was authorized by the full committee to make report to the Senate. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate whether this report shall be received by the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg the Chair to allow me to interrupt him a moment. I understood the Senator from Oregon to say that he was making a report from the subcommittee, and that he does not purport to make a report for the Committee on Privileges and Elections. point I make is that a subcommittee has no power or right to make such a report, and that the Committee on Privileges and Elections, under the resolution referring the several matters embraced by this report to it, has no power to delegate authority to such subcommittee

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I wish to call attention to the fact that the resolution by the authority of which these subcommittees were appointed declares expressly that they are to be considered committees of the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. For a purpose, I repeat again, they are committees of the Senate for one purpose, and one purpose only, and that is specified in the resolution, to wit, "so that the chairman thereof shall be authorized to administer oaths under the provisions of section 101 of the Revised Statutes." That was the purpose, and the only purpose, for which they were designated as committees of the Senate.

Mr. McDONALD. These are subcommittees of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. They are not authorized to report to the Senate, but they are expressly authorized to make their reports to the committee, as will be seen by an examination of the resolution authorizing them. It seems to me, therefore, that in undertaking to report to the Senate instead of reporting to the committee that detailed them for the work, they are not only acting unauthorizedly, but in violation of the resolution itself.

Mr. MITCHELL. I call for the yeas and nays on the question. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays are demanded. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BOGY. I am at a loss how to vote on this subject, and I wish to ascertain one fact. If the report of this subcommittee which is now being read by the Senator from Oregon was submitted to the general committee, it then becomes the report of the general committee; but if it were not submitted to the general committee, but is made here by a subcommittee alone, of course it has no business here. Now, the Senators on this side seem to feel a doubt as to whether this

Now, the Senators on this side seem to feel a doubt as to whether this Now, the Senators on this side seem to feel a doubt as to whether this thing was or was not authorized by the general committee. The Senator from Oregon says it was. Now, if it is authorized by the general committee, it is not the report of the subcommittee, it is the report of the general committee. My honorable friend from North Carolina, with very great timidity, seemed to say they were not aware of any such authority; but whether they were present or not, if a quorum of the committee was there and authorized this report, it is quorum of the committee was there and authorized this report, it is the report of the committee; but if there was no quorum, and the Senator from New York [Mr. KERNAN] said there was no quorum present at the time the committee met, of course they could not authorize a report by this subcommittee. These are facts that we must ascertain positively before we can vote.

I would take the statement of any member of that committee, knowing that he is a Senator and a man of truth. There is evidently a misunderstanding. I do not say the Senator from Oregon does not state what is perfectly true; he knows better than that; but there is a misunderstanding somewhere, and I wish to ascertain that fact.
If the report was authorized by the general committee, that is the end of it; if not, it is the end of it also, and it cannot be read here. I must know that fact positively before I can vote.

Mr. MITCHELL. Two Senators have already stated, the Senator from California and myself, that at a meeting of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, when there was a quorum present, by a unanimous vote of that committee the subcommittee having this matter in charge was directed to make their report directly to the Senate.

ter in charge was directed to make their report directly to the Senate.

Mr. BOGY. This report itself was then not submitted to the general committee; but it seems that this general committee when there was a quorum present did authorize subcommittees of the general was a quorum present did authorize subcommittees of the general committee to report directly to the Senate. Under that statement of fact this report has no business here at all. A report of a subcommittee must be made to the general committee; because we know nothing of a subcommittee. Taking the simple statement of the Senator from Oregon, about which I have no doubt, the report has no business here at all. It is not the report of the committee; it is the report of a subcommittee; and the general committee has no right to authorize its subcommittee to make a report to the Senate, unless that report be first submitted to the general committee and adopted by it as its report.

by it as its report.

Mr. MORTON. Mr. President, my understanding of the action of the committee is that the subcommittees were authorized to report directly to the Senate instead of to the Committee on Privileges and directly to the Senate instead of to the Committee on Privileges and Elections; and it grew out of this consideration: The committee had been divided up into four or five subcommittees; a great deal of testimony had been taken; a great deal of labor was involved; and, inasmuch as a commission had been created and the counting of the votes was to be begun very soon, and it was understood that these reports were to go before that commission for information, it became necessary to put in the reports as rapidly as possible, and there was not time and it was impossible in point of fact that the whole committee could consider these different reports one after the other. It was from that consideration that this understanding was had. I would ask my colleague if it was not the understanding that the minority of the subcommittee that went to Louisiana was authorized to make its report directly to the Senate? There was not time to take up and consider these reports if the condition of things was so anomalous. We have had nothing like it before and shall not perhaps again.

Mr. BOGY. The report of a special committee sent to one of the Southern States of course is very different from the report of a standing committee of this body. There the reports of these fractions of committees may be authorized to be made: the report of a majority and the report of a minority; but the report of a standing committee of this body must always be made by the standing committee of the body, and not by a subcommittee. It is very different from a special committee sent to Florida, South Carolina, or Louisiana for a special purpose, and is not governed by the same rules at all.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask that the Secretary read the resolution I have marked—the resolution referred to the Committee on Privileges

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana asks for the reading of a resolution; which will be read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved further. That the said committee have power to employ such number of stenographers as shall be needful, and to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during the sessions of the Senate, and to appoint subcommittees with full power to make the inquiries aforesaid and report the same to the committee.

Mr. McDONALD. That is all.
Mr. THURMAN. Is there anything clearer in parliamentary law than that the Senate can receive no report except from the committee that the Senate has appointed or that the Senate has charged with the particular duty upon which to make a report? Our rules know the particular duty upon which to make a report? Our rules know nothing of subcommittees. Our rules know nothing of reports from subcommittees. Parliamentary law knows nothing of reports from subcommittees. The only report the Senate can receive is a report from one of its committees, standing or special. It cannot receive a report from any subcommittee. If the general committee shall adopt that report, it must make it as its own report. The subcommittee is a body unknown to the Senate. The general committee must adopt it and make it as its own report. Nothing can be plainer than this than this.

Now I understand that this committee has undertaken to prescribe a rule, not for itself alone, but for the Senate, that a subcommittee may report directly to the Senate. It might adopt the report of the subcommittee and make it as the report of the whole committee or of a majority of that committee; but it cannot impose upon us the obligation to receive a report from a fraction of a committee. We obligation to receive a report from a fraction of a committee. We charged no fraction of the committee with this duty, the duty to report to us. The opinions which we wanted were the opinions of the committee appointed by us or charged by us with this particular duty, and that committee alone is known to the Senate and that committee alone can report to us.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, I wish to make one remark before this running discussion closes. I speak with very great reluctance of anything that happened in the committee. I feel a great delicacy in alluding to it at all; it is not proper that I should speak of it, and I will not do so any further than is absolutely necessary to make myself nuderstood. I did not attend the meeting of the Committee on Privileges and Elections yesterday morning, for the reasons that I have already explained; and if—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the resolution of the Senate for the printing of the proceedings of the commission in the Congressional Record.

The message also announced that the House had appointed Mr. Philip Cook, of Georgia, and Mr. William H. Stone, of Missouri, tellers on the part of the House provided for by the act of Congress approved January 29, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877."

The message further announced that the House was now ready to receive the Senate for the purpose of proceeding to open and count the votes of the electors of the several States for President and Vice-President.

TELLERS OF ELECTORAL VOTE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina will allow the Chair. It was the intention of the Chair in appointing the tellers to appoint one teller on the part of the republican side and one teller on the part of the democratic side. On listening to the report from the House of Representatives the Chair changes his intention and appoints two republicans as the tellers on the part of the Senate under the law stated. The Chair appoints as those tellers the Senator from California [Mr. Sargent] and the Senator from Iowa, [Mr. ALISON] [Mr. Allison

[Mr. ALLISON.]
Mr. SARGENT. I desire to offer my resignation as one of the tellers. I understand I have been appointed in that capacity. There are several reasons why I cannot serve in that capacity, among others my connection with the Florida case. I ask to be excused.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will appoint then, in place of the Senator from California, the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. Deserved and the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. Deserved and the Senator from Kansas].

INGALLS.]

REPORT ON INELIGIBLE ELECTORS.

Mr. MERRIMON. If the Committee on Privileges and Elections yesterday morning had a regular meeting and agreed to this report, I wish to say that I should have no objection to receiving it; but the point I make is, without doubting the statement of what was done in that committee, that this subcommittee had no right to make a report in the first place. There was no action of the Senate that recognized it for any such purpose. And in the next place, if the Committee on Privileges and Elections undertook to confer upon this subcommittee the power to make a subcommittee's report, it transcended its powers.

I now beg to ask the Chair what is the state of the question before the Senate?

fore the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was about to submit the question, but there will not be time enough to take the yeas and nays, the yeas and nays having been ordered, if the call will be insisted on. Shall the vote be taken otherwise?

Mr. STEVENSON. I shall insist on the yeas and nays.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I desire to have the floor.

Mr. MERRIMON. I think I have the floor, sir.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us have order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators will resume their seats.

Mr. MERRIMON. I submit to the Chair that I am entitled to the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands, on the question of order. The Chair understood the Senator from Oregon as claiming the floor on the main subject. The Senator from North Carolina has the floor on the question of submission to the Senate.

Mr. MERRIMON. Yes. sir.
Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator had better occupy it then.
Mr. MERRIMON. I was just asking the Chair to state the condition of the question before the Senate.

tion of the question before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state the question if Senators desire. The Senator from Oregon had risen to make a report and had proceeded with the reading of the report, when the Senator from North Carolina rose, took exception to the further reading of the report, and made the point of order that it was not in order to make a report from a subcommittee. The Chair submits this question to the Senate, whether this report from the subcommittee shall be received. mittee shall be received.

Mr. ME RRIMON. Thereupon I state that I make the point of order upon these two distinct grounds: First, that the Senate does not recognize this subcommittee in such a way as to warrant it in making any report to the Senate at all; secondly, that, if at a regular meeting of the Committee on Privileges and Elections that committee undertook to authorize its subcommittee as a subcommittee to make a report, that committee, inadvertently of course, transcended its power. No such report can be made, because the Committee on Privileges and Elections have no power to authorize that subcommittee to make a

COUNTING OF THE PRESIDENTIAL VOTE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will announce that by the provisions of an act approved on the 29th instant, known as the electoral act, the Senate is required to appear in the Hall of the House of Representatives at one o'clock on this day. It is now within two minutes of that time.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that the Senate proceed to the House of Representatives. The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, thereupon proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Senate returned to its Chamber at three o'clock and ten minutes p. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate, having returned from the joint meeting of the two Houses in the Hall of the House of Representatives, resumes its session.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, owing to the termination of the time for which the late Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Key] held a seat in this body there has become a vacancy in the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BOUTWELL and others. It is filled.

Mr. INGALLS. It was filled this morning.

Mr. HAMLIN. I am told the vacancy has been filled. I was going to submit a motion to have it filled.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that there is a vacancy in the Committee on Claims by reason of the termination of the term of service of the Senator from West Virginia, [Mr. Price.] I move that the vacancy be filled by the Chair.

Mr. WEST. I ask, also, on behalf of the Committee on Railroads, that like action be taken by the Chair with respect to filling the vacancy on that committee.

cancy on that committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the indicion of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the motion?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the Chair fill the vacancy in the Committee on Claims.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana moves that the vacancy in the Committee on Railroads be filled by the Chair. The motion was agreed to.

which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on

BILL RECOMMITTED.

On motion of Mr. BRUCE, it was Ordered, That the vote postponing indefinitely the bill (H. R. No. 3281) granting a pension to Hannah A. Wood, be reconsidered, and that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Claims.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. WRIGHT, it was Ordered, That A. J. Smith have leave to withdraw his discharge from the volunteer service and his commission as officer from the files of the Senate.

On motion of Mr. CONOVER it, was Ordered, That J. G. Gibbs have leave to withdraw his petition and papers from the files of the Senate on leaving copies.

REPORT ON INELIGIBLE ELECTORS.

Mr. MITCHELL. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the point of order raised by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. MERRIMON] to the admission of the report of a subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to inquire whether the regular order is not the bill of the Judiciary Committee in relation to the Pacific Railroads.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] had the floor to make a report, when the point of order was interr

Mr. WRIGHT. I merely make the inquiry. I supposed the report was taken up by consent and would not displace the regular order. It is understood that the regular order is not displaced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not displaced. So the Chair

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from Ohio, [Mr. Thurman,] who has charge of the Pacific Railroad bill, gave way to me for the purpose of making the report.

Mr. WRIGHT. I merely wanted to have it understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question pending is the point of order raised by the Senator from North Carolina, [Mr. MERRIMON.]

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] submitted a report and

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] submitted a report and was reading the report, when the Senator from North Carolina raised the point of order that a subcommittee could not report directly to the Senate. The Chair submitted the question to the Senate, Shall this report be received? on which the yeas and nays were ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. CONKLING. If I supposed the honorable Senator from North Carolina would listen to an appeal, I should feel moved to appeal to him to withdraw his point of order. The Chair has submitted to the Senate the question whether this report shall be received or not. That is not exactly the question with which the Senator from North Carolina began; not that I mean it is not the proper form in which to submit it. I call the attention of the Senator from North Carolina, however, to the fact that a vote upon the question, Shall this report submit it. I call the attention of the Senator from North Carolina, however, to the fact that a vote upon the question, Shall his report be received or not, is not a vote upon, and will not make a record upon, the point of order aimed at the right of a subcommittee to report directly to the Senate. Therefore, if the honorable Senator from North Carolina wishes to record the judgment of the Senate upon the point he made, the decision of this question in the form in which it is about to be submitted to the Senate is not a felicitous proceeding for that process.

that purpose.

The Senator from North Carolina will no doubt agree with me in saying that, should the Senate sustain the point of order were it to be submitted in form, as it is not to be submitted in form, as indicated by the Chair, it would impose upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections the trouble, the necessity of holding a meeting and agreeing that the document produced by the Senator from Oregon should be reported to the Senate. That they could do without committing themselves to it at all, but could authorize the report to be made; so that coming around in a circle we shall reach the same result, except that some inconvenience will be caused to the Senator from Oregon, some inconvenience will be caused to the members of the committee, and some delay will be interposed between now and the reception of the report. In view of that I submit to the Senator whether it would not be better to withdraw the point of order and allow the report to come in; and especially so, in conclusion, I urge upon him again, because under the question as submitted by the Chair upon him again, because under the question as submitted by the Chair no record will be made decisive of the point or expressive of the judgment of the Senate upon the point whether a subcommittee as such can report directly to the Senate or not. There is some conflict of statement as to what occurred in the committee, and the Chair resolving this conflict as well as he could, chooses to submit, has the right to submit to the Senate the practical question, Shall this report be received or not? Suppose I vote that it shall be received. I may give that vote upon an understanding of facts quite different from that which is accepted by the Senator from North Carolina; but, whether so or not, the form of the question and the rendition of the The motion was agreed to.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. STEVENSON asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1209) for the relief of W. N. Haldeman; ing in their narration, to cut the matter short and receive the report now, because the Senate thinks it ought to be received, regardless of the technical objections which have been interposed against it.

Looking at all this and not wishing myself, I say frankly, to be called upon to vote on the question, somewhat changed in form and somewhat obscure, though it may be the question whether a subcommittee has a right to make report to the Senate without first reporting to the general committee and having the report authorized by the general committee, so as to become the report of either a standing or a special committee of the Senate—not wishing, I say, to be compelled to record myself upon a question submitted in this form and beclouded somewhat by a contrariety of statements, it would be to me a relief, as I imagine it would be to other members of the Senate me a relief, as I imagine it would be to other members of the Senate who wish to observe at once the parliamentary law and the rules of the Senate and yet subserve convenience and expedition in business, to be relieved from the sort of guess-work to which we shall be brought when the roll is called and we are compelled to give a vote which hereafter may be understood in one way or understood in another way, and which definitely and precisely ascertains nothing upon the point of order which the honorable Senator has at heart.

Mr. MERRIMON. Mr. President, I did not raise the point of order out of any captious spirit or with a view to do the slightest discourtesy to the honorable Senator from Oregon. I could not understand, when he stated that he was about to make a report from a subcommittee, how that could be done. Besides, I knew nothing of the report, for I had not heard it read. I had not been consulted about it. I, as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, did not

I, as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, did not wish to make it known that I was in no way responsible, that I did not concur in it one way or the other. My object was to have the question decided whether or not a subcommittee of one of the leading committees of the Senate could make a report, even with the consent of the committee itself.

If, however, it is not interesting to the Senate to decide this question, I am not disposed to press it at all. If it is embarrassing to anybody in view of some conflict of statement, I do not care to do it. any body in view of some conflict of statement, I do not care to do it. The debate has shown exactly how this report comes here; that it is not the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but of only three members of that committee, perhaps but two of that subcommittee. I do not know how the facts are. I will not, after what has been said in the Senate on either side, be held responsible for any opinion of law or ascertainment of fact stated in the report. With a view to relieve any hold, from embayers small. With a view to relieve anybody from embarrassment I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. CONKLING. I am much obliged to the Senator.
Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from North Carolina, in justice to myself, will agree with me that a similar report from a subcommittee has heretofore been made to the Senate in the case of Florida.

Mr. MERRIMON. I understand so, but not with my sanction. Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, shall I proceed with the reading of the report?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will proceed, the point of order having been withdrawn.

Mr. MITCHELL. I had read the resolution of the Senate authorizing the inquiry, and shall now proceed with the report of the subizing the inquiry, and shall now proceed with the report of the subcommittee:

In discharge of the duty imposed upon the committee by the last of the foregoing resolutions, the committee have examined the questions touching the alleged ineligibility to be elected and to serve as a presidential elector of Benjamin Williamson, of New Jersey. Mr. Williamson was chosen at the late presidential election in the State of New Jersey as an elector. The governor of the State of New Jersey, under the act of Congress of 1792, certified to the appointment of Mr. Williamson as an elector, and delivered a certificate thereof to him, who thereupon prepared a resignation in swriting, which was delivered to the governor before the time for the meeting of the college of electors. On the 6th day of December, when the college of electors met, it accepted the resignation, and proceeded to fill the vacancy by an election under the following provision of the statutes of that State:

"And be itenacted, That when any vacancy shall happen in the college of electors of this State, or when any elector shall fail to attend, by the hour of three o'clock in the afternoon of the day fixed by the Congress of the United States for the meeting of the college of electors, at the place of holding such meeting, those of the said electors who shall be assembled at the said hour and place shall immediately after that hour proceed to fill by ballot and by a majority of votes all such vacancies in the electoral college."

It appeared by the evidence that Mr. Williamson had been appointed by the circuit court of the United States, under the authority of an act of Congress which is still in force, a commissioner with certain criminal jurisdiction and to take testimony and other powers specified in the act, about twenty-five years ago, and that he had never resigned the office.

Mr. Williamson testified that he had never exercised the duties of the office but in two instances, and those were an authentication of two papers as a commissioner of the circuit

States."

The committee report that Mr. Williamson was, at the time of his appointment as an elector, holding an office of trust and profit under the United States, and that as such he was incligible to be appointed as an elector.

Your committee, however, are of the opinion that the vacancy thus occasioned in the electoral college was one which the electors appointed and present could legally fill under the statute of New Jersey.

Daniel M. Frost, a resident of Saint Louis, State of Missouri, was chosen at the late presidential election as an elector for the third district of the State of Missouri. By the law of that State the electors are voted for in the State at large, but they are designated for the several congressional districts. Mr. Frost was declared by the proper State authority to have been chosen as an elector, and as such received a certificate from the governor of the State. Learning that the question of his eligibility to serve as an elector had been raised, he failed to meet with the college of electors on the 6th day of December, and the other electors proceeded to fill the vacancy, voting by ballot for that purpose.

The statute of Missouri on the subject of filling vacancies in the electoral college reads as follows.

to fill the vacancy, voting by ballot for that purpose.

The statute of Missouri on the subject of filling vacancies in the electoral college reads as follows:

"If the electors appointed under chapter 30 of the general statutes, or any of them, shall fail to attend at the seat of government by the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon of the day appointed by act of Congress for their meeting, then the electors present may appoint other persons to act as electors in the place of those absent."

It is alleged that Mr. Frost was ineligible because he had been an officer in the Army of the United States before the late war of the rebellion and had afterward taken part in the rebellion and served in the confederate army. That had been such an officer was clearly proved, and that he had taken the oath required by law of an officer of the Army. It was also shown that he had been a member of the senate of the Legislature of Missouri in 1854, and as such had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States.

To rebut the idea that Mr. Frost was ineligible to serve as an elector under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, it is alleged that the oath which he took as an officer of the Army did not contain an averment that he would support the Constitution of the United States. The oath was in the following words:

I, Daniel M. Frost, born in the State of New York, appointed brevet second lieutenant in the Army of the United States, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true allegiance to the United States, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true allegiance to the United States, of America, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies or opposers whatsoever, and observe and obey the orders of the President of the United States, and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States.

DANIEL M. FROST,

DANIEL M. FROST,
Brevet Second Lieutenant, First Artillery.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, at Phillipstown, this 31st day of July, 1844.
ISAAC B. PINDY,
Justice of the Peace.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, January 2, 1877.

A true copy.

THOMAS M. VINCENT, Assistant Adjutant-General.

To further rebut the claim of his ineligibility, it was alleged and proved that on the 23d of October, 1865, he received a pardon from the President in the following Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas D. M. Frost, of Missouri, by taking part in the late rebellion against the Government of the United States, has made himself liable to heavy pains and

Whereas D. M. Frost, of Missouri, by taking part in the late rebellion against the Government of the United States, has made himself liable to heavy pains and penalties;

And whereas the circumstances of his case render him a proper object of executive elemeny;

Now, therefore, be it known that I. Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, divers other good and sufficient reasons me thereunto moving, do hereby grant to the said D. M. Frost a full pardon and amnesty for all offenses by him committed, arising from participation, direct or implied, in the said rebellion, conditioned as follows:

1st. This pardon to be of no effect until the said D. M. Frost shall take the oath prescribed in the proclamation of the President dated May 29, 1865.

2d. To be void and of no effect if the said D. M. Frost shall hereafter, at any time, acquire any property whatever in slaves, or make use of slave labor.

3d. That the said D. M. Frost first pay all costs which may have accrued in any proceedings instituted or pending against his person or property before the date of the acceptance of this warrant.

4th. That the said D. M. Frost shall not, by virtue of this warrant, claim any property, or the proceeds of any property, that has been sold by the order, judgment, or decree of a court under the confuscation laws of the United States.

5th. That the said D. M. Frost shall notify the Secretary of State, in writing, that he has received and accepted the foregoing pardon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 23d day of October, A. D. 1865, and of the Independence of the United States the ninetieth.

[I. 8.]

ANDREW JOHNSON.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

[L. S.]
By the President:
W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary of State.

W. Hunter,

Acting Secretary of State.

If Mr. Frost, by reason of having been an officer in the Army of the United States, was ineligible to be appointed an elector, it is urged that the vacancy in the college of electors was not such a one as the other electors could fill under the statute of Missouri.

Mr. Charles G. Stifel was the opposing candidate upon the republican ticket for the office of elector in the third district of Missouri, and received the next highest number of votes. Mr. Stifel went before the governor of the State at the time the votes were canvassed and claimed that Mr. Frost was ineligible to be appointed as an elector, and that he (Stifel) having received the next highest number of votes was elected, and demanded from the governor a certificate as an elector, which was refused by the governor. Mr. Stifel afterward appeared before the college of electors on the 6th day of December, and before the votes were cast produced before such college a copy of the returns of the votes in the State of Missouri as certified by the secretary of state and the governor, showing that he had the next highest number of votes to Mr. Frost, and claimed that he was duly elected an elector, and demanded that he should have the right to vote and to act as an elector before such college. This right was refused, and the college proceeded to fill the vacancy arising from Frost's non-appearance.

Your committee find that Mr. Frost, having previously taken an oath as a member of a State Legislature to support the Constitution of the United States, and having subsequently engaged in insurrection and rebellion against the United States, was ineligible as an elector of President and Vice-President under the third section of the foorteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Your committee further find that the disability of Mr. Frost was not affected or removed by the pardon of the President; that such ineligibility could only be removed by Congress by a vote of two-thirds of each House. And, furthermor them, shall fail to attend," there was in this instance clearly no such vacancy as the electors present could fill; and the filling of such vacancy by the electors present was void.

The difference between the powers of the electors present on the day of the meeting of the electoral college to fill vacancies, under the statutes of Missouri and those of Oregon, is at once apparent upon comparison of the two statutes. That of Oregon provides that "if there shall be any vacancy in the office of an elector, occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect toattend, or otherwise, the electors present shall immediately proceed to fill, by vica voce and plurality of votes, such vacancy in the electoral college;" whereas the statute of Missouri provides—
"If the electors appointed * * * or any of them shall fail to attend * * * then the electors present may appoint other persons to act as electors in the place of those absent."

If Mr. Frost was never appointed, as we hold he was not, then there was no failure to attend by any elector appointed, and consequently the only contingency in which those present could appoint another person to act as an elector in the place of the one absent, did not arise. Did the Missouri statute, as does the Oregon statute, and in fact the statutes of the most of the States, provide that any vacancy occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend, or otherwise, could be filled by the electors present, then the vacancy occasioned by the absence or resignation of Mr. Frost might have been filled by the electors present.

Your committee further find that should the doctrine assumed by Governor Grover, of Oregon, that the alleged ineligibility of Watts elected Cronin, and entitled him to a certificate, be held good, (and we repudiate it as wholly untenable, either in law or morals,) then Mr. Stifel was appointed an elector in the State of Missouri, and he should have been certified as such, and allowed to vote as such in the electoral college.

F. W. M. Holliday was chosen an elector in the and he should have been certified as such, and allowed to vote as such in the electoral college.

F. W. M. Holliday was chosen an elector in the State of Virginia at the late presidential election, and as such received a certificate from the governor of that State. Learning that his eligibility to serve as an elector was questioned, he failed to attend the meeting of the electoral college on the 6th day of December, and the other electors proceeded to fill the vacancy. The statute of Virginia, under which the other electors assumed to fill the vacancy, reads as follows:

"Without such special order, the electors shall convene at the capitol, in the city of Richmond, on the first Wednesday of December after their election, at the hour of twelve o'clock at noon of that day; and if there be any vacancy in the office of elector, occasioned by death, refusal to act, neglect to attend, or other cause, the electors present shall immediately proceed to fill, by ballot and by a plurality of votes, such vacancy in the electoral college; and when the electors shall appear, or the vacancy shall have been filled, as above provided, they shall proceed to perform the duties required of such electors by the Constitution and laws of the United States."

the vacancy shall have been liked, as above provided, they shall proceed to perform the duties required of such electors by the Constitution and laws of the United States."

Mr. Holliday was about two years ago appointed a centennial commissioner, and as such duly commissioned by the President of the United States, having been nominated by the governor of Virginia, as provided by law. He accepted the appointment and entered upon the discharge of its duties, and has never resigned. The office of centennial commissioner is one of trust, and rendered him ineligible under the Constitution of the United States to be appointed as an elector.

Your committee are of the opinion that the electors present had the legal right, under the laws of Virginia, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the neglect to attend of Mr. Holliday, the statutes in that State and the State of Oregon being almost identical, and covering a vacancy occasioned by any cause.

If the doctrine that is claimed in the case of Oregon, that the ineligibility of the highest candidate had the effect to elect the candidate having the next highest number of votes, a doctrine which we repudiate, then the next highest candidate upon the republican ticket for elector in Virginia was elector, and should have received the certificate of the governor and have been permitted to act upon the college of electors.

Mr. President, this is all of this report. It will be observed that Mr. President, this is all of this report. It will be observed that the report only relates to the three cases arising in the States of New Jersey, Missouri, and Virginia, and does not include the contested case of Oregon. That matter is being investigated under another resolution of the Senate directing the investigation, and the report will be made hereafter at an early day.

I now give way to the Senator from New York, who is also of the subcommittee, for the purpose of making any remarks that he may wish in reference to this report.

Mr. KERNAN. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the Senate for a minute only to make a brief statement as to each of these reports. I do so because I am a member of the subcommittee. I have not had an opportunity to put anything in writing, inasmuch as the not had an opportunity to put anything in writing, inasmuch as the reports were only submitted to the subcommittee this morning; but the chairman said he would give me an opportunity to make an oral statement.

I differ with the committee in reference to the case arising in New Jersey in this respect: The committee hold that Mr. Williamson was ineligible under the Constitution of the United States to be appointed an elector on the 7th of November. I ask the attention of the Senator from Oregon for one moment. The conclusion of the committee is that Mr. Williamson was ineligible under the Constitution at the time of the election. Am I right?

Mr. MITCHELL. That is correct. That is the conclusion of the committee

Mr. KERNAN. I differ from that view; and I wish to state briefly why. Mr. Williamson was appointed some twenty-five years ago com-missioner of the United States circuit court. Some ten years after missioner of the United States circuit court. Some ten years after he was appointed chancellor of the State of New Jersey, and served as chancellor the full term of seven years; and he has never acted as a United States commissioner since he was appointed chancellor, having only acted twice before. My conclusion is that he ceased to be a commissioner of the United States when he accepted the office of chancellor of the State of New Jersey. Senators will find the provision of the constitution of New Jersey, in the recent of the constitution of New Jersey. be a commissioner of the United States when he accepted the office of chancellor of the State of New Jersey. Senators will find the provision of the constitution of New Jersey in the report of the subcommittee. At my request they inserted it. I submit that the moment he accepted the office of chancellor of the State of New Jersey by the constitution of that State he ceased to be a commissioner of the United States. The language of article 7, section 2, of the constitution of New Jersey was, when Mr. Williamson accepted the office of chancellor, and still is:

The justices of the supreme court and chancellor shall hold their offices for the term of seven years.

Then the clause relates to their salaries; and then follows this lan-

And they shall hold no other office under the government of this State or the United States.

When he accepted the office of chancellor he ceased to be a commissioner of the United States.

Mr. MITCHELL. That there may be no misunderstanding it is greed, I presume, between the Senator from New York and myself that his term as chancellor expired long before this election, and also that he never resigned as commissioner.

Mr. KERNAN. That is true. He held the office for seven years, being appointed some fifteen or more years ago. He has never acted as commissioner since. That is the fact, and my conclusion is that he ceased to be a commissioner at the time he accepted the office of chancellor. I do not desire at this time to argue the question; I wish only to call attention to the conclusion I came to and my reason for that conclusion. The effect of the State constitution I think was that he ceased to be a United States commissioner when he became chancellor.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to ask the Senator from New York one question.

Mr. KERNAN. Certainly.
Mr. MITCHELL. And that is, whether the Senator from New York concurs in the conclusion of law reported by the subcommittee to the effect that the vacancy occasioned, if there was a vacancy, was such a one as the electors could fill.

Mr. KERNAN. I shall answer frankly that, inasmuch as I came to the conclusion that he was not ineligible to be appointed an elector and inasmuch as the State laws differ as to filling vacancies, I have not examined carefully this question and have no opinion to express as to whether if he had been ineligible to be appointed an elector the college of electors under the laws of New Jersey could have appointed another to act as an elector in his stead.

another to act as an elector in his stead.

Permit me to speak for a moment in reference to the case arising in the State of Missouri. The report of the subcommittee shows that Mr. Frost, before the year 1850, was a United States officer, a lieutenant in the Army, and took the oath which is set out in the majority report of the subcommittee, which was in substance that he would bear true faith and allegiance to the United States, &c., as was read by the Senator from Oregon and is set out in his report. As an officer of the Army he never took any oath to support the Constitution of the United States. Prior to about 1862 the law did not require an officer of the Army to do so. In about 1851 he resigned his position in the Army, and in 1853, or about that time, he was elected a senator of the State of Missouri, and took an oath then as a member of the Legislature of that State to support the Constitution of the United States. I understand the subcommittee in their report not to put their conclusion that he was ineligible to be apreport not to put their conclusion that he was ineligible to be appointed an elector, by virtue of section 3, article 14, of the United States Constitution, by reason of the oath which he took as an officer in the Army of the United States, but that he was ineligible because he as a senator, a member of the Legislature of the State of Missouri, took the oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and took the cath to support the Constitution of the United States, and hence was rendered ineligible by section 3 of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. MITCHELL. We put it on both grounds.

Mr. KERNAN. Very well, on both grounds. Then I will ask to be heard on both questions. I say that as an officer of the Army, lieutenant as he was, he is not ineligible under section 3, article 14, of the Constitution, and I will read it that Senators may see whether it touches any officer of the United States except one that took an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. It is conceded that he did not take an each to support the Constitution of the United States. the did not take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States as a military officer. I submit that under section 3 of article 14 he was not disqualified, and I will read it. Let us see who are disqualified. The third section is as follows:

No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

Who were disqualified by this? Were all the officers of the Army who were disqualified by this? Were all the officers of the Army high and low who prior to the rebellion took exactly this same oath taken by Frost, and no other, disqualified although they left the Army long before 1861 and took part in the rebellion against the United States? If they were not it is because they did not take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and hence were not within the third section of the fourteenth amendment. They were not disqualified; the amendment was intended only to disqualify these who as officers had taken an oath to support the Constitution. were not disqualified; the amendment was intended only to disqualify those who, as officers, had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. I think it will be found when gentlemen examine it that the third section only disqualifies a man who was an officer, civil or military, of the United States, and certain other State officers who took an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and afterward took part in the rebellion against the United States.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from New York will bear in mind that Mr. Frost was a military officer.

Mr. KERNAN. I concede he was, but he did not as such take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and hence he cath to support the Constitution of the United States, and hence he may not be included in section 3 of article 14. But I only want at this time to have go with the report of the subcommittee the suggestion which I make that Mr. Frost was not disqualified by reason of the oath which he took as a military officer, because that oath was not to support the Constitution of the United States, but a very different one, which is set out in the report; and therefore I will not read it.

read it.

It is said in the report, and this is true, that Mr. Frost was a member of the Legislature of the State of Missouri in 1854 and 1855, after his resignation, and that he then took, as such member, an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and that by section 3 of article 14 such persons are disqualified from being electors. That section disqualifies, among others, any one who, as a member of any State Legislature, &c., took an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and afterward engaged in the rebellion. My answer to his being disqualified on this ground is that Mr. Frost is relieved from the disability imposed upon him by reason of his having as a member of the Legislature of Missouri taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, by the act of Congress of May 28, 1872. I will read it. It is entitled:

An act to remove the political disabilities imposed by the third section of the four-teenth article of amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Be it enacted, &c., That all political disabilities imposed by the third section of the fourteenth article of amendments of the Constitution of the United States are hereby removed from all persons whomsoever, except—

Now mark the exceptions, and see if it does not except men who were members of State Legislatures and took the oath to support the Constitution of the United States—removed from all persons whomsoever, except Senators and Representatives of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Congresses, officers in the judicial, military, and naval service of the United States, heads of Departments, and foreign minis-ters of the United States.

This act will be found in volume 17 of the Statutes at Large of the United States, page 142.

Thus you will observe that this act, passed by a two-thirds vote, removed all disabilities imposed by section 3 of the fourteenth amendment from all the men who had taken an oath as members of a State Legislature to support the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, as to Mr. Frost, I admit he was rendered ineligible by section 3 of article 14, as it was adopted. He had been a member of the State Legislature, and as such he had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States; but the act of 1872 removes the disability from-

All persons whomsoever, except Senators and Representatives of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Congresses, officers in the judicial, military, and naval service of the United States, heads of Departments, and foreign ministers of the United States.

It relieves all the men who had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States as officers of a State, and particularly stitution of the United States as officers of a State, and particularly those men who were members of State Legislatures. Therefore Mr. Frost was perfectly eligible to be appointed as an elector, and when he did not attend the meeting of the electoral college another was properly appointed in his place. No question arises as to the construction of the State law as to vacancies. He was eligible to be appointed an elector and they properly filled the vacancy that occurred from his non-attendance according to the law of Missouri which is quoted in the report of the subcommittee.

This statement will enable gentlemen who desire an apportunity to

This statement will enable gentlemen who desire an opportunity to do so to examine whether I am right in differing in my conclusion from the majority of the subcommittee who hold that Mr. Frost was eligible. I express no opinion in reference to the construction of the eligible. I express no opinion in reference to the construction of the Missouri statute relative to filling vacancies in the electoral college where an ineligible person was voted for, for I have not been able to get the volume containing that statute, though I have sent for it to the Library several times. The protest contained in the report recites a section of the statute and I assume it is recited correctly; but I wanted the rest of the statute, and I express no opinion whether the electoral college could or could not have appointed another elector in Mr. Frost's place under the laws of Missouri had he been ineligible.

Now in reference to the case arising in Virginia I agree in the con-

Frost's place under the laws of Missouri had he been ineligible.

Now, in reference to the case arising in Virginia, I agree in the conclusions of the report. There is a difference between that and the Oregon case. I do not think it wise to be treating the two cases together. Whenever we come to pass upon another case, we must look at it. I agree to the conclusion without at all assenting to the reasoning of the majority about the two States of Virginia and Oregon. This is all that I desire to say now. It is due to the gentlemen on the subcommittee to say that they are very much occupied, trying to get evidence on these various cases; and I have satisfied myself as to the conclusions which will enable the New Jersey and Missouri cases to be settled without question. I hold that Mr. Williamson was eligible when elected, and Mr. Frost was eligible when elected; and I have not bestowed any time at all in comparing the Virginia statute as to vacancies with the statutes on that subject in other States. Having said this much, whenever the matter comes up for discus-

Having said this much, whenever the matter comes up for discussion on other cases I will give my opinion on them; or if it should become important, whether I am right or wrong in my conclusions, that the persons appointed electors in New Jersey and Missouri were eligible and properly appointed and the vacancies, by reason of their non-attendance, properly filled, I will discuss that then, but not

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I failed to hear distinctly the report as read by the member of the subcommittee, especially as to the New Jersey case. I rise to ask whether the subcommittee came to the conclusion that there was no contest over the electoral votes cast by the electors of New Jersey. Do I understand that there is no con-

Mr. MITCHELL. All the Committee on Privileges and Elections did in reference to that matter was to inquire into the eligibility or non-eligibility of Mr. Williamson, in reference to whom there was a question raised.

a question raised.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Relating particularly to Mr. Williamson?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir. The committee found that Mr. Williamson was a circuit-court commissioner appointed under an act of Congress some twenty-five years ago; that he had never resigned that commissionership, and they found that that was an office of trust and profit under the Constitution of the United States, and that therefore he was rendered ineligible to be appointed an elector. They found as a matter of fact that Mr. Williamson resigned as an elector, placed his resignation in the hands of the governor of the State of New Jersey, prior to the meeting of the electoral college; that he did not attend the meeting of the electoral college; and that the electors present at the time when the electoral college meet proceeded to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation and neglect to attend of to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation and neglect to attend of Mr. Williamson. The committee found, furthermore, that under the laws of the State of New Jersey the electors present could legally laws of the State of New Jersey the electors present could legally fill that vacancy.

Mr. RANDOLPH. And did.

Mr. MITCHELL. And did. The only dissent made by the Senator from New York, as I understand, is this: I understand him to hold that, inasmuch as Mr. Williamson accepted a State office, that of chancellor under the constitution and laws of the State of New Jersey, therefore that act was a resignation in law of the office of commissioner, and hence, as I suppose, he concludes that he was not a United States officer at the time of the election, and was therefore not ineligible.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Well, Mr. President, it is not material, the

Mr. RANDOLPH. Well, Mr. President, it is not material, the committee having come to the conclusion that they have, that I should discuss this question at all. I am familiar with the action taken by the electoral board.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to know from the Senator from New Jersey whether he agrees with the committee in holding that the vacancy caused by the failure of Mr. Williamson to attend was one that the electors present could legally fill under the laws of New Largery?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Under the laws of New Jersey, I have no doubt the electors had the right to fill the vacancy. Mr. MITCHELL. That is all I wanted to know. I agree fully. Mr. KERNAN. Will the Senator from New Jersey yield to me for minute?

a minute?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Certainly.

Mr. KERNAN. I wish to say he having been chancellor at an early day, which under the constitution of the State vacated his previous commission as a commissioner, I have not gone into the question of construction considered by the committee, in reference to whether if he had been ineligible the vacancy could or could not have been filled, because that would involve an examination of their State law, which because that would involve an examination of their State law, which I have not given.

Mr. MITCHELL. I did understand, however, that the Senator from New York agreed with the majority of the committee in their conclusion of law in reference to the Virginia case. In other words, I understand the Senator from New York to agree that the electors present when the electoral college met at Richmond, Virginia, did have the power under the Virginia statute to fill the vacancy caused by the failure to attend of Mr. Holliday.

Mr. KERNAN. I distinctly said that I had not examined the Virginia law, except an extract sent me from the code, and I expressly stated that as there was no practical question involved I did not give ginia law, except an extract sent me from the code, and I expressly stated that as there was no practical question involved I did not give it attention; but I did not say whether they were right or wrong in their construction of that law. In a word, I said that I did not desire to discuss it, because they had come to a conclusion which rendered it unnecessary for me to do so. In a word, I wanted to take up each case and dispose of it briefly.

Mr. MITCHELL. Ido not desire to argue this matter.

Mr. CONKLING. The report having been received, unless some other Senator wishes to be heard upon it, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be understood that the unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 984, is pending. It is restored to its place so as to be the unfinished business for to-morrow. The Senator from New York moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After forty-one minutes spent in executive session the doors were re-opened, and, on motion of Mr. Mc-CREERY, (at four o'clock and forty-eight minutes p. m.,) the Senate took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow, (Friday, Febru-

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

The House met at twelve o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

I. L. TOWNSEND.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journal, and after having proceeded for some time was interrupted by Mr. KASSON, who said: I ask that the resolutions which were acted upon by the House yesterday be read in full, instead of being omitted as is usual in reading of the Journal. I will not ask that the names in the list of yeas and nays be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that in reading the Journal this morning the names in the list of yeas and nays be omitted.

of yeas and nays be omitted.

Mr. KASSON. I will simply ask that the entire Journal be read, instead of omitting the parts usually omitted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that there are two or three resolutions not incorporated in the Journal, because there has not been sufficient time for the purpose. Those resolutions will have to be read from the RECORD, which has just come to hand.

Mr. KASSON. That will be equally satisfactory. My object is to have the entire Journal read, as many of us were not present last night.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the Journal, and was again in-

Mr. CONGER, who said: There has been a request that all the resolutions be read, and I do not think the Clerk is reading them all.

The SPEAKER. Wherever there is in the Journal an omission of a resolution, the Clerk will refer to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which has just come to hand, and will read from the RECORD the proper resolution.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the Journal. When he had reached the part relating to the letter from the Secretary of War in reference to the case of J. E. Maley, which on yesterday was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, Mr. CONGER said: I ask that the letter here referred to be read by the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is not in order. The Journal merely records the fact that such a letter was presented and referred.

Mr. CONGER. If the letter was read yesterday, it should be a part of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. If it was read it would be a part of the Record, but not of the Journal. If all that is read is made a part of the Journal, then the Journal would be as long as the Congressional Record.

Mr. CONGER. I do not ask for the reading of any long communication, only for the reading of the letter.

The SPEAKER. The letter is not in possession of the Clerk, but having been referred by the House is now in possession of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CONGER. If the letter is published in the Record it should be a part of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The letter is not published in the Record, so the Chair is informed, and if it were, would not appear in the Journal in full.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate had passed and requested the concurrence of the House in a resolution to provide for printing the public proceedings of the electoral commission.

READING OF THE JOURNAL.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the Journal. When he had reached the yea and nay list on the motion of Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, to reconsider the order for yeas and nays on the motion to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair,

Mr. HOSKINS said: I ask that the names be read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the names.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the Journal, and when he had reached the portion of the Journal containing the yeas and nays on the motion of Mr. PAGE that the House adjourn,

Mr. CONGER said: I call for the reading of the names of the absentees or those not voting.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read those names.

The names having been read,

The names having been read,
Mr. FOSTER said: Is my name recorded among the names of those absent or not voting ?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the name of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] is recorded among those not voting.

Mr. FOSTER. I was present and voted in the affirmative.

The SPEAKER. The Journal and RECORD will be corrected in that Mr. CONGER. The Clerk omitted to read the names of those not voting in the yea-and-nay list previous to this. I ask that those names be now read.

The SPEAKER. It is too late to call for the reading of those names at this time.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Journal as read will

Mr. CONGER. I object to the approval of the Journal at this time, and I ask that that question stand over until to-morrow morning. We have not yet had before us the RECORD of last night's proceedings, and have not been able to compare it with the Journal.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman indicate in what respect the Journal is not correct?

Mr. CONGER. I have a memorandum of some motions which were made last night, and I think some of them are not included in the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The Chair supposes that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conger] merely desires to consume time. The Chair has several communications here to present which will occupy all the

Mr. CONGER. I do not know why the Chair should presume that. I stated that there were some motions made last night of which I have memoranda, which I did not hear read as a part of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. There were no motions which the Chair entertained that are not included in the Journal.

Mr. PAGE. I move that the House now take a recess until two minutes before one o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman yield to the Chair to submit one or two necessary matters to the House?

Mr. PAGE. Certainly I will do so.

TELLERS ON COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

The SPEAKER announced, as the tellers on the part of the House

The SPEAKER announced, as the tellers on the part of the House to count the electoral votes for President and Vice-President, Mr. COOK, of Georgia, and Mr. STONE, of Missouri.

Mr. KASSON. Will the Chair allow me respectfully to inquire if he is not inclined to give the minority on this side of the House a representative among the tellers? We regard it as a violation of customary rights and of all precedents that the minority should not be represented in an important function like this. I make this statement at the request of my associates on this side.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would state the facts. These gentlemen have been appointed by the Chair under the authority of the men have been appointed by the Chair under the authority of the House. The action of the Chair has been communicated to the President of the Senate, and the President of the Senate being aware of that fact will, as the Chair understands, in reference to his appointments, govern himself accordingly, and appoint on the part of the Senate from the majority of that body.

Mr. KASSON. Of course the Chair will advise the House at the same time that that was done in consequence of the action of the presiding officer of the House.

Mr. COX. I object to that sort of debate.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. This is an impertinence on the part of the member from Iowa

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not feel offended. He is performing his duty.

ORGANIZATION OF THE ELECTORAL COMMISSION.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following:

WASHINGTON, February 1, 1877.

Washington, February 1, 1877.

Sin: I have the bonor to inform the House of Representatives that the commission constituted under the act of Congress approved January 29, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877, has met and, the members thereof having taken and subscribed the oath prescribed by law, organized, and is now ready to proceed to the performance of its duties.

Very respectfully,

NATHAN CLIFFORD, President of Commission.

To the House of Representatives.

PROCEEDINGS OF ELECTORAL COMMISSION.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a concurrent resolution of the Senate; which was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That the public proceedings of the electoral commission appointed under the act of Congress approved January 29, 1877, as taken down under the direction of the commission, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; and also that a number of copies of the same, equal to the number of copies of the RECORD and of uniform size therewith, be printed separately, 500 copies thereof for the use of the commission and the residue for the use of the Senate and House of Representatives.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I move—
Mr. PAGE. I cannot yield to the gentleman from Ohio.
The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state to the gentleman from California [Mr. PAGE] that there are one or two matters which it is absolutely essential should be attended to on the part of the House prior to the meeting of the joint convention. If the gentleman from California will temporarily withhold his motion, he shall be recognized afterward whenever he may wish.

Mr. PAGE. Very well.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I move that the resolution of the Senate be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

NOTIFICATION TO THE SENATE.

Mr. PAYNE submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved. That the Clerk inform the Senate that the House is now ready to receive that body for the purpose of proceeding to open and count the votes of the electors of the several States for President and Vice-President.

RECESS.

Mr. PAGE. I move that the House take a recess until two minutes before one o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman to say "five minutes" instead of "two minutes"

Mr. PAGE. Very well; I modify my motion in accordance with the suggestion of the Chair.

The motion, as modified, was agreed to; and a recess was accordingly taken.

The SPEAKER (at five minutes before one o'clock p. m.) again called the House to order.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 4473) for the relief of destitute poor of the District of Columbia.

Columbia.

The message further announced that Mr. Sargent and Mr. Allison had been appointed tellers on the part of the Senate to perform the duties required by the act approved January 29, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877."

Another message from the Senate (received a few minutes later) announced that Mr. INGALLS had been appointed a teller to act in the joint convention in place of Mr. Sargent excused.

joint convention in place of Mr. SARGENT, excused.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

At one o'clock the Doorkeeper announced the Senate of the United States

States.

The Senate entered the Hall, preceded by its Sergeant-at-Arms and headed by its President pro tempore and its Secretary, the members and officers of the House rising to receive them.

In accordance with the law seats had been provided as follows: For the President of the Senate, the Speaker's chair; for the Speaker, immediately upon his left; for the Senators, in the body of the Hall upon the right of the presiding officer; for the Representatives, in the body of the Hall not provided for the Senators; for the tellers, Secretary of the Senate, and Clerk of the House of Representatives, at the Clerk's desk; for the other officers of the two Houses in front of the Clerk's desk; for the other officers of the two Houses, in front of the Clerk's desk and upon each side of the Speaker's platform.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate took his seat as Presiding Officer of the joint meeting of the two Houses, the Speaker of the House occupying a chair upon his left.

Senators Ingalls and Allison, the tellers appointed on the part of the Senate, and Mr. Cook and Mr. Stone, the tellers appointed on the part of the House, took their seats at the Clerk's desk, at which the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House also occupied

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint meeting of the two Houses of Congress for the counting of votes for President and Vice-President of the United States will now come to order. In obedience to dent of the United States will now come to order. In obedience to the Constitution, the Senate and House of Representatives have met to be present at the opening of the certificates, the counting, and the declaring of the results of the electoral votes for the President and the Vice-President of the United States for the term of four years commencing on the 4th day of March next. In compliance with law, the President of the Senate will now proceed, in the presence of the two Houses, to open all the certificates of the several States, in alphabetical order, beginning with the State of Alabama.

Having opened the certificate of the State of Alabama, received by messenger, the Chair hands to the tellers the certificate to be read messenger, the Chair hands to the state of Alabama, received by messenger, the Chair hands to the tellers the certificate to be read in the presence and hearing of both Houses.

Senator ALLISON (one of the tellers) read in full the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Alabama, giving 10 votes for Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, for President, and 10 votes for Thomas A. Hendricks, of the State of Indiana, for Vice-President of the United States United States

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The certificate of the vote of the State of Alabama having been read, the Chair has opened and hands to the tellers the duplicate certificate received by mail from the same State, which will likewise be read.

Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) proceeded to read the duplicate cer-

Senator CONKLING, (interrupting.) I venture to interrupt the reading to suggest it can hardly be necessary to read in extenso the duplicate certificates received by mail, and if that should be the impression of the Presiding Officer and of the two Houses I make the further suggestion that hereafter when the tellers read a certificate the tellers not reading had better overlook the duplicate certificate at the same time in order that a comparison may thus be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The suggestion of the gentleman from New York has been heard. Is there objection to following that suggestion? The Chair hears none and it will be followed hereafter. Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) then concluded the reading of the duplicate certificate of the State of Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any objections to the certificate of the State of Alabama? The Chair hears none, and the votes of the State of Alabama will be counted. One of the tellers will announce the vote, so there can be no mistake.

Mr. COOK, (one of the tellers.) The State of Alabama gives 10 votes for Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, for President of the United States, and 10 votes for Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, for Vice-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hands to the tellers the certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Arkansas, received by messenger, and the corresponding one received by mail. In accordance with the suggestion of the Senator from New York, but one will be read, and the other will be examined as the original is read. The be read, and the other will be examined as the original is read. The tellers will follow the reading of the one received by messenger in every case with the one received by mail.

The tellers then proceeded in the manner indicated to announce the electoral votes of the States of Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, and Delaware, it being mentioned in each case that the certificate of the election of the electors was signed by the governor and content of the certificate of the second by the source of the second by the second of the sec and countersigned by the secretary of state, and in each case the Presiding Officer asked whether there were any objections to the certificate; and, there being none, the vote in each case was then

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hands to the tellers a certificate from the State of Florida, received by messenger, and the corresponding one by mail.

Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) read the certificate in extenso giving 4 votes for Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, for President, and William A. Wheeler, of New York, 4 votes for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hands another certificate received by messenger from Florida and the corresponding one received by mail.

Mr. STONE (one of the tellers) also read in extenso the certificate from the State of Florida indicated, giving 4 votes for Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, for President, and 4 votes to Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, for Vice-President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Still another certificate from the State of Florida has been received by messenger, January 31, and it is now handed to the tellers, and the corresponding one received by mail, January 30.

Senator ALLISON (one of the tellers) read the certificate, and then Senator INGALLS (another of the tellers) proceeded to read the papers accompanying the certificate.

Senator CONKLING. I understand the teller is proceeding to read a list of the counties and returns in detail; and the counties being twenty-nine in number— Mr. SPRINGER. Thirty-nine.

Mr. SPRINGER. Thirty-nine.
Senator CONKLING. Thirty-nine—I will correct myself—all appearing in long printed lists. I know the act of Congress under which the two Houses have met requires these certificates and papers shall be read. I rise after consultation with some members of either House about me, to suggest that by consent the announcement of the result of these lists by the tellers be deemed by the two Houses a reading satisfying the act, and that these papers go as they must go under the statute to the provisional tribunal raised to examine them in the first instance. I can see nothing to be gained by a reading literally first instance. I can see nothing to be gained by a reading literally of all the figures attenuated upon that printed list.

Mr. SPRINGER. The paper will be printed in full in the RECORD. Senator CONKLING. Of course I assume that the paper will be printed in full; every part of the certificate, just as if everything of the Senator from New York that the reading of this list be dispensed with, except the footing? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. Senator INGALLS (one of the tellers) read the footing of the votes and the remaining portion of the certificate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the suggestion of the Senator from New York that the reading of this list be dispensed with, except the footing? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there objections to the certificates from the State of Florida?

Mr. FIELD. The following is an objection to the votes, certificates, and lists mentioned in the return first read. I send it to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (having examined the paper sent up.) The objection complies with the law, having attached the signatures of Senators and Representatives, the Clerk of the House will read the objection. read the objection.

The Clerk of the House read as follows:

The vindersigned, Charles W. Jones, Senator of the United States from the State of Florida; Henry Cooper, Senator of the United States from the State of Tennessee; J. E. McDonald, Senator of the United States from the State of Indiana; David Dudley Firld, Representative from the State of New York; J. Randolff Tucker, Representative from the State of New York; J. Randolff Tucker, Representative from the State of Pennsylvania; and William M. Springer, Representative from the State of Illinois, object to the counting of the votes of Charles H. Pearce, Frederick C. Humphries, William H. Holden, and Thomas W. Long, as electrons of President and Vice-President of the United States in, for, or on behalf of the State of Florida, and to the paper purporting to be a certificate of M. L. Stearns as governor of the said State and Thomas W. Long were appointed electors in, for, or on behalf of the said State, and to the papers purporting to be the lists of votes cast by the said Charles H. Pearce, Frederick C. Humphries, William H. Holden, and Thomas W. Long for President and Vice-President of the United States, and to the votes themselves for the reasons and upon the grounds following among others, that is to say: First. For that the said Charles H. Pearce, Frederick C. Humphries, William H. Holden, and Thomas W. Long were not appointed by the said State of Florida in such manner as its Legislature had directed, or in any manner whatever, electors of President and Vice-President of the United States.

Second. For that Wilkinson Call, James E. Yonge, Robert B. Hilton, and Robert Bullock were appointed by the said State.

Third. The manner of appointing electors of President and Vice-President of the United States in, for, or on behalf of the State of Florida was by the votes of the United States in, for, or on behalf of the State of Florida was by the votes of the United States in the Third and the United States on the Third and the United States of the State of Indian State on the Third and November, 1876, and the qualified electors of the said State did on the said 7th day of November, 1876, and the qualified electors of the said State did on the said 7th day of November, 1876, and the power by appointing Wilkinson Call. James Delithment against the State of The State of President and States of the State of States of the State of States of S names of the electors chosen on the 7th day of November, 1876, bearing date January 29, 1877.

Seventh. The certificate of Wilkinson Call, J. E. Yonge, R. B. Hilton, and Robert Bullock, elected and appointed by the State of Florida, of the vote cast for President and Vice-President by them, bearing date of January 26, 1877.

Eighth. The record of the proceedings and judgment of the circuit court of Leon County, second judicial circuit of the State of Florida, on information in the nature of quo varranto, in the name of the State of Florida ex ret. F. C. Humphries, Charles H. Pearce, William H. Holden, and T. W. Long; also, a certified copy of the act of the Legislature of the State of Florida, approved January 28, 1877, aforesaid, and the certificate of the State canvassers aforesaid, and the proceedings and judgment on the information aforesaid, transmitted to and received by the House of Representatives on the 31st day of January, 1877.

CHARLES W. JONES, HENRY COOPER, J. E. McDONALD,

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD,
J. R. TUCKER,
G. A. JENKS,
WILLIAM SPRINGER,
Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Florida?

Senator SARGENT. In behalf of certain Senators and members of the House of Representatives who signed the same, I present three papers containing objections. The first one of which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have it now read.

The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

An objection is interposed to the certificates, or papers purporting to be certificates, of the electoral vote of the State of Florida as having been cast by Wilkinson Call, J. E. Yonge, R. B. Hilton, and Robert Bullock, upon the ground that said certificates or papers are not authenticated according to the requirements of the Constitution and laws of the United States so as to entitle them to be received or read or the votes stated therein, or any of them, to be counted in the election of President and Vice-President.

S. B. CONOVER, A. A. SARGENT, JNO SHERMAN, H. M. TELLER, Senators.

WM. WOODBURN.
MARK H. DUNNELL,
JNO. A. KASSON,
GEO. W. MCCRARY.
Mcmbers of the House of Representatives.

Senator SARGENT. On the same behalf I present the paper which send up and ask to have read. The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

An objection is interposed to the certificates, or papers purporting to be certificates, of the electoral votes of the State of Florida as having been cast by James E. Yonge, Wilkinson Call, Robert B. Hilton, and Robert Bullock, upon the ground that said certificates or papers do not include or are not accompanied by (in the package or inclosure in which they were received and opened by the President of the Senate in the presence of the two Houses) the certificate of the executive authority of the State of Florida, of the list of the names of said electors, Yonge, Call, Hilton, and Bullock, or any of them, as being said electors, nor are said certificates or papers objected to accompanied by any valid or lawful certification or authentication of said electors, Yonge, Call, Hilton, and Bullock, or any of them, as having been appointed or as being electors to cast the electoral vote of the State of Florida, or entitling the votes of said Yonge, Call, Hilton, and Bullock, or either of them, to be counted in the election of President of the United States or of Vice-President of the United States.

S. B. CONOVER.

S. B. CONOVER. A. A. SARGENT, JOHN SHERMAN, H. M. TELLER, Senators. WILLIAM WOODBURN, MARK H. DUNNELL, JOHN A. KASSON, GEORGE W. McCRARY, Members of the House of Representatives.

Senator SARGENT. On the same behalf I present the further objection which I send to the desk.

The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

An objection is interposed to the certificates, or papers purporting to be certificates, of the electoral votes of the State of Florida as having been cast by J. E. Yonge, Wilkinson Call, Robert B. Hilton, and Robert Ballock, upon the ground that by a certificate of the electoral vote of the State of Florida, in all respects regular and valid and sufficient under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and duly authenticated as such, and duly transmitted to and received by and opened by the President of the Senate in the presence of the two Houses of Congress, it appears that Frederick C. Humphries, Charles H. Pearce, William H. Holden, and T. W. Long, and each of them, and no other person or persons, were duly appointed electors to cast the electoral vote of the State of Florida, and that the said above-named electors did duly cast the votes, and did duly certify and did transmit the said electoral vote of the State of Florida to the President of the Senate; by reason whereof the said certificates or papers purporting to be certificates objected to are not entitled to be received or read, nor are the votes therein, or any of them, entitled to be counted in the election of President of the United States or of Vice-President of the United States or of Vice-President of the United States.

S. B. CONOVER.

S. B. CONOVER.
A. A. SARGENT,
JOHN SHERMAN,
H. M. TELLER,
Senators.

WM. WOODBURN,
MARK H. DUNNELL,
GEORGE W. MCCRARY,
JOHN A. KASSON,
Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further objections to the certificates from the State of Florida? Senator JONES, of Florida. I send up to be read a further objec-

The Secretary of the Senate read as follows:

The Secretary of the Schate read as follows:

The undersigned object to the counting of the votes of F. C. Humphries as an elector for the State of Florida, apon the ground that the said Humphries was appointed a shipping commissioner under the Government of the United States at Pensacola, Florida, heretofore on the 3d day of December, 1872, and qualified as such thereafter on the 9th day of December, 1872, and continuously from the last-named day until and upon the 7th day of November, 1876, and thereafter until and upon the 6th day of December, 1876, wherefore and by reason of the premises the said F. C. Humphries held, at the time of his alleged appointment as an elector of said State, and at the time of casting his vote as an elector thereof, an office of trust and profit under the United States, and could not be constitutionally appointed an elector as aforesaid.

C. W. JONES, Senator.

C. W. JONES. Senator. C. G. THOMPSON, Member of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Florida?

Mr. KASSON. I present a further objection, duly signed by members of the Senate and House of Representatives, to the last paper purporting to be a certificate and read at the Clerk's desk. The Clerk of the House read as follows:

The Clerk of the House read as follows:

The undersigned object to the last paper read, purporting to be a certificate of electors and of the electoral votes of the State of Florida, and to the counting of the votes named therein, because the same is not certified as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States, the certificate being by an officer not holding the office of governor, or any other office in said State, with authority in the premises at the time when the electors were expecised, nor until the duties of electors had been fully discharged by the lawful college of electors having the certificates of the governor of Florida at the time of the action of said lawful college, and duly transmitted to the President of the Senate as required by law.

Second. Because the proceedings as recited therein as certifying the qualifications of the persons therein claiming to be electors are expost facto, and are not competent under the law as certifying any right in the said Call, Yonge, Hilton, and Bullock to cast the electoral vote of the said State of Florida.

Third. Because the said proceeding and certificates are null and void of effect as retroactive proceedings.

A. A. SARGENT, JOHN SHERMAN, Senators.

JOHN A. KASSON, S. A. HURLBUT, Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further objections to the certificates from the State of Florida? [After a pause.] If there are none, the certificates and papers, together with other papers accompanying the same, as well as the objections presented, will now be transmitted to the electoral commission for judgment and decision. And the Senate will now withdraw to its Chamber.

Accordingly (at three o'clock and five minutes p. m.) the Senate withdrew.

Mr. KASSON. I move that the House take a recess for ten minutes in order that the Hall may be cleared for business.

Mr. COX. I do not see that there is any necessity for that.

The motion was not agreed to.

ELECTORAL VOTE OF FLORIDA.

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask the previous question on the adoption of the resolution accompanying the report of the select committee on the election in Florida.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That at the election held on November 7, A. D. 1876, in the State of Florida, Wilkinson Call, J. E. Yonge, R. B. Hilton, and Robert Bullock were fairly and duly chosen as presidential electors, and that this is shown by the face of the returns and fully substantiated by the evidence of the actual votes cast; and that the said electors having, on the first Wednesday of December, A. D. 1876, cast their votes for Samuel J. Tilden for President and for Thomas A. Hendricks for Vice-President, they are the legal votes of the State of Florida and must be counted as such.

Mr. HURLBUT. It appears to me that under the law creating the electoral commission this resolution ought to go to that commission. Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. COX. I object to debate unless we can have debate on both

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to hear the suggestions of gentlemen on both sides. He will recognize the gentleman from New York in a moment.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I desire to ask whether this resolution has ever been offered in the House?

The SPEAKER. This is unfinished business.
Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Last night the report of the committee was read; but this resolution was not presented nor was any motion made.

The SPEAKER. It was presented as part of the report, but the reading was waived with the understanding that it should all be printed in the Congressional Record.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. The report was presented and the reading in full was waived, but—

The SPEAKER. The report and accompanying resolution were considered as read and were allowed to be published by general con-

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. But my recollection is that the resolution was not offered in the House.

Mr. HOPKINS. The resolution formed the conclusion of the report. The reading was waived by unanimous consent.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Objection was made to the reading

Mr. DUNNELL. Last night leave was given by unanimous consent for the minority of the committee to present their views and have them printed. We have not yet presented the minority report, and I respectfully submit that the House should not act on this reso-and I respectfully submit that the House should not act on this resolution until the minority have had an opportunity to present their report under the leave given them last night by unanimous consent. The SPEAKER. Authority was given last night for the presentation of the minority report whenever ready.

Mr. PAGE. I do not find in the RECORD the resolution just read. The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not carefully look.

Mr. PAGE. On what page is it printed?

The SPEAKER. On page 59.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. If we are to act on this question without having both sides properly presented, I move that the House adjourn. Several MEMBERS. That is right.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that some arrangement in regard to this matter can be made.

Mr. McCRARY. In the interest of the public business, I suggest that gentlemen on both sides ought to be willing to postpone action on this subject until the minority can present their views. I am told on this subject until the minority can present their views. I am told that they have not yet had possession of the testimony, and have therefore been delayed in preparing their report, but they will be ready, I understand, to present it to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. That, then, would require unanimous consent that this matter shall go over as unfinished business until to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. HOPKINS. There is no objection to that on the part of the

Mr. HOPKINS. There is no objection to that on the part of the majority of the committee.

Mr. CONGER. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman's point in a moment. The Chair is informed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. HOPKINS] representing the majority of the committee that there is no objection to the understanding which has been suggested.

gested.

Mr. CONGER. I do not know whether I would have any objection to the arrangement proposed; but my point is that although the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, and has been so printed, yet no member presented this resolution last night or called for any action of the House whatever upon it, and that the taking up of this resolution is therefore not untinished business.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is mistaken. The resolution is part of the report—in fact, the essential part of it. The resolution was presented last night with the report, and will be found printed in the RECORD. The reading of the report in full was dispensed with

by consent

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I must object to having it go over as unfinished business. It can be recommitted with the right to report at any time.

The SPEAKER. The understanding the Chair hears is this: both sides consent that this business shall by unanimous consent go over until to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal, the object being to give to the minority an opportunity to present their views before the House shall be called upon to vote on the resolution of the

Mr. HALE. That would reserve to both sides every right each would have if it came up this morning.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I understand from the gentleman from Minnesota that the report of the minority of the committee cannot be printed—the time is too short; and therefore I believe the better plan to pursue is to allow the committee under its leave to report at any time to have this subject recommitted to it. It can then report the resolution back at any time for action when the minority have pre-

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is not what the gentlemen composing a majority of the committee desire, but if to-morrow morning the views of the minority should not be printed, then it would be competent for the gentleman from Minnesota to ask for further delay.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I know it, but we give that away which

Mr. WILSON, of lowa. I know it, but we give that away which we might get now by a fair arrangement.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the proposition as proposed results neither in injury nor advantage to either side.

Mr. KASSON. Will the Chair be good enough to state it as he understands it ?

stands it ?

The SPEAKER. It is agreed by unanimous consent that this report and accompanying resolution shall go over as unfinished business until to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal, the object being to give to the minority an opportunity of presenting their views.

Mr. KASSON. Both sides having the same rights to-morrow morning they would have now?

The SPEAKER. Certainly; and the Chair is at a loss to see how any right either side has now can be lost by agreeing to this arrangement.

Mr. HALE. We want that settled, that nothing on either side shall be waived.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Then let the gentleman having charge the report withdraw the demand for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Hopkins] who has the floor has moved the previous question.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Pending that I moved the House adjourn, and that is how it stands. The gentleman from Minnesota has not and that is now it stands. The gentleman from Minnesota has not been heard as yet.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota will be heard.

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I am unable at this moment to say positively the minority report will be ready to-morrow morning. If we do not have the report ready to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal, it may be ready some time during the day, and it will be printed in the RECORD of Saturday morning. I trust therefore there will be no objection to letting this matter go over until Saturday morning after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. That is too long. Mr. DUNNELL. It is but fair to the minority. We have had less time than we ought to have had to make our report. All the evidence has not as yet been placed upon our desks. There are portions of it not yet within our reach. I respectfully appeal, therefore, Mr. Speaker, to the House that the minority shall not be compelled absolutely to have their report ready to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there is no disposition to crowd the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. DUNNELL. I trust not.

Mr. HOPKINS. The gentleman from Minnesota has had as much time to prepare the views of the minority as the majority on the committee had. We agree the resolution shall go over as unfinished business until to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal; the previous question being considered as called or the majority of the committee retaining the floor to demand it.

The SPEAKER. The majority have the right to control the procedure.

Mr. LAPHAM. I desire to make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LAPHAM. This House having by the act confided the decision of this question to the electoral commission, and having reserved the right to review its decision when it shall be announced, should not in advance of the action of that commission pass upon this

The SPEAKER. That is not a point of order. It is a question for the House to determine.

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust by unanimous consent this matter will lie over until to-morrow, to come up then as unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. That is the understanding which is trying to be

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to go into Committee of the Whole on the

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. What is the understanding?

The SPEAKER. It is that this business shall go over until tomorrow morning after the reading of the Journal, to come up then as the unfinished business.

the unfinished business.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. For one I do not agree to that. I move that the House adjourn. If the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. DUNNELL] cannot be ready by that time I do not wish the consideration of the report to be proceeded with. We want fair play.

The SPEAKER. You shall have it as far as the Chair is concerned. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I am satisfied as to that. I am only speaking through the Chair.

Mr. CLYMER. I desire to report back from the Committee on Appropriations the Military Academy appropriation bill with amendments by the Senate, and to move non-concurrence in the amendments. ments.

Mr. PAGE. Before proceeding to other business, I wish to ask if the previous question has been moved on the report from the Florida committee.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been moved.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Then I press the motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would ask the gentleman from Iowa

[Mr. Wilson] to withdraw for a moment his motion to adjourn, to allow the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Clymer] to make a report from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CONGER. Let this matter be first disposed of.

Mr. CLYMER. I ask the gentleman from Iowa to yield to me to make the report.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I will do so, provided I am recognized after the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] gets through.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will be recognized for that purpose. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I withdraw the motion.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAMILTON, of Indiana, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported back that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 3367) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Alfred Rouland;

An act (H. R. No. 1558) to remove the political disabilities of Robert Ransom, of Virginia;

An act (H. R. No. 2736) to remove the political disabilities of N. H. Van Zandt, of Virginia; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 181) authorizing the Public Printer to hind in alch the stitched service of the Harm compilation antitled. bind in cloth the stitched copies of the House compilation entitled Counting the Electoral Vote.

REPORT OF FLORIDA COMMITTEE.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think there can be no objection to let this matter go over till Saturday. I ask unanimous consent for that purpose.

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Speaker, I am satisfied that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Hopkins] who moved the resolution will, on reflection, be willing to allow the matter to go over until Saturday morning. It is impossible for me to promise that the report of the minority will be ready to-night so that it may go into the RECORD. My colleague in the minority is not present and I do not feel at liberty to agree that the matter shall be presented by to-morrow morning. We have not expected to have the report ready before to-morrow evening, and in that case it will appear in the RECORD of Saturday morning; and then both reports will be before the House. The House will then be informed of the views of both sides when it is called on to act on Saturday. I trust the gentleman from Pennsylvania will agree to let the matter go over till Saturday morning. It certainly is a question which ought not to be voted on without full information on both sides. Another reason why it need not be hurried, as has been suggested by the gentleman from New York, is, that the question is now in the hands of those who have been appointed under the recent left if the recent left is considered.

under the recent act to consider it.

Mr. WALLING. I trust that the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Dunnell] will be acceded to. As one member of the committee, I am willing that this matter shall go over till Saturday, occupying the same position then that it does now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Dunnell] to request that the unfinished business of today shall go over by consent, to be the unfinished business after the reading of the Journal on Saturday. Is there objection? [After a pages 2] The Chair hears none.

reading of the Journal on Saturday. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOSKINS. If I rightly understand what is the question before the House, the motion to adjourn is now pending. Am I right? The SPEAKER. The motion to adjourn is not pending. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] withdrew that motion.

Mr. HOSKINS. While I am up, I desire to call the attention of the Chair and of the House to the fifth section of the act under which we are now proceeding. Under that act I think it is not competent for the House to adjourn. We can only take a recess not beyond the the House to adjourn. We can only take a recess not beyond the next day at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon until the electoral vote shall have been counted.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the section of the act re-

The SPEARER. The Clerk will read the section of the act referred to by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KASSON. I would suggest that the Chair take a little time to consider the effect of the provision in the act referred to by the gentleman from New York. I know it has puzzled a number of gentlemen.

The SPEAKER. The C.erk will read the section.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 5. That at such joint meeting of the two Houses seats shall be provided as follows: For the President of the Senate, the Speaker's chair; for the Speaker, immediately upon his left; the Senators in the body of the Hall upon the right of the presiding officer; for the Representatives, in the body of the Hall not provided for the Senators; for the tellers, Secretary of the Senate, and Clerk of the House of Representatives, at the Clerk's desk; for the other officers of the two Houses, in front of the Clerk's desk and upon each side of the Speaker's platform. Such joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of the electoral votes shall be completed and the result declared; and no recess shall be taken unless a question shall have arisen in regard to counting any such votes, or otherwise under this act, in which case it shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next day, Sunday excepted, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon. And while any question is being considered by said commission, either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

Mr. KASSON. That we may gain a little time to consider the obligations imposed by the act, I suggest that, if it necessitates the taking of a recess to an hour not later than ten o'clock to-morrow, a motion to take a recess to that hour be now made. And by that time we will learn the construction which both branches of Congress put upon the act.

Mr. COX. There is only one construction of the law. We are all tied up in a hard knot.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say that the effect of that will be that seven or eight calendar days might be all embraced in this one legislative day, Thursday.

The Chair thinks that the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Kasson] is a good one, that the House take a recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, and in the mean time the two presid-morrow morning at ten o clock, and in the mean time the two presiding officers of the respective Houses can consult together and determine what construction they will give to that act.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Was the proposition for further time on the Florida report accepted?

The SPEAKER. It was agreed unanimously that that report should go over until Saturday after the reading of the Journal, and come up then as unfinished business, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Honyuyal having the flore and by wine demanded the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents and the significant contents are supported by the significant contents are supported HOPKINS] having the floor and having demanded the previous ques-

Mr. SPARKS. I understand that under this law no motion to adjourn and no motion to take a recess are necessary. The matter is simply under the direction of the Speaker.

Mr. COX. My friend is mistaken; either House can adjourn or

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the question upon taking a

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the House will not take a recess at this

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. If the motion is debatable, I desire to say a word upon it.

The SPEAKER. It is not debatable. [Loud cries of "Regular order!"] The regular order is demanded, which is the question on the

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that will not be done.
The question was taken on Mr. Kasson's motion; and on a division there were ayes 140, noes not counted.
So the motion was agreed to.
And accordingly (at three o'clock and forty minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. AINSWORTH: Protest of the Board of Trade of Dubuque, against the passage of the bill imposing a capitation tax on immigrants, to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CUTLER: Petition of citizens of Baltimore, Maryland, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DANFORD: The petition of T. A. Scott and 16 others of

By Mr. DANFORD: The petition of T. A. Scott and 16 others, of Ohio, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DENISON: The petition of E. W. Wilson and others, of similar import, to the same committee.

similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Frederick Billings and others, for a repeal of laws by which banks are taxed, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. FOSTER: The petition of citizens of Ohio for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HOAR: The petition of Andrew Parkhurst and others, of Rockbottom, Massachusetts, for arrears of pension, to the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions.

By Mr. SAMPSON: The petition of W. R. McCully and 51 others, that pensioners be allowed arrears of pension from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

IN SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 2, 1877-10 a.m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. MORRILL. I move that the Senate take a recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate accordingly took a recess until twelve o'clock.

Cess until twelve o clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m.
Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Byron Sunderland, D. D.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate will come to order. The Secretary will read the Journal of yesterday.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, February 1, was read and approved.

J. MILTON BEST.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to give notice that on next Tuesday morning, after the morning business is over, I shall ask the Senate to take up the bill (S. No. 174) for the relief of Dr. J. Milton Best, of Kentucky, to consider it and act upon it.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, in favor of the passage of a law granting ninety thousand acres of land to the agricultural college of the State of Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands. Mr. HAMLIN presented two petitions of citizens and tax-payers of the District of Columbia, praying the passage of the House bill providing for the reduction of taxes imposed upon them; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DAWES presented the memorial of Harrington & Richardson ferred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DAWES presented the memorial of Harrington & Richardson, of Worcester City and County, Massachusetts, remonstrating against the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3192) for the relief of William Wheeler Hubbell; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented the petition of J. W. Douglass, late collector of internal revenue for the nineteenth district of Pennsylvania, praying to be re-imbursed a certain sum of money lost by him through the embezzlement of his clerk; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

lost by him through the embezzlement of his clerk; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CLAYTON presented the memorial of the Choctaw Nation of Indians, praying for the settlement of their claim arising under the treaty of 1855; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BOGY presented the petition of a large number of citizens of Texas County, Missouri, praying an amendment to the pension laws so as to allow arrearages of pensions; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of a large number of citizens of Saint Louis, Missouri, praying for the repeal of the law imposing taxes upon deposits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of business men of West Virginia, praying that a part of the present tax imposed upon the circulation and deposits of national banks may be repealed; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. KERNAN presented a petition of E. S. Gillett, Daniel Spraker, and others, of Montgomery County, New York, praying for the repeal of the law imposing a tax upon the deposits, circulation, and capital of all banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COOPER presented the memorial of the Armstrong Tennessee Brigade of Florida Volunteers, praying the passage of the House bill granting pensions to the soldiers of the Florida war; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALLACE presented the petition of the Pennsylvania Association of Veterans of the War of 1812, praying for the passage of the law granting them pensions; which was ordered to lie on the table. He also presented a petition of citizens of Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania, praying for the repeal of the law imposing taxes upon deposits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Mary G. Harris, widow of Colonel John G. Harris, late commandant United States Marine Corps, praying for an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee ing for an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

DISTRICT TAX BILL.

Mr. SPENCER. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to move that there be printed for the use of that committee the bill (H. R. No. 4554) for the support of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, as proposed to be amended by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, and also some communications from the commissioners of the District of Columbia to the District Committee. I desire to state that the committee will meet to-morrow morning, and I ask the order to print the bill with the proposed amendments and also the communications for the use of the Committee on the District of Columbia, so that the committee may have them to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion to print? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WRIGHT. I presented some days since the petition of John D. Thorne, praying compensation for certain cotton taken and appropriated by the United States troops in Louisiana during the late At the last session the Committee on Claims reported upon this claim recommending its rejection. It has been recommitted with additional papers and we again have had it under consideration, and I am instructed to report it back and ask to be discharged from its further consideration and to move the rejection of the claim.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Beale, jr., late a cadet midshipman at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, praying to be restored to the Naval Academy, from which he was dismissed by a sentence of a court-martial, submitted a report; which was ordered to be printed; and asked to be discharged from the further consideration of the petition; which was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1210) for the relief of John W. Douglass; which was read twice by its title and referred to the W. Douglass; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BOGY (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1211) defining the manner in which certain land scrip may be located; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

Mr. INGALLS asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1212) to enable Indians to become citizens of the United States; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask leave to introduce a bill. I have not had time to examine it. I was requested to present it, and I am satisfied from the high character of the gentleman who made the request that it is meritorious.

it is meritorious.

By unanimous consent leave was granted to introduce a bill (S. No. 1213) to transfer to the Secretary of the Treasury all stocks and evidences of indebtedness due and held in trust by the Secretary of the Interior on account of the Creek orphans' fund; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SARGENT asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1214) to amend an act amending section 5457 of the Revised Statutes relating to counterfeiting; which was read twice by its title and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PADDOCK asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1215) to authorize the Council Bluffs and Nebraska Ferry Company to construct a ponton wagon-bridge across Nebraska Ferry Company to construct a ponton wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at Omaha, Nebraska; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PUNISHMENT OF COUNTERFEITING.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the considera-tion of Senate bill No. 1147.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (S. No. 1147) for the punishment of persons making or having in possession dies, molds, &c., for manufacturing counterfeit coin was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will simply state that in the Revised Statutes in the sections for punishing the counterfeiting of coin the revisers have omitted, or there was not sufficient law on the subject, provision for punishing persons having in their possession dies, &c., for manufacturing coin. This bill is simply intended to remedy that defect in the statutes. I suppose there will be no objection to it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SHERMAN. There is another bill reported by the Committee on Finance which I wish to have acted upon now. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1109) relating to public accounts and claims.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will state very briefly the reasons that make it important to pass this bill now as a public law. This bill is confined simply to the presentation of claims before the Treasury Department. It does not affect at all the law as to the Court of Claims or the commissioners of claims, or any of the various claims that may be presented before any of the courts. It relates entirely to claims before the accounting officers of the Treasury Department. The bill has been very carefully prepared.

Mr. DAVIS. Does it affect present claims or relate to those to be presented hereafter?

Mr. SHERMAN. All from this time forward, forever more. Mr. DAVIS. My question is whether it affects claims now before the accounting officers.

Mr. SHERMAN. There is one section here that touches the statute of limitations. The bill has been very carefully prepared in the Treasury Department and has undergone considerable revision and careful of limitations. The bill has been very carefully prepared in the Treasury Department and has undergone considerable revision and careful consideration by the Committee on Finance. There were two sections of the bill as prepared by the Department to which the Committee on Finance were not prepared to give their sanction. I may say that we approved of the objects but were not prepared to go so far. The Department, however, still thinks that sections 4 and 6 ought to be retained. The Committee of Finance have also provided a new section relating to notice by sureties.

The chief object of the bill is to secure a statute of limitations, so that claims against the United States presented to the Treasury Department shall not be paid after a certain term of years. The necessity of such a law is obvious and it ought to have been passed long ago. The claims that have grown out of the war are very numerous. Some twelve years have now elapsed, and the Department deemed it wise to make a statute of limitations carefully framed, with a view to cut off those claims that were to be presented to the Department. As a matter of course, the bill does not affect the presentation of claims to Congress, except that it provides that where claims are pending before Congress they shall not be prosecuted before the Department. Sometimes claimants who are eager commence the prosecution of their claims before the Department and also press them in Congress, and in that way multiply their chances for getting through perhaps doubtful claims. I think every Senator will see the importance of passing the bill, when he examines it, for the public interest.

Mr. DAVIS.- I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio what is to be the effect of the bill upon claims now pending and which have been suspended for want of time to examine them on the part of the Department. For instance, agents of the Government are sent through the country, in different border States particularly, to ex-

Department. For instance, agents of the Government are sent through the country, in different border States particularly, to examine into claims. In some cases I know claimants have been delayed for years by the Department for want of such persons to examine claims, not owing to the claimants at all, for they have been urgent, but for want of time on the part of the Department to have them examined. If that state of things continues, in the case of claims presented in proper time, presented in good faith, and believed to be just at least by the claimants when there has been necessaring. to be just at least by the claimants, when there has been no examina-tion of the claim on the part of the Government, are the claimants to be entirely debarred from presenting their claims before the De-

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator will see by the first section of the bill that it does not affect claims which have been presented and which are pending, as a matter of course. I will read the section itself, which will explain it. The first section of the bill provides:

That all claims against the United States which the accounting officers of the Treasury or the heads of any Department or bureau are authorized to examine and decide shall be barred unless presented within six years from the time the same

As a matter of course, if they are presented in six years they may be pending for six years more, and therefore they are not barred.

Mr. DAVIS. I will say that I was not in my seat at the moment the bill was read, and I did not notice the first section; but the Senator will remember that I asked him whether the bill affected claims now pending before the Department, and I understood him to say that it did

Mr. SHERMAN. If I answered the Senator that way, I was in error, but I did not so understand him. I thought the Senator asked whether it affected claims that had accrued already.

Mr. DAVIS. I meant claims now pending.
Mr. SHERMAN. O, no; if they are now pending, having been presented before the Department, this bill does not cut them off.
Mr. COCKRELL. For six years?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; if they have been presented and are now pending, they are not cut off. They will last as long as the case of Jarndyce rs. Jarndyce; but they must be commenced in six years.

Mr. COCKRELL. And as to claims that have been in the Department ten years, and have accrued and action is now pending, would this bill cut them of?

Mr. SHERMAN. O, no; and if they are now presented before the bill becomes a law it would not cut them off. I will say that the second section provides that even in the case of old claims they have four years to present them after the passage of this act. It provides—

That claims existing which would be barred by the operation of this act, or within two years after the same goes into effect, may be presented within four years from the date of this act, but not afterward.

It gives them four years afterward to present their claims.

Mr. WRIGHT. I was not aware that this bill was to be brought up, and my attention has not been directed to it except from the reading. There are two or three things which occur to me that I will suggest to the Senator from Ohio. If I understand the bill from the reading, it is proposed to fix a certain time as to claims that have already accrued, and as to claims that may accrue hereafter there is a different time fixed. Another inquiry that I would make is, whether there is any provision in the bill that will prevent the possibility of reviving claims that have already been barred by some statute that reviving claims that have already been barred by some statute that is now in force. We have some statutes which provide now that certain claims are to be filed before the Department at a certain time, and if not, they are barred.

Mr. SHERMAN. This does not affect that, the Senator will see.

Mr. WRIGHT. My inquiry is, if we do not have a positive provision in this bill whether it may not be taken to revive claims that are now harred?

barred?

Mr. SHERMAN. On the contrary, section 2, if the Senator will look at it, is very carefully worded and meets that point. It pro-

That claims existing which would be barred by the operation of this act, or within two years after the same goes into effect, may be presented within four years from the date of this act, but not afterward.

If they are now fully barred, not by this bill but by existing acts,

Mr. WRIGHT. I know the bill itself would not revive them; but my inquiry is whether it would have the effect of reviving them.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think not. If the Senator will express it in better language than is contained in the bill, I should be very glad to have him do so.

Mr. WRIGHT. The proposition I make is that you have a statute of limitations that runs, and by which particular claims are barred. If we pass a new statute, and say nothing about the old, my inquiry is whether the new statute does not apply to all claims, unless make an exception.

Mr. SHERMAN. This bill is expressly applied to claims existing which are to be barred by the operation of this proposed act. If the Senator deems it necessary to add as a proviso, "Provided, That this shall not be construed in any way to revive or renew a claim which has already been barred," I have no objection to such an amendment.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think that would be necessary. The Senator will remainly that some years since, before the Finance Committee, we has already been barred." I have no objection to such an amendment.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think that would be necessary. The Senator will remember that some years since, before the Finance Committee, we had this question of the statute of limitations concerning claims before the Departments, and at that time we had such a provision, "that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to revive claims barred by any existing statute."

Mr. SHERMAN. If my friend will take Senate bill No. 1109 and add such a proviso to section 2, I shall be very glad to have him do so.

Mr. INGALLS. I have very grave doubts about the policy of this bill. It is certainly in contravention of the spirit of the law as it now exists. There is an old Latin maxim, nullum tempus occurrit regi, which is as old as the books. It has always been a principle, I believe, that statutes of limitation do not run either for or against a government. The bill which the Finance Committee have reported I believe proposes to establish a statute of limitations that is more exacting and more onerous than any with which I am familiar in any of the States, because there is no saving clause for persons under disability. In statutes of limitation under State laws infants and insane persons and those who are disabled from suing by certain disabilities have always their rights protected. Here is an absolute inhibition forbidding any claim to be presented or allowed if they are not presented within the period named in the bill. In the first section the time fixed was five years, and as amended by the committee it is six years. Certainly, if the Government is to be protected against claimants, the rule ought to work both ways and individuals ought certainly to be protected from having claims enforced against them by the Government. If the principle is to be adopted in favor of the Government that claims shall not be enforced unless presented within six years, it certainly is a very poor rule that will not work the other way and say that the Government shall not be allowed

Mr. SHERMAN. The answer to that is that the bill simply forbids the officers of the Treasury Department to allow claims after they have accrued for six years. Six years are allowed to transpire, and if a claim is not presented within six years it shall not be paid by the accounting officers of the Treasury. That is manifestly proper, because the remedy for an individual to Congress or to the courts is always open, and the bill would not affect that proceeding. If there is a proper claim for the Court of Claims there is a remedy open there; but an accounting officer of the Treasury Department, who simply pursues the ordinary passing of accounts in the current order, ought not to be allowed to go back and pay old claims without the action of Congress.

In regard to the provision reserving the rights of minors and widows and persons under disability, that would be very well if you were deal-ing with courts, which have the power to discriminate, to take the requisite testimony, &c.; but these accounting officers are rather in the nature of auditors, and there is no reason for such a provision in favor of minors and persons under disability. These accounting officers really ought not to pass upon anything but claims that come up in the ordinary current run of business

It is true there is some force in the objection made by the Senator from Kansas, that there is no bar here against the Government. The Treasury Department in preparing this bill put in section 6 to operate as a statute of limitations against the Government. I shall read it. That section which the committee have stricken out reads:

That suits against sureties on bonds given to the United States shall be barred unless brought within five years after the termination of the office of the principal therein, if the bond be an official bond, or unless brought within five years from condition broken, if the bond be a bond given by any person to whom has been awarded a contract with the United States.

The committee were not prepared to adopt so radical a rule against the United States, because what is everybody's business is nobody's, and sometimes delays occur in the settlement of accounts in favor of and sometimes delays occur in the settlement of accounts in tavor of the United States which do not occur when the accounts are in favor of individuals. Every individual claimant naturally presses his claim against the United States. Therefore, the reasonable limitation of six years can operate no wrong to individuals, while with the Government, which is an aggregation of forty millions of people, sometimes such a statute of limitations would be very unjust. In order to meet the case as far as we thought it was safe to meet it, we have provided in section 4-

That whenever any surety, on any official bond given to the United States, shall, at any time after the expiration of the term of office of the principal of such bond, give notice in writing to the head of the proper Department that he demand an examination and settlement of the accounts of such principal, it shall be the duty of the head of such Department to cause such examination and settlement to be made forthwith; and if the principal shall be in default on such bond, it shall be the duty of the head of the Department to cause a suit to be commenced against the sureties within two years from the filing of such notice.

Here is a new provision in favor of sureties. On the whole we thought it was a very wise one. After an office has expired a man who has become a surety on an official bond has a right to demand an examination and settlement of the Government, and the Government should properly state the account. If the Government does not state the account and commence suit and take the proper steps to collect the money from the principal in two years the surety should be discharged. That provision is clearly right. It only operates in cases where the surety calls the attention of the Government to the possibility or probability that the principal may be in default; and the burden ought to be thrown upon the surety who goes upon the bond rather than to provide a general statute of limitations which may cut off a great number of claims.

I will say that these provisions have all been carefully considered, and as the bill relates simply to the auditing and accounting officers of the Treasury Department we felt that it was better to have a rule stringent in favor of the Government rather than otherwise, because these officers, as we all know, are not bonded officers; they are not in the nature of courts, but in the nature of accounting officers. They the nature of courts, but in the nature of accounting officers. They simply adjust and account, and they are not like a court where the proceedings must be open. These accounting officers may be deceived by affidavits or by ex parte testimony or the like; and the rule, therefore, ought to be much more stringent against their powers than against the powers exercised by a court where the United States may be represented by counsel and where the proceedings are all open. It is one of the most dangerous features of our Government to allow claims to be made in the Treasury Department and to be passed upon by a single officer or by two or three officers without open scrutiny and investigation before a court.

vestigation before a court.

It seems to me that the fact that this proposed law was recommended by the Treasury Department, prepared in a great measure by the very accounting officers who have passed upon these claims and see the possibility or probability of abuse without a statute of limita-tion, shows that the time has now come when such a bill ought to pass. Such propositions have often been before the Committee on Finance, but I do not know that we have ever before reported a bill of this kind, but now I think such a bill ought to be passed.

Mr. MERRIMON. Large sums of money are due from the Government by way of arrearages for carrying the mails to persons who were engaged, some of them technically, against the Government during the late war.

Mr. SHERMAN. They are already barred by existing law, and such claims could not be presented except by an act of Congress. This bill as a matter of course does not affect any proceeding before Congress or any claims to be presented to Congres

Mr. MERRIMON. I suppose it is understood that those claims are not embraced or affected by this bill at all.

Mr. SHERMAN. They are already barred by law and cannot be paid except by an act of Congress. They are not affected at all by this bill.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to section 4 of the bill. While as far as it goes it seems to me to provide for a good deal, in certain respects it falls very far short of what is due to parties who are under obligation to the Government. The Treasury Department, as I think my colleague must know, is full of bonds given a long time ago, which under the general law, I suppose, hold principal and surety twenty years; and there the accounts lie unsettled, or it may be they have been settled. A revision of them discloses mistakes in settlement, and a dozen or fifteen years after they are supposed to be settled, and very often after the principal himself has died and his estate has been settled, sureties are called upon to respond. They are called upon to respond sometimes under circumstances under which the principal himself is not to blame at all. I have had my attention directed within a year or two to a call of the Department upon sureties' bonds, where the form of a settlement has been gone through with years ago, and a revision of a settlement has been gone through with years ago, and a revision of a settlement has been gone through with years ago, and a revision of the accounts has shown an honest mistake; but the principal has passed away; his estate has been settled; and one of the sureties who has been found surviving, is called upon years afterward, when it is utterly impossible for him to make clear facts which could have been made clear if the Government had been prompt in the adjustment of these accounts. I have in my possession in my desk letters which apply to a case which this section does not provide for as I understantly in the section does not provide for as which apply to a case which this section does not provide for as I understand it. Any surety under this amendment may relieve himself after two years; still for two years after he applies to the Government for some sort of statement that will relieve him, he is liable. In States like the State that I represent, the estate of the principal is all settled in less than two years and closed up, and the Government may lie still two years after his representatives demand to know whether there is any claim against him. The surety cannot stop the closing up of the estate of his principal, and he can have no claim to do so. I have precisely a case of that kind in my desk at this time. Therefore it seems to me that while so far as it goes this bill is just and right, yet I suggest to the Committee on Finance whether the Government should have two years longer. Why not say one year?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will say, in answer to my friend, that I was afraid two years were too short a time, for the reason that it is often very difficult to effect a settlement in that time. Take a paymaster's accounts. They have to go through various offices: first, the War Department, and then the Treasury. I think two years is too short for some cases.

Mr. DAWES. Let me consider that a moment. Is it too short a time, after it has lain there ten years, and attention is called to that particular account, when they have all the vouchers and the surety has not any? The principal has gone, his papers are in somebody else's hands; the surety has command of nothing that can aid him at all. Every voucher, every evidence of a claim is in the possession of the Government. The Government's attention is called to this particular account; it is called, too, by a surety who is closed against his deceased principal in less than two years; and yet my friend from Ohio says that, under those circumstances, he thinks the Government ought to have a longer time than two years to determine whether ought to have a longer time than two years to determine whether they have after all any claim upon such a bond as that. I submit to my friend from Ohio, I submit to my colleague here, whether, when their attention is called to a particular bond, and called, too, by a surety upon that bond, and when they of all others and more by a surety upon that bond, and when they of all others and more than all others have it in their power to determine definitely whether there can be any just claim of the Government upon that bond, they ought to have as long a time as two years after that to hold a surety? Is there no justice, is there no propriety in saying to the Government, "If you sleep on these claims while all the evidences of defense to them and adjustment of them are moldering away and passing out of sight, and you have all there are in your control, you shall only hold two years longer your claim upon the surety?" I insist that there are two sides to this case. If the rights of the citizen upon a bond are to be held in the hand of the Government just as long as the Government please, when the Government undertakes to set up a bar against the citizen himself, when he makes a claim upon the Government, they, at least, ought to be willing to submit to a reasonable bar against themselves upon like claims.

Mr. KERNAN. I ask the Clerk to correct an error, probably in printing, on line 1 of section 4. The word "or" should be "on;" so as to read:

as to read:

That whenever any surety on any official bond, &c.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That correction will be made.

Mr. KERNAN. Now, in reference to the two years, I think the somewhat excited speech of the Senator from Massachusetts is not called for by this bill. As the law has been heretofore, there has been a much longer time when a man is sued upon his sealed bond. In many of the States a man can be sued on his sealed bond any time within twenty years from the time when the cause of action accrued. The object of the bill is to give a surety a chance to be discharged within a reasonable time from his obligation on the bond of his principal. I concurred in committee in fixing two years, being uneasy, however, lest we thereby made the time too short; but still on the whole I thought it better if the surety gave notice and required the Government to examine and find whether there was any default, then if the Government did not bring suit within two years, let the surety be discharged, although the principal is not discharged by the section. The hardship is not as stated. Take it in almost all the States, sureties on promissory notes, or ordinary contracts, although their principal dies, are still liable for six years after the debt accrues, after the note becomes due. With reference to the Government it will often happen that they will have great difficulty, and very likely will not always discover that there is a default within two years, but still when they have notice served I am willing to say that they should then bring a suit if they ever intend to make any claim. It surely is not harsh to give the Government two years in which to do this. I venture to say that this is the most liberal statute of limitations in favor of sureties that has ever been passed anywhere, and I think there is no hardship in it. If the surety is uneasy, if he desires to secure his rights, let him individually and as soon as the term of office of his principal expires, give the notice. Then the Government will have to examine, and decide, and sue within two years. Looking to the statutes of the States as to sureties, and as the Federal Government has run without any statute on this subject heretofore. I think that the bill is not open to the criticism that it is not liberal enough to ever the statutes. then if the Government did not bring suit within two years, let the fore, I think that the bill is not open to the criticism that it is not liberal enough to sureties. Therefore I hope the time will not be made any shorter.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, this bill is to remedy what would be otherwise an almost interminable evil, of holding the signers of bonds for an indefinite period. Practically, I think, that the Senator from Massachusetts will find that the moment this notice is given suit will be commenced before two years or before the expiration of one year. Immediately after calling the attention of the Department to any case of this kind, I have no doubt that the practical result will be the institution of a suit to terminate the amount of indebtedness at once. I can see no reason whatever in not allowing the bill to pass as it has been reported.

Mr. WRIGHT. I have myself been long oppressed by great anxiety and indeed a sense of the absolute necessity of some such arrangement as is proposed by this bill. Each day's experience satisfies me that the Government is greatly wronged by leaving open the door an interminable time for claimants to present their claim before these interminable time for claimants to present their claim before these Departments. As the law stands now, claimants present their claims and sustain them by ex parte testimony. Failing at one time they come in again, failing then they come in again, and there is no end to the time during which they can harass and trouble and embarrass the Departments in presenting claims. I can see no reason in the world why the claimants having demands upon the Government should not be held to some reasonable time, precisely upon the same principle and the analogy that the statutes of limitation obtain in the States and between individuals. Whether the time fixed by this bill is the proper time it is for others to determine. I think it is bill is the proper time it is for others to determine. I think it is sufficient in length to give every person an opportunity to be heard. I think the provision of this bill which requires that the testimony shall be taken upon interrogatories is also emineutly proper and will tend largely to protect and save the Government.

It will be seen by a reference to the provision touching sureties upon official bonds that that is a departure from the law as itstands now as to the rights of sureties. The surety, as the law stands now, cannot compel the Government to sue by giving notice. The Government can take its time, and there is no time in which it is bound to bring suit; but for the benefit of and as a protection to sureties, it is now proposed that when the surety gives notice the Government must sue in two years, and if the Government does not sue in that time then the surety is released. I think that is right; I think it is just to the sureties; and I think the Government ought to be induced to diligence by the action of the sureties in this way.

I therefore am in favor of the general provisions of this bill. I think the bill is right in every respect. I do not see how any individual can claim to be harmed if we pass such a law as this. So far as to the right of the Government to continue its claim against the individual for an indefinite time, I think the provision is eminently individal for an indefinite time, I think the provision is eminently proper. We should have some limitation there also and especially so far as sureties are concerned. These sureties are upon the bonds. They, of course, are held for the same length of time in law as the principal and must respond if the principals are unable to respond, and for the same length of time, and they are liable to be brought into court for the same number of years. Now, if we provide that, by giving notice to the Department, unless suit is brought and the account is closed in two years, the sureties will no longer be liable, they are thus in an attitude where they can protect themselves, and the Government is also required to be diligent in the prosecution of its claims. This is in analogy with the provisions found in the statutes of many of our States, that where the surety will be liable upon the paper or bond he can by giving notice to the creditor require the creditor to present. creditor to prosecute.

I suggested a short time ago an amendment that I thought was necessary to this bill, and I now propose the amendment and invite the attention of the Senator from Ohio, who has the bill in charge, to it. I move to add at the close of the third section the words:

And nothing in this act shall be construed to revive any demand or claim which already barred by existing statute or statutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa. It seems to me if there is any danger it ought to be adopted.

Mr. INGALLS. Let the amendment be read.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not think the fears of the Senator from Iowa are well grounded. However, I have no objection to the amend-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Chair will put the question on this amendment first, before the amendments of the committee are acted upon.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the fact that the fourth section of the amendment of the committee ought to be amended grammatically.

The section reads:

"That whenever any surety, or any official bond."

The word "or" appears to be improperly substituted for "on." Mr. SHERMAN. That is a typographical error which has been

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That correction has been made. The amendments of the Committee on Finance will be reported. The first amendment of the Committee on Finance as in section 1, line 6, to strike out "five" and insert "six;" so as to read:

That all claims against the United States which the accounting officers of the Treasury or the heads of any Department or bureau are authorized to examine and decide shall be barred unless presented within six years from the time the same

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was in section 2, line 1, after the word "claims," to insert the word "existing;" and, in line 3, to strike out "three" and insert "four" before "years;" so

That claims existing which would be barred by the operation of this act, or within two years after the same goes into effect, may be presented within four years from the date of this act, but not afterward.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 4, in the following words:

That all bonds given to secure centracts with the United States, and all official bonds of public efficers, except of postmasters, marshals, clerks, and other officers of the courts of the United States, shall be submitted to the Solicitor of the Treasury for examination and approval.

And insert in lieu thereof:

SEC. 6. That whenever any surety on any official bond given to the United States shall, at any time after the expiration of the term of office of the principal of such bond, give notice in writing to the head of the proper Department that he demands an examination and settlement of the accounts of such principal, it shall be the duty of the head of such Department to cause such examination and settlement to be made forthwith; and if the principal shall be in default on such bond, it shall be the duty of the head of the Department to cause a suit to be commenced against the sureties within two years from the filing of such notice; and in case suit is not so brought, the sureties on such bond shall be relieved, and such notice shall hereafter be deemed a bar to suit against such sureties; but nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to relieve the principal from liability.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know that I understand fully what is meant here by "the head of the proper Department." Suppose, for example, that this provision should be applied to the account of an

Mr. SHERMAN. That would be in the Interior Department.
Mr. ALLISON. But the Interior Department will not have control of these accounts. The Interior Department might adjust the account, so far as the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs is concerned, and then send it to the Treasury Department.

Mr. BOUTWELL. The Treasury Department adjusts all accounts.

Mr. ALLISON. The Treasury adjusts finally all these accounts.

Then why should not this notice be sent to the Treasury Department? Suppose I give a notice to the Secretary of the Interior under this section. The Treasury Department will have no notice of the fact; and in the mean time the two years will have expired and the surety will have been absolutely released. Should not the section say that this notice shall be given to the Secretary of the Treasury, in whose Department all these accounts are finally adjusted and settled?

Mr. SHERMAN. That would be just as well. I do not see any

Mr. ALLISON. That would make it definite, so that the surety may know where the notice is to be given, and there would be no confusion with reference to the different Departments.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not myself see any objection to that. I suppose, as a matter of course, that these accounts will come from the different Departments, and all the accounts finally will be settled at the Treasury. It would perhaps be better to specify that Department than to say "the head of the proper Department." Unless the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. BOUTWELL] thinks differently I shall concur in such an amendment. concur in such an amendment.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I do not think there can be any objection to making it read "the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. EATON. Do I understand the Senator from Ohio to consent to the suggestion?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not see any objection to it. I think it proper to say "the Secretary of the Treasury

Mr. EATON. I think the section ought to be so amended. It will require several amendments in the section to make it correspond.

Mr. SHERMAN. Just say "the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. ALLISON. Imove in line 4 of section 4 to strike out "proper Department" and insert "Secretary of the Treasury;" in line 6 to strike out "head of such Department" and insert "Secretary of the Treas-ury;" and in line 9 to strike out "head of the Department" and insert

"Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, that is right.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Is an amendment to the fourth section in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment as amended, and an amendment to it is in order.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I may be to insert in line 3 of section 4 as reported.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move to insert in line 3 of section 4, as reported by the committee, after the word "bond," the words:

Or if the principal, while in office, shall be in default.

So that if amended it will read:

That whenever any surety on any official bond given to the United States shall, at any time after the expiration of the term of office of the principal of such bond, (or if the principal, while in office, shall be in default,) give notice in writing to the Secretary of the Treasury that he demands an examination and settlement of the accounts of such principal, &c.

The object of that amendment is to protect the surety while the principal is in office.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I think the Senator from Virginia will see that that proposition if adopted would be useless and dangerous as well. Whenever a public officer is in default, it is the duty at once of his superiors to remove him from office as soon as the default is known. I take it that the contrary never happens, that a person is held in office after default, and the moment he is out of office of course this provision would be effectual. But even this provision would be unnecessary because the first thing done, when a public officer is in default, is to make a statement of his accounts and to commence pro-accounts and to commence proceedings against his sureties. That is the first thing that should be done. I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I think the Senator from Virginia will see that it is hardly necessary.

Mr. KERNAN. The proposition of the amendment just submitted was, I think, considered in committee, and this was the danger with regard to it, that the surety might at the end of six months give a notice; the Government might not be able to ascertain that the principal was in default and use it would be about the way in default and use it would be about the way in default and the surety might was been about the way in default and the surety might was in default and the surety might was in default and the surety might as the way in default and the surety might was in the way in default and the surety might was the danger with the surety might be about cipal was in default and yet it would be a bar in two years from the cipal was in default and yet it would be a bar in two years from the time at which the notice was given, when the Government might not be able to discover that the party was in default. I think it would be better that we should leave the language as it is, particularly in view of the fact that the party goes upon the bond voluntarily for the period of his term of office, and if when the term is out we give the surety two years, that, I think, is all that should be done.

Mr. WRIGHT. It occurs to me that the objectiom to the proposed amendment is found in the fact that, if the principal is in default, then this law would require the suit to be brought upon the bond after notice given, though the bond itself had no provision that you had the right to bring suit for a mere default. That is to say, if you incorporate in this bill the provision proposed by the Senator from Virginia, if there is any default without reference to the right of the Government to bring suit, upon the default you would be be bound to bring suit any how.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is the amendment of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. JOHNSTON] to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.
The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was to strike out section 5, in the following words:

That suits against sureties on bonds given to the United States shall be barred unless brought within five years after the termination of the office of the principal therein, if the bond be an official bond, or unless brought within five years from condition broken, if the bond be a bond given by any person to whom has been awarded a contract with the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 6, in the following words:

words:

SEC 6. That where a public officer has given bond to the United States, or where any person has become a contractor with the United States and has given bond to perform the contract, and a new additional or strengthening bond is given to the United States by such public officer or contractor, the sureties on such new additional or strengthening bond, together with the sureties on the original bond of such officer or contractor, shall be liable for the balance found due on final adjustment of the account of such officer or contractor, and suit may be brought against the sureties on either bond or both bonds of such officer or contractor to recover said balance; and when an officer shall be re-appointed to an office, and shall give a new bond to secure afaithful performance of the duties thereof, the sureties on such bond shall be held liable for any default or indebtedness of their principal existing at the time of the execution of such bond, as well as for any defalcation occurring during the term of office for which such bond was given: Provided, however. That the liability of the sureties on the bond given for a faithful performance of the duties of the preceding term of office shall in no wise be lessened or impaired. The condition of such bonds shall conform to the requirements of this section, and the transcript of the accounts of such officer, made by the accounting officers of the Treasury, under sections 886 and 889 of the Revised Statutes, shall be prima facie evidence of the balance found to be due from such officer in a suit on any of said

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 7, [5] line 2, to strike out the word "settle" and insert the word "state:" so as to read:

That the accounting officers of the Treasury shall adjust and state the final accounts of public officers or persons to whom contracts have been awarded within two years from the expiration of the term of office of the officer, or within two years from the time the contract has been completed or default made therein.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 8, [6] line 6, to strike out "has" and insert "shall have;" in line 9, after the word "public," to insert "after due notice shall have been given to the adverse party, and;"

That no written testimony of any witness shall be admitted as evidence in relation to any claim or account against the United States pending before the head of any Department or bureau, other than the Commissioner of Pensions, or before the accounting officers of the Treasury, unless the same shall have been taken on oath before a judge or clerk of a court of the United States, or a commissioner of a circuit court of the United States, or a notary public, after due notice shall have been given to the adverse party, and upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, &c.

Mr. INGALLS. Who is "the adverse party?"

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the question I was about to ask, who in this case is "the adverse party" to whom notice can be given?

Mr. SHERMAN. The claimant is the United States. For instance, if the United States desire to take testimony to rebut evidence on the Chief States desire to take testimony to rebut evidence on the part of the claimant, the United States would have to give the adverse party notice of the time, or if the claimant should desire to take testimony to support his claim he must give notice to the United States. That is the object of the provision.

Mr. COCKRELL. To what officer of the Government would the claimant then give notice?

Mr. INGALLS. To the President?

Mr. SHERMAN. To the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. COCKRELL. That question certainly ought to be determined as to whether notice is to be given to Congress, to the President, or to the Attorney-General.

Mr. BOUTWELL. The law settles that. All suits for or against the United States are under the control of the Attorney-General.

Mr. SHERMAN. Or the proper district attorney.
Mr. COCKRELL. This is not a suit, though, properly speaking.
Mr. BOUTWELL. Yes, it is.
Mr. SHERMAN. I would here say that it is almost impossible to define the meaning more explicitly. The whole section shows it.
You will see that it is carefully prepared in that respect. It reads;

That no written testimony of any witness shall be admitted as evidence in relation to any claim or account against the United States pending before the head of any Department or bureau other than the Commissioner of Pensions, or before the accounting officers of the Treasury, unless the same shall have been taken or

These claims may be pending in different Departments of the Government. As a matter of course this notice would have to be given in the particular Department in which the claim was made. I think the phrase "adverse party" covers the case perhaps as well as it could be covered.

Mr. COCKRELL. The language is "after due notice shall have been given to the adverse party." In what way given? Given by the head of the Department wherein the claim has been pending?

Mr. ALLISON. It may be the other way. The head of the Department may want to give notice.

Mr. SHERMAN. It may be the other way.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I think if the Senator from Missouri will read the concluding words of the section in connection with what has been read, he will see that the course to be pursued is clear:

And upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, when cross-interrogatories are proposed, shall have been previously filed on behalf of the Government and the claimant in the office of the Department or bureau before which such claim is

It seems to point to the place where the notice is to be given, where the adverse party is to be found, and the Government is the adverse

Mr. INGALLS. Is it the intention of the Committee on Finance that no affidavit or written testimony of any kind can be filed in any auditor's office unless notice has been given to the adverse party of the intention to file it?

Mr. SHERMAN. On the contrary, that is expressly provided. This provision is only intended to apply to claims "pending before the head of any Department or bureau other than the Commissioner of Pensions or before the accounting officers of the Treasury.

Mr. INGALLS. To what does it apply?

Mr. SHERMAN. It applies to claims in the War Department, where war claims are made, or to the Post-Office Department, where claims are made by contractors for extra service, &c. They must be supported by the proof of witnesses whom the Government has had an opportunity to cross-examine in case they desire to cross-examine them.

Mr. INGALLS. The language of the section is certainly broad enough to cover all cases either before the War Department or the Post-Office Department. As the Senator from Ohio has suggested, take the case of a contractor who desires pay for the transportation of the mails. If there has been any temporary neglect in regard to which an explanation may be necessary, it would seem that under this section no testimony can be filed, not even an affidavit or a writ-ten statement explanatory of the claim under consideration, unless there has been notice given to the head of the Department and cross-interrogatories filed on behalf of the Government and the claimant. It seems to me to be an extraordinary provision.

Mr. SHERMAN. When the next section is read it will be found that all this is provided for:

That it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General or some officer of the Department of Justice designated by him, to prepare and promulgate forms and regulations in conformity to which, depositions, to be used in relation to claims and accounts against the United States pending before the head of a Department or bureau, or before the accounting officers of the Treasury, may be taken.

Consequently the Attorney-General prescribes the form in which testimony shall be taken. We have heard a good deal about ex parte affidavits and the like. Surely the Government of the United States ought to have the benefit of depositions taken in due form where witnesses are necessary. The great mass of claims are decided upon papers. For instance, where a contractor has a claim against the Government and the money becomes due he is entitled to it by the terms ernment and the money becomes due he is entitled to it by the terms of the contract; the amount is usually fixed or can be ascertained on the face of the paper; but where it is necessary for him to produce witnesses to prove a fact in pais, a fact outside, or a material fact, then that fact must be ascertained according to the forms prescribed by the Attorney-General. This section prescribes that no written testimony of any witness—that is, where testimony is necessary—shall be admitted unless it is taken according to these forms. It seems to me that that is very proper. It is what any private individual could demand in a suit in which he was interested.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was in section 8, [6] lines 10 and 11, after the word "cross-interrogatories," to insert "when cross-interrogatories are proposed, shall have been;" so as to read:

And upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, when cross-interrogatories are proposed, shall have been previously filed on behalf of the Government and the claimant in the office of the Department or bureau before which such claim is pend-

Mr. SHERMAN. That is part of the same section which we have just been considering.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This concludes the amendments reported from the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose it is intended that the section of the bill just passed upon shall be applicable to testimony to be taken hereafter, and it is not intended to exclude testimony that may be on file, which has been taken under the rules as at present in force.

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly it is not intended that this bill shall have a retroactive effect if it becomes a law.

Mr. WRIGHT. Therefore I suggest to my friend whether it would not be well to insert, in the first line of the sixth section, the word "hereafter;" so that it shall read:

That no written testimony of any witness shall hereafter be admitted as evi-

Mr. SHERMAN. I think that the meaning which the Senator desires to express is clearly shown by the language in the fourth line of the last section, which reads "depositions to be used," the meaning of which is, of course, depositions hereafter to be used. However I have no objection to the insertion of the word "hereafter." Where does the Senator propose to insert it?

Mr. WRIGHT. At the close of the first line of the sixth section, after the word "shall;" so as to read:

That no written testimony of any witness shall hereafter be admitted as evi-

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to that.
Mr. CONKLING. It does not convey to my mind the idea.
Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senator from Iowa to repeat the amendment and let us see exactly how it will read.

Mr. WRIGHT. I move to add after the word "shall," at the end of the first line of the sixth section, the word "hereafter;" so as to

That no written testimony of any witness shall hereafter be admitted as evidence in relation to any claim or account against the United States, &c.

Mr. CONKLING. I suggest to my honorable friend that he had better look with a little care at that. "Shall hereafter be admitted." Admitted where and when? Admitted on a hearing? Admitted on consideration? If it shall be held to mean that, will it not signify the reverse of which the honorable Senator wishes it to signify?

Mr. WRIGHT. The object that I have in view is to make it apply to testimony hereafter taken.

Mr. CONKLING. When you use the word "admitted," you refer to the use of the testimony, and not to the taking of the testimony; and there you should guard it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I dislike to allow any new phraseology here, because I know that these sections have been prepared with the utmost care, not by the Committee on Finance, but by the Department and upon the advice of the law officers. Therefore, I believe that it is as well-worded as it can be.

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not know that the amendment is strictly necessary; but it occurred to me that by possibility they might construe this section so as to exclude all testimony that has been taken.

Mr. SHERMAN. It only applies to testimony to be admitted. That already admitted is in, and as a matter of course cannot be excluded.

Mr. WRIGHT. I know that the testimony is in, but the case has not yet been brought to a hearing and their attention has not been given to the case. When a case is brought up and they come to consider the evidence the question is whether they will not regard that star the evidence the question is whether they will not regard that the testimony has not been taken according to the rule here prescribed and that they cannot consider it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it is right as it is.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make this suggestion to the Senator from Iowa, that the girth earlier health weather.

that the sixth section should read:

That no written testimony of any witness hereafter taken shall be admitted as

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not necessary. However I do not care. Mr. ALLISON. That will not hurt it any, and that is exactly what

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa withdraw his amendment?

Mr. WRIGHT. I withdraw it.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn. The bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. MERRIMON. I direct attention to section 3. I know by repeated experience while I served upon the Committee on Claims that claimants very often present their claim to the head of a Department. It goes to some accounting officer; he, the officer, is in doubt about his jurisdiction. Sometimes he sends the claimant to Congress. He comes to Congress, presents his petition setting forth his claim and the grounds for relief. The matter pends before Congress for a long time and finally the claimant goes back to the head of the Department to have his claim passed upon and determined. According to the reading of section 3 pending the time that the claim is before Congress the head of the Department or accounting officer shall suspend his action. I submit that it would not be fair or just to count that time against the claimant.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is not counted.

Mr. MERRIMON. As I understand the bill it is.

Mr. KERNAN. Will the Senator yield to me a moment?

Mr. MERRIMON. I will.

Mr. KERNAN. The claimant under the section presents his claim to the Department. claimants very often present their claim to the head of a Department.

Mr. KERNAN. To what section does the Senator refer?
Mr. KERNAN. I will take section 1, which provides—

That all claims against the United States which the accounting officers of the Treasury or the heads of any Department or bureau are authorized to examine and decide shall be barred unless presented—

Not acted upon-unless presented within six years from the time the same accrued.

Mr. SHERMAN. The statute does not run while the claim is pending. Mr. MERRIMON. Suppose the claimant comes to Congress. Does not that discontinue his application to the head of the Department? Mr. SHERMAN. O, no; it is expressly provided otherwise. Section 3 provides:

That no claim shall be decided or considered by any head of a Department or of a bureau, or by any accounting officers the Treasury, while the same is pending before Congress by petition, bill, or otherwise, but shall be suspended until final action by Congress has been had thereon.

The claim is not rejected, but the effect of the claim being before Congress is in the nature of a supersedeas.

Mr. MERRIMON. With that understanding I am content.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in. The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning hour has expired. The Chair calls up the unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 984, to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned to the Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned to the House on Wednesday, it was announced that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Gordon] was anxious to be heard upon this bill, but that he was detained from the Senate by indisposition. I learn that he is indisposed this morning. It is known also that the Senator from Ohio who has this bill in charge, [Mr. Thurman,] as also the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, [Mr. Edmunds,] from which committee the bill was reported, are both necessarily absent. If any Senator is prepared to proceed upon the bill this morning, of course there can be no objection to his doing so. If not, I trust, in view of the absence of the Senators to whom I have referred, and especially the necessary absence of the Senator from Georgia, that there will be no objection that this bill may be passed over informally, not to lose its place, but passed over at least for a short time until later in the day, or until to-morrow, when the Senator from Georgia will be able to be in his place and be heard. I make this suggestion and trust there will be no objection to it at this time. Of course if any Senator is prepared to proceed upon the bill, there can be no objection to his being heard.

Mr. WEST. Let it go over.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose there will be no objection. I understand there is no objection to the proposed arrangement. Let the bill be called up to-day before the adjournment, so as not to lose its place. I have a hope, I may be allowed to say, that if the Senator from Georgia is not present to-morrow to proceed other Senators perhaps will be ready to proceed at that time, and that we may have the assistance of the Senator from Ohio who has the bill in charge. I make this suggestion after conferring with him, and I trust it will suit the convenience of the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope that the bill will go over indefinitely because the Senator from Ohio, my colleague, can call it up when he

Mr. WRIGHT. I trust that will not be done. I could not consent to that until I had an opportunity to confer with him, and I trust that what I suggest may be concurred in.

SCHOOL LANDS IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. BOOTH. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 805) relating to indemnity school selections in the State of California.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BOOTH. The object of this bill is fully explained in a report of the Committee on Public Lands recommending it. Perhaps I can state it in a briefer time than the reading of the report would occupy. By a law of Congress passed in 1866, where the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections had fallen within the limits of a Mexican or Spanish grant, the State was allowed to select other sections in lieu of those lands after the final survey was made. Up to last March that law had always been construed to mean that the final survey was made when the limits were fixed under the decree of the court by the surveyor-general; and under that construction the title to many thousands of acres had passed to the State of California and had been consands of acres had passed to the State of California and had been conveyed by that State to purchasers. Last March the Department rendered a decision that "final survey" in the act of 1866 meant the issuance of a patent, and that no lands had properly been listed to the State under the construction given before that time. The attention of the Department was called to the great hardship that it worked, that the title to lands which had been held in possession, many of them ten years, had been transferred, many of which lands had been improved, many of which were very valuable lands; and the decision was nodified so as to conform very nearly, if not entirely, to the bill was modified so as to conform very nearly, if not entirely, to the bill I have introduced; but in view of the fact that such a decision as the last one might be rendered under an incoming officer, it has been deemed important that this construction should be given to the law, or rather that the titles should be confirmed. I may state that the bill has the approval of the Department, the approval of the land commission of California, and is unanimously recommended by the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments reported by the Committee on Public Lands will be reported.

The first amendment of the committee was in line 4 of section 1, after the word "school," to strike out "sections" and insert "selec-

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the proviso at the end of section 1, in the following words:

Provided, That this section shall not apply to suck lands as have been selected and certified to said State in lieu of sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, which shall not be included within the final survey of such grants when patented.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert in section 2, line 5, after the words "grant, or" the word "are," and after the word "invalid," in line 5, to strike out "and such lands shall" and insert:

The same are hereby confirmed, and the sixteenth or thirty-sixth section in lieu of which the selection was made shall, upon being excluded from such final survey, be disposed of as other public lands of the United States: Provided, That if there be no such sixteenth or thirty-sixth section, and the land certified therefor shall.

So that the section, if amended, will read:

So that the section, if amended, will read:

SEC. 2. That where indemnity school selections have been made and certified to said State, and said selection shall fail by reason of the land in lieu of which they were taken not being included within such final survey of a Mexican grant, or are otherwise defective or invalid, the same are hereby confirmed, and the sixteenth or thirty-sixth section in lieu of which the selection was made shall, upon being excluded from such final survey, be disposed of as other public lands of the United States: Provided, That if there be no such sixteenth or thirty-sixth section, and the land certified therefor shall be held by an innocent purchaser for a valuable consideration, such purchaser shall be allowed to purchase the same at $1.25 per acre, not to exceed three hundred and twenty acres for any one person: Provided, That if such person shall neglect or refuse, after knowledge of such facts, to furnish such proof and make payment for such land, it shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States.

Mr. INGALLS. This bill appears to be seen as $1.25 per acre.

Mr. INGALLS. This bill appears to be one of considerable importance; and if I remember correctly it has been previously debated in the Senate. I profess that I am unable to understand its provisions, and I would like to ask the Senator from California if it has been submitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and, if so, whether it has his approbation?

Mr. BOOTH. I will say in reply to the Senator from Kansas that most of these amendments were made at his suggestion; this one most of these amendments were made at his suggestion; this one particularly was.

Mr. INGALLS. Can the Senator from California state the amount of land that is affected by this bill?

Mr. BOOTH. Not with any considerable accuracy.

Mr. INGALLS. Approximating what?

Mr. BOOTH. More than perhaps five hundred thousand acres have been received by the State in all; but I do not understand really that this affects the title to any land, except as it merely confirms titles that have already been granted under the construction of the law which was given at the time. If ever there was a bill of peace and quiet, this is that bill.

Mr. WRIGHT. I should like to understand from the Senator from California that this makes no grant of land at all, but merely con-

California that this makes no grant of land at all, but merely confirms the title to certain selections made under a prior construction of the Department.

Mr. BOOTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOOTH. And makes no grant whatever?

Mr. BOOTH. No grant whatever.

Mr. WRIGHT. And takes no land from the Government?

Mr. BOOTH. Takes no land from the Government.

Mr. WRIGHT. But virtually confirms patents or certificates issued heretofore under a construction given to the law by the Department, but which has been changed; and now this is to validate selections but which has been changed; and now this is to validate selections heretofore made.

Mr. BOOTH. That is all.

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand that the amendments to the bill proposed by the committee have the concurrence of the Department.

Mr. BOOTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. INGALLS. Under the conflicting rulings of the Department,
I should like to ask the Senator from California if adverse claims to any of these lands have existed; and, if so, whether they are saved by the bill? Mr. BOOTH. I will read section 3, which is intended to save any conflicting claims:

SEC. 3. That the foregoing confirmation shall not extend to the lands settled upon by any actual settler claiming the right to enter not exceeding the prescribed legal quantity under the homestead or pre-emption laws: Provided, That such settlement was made in good faith upon lands not occupied by the settlement or improvement of any other person, and prior to the date of certification of said lands to the State of California by the Department of the Interior: And provided further, That the claim of such settler shall be presented to the register and receiver of the district land office, together with the proper proof of his settlement and residence, within twelve months after the passage of this act, under such rules and regulations as may be established by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Public Lands was to strike out the third section of the bill in the following words:

SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall be construed as affecting the rights of third persons existing at the date of the said selection.

This act shall not apply to any mineral lands.

and in lieu thereof to insert:

SEC. 3. That the foregoing confirmation shall not extend to the lands settled upon by any actual settler claiming the right to enter not exceeding the prescribed legal quantity under the home-stead or pre-emption laws: Provided, That such settlement was made in good faith upon lands not occupied by the settlement or improvement of any other person, and prior to the date of certification of said lands to the State of California by the Department of the Interior: And provided further. That the claim of such settler shall be presented to the register and receiver of the district land office, together with the proper proof of his settlement and residence, within twelve months after the passage of this act, under such rules and regulations as may be established by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The arranglement

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as section 4 the following:

SEC. 4. That this act shall not apply to any mineral lands nor to any lands in the city and county of San Francisco, nor to any incorporated city or town, nor to any tide, swamp, or overflowed lands.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOOTH. In line 8 of the first section I move to strike out the words "and its vendees." The object of the amendment is to confirm the title to the State, leaving out the words "and its vendees." I do not think it would change the legal effect at all; but if there have been any titles obtained from the State by fraud I do not wish by any possible implication to confirm them.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNION NATIONAL BANK OF LOUISIANA.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the Senate proceed to consider Senate bill No. 1018.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (S. No. 1018) for the relief of the Union National Bank of Louisiana, successor to the Union Bank of Louisiana, was read the second time and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The preamble recites that on the 10th of September, 1863, there were in the possession of the Union Bank of Louisiana certain funds belonging to the Planters' Bank of Tennessee; that in pursuance of a general order of General N. P. Banks, dated August 17, 1863, those funds were illegally seized by the quartermaster of the United States, against the protest of the bank; that the Planters' Bank has since sued and obtained judgment against the Union Bank for the sum of $36,873.99, being the full value of the funds so seized as aforesaid; and that the Union Bank has paid over the amount to the Planters' Bank in satisfaction of the judgment; therefore the bill directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the Union National Bank of Louisiana, the successor of the Union Bank of Louisiana, the sum of $36,873.99 in full satisfaction of all losses sustained by that bank by reason of the seizure. reason of the seizure.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there a report? If so, I should like to hear it

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. Cam-ERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Claims, on the 2d of August, 1876.

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the Union Bank of Louisiana, praying compensation for losses sustained by reason of the illegal seizure by General Banks, in 1863, of certain deposits in their hands, have examined the same, and beg leave to bring in the following report:

The facts in this case are as follows:
The Union Bank of Louisiana was a corporation doing business under the laws of the State of Louisiana, in the city of New Orleans, at the time of the capture of that city by the Federal troops. Among its correspondents were several banking-houses in the State of Tennessee, at that time confederate territory. On the 17th day of August, 1863, General Banks, being then in command of the Federal troops at New Orleans, issued the following general order:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, Louisiana, August 17, 1863.

The several banks and banking corporations of New Orleans will, without delay, pay over to Colonel S. B. Holabird, chief quartermaster, or to such officer of the Quartermaster's Department as he may designate, all money in their possession belonging or standing upon their books to the credit of any person registered as an enemy of the United States or engaged in any manner in the military, naval, or civil service of the so-called Confederate States, or shall have been or may thereafter be convicted of rendering any aid or comfort to the enemies of he United States, and all moneys in their possession or standing upon their books to the credit of any corporation, association, or pretended government in hostility to the United States. These funds will be held and accounted for by the Quartermaster's Department, subject to the future adjudication of the Government of the United States.

By command of Major-General Ranks.

By command of Major-General BANKS:

RICHARD B. IRWIN, Assistant Adjutant-General.

The banking-houses of New Orleans appealed to General Banks to know whether this order should be held to apply to credits on their books in favor of banks within confederate territory, and he decided that it should be so held.

At this time there were on the books of the Union Bank of Louisiana credits in favor of certain banks in Tennessee to the following amounts, to wit:

 To the Planters' Bank of Tennessee
 $180,657 82

 To the Union Bank of Tennessee 48,054 45

 To the Bank of Tennessee
 23,644 22

On the 10th of September, 1863, the above amounts, in confederate money, were taken from the Union Bank by Captain J. W. McClure, assistant quartermaster, acting under and by authority of the order above recited, the bank making its formal protest.

acting under and by authority of the order above recited, the bank making its formal protest.

No part of these sums of money was ever returned to the Union Bank.

Some time in the month of September, 1866, and after the close of hostilities, the Planters' Bank of Tennessee instituted suit against the Union Bank of Louisiana, in the United States district court for the district of Louisiana, to recover the value of the deposits to their credit with the Union Bank. The Union Bank pleaded the seizure of those deposits by the United States and the order of General Banks, of Angust, 1863. The case was brought to trial and judgment was first given for plaintiffs for some $113,000. A new trial, however, was granted, and finally verdict and judgment were rendered for $24,713.79, with interest from the 15th September, 1853, and costs.

A writ of error was taken from this decision to the Supreme Court of the United States, and finally, in December, 1872, the judgment of the court below was affirmed.

Upon this latter judgment the Union Bank of Louisiana did, on the 16th day of May, 1873, psy over to the attorney of the Planters' Bank the sum of $36,873.99, being in full for principal and interest and costs.

For this amount the Union Bank claims conspensation of Congress, on the ground that it has been subjected to so much loss through the illegal and tortious act of the agent of the United States, in having taken from it, by force, moneys belonging to the Planters' Bank, and to which moneys the United States had no color of right. Of course, if the act of the agent was illegal, either the Government or the agent is responsible. If General Banks had no right to force the Union Bank to turn over its deposits to the military authorities, under the authority of his order of August 17, 1863, then either he or the Government must make good the losses sustained by reason of such coercion.

But Justice Strong, in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of the Planters' Bank te. Union Bank, (16 Wallace, page 494,) very

"It follows, then, that the order of General Banks was one which he had no authority to make, and that his direction to the Union Bank to pay to the quartermaster of the Army the debt due the Planters' Bank was wholly invalid."

Your committee agrees entirely with this conclusion of the Supreme Court, and finds the orders of General Banks illegal and void.

The bank can have no remedy against General Banks, for the Federal Government has passed a law exempting military officers from all actions and suits for any acts done in their military capacity.

Your committee is, therefore, of the opinion that the Union Bank is rightfully entitled to recover from the Government the amount which it was compelled to pay to the Planters' Bank, namely, $36,873.99.

The petition of the Union Bank also claims the further sums of $22,245.93 and $10,000, which it alleges it has paid to the Union Bank of Tennessee and the Bank of Tennessee, respectively, upon compromises, the same being in full for the amounts placed to the credit of those banks on the books of the Union Bank of Louisiana, September 10, 1863, and seized by order of General Banks, as above set forth. Your committee, however, is not inclined to allow these amounts, on the ground that the evidence in support of them is not sufficiently clear to place them upon the same basis as the case of the Planters' Bank. There is some evidence that suits were brought by these banks to recover the amounts due them from the Union Bank and that compromises were had; but, especially in the case of the Union Bank of Tennessee, the proof is not clear enough to warrant the committee in recommending the payment by the Government of these amounts.

Your committee, however, are of the opinion that, in all right and justice, the United States should relieve this petitioner from the loss which, beyond any doubt, has been incurred by it by reason of the fillegal and invalid act of General Banks in making the seizure of its deposits.

Your committee, therefore, recommend the passage of the bill herewith reported.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to ask the Senator reporting this bill if these amounts of money found by General Banks in the Planters' Bank of Tennessee, the Union Bank, and the Bank of Tennessee were in confederate notes?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. They were confederate notes.
Mr. COCKRELL. That was my understanding and recollection.
The question was asked me and I so answered it. This money was confederate money in the hands of these banks in New Orleans belonging to the banks in Tennessee. I understand further these confederate notes were placed here in the Treasury Department and are there vet

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. That was so reported to us by the

Mr. CAMERON, or Wisconsin. That was so reported to us by the Treasury Department.

Mr. COCKRELL. And the Government realized nothing in the world from them and made no disposition of them?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Nothing whatever.

Mr. MORRILL. I have nothing to say as to the merits of this question; but it seems to me that the result shows that the United States have been about as wise in their action as the Irish mob were in burning up the notes of a banker that he would be obligated to redeem if they had not been burnt up. So iar as the action that took place at New Orleans is concerned, we seem to have destroyed or withheld from circulation or from the parties making the notes the notes that we are now called upon ourselves to pay.

Mr. DAVIS. I have some recollection of this claim though not distinct the content of the content o tinct. I believe it was once examined while I was a member of the Committee on Claims. My recollection of it is somewhat different from what the Senator from Wisconsin says. He says that the property seized was confederate notes that were taken and are now in the Treasury. I have some faint recollection that the money was seized and used by the quartermaster, went into the hands of the quartermaster and was accounted for by him on his returns. I may be wrong about it, but that is my recollection. I should be glad if the Senator who examined the claim would give the details as to that.

Mr. SARGENT. How could he use confederate money?

Mr. DAVIS. My recollection is that they were bank-notes and not confederate money.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I think the Senator from West Virginia is mistaken, and has confounded this case with some other cases that he examined when a member of the Committee on Claims. I think this claim was first examined by the Committee on Claims during the last session of the present Congress, and there is no mistake in regard to the fact. The facts are precisely as they are set forth in the report made by the Committee on Claims, and in brief they were these: While Louisiana and Tennessee were both confederate territory, the Union Bank of Louisiana, doing business in New Orleans, received large amounts of confederate money and some specie from certain banks doing business in the State of Tennessee, among others the Planters' Bank of Memphis. In 1863, after New Orleans had been captured by the Federal forces, Gen. Banks issued the order which has been incorporated in the report and which has been read by the Clerk. Under that order confederate notes or credits in confederate notes were seized by the quartermaster under the order of Gen. Banks, and those identical notes are now in the Treasury. In 1866 the Planters' Bank of Tennessee instituted a suit against the Union Bank of Louisiana in the circuit court of the United States for Louisiana. Judgment was recovered in that case in the first place for $113,000 and some odd cents. A new trial, however, was granted and upon the new trial judgment was recovered for $24,000 and something over; that is, judgment was recovered for the value of the confederate notes in Federal currency at the time the confederate notes were seized under the order of Gen. BANKS.

der the order of Gen. BANKS.

The judgment recovered in the circuit court for Louisiana was carried by a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States. The opinion was rendered by Mr. Justice Strong and it is reported in 16 Wallace, page 483. The opinion of the court was unanimous, except that Justice Bradley dissented, on the ground, however, that the creditor in this case, that is, the Planter's Bradley dissented and not competed. Tennessee, should apply to the Government for relief, and not compel Tennessee, should apply to the Government for reliet, and not compet the Union Bank of Louisiana to pay to the Planters' Bank of Tennessee; but that the Planters' Bank of Tennessee should in the first instance apply for relief to the Government.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to ask the Senator from Wisconsin if the Supreme Court of the United States did not hold in that case that the military order of General Banks was void?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. It did, and it is so stated in the report.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should vote against the bill from instinct if nothing else. It seems to me whatever may be the rights between these two banks, the Government of the United States ought not to be called upon to pay the value of confederate notes, and I certainly would not be willing to vote to pay out of the Treasury any money for confederate notes taken during the war either from a bank or from a private individual. It seems to me that confederate notes might well be regarded as contraband of war, to be destroyed under all circumstances and at all times, in whosoever possession they might be. Whatever theory this decision of the Supreme Court may be based upon, it seems to me that to ask the Government of the United States to pay the value of confederate notes seized by the United States during the war would be just about equivalent to making us pay for the muskets that were used or the cannon that were used or the shot the muskets that were used or the cannon that were used or the shot that were used or the powder that was used in resisting the Government of the United States. I shall therefore, without examining this bill, feel it my duty to vote against it, and ask for the yeas and nays. I may add that if this money is paid the Government cannot fairly refuse to pay all the other banks involved in the same condition. The action of General Banks may have been unlawful, may have been void; but if he got a lot of confederate bills by unlawful practices, I am willing to give back the identical bills when properly identified in any way to whoever had them originally. Whoever wants them may have them. If we received confederate notes by a void order, I would surrender them. I certainly would not hold property obtained in that way; but to pay for confederate notes in Government money is carrying the joke too far.

Mr. DAVIS. I stated my recollection of the bill a moment ago. I am told by the Senator from Missourion my left [Mr. COCKRELL] that I have confounded this claim with another that he has examined. I

I have confounded this claim with another that he has examined. I only want to make the statement to relieve myself of a false impression that I had.

sion that I had.

Mr. BOGY. It seems to me that this bill is very just and proper and ought to pass. The misfortune of the case is, that the property seized—for I will call it property—was confederate money. It was property. The commanding officer, General Banks, had no right to take it; and if he did so in violation of the proclamation of the President of the United States, which guaranteed protection to all private rights in Louisiana, he made the Government he represented responsible. It throws a shade of discredit on this case and all similar cases heaves the amount of money is called confederate money; but yet sible. It throws a shade of discredit on this case and all similar cases because the amount of money is called confederate money; but yet it had a value; it was property; and it is said that the $130,000 or $140,000 taken was worth about $24,000 or $25,000. It had a value; it was property—property protected by the law of nations—property protected by the proclamation of the President of the United States when the city of New Orleans surrendered that private property should be protected as well as be protected as well as, and I may say better than, it had been protected under the former government. The commanding officer in taking possession of that property in violation of law, in violation of the law of nations, in violation of the proclamation of the President of the United States, did commit an act making the Government that he the United States, did commit an act making the Government that he represented there responsible. And as this case was investigated by the very highest tribunal in the land, holding the bank in Louisiana responsible to the bank in Tennessee, there can be no reason why the same rule which applies to and which was enforced between the two banks should not be enforced between the Government of the United States and the bank in Louisiana. It was an improper act, an act in violation of law. Disembarrass this case from the idea of confederate money, and there can be no doubt of the responsibility of the Government. Supposing an amount of greenbacks had been selected, or an amount of gold had been spoliated—

Mr. WEST. Or an amount of fodder which might have been fed to the Government mules.

Mr. BOGY. Anything in the world that has a value. It is property; and as his act was illegal he has made the Government through him responsible.

I must say it is a misfortune that a case of this kind should be I must say it is a misfortune that a case of this kind should be blended in our minds with the idea of confederate money; but it does not change the law, it does not change the question of justice; it does not change the question of responsibility in the least; and I cannot see any objection to it at all. I think the report of the committee is perfectly proper and just and right, and the bill ought to pass. There is a reponsibility there beyond a doubt. Although it was confederate money, that money at that time in that country had a value, which value has been ascertained to be about $24,000. To that extent it seems to me Government is clearly responsible, and the bill ought to pass.

Mr. INGALLS. It certainly would be a novel principle of law make a superior responsible for the tortions act of a servant, and if General Banks had no authority to seize this property, if his act was illegal and without warrant of law and absolutely void, then there can be no ground on which this claim can be enforced against his superior, the Government of the United States; and to permit that theory to be adopted it seems to prove well seen the door to a very theory to be adopted it seems to me would open the door to a very great deal of difficulty in the future.

But there is another view of this case that strikes me as one that requires attention. It seems that in the first place when this matter was brought to trial a judgment was given for the plaintiff for $113,000. From some reason that does not appear in the report of the committee, it seems that this judgment was reversed and a new trial ordered and judgment rendered for $24,713.29, with interest from the 15th of September, 1863, and costs. I believe that it is a prin-ciple that never has been changed that the Government never pays interest. I think the Committee on Claims will sustain me in that proposition, that there never has been a recognition of the liability of the Government to pay interest on deferred claims. This bill cerof the Government to pay interest on deferred claims. This bill certainly authorizes the payment of interest on this amount from the 15th of September, 1863, when this act was committed, down to the time when judgment was rendered.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. If the Senator from Kansas will allow me one word, a judgment was recovered in the circuit court of the United States for Louisiana for $24,000. A judgment was recovered by the Planter's Bank of Tennessee against the Union Bank of Louisiana for $24,000 and odd, and interest from the time the property was seized; that is, from some day—I do not recollect the exact date—in 1863; so that the principle to which the Senator has referred, that the Government does not pay interest, does not apply in this case at all. We do not propose to pay any interest, the short apply in this case at all. We do not propose to pay any interest. The amount recovered by the Planter's Bank of Tennessee against the Union Bank of Louisiana was $36,000 and something over.

Mr. INGALLS. A portion of that was interest. It is certainly undisputed that you are calling on the Government now to pay interest disputed that you are calling on the Government how to pay interest upon this amount that was taken by General Banks in 1863. It is immaterial whether you interpose one other person between the Government and the plaintiff or not. There is certainly a payment of interest by the Government of the United States in this sum that is named in this bill. I say that is contrary to every principle that has ever been recognized in regard to the establishment of claims against the Government.

the Government.

But there is another feature about this. It seems by the latter portion of this report that there are several other claims that stand very nearly in the same category with this:

The petition of the Union Bank also claims the further sums of $28,245.93 and $10,000, which it alleges it has paid to the Union Bank of Tennessee and the Bank of Tennessee, respectively, upon compromises, the same being in full for the amounts placed to the credit of those banks on the books of the Union Bank of Louisiana, September 10, 1863, and seized by order of General Banks, as above set forth. Your committee, however, is not inclined to allow these amounts, on the ground that the evidence in support of them is not sufficiently clear to place them upon the same basis as the case of the Planters' Bank.

It is very evident that these plaintiffs have still further claims against the Government that in their opinion stand very nearly in the same category with this, and that if we pass this bill it will be regarded as a precedent upon which they will urge further action for the payment of those additional claims. I believe that this is vicious in theory, that the whole thing is pernicious in practice, and that by the plain showing of the committee themselves this claim is entirely in opposition to what has repeatedly been established as the law of Congress in regard to claims against the Government.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. One word, Mr. President. There is nothing mysterious at all about this claim. The order of General Banks, as has been decided by the circuit court for Louisiana and the is nothing mysterious at all about this claim. The order of General BANKS, as has been decided by the circuit court for Louisiana and the Supreme Court of the United States, was a void order, an order that he had no right to make. Now, the Senator from Kausas says that General BANKS, not having any legal right to make that order, that order being a void order, his principal, that is, the Government of the United States, cannot be held for the amount. Now, the trouble about that is just this, that the Government of the United States has assumed these acts of its military commanders. The Congress of the United States has passed laws assuming these acts of the military. United States has passed laws assuming these acts of the military commanders.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not understand that to be so at all. I understand the United States Government have passed acts exonerating the commanders from the consequences of any illegal acts, but not assuming responsibility for them.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I submit that that is an assump-

Mr. INGALLS. May I ask the Senator does it appear anywhere in evidence that the United States Government received any benefit from this confederate money seized by General Banks?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. On the other hand, it appears that it did not. Mr. INGALLS. Mr. INGALLS. Never received any benefit from it, never used it?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. The confederate notes, as I have already stated, are now on deposit, so to speak, in the Treasury Dearready stated, are now on deposit, so to speak, in the Treasury Department in this city.

Mr. INGALLS. The identical property seized by General Banks?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. The identical property.

Mr. INGALLS. Then it ought to be returned to the banks. Cer-

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. The court held otherwise, and that is the trouble with the gentleman's argument. The circuit court for Louisiana treated these confederate notes as so much property, just as though General Banks had tortiously seized a horse.

Mr. INGALLS. Does the Senator say that the identical confederate money is in the possession of the United States Government in the Treasury to-day?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Yes, sir.

Mr. INGALLS. And he is now asking us to pay for these confed-Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. That is precisely the case.

Well, that is an extraordinary proposition.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. These notes were seized by General Banks, were taken possession of by the Government, and were conbanks, were taken possession of by the Government, and were converted by the Government to its own use, whatever use it could make of them. In 1866, as the report says, and as I have already stated, an action was commenced in the circuit court for Louisiana by the Planters' Bank of Tennessee, the Planters' Bank of Tennessee being the owners of the credits upon the books of the Union Bank of Louisiana. The circuit court treated these credits in confederate money as so much property, and the jury was directed to ascertain the value of the confederate notes in Federal currency at the time of the seizure of the confederate notes. Under the instructions from the circuit court the jury did so assess the value; and the value was assessed at $36,000, including interest. The Planters' Bank of Tennessee recovered this amount in Federal currency from the Union Bank of Louisiana, and now the Union Bank of Louisiana asks Congress to re-imburse it. That is all there is in the case.

Louisiana, and now the Union Bank of Louisiana asks Congress to re-imburse it. That is all there is in the case.

Mr. BOGY. Mr. President, the fact that this money, called confederate money, is yet in possession of the Government is of itself reason enough why the Government should pay for this property. They are yet in possession of the property which was seized illegally by the commanding officer of that department, and that property at the time of the seizure was worth the sum of $24,000 it is said. The fact that it is in confederate money does not change the question at all and ought not to change the question. It was property at that time worth $24,000, illegally seized, and which property is yet in possession of the Government. The circumstance that it may be valueless matters not; they are yet in possession of property which was session of the Government. The circumstance that it may be valueless matters not; they are yet in possession of property which was illegally seized, which was spoliated by General Banks. The Supreme Court of the United States has passed upon this question as between the two banks, and the same degree of responsibility and the same argument of responsibility which made the bank in Louisiana liable to the bank in Tennessee ought to make the Government of the United States liable to the Bank in Louisiana, and there would be no doubt about it if this money was not called confederate money. Supposing it had been gold, supposing it had been what are called greenbacks, the only difference would be then that the Government could have availed itself or could avail itself yet of that kind of property; but that does not change the law; that does not change the responsibility. If the act was wrong, if the Government had been responsible for a given amount of gold or a given amount of paper money of any kind, it is responsible for that amount of money represented in this responsible does not change the responsible for that amount of money represented in this responsible for that amount of money represented in this responsible for a given amount of the form of it has money of any kind, it is responsible for that amount of money represented in this paper called confederate money. The form of it does not affect the question at all. It is a mere question of Government responsibility for property which has been taken illegally; that is all; and the same law that would apply to gold or greenbacks ought to apply to this case when you ascertain the value of the property, which I understand is yet in the possession of the Government; and the fact of its being in possession of the Government is a reason, of itself conclusive to my mind, that the Government should pay this amount of money.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President—
Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. If the Senator from Vermont will give way for a moment-

give way for a moment—
Mr. MORRILL. I merely want to appeal to the Senator from Wisconsin to withdraw this bill at the present time, because there is not a sufficient number of Senators present to consider so important a bill. I desire while up to say a single word. It is evident that, if this bill is to pass, it is in a certain form an assumption of the confederate debt. These were merely notes of the confederate government which they and they alone were obligated to pay. We complained of the British government for acknowledging belligerent rights to the confederacy. Are we to go forward at this late day and say that that government (in which the government of Great Britain were wrong in even acknowledging the existence of belligerent rights) say that that government (in which the government of Great Britain were wrong in even acknowledging the existence of belligerent rights) had sufficient power to create confederate notes of such a pecuniary money value that we are under obligation to pay them after they had been contiscated by order of a military general? I think not.

Then there is another question that arises. These notes at that time were subject to a large discount, and the judgment was undoubtedly rendered payable in United States notes, and those notes at that time were at a large discount.

doubtedly rendered payable in United States notes, and those notes at that time were at a large discount, probably 30 or 40 per cent. less than gold, whereas to-day they are only 5½ per cent. less than gold. Then, even on the judgment of the court, this judgment as then rendered, payable in the currency of to-day, would be paid in a currency worth 30 or 40 per cent. more than the judgment called for. But I assume at once that any payment of these notes is in fact, to the extent of the assumption a payment of the debt of the confor. But I assume at once that any payment of these locality to the extent of the assumption, a payment of the debt of the confederate government, and therefore ought not to be considered or passed upon by Congress.

Mr. INGALLS. I offer the following amendment to the bill: Strike out section 1 all after the enacting clause, and insert in lieu of it:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be and he is hereby authorized and directed to return to the Union National Bank of Louisiana, the successor of the Union Bank of Louisiana, the confederate money taken by order of General Banks September 16 1862

Mr. CLAYTON. It seems to me the question that actually arises is, was this confederate money property? And, if it was property, then, was it the property of the confederacy or was it the property of individuals? I think it must be answered that it was property, because it had a fixed value, as has been ascertained by the court because it had a fixed value, as has been ascertained by the court which adjudicated on this question. Then, if it was property, was it the property of the confederacy or of individuals? It was not the property of the confederacy manifestly, but of individuals. The taking of this confederacy manifestly, but of individuals. The taking of this confederacy manifestly, but an advantage to it. If the Government of the United States had seized one-half of the whole confederate issue they would have been retiring so much of that issue and would have made the balance so much more valuable to them. It would really have been to their advantage if the Government of the United States had seized any considerable amount of their currency. I cannot for the life of me see siderable amount of their currency. I cannot for the life of me see why the officers should have seized this money in the first place. If the Government of the United States could have induced the issue of twice the amount it would have crippled the confederate resonrces and finances that much. To retire one-half the amount would have relieved them that much.

I know this thing has a suspicious look on its face. When you I know this thing has a suspicious look on its face. When you mention confederate money it is calculated to arouse suspicion; but here, it seems to me, was a species of property of a fixed value, the property of individuals held by a corporation. This corporation was deprived of that property. The courts have held that those taking it were responsible. It seems to me, in my view of the case, we ought to give relief. We cannot say that if this officer acted without authority his act was void and that the Government should not be bound by it, because the Government to-day recognizes his acts by

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. STEVENSON. I do not know much about the facts of this ase; but I cannot assent to some of the arguments that I have heard case; but I cannot assent to some of the arguments that I have heard in opposition to it. I think a case very much like this has already received the sanction of the Senate, perhaps more than one. I remember that many years ago, in General Doniphan's expedition, Colonel Mitchell was required by him to destroy certain property of traders which he feared would fall perhaps into the hands of the enemy. Colonel Mitchell did execute that order, and property was destroyed. Afterward the traders sued Colonel Mitchell; he pleaded the order of his superior officers, the court declared that order void. The order of his superior officer; the court declared that order void. case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed the decision and a judgment of many hundred thousand dollars was rendered against Mitchell. He then appeared before Congress, filed his petition, and the Congress of the United States paid the amount with scarcely a dissent.

That, it seems to me, is a full answer to my friend from Ohio, who said that the Government would never pay a claim for property destroyed by a subordinate under the illegal order of his superior. Sir, it would be a monstrons doctrine. The Supreme Court of the United States decided that the order to Mitchell was illegal; and very properly and very equitably as I think, the Congress of the United States did relieve that officer who seized the property under the order of his superior, lieve that officer who seized the property under the order of his superior, although that superior officer had no authority to issue it. Why, sir, what would be the consequence if Congress did not in any instance relieve such cases as that? It has been a long time since I looked at the case of Harmony vs. Mitchell; but my friend on my right, [Mr. Bogx,] who perhaps did know Colonel Mitchell, as I did, will bear me out that I have stated substantially the facts of the case, and, so far as that goes, it seems to me to be perfectly in analogy with this.

Now, if the Supreme Court have decided that the Union Bank of Louisigns is light to the Bank of Tennessee of course the measure of Louisiana is liable to the Bank of Tennessee, of course the measure of the liability would be the value of the confederate money at the time. That is property which will buy property; and, if this was worth so much at the time to the Tennessee Bank, and the Louisiana Bank, by a judicial decision, has been rendered liable for it, it seems to me to make a very strong appeal to the clemency and equitable consideration of Congre

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand the Senator from Wisconsin proposes not to insist on a vote to-day.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I think that the Senate may as well vote upon the bill now as at any other time.

Mr. McRILL. Let it be postponed. There ought to be a fuller

Mr. SHERMAN. In order to test the sense of the Senate, I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves the indefinite postponement of the bill.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 14, noes 17; no quorum voting. Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I call for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken-resulted, yeas 19,

nays 24, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Bailey, Booth, Boutwell, Cockrell, Conkling, Cragin, Dawes, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Hamilton, Hamilin, Ingalls, Jones of Nevada, Morrill, Paddock, Sharon, Sherman, and Windom—19.

NAYS—Messrs. Barnum, Bogy, Burnside, Cameron of Wisconsin, Christiancy, Clayton, Cooper, Davis, Goldthwaite, Hereford, Johnston, Kelly, McCreery, Maxey, Merrimon, Norwood, Patterson, Randolph, Robertson, Stevenson, Wallace, West, Withers, and Wright—24.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Anthony, Bayard, Blaine, Bruce, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Chaffee, Conover, Dennis, Dorsey, Eaton, Edmunds, Gordon, Harvey, Hitchcock, Howe, Jones of Florida, Kernan Logan, McDonald, McMillan, Mitchell, Morton, Oglesby, Ransom, Sargent, Saulsbury, Spencer, Teller, Thurman, Wadleigh, and Whyte—32.

So the motion was not agreed to.

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. WRIGHT. I voted against the indefinite postponement of this bill and have been inclined to favor the bill largely and I may say exclusively upon the ground that I felt the conclusive effect of the ruling of the court in Louisiana and the adjudications of our courts upon this subject. The question, I concede, is one of very great importance and not a little difficulty. I think that in my course upon the Committee on Claims, as the reports that have been made here show, I always have been exceedingly careful not to have any precedent or principle sattled or recognized about which there was nere snow, I always have been exceedingly careful not to have any precedent or principle settled or recognized about which there was any fair doubt. I do not think a matter of this kind, where a principle is involved of so much importance, should be settled or passed upon by the Senate except when we have a fairly full attendance and the question examined and discussed fully. I therefore propose at this time, in view of what has been said and the light that has been thrown by this discussion, to move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Claims. I make that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

THOMAS H. HALSEY.

Mr. MORRILL. I move to take up the bill (S. No. 912) for the relief of Thomas II. Halsey, paymaster United States Army.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to fill the blank before the word "dollars" with an amendment to fill "1.788;" so as to read:

That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury are authorized and directed to credit to the account of Thomas If: Halsey, paymaster United States Army, the sum of $1,788, being the amount charged against him, and embezzled by the forgeries of his clerk, William F. Piper.

Mr. WITHERS. Is there a report accompanying the bill?
Mr. WRIGHT. There is a report accompanying the bill.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Virginia call for the reading of the report?

Mr. WITHERS. I wish to either hear the report read or to have the chairman of the committee who reported the bill make a verbal statement of the facts.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think I can state the facts in a few words, although the report is quite brief. Mr. Halsey was a paymaster, and is a paymaster yet in the United States Army. There is most abundant evidence of his integrity and fidelity to duty, and that he at all times discharged well and promptly all the duties required. He had in his employ a clerk whose name I do not now remember. He was ordered to Sau Francisco. While there the paymaster was somewhat indisposed and unable to be at his office at all hours of the day. It seems that this clerk in making payments upon the vouchers raised the posed and unable to be at his office at all hours of the day. It seems that this clerk in making payments upon the vouchers raised the vouchers and committed forgeries to the amount of $1.788 without any knowledge upon the part of the paymaster, and he had no reason to suspect that there was the least frand being perpetrated by this clerk. That is to say, the clerk would take the vouchers that would be signed by the soldiers, and, as the illustration is given in the report, where he paid $53 he would raise it to $153, and in that way it appeared that the paymaster had paid out $153 instead of $53; and so in many other cases running over three or four months. In Feb. so in many other cases running over three or four months. In February of 1870 I think this paymaster's clerk absconded, and he never yet has been found, though diligent search has been made for him and every effort to recover this money from him.

The paymaster found soon after his clerk absconded that these forgeries had been committed, and there was lost to him the sum of $1,788 as I have already stated. If the Government will at all relieve a paymaster or an officer by reason of the forgery and theft of a subordinate, this is one of those cases where relief should be granted. It presents precisely that case. We have had several such cases before us, and I believe almost uniformly have reported against them, because upon the facts we did not think that the equities were established in favor of the paymaster or the officer so that he should be relieved. My friend, the Senator from Missouri, [Mr. COCKRELL,] who is near the Senator from Virginia, will remember this case. If any person has been strict upon this subject he has been so himself, and I believe that he heartily gave his concurrence to this report.

The amendment was agreed to.
The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES C. CAMPBELL.

Mr. WRIGHT. I have a little bill from the Committee on Claims that I should like to have the attention of the Senate to. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 429) for the relief of Charles C. Campbell, of Washington County,

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CONKLING. Is there a report in that case? If there is I should like to hear it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

Mr. WRIGHT. I will direct the attention of the Secretary to the fact that the report made in the last few days is the report that should he read.

Mr. CONKLING. Does it conflict with the one made before?

Mr. WRIGHT. They are all given in that.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. WRIGHT from the Committee on Claims January 17:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was recommitted the bill (H. R. No. 429) for the relief of Charles C. Campbell, having reconsidered the same, submit the following rener or Charles C. Campbell, having reconsidered the same, submit the following report thereon:

This bill was reported back on the 1st of July, 1876, from your committee, with a favorable recommendation. Some question having been made as to the correctness of this recommendation, the bill was, by order of the Senate, recommitted to your committee on the 9th instant, and has, with the additional papers submitted by the petitioner, received their attention. That the full nature and character of the claim may be seen, we incorporate the report of the House committee (4.36) by Mr. Hoskins, of the War-Claims Committee, and the former report of this committee, (441,) as follows:

[Report No. 446.]

"That the memorialist, Charles C. Campbell, is a native of Virginia, and resided in said State during the war of the rebellion; that, in the year 1864, he was the owner of certain salt-works at Saltville in the State of Virginia, used and occupied by him at that time in the manufacture of salt; that he was also the owner of five four-horse and mule teams, fully equipped with harness and wagons, used in hauling supplies for said salt-works and for other purposes; that the said Campbell was also engaged in the manufacture of flour at Marion, Tennessee.

"In the latter part of the year 1864, the Union forces under command of Generals S. G. Burbridge, Stoneman, and Shakelford, took possession of certain personal property belonging to the memorialist, to wit, mules, horses, wagons, harness, salt, and flour, and used the same as supplies for the Army of the United States, a particular and itemized statement of which appears in the evidence submitted to your committee.

"In support of this claim, the memorialist presents his own affidavit, with that of eight or ten others, some of them being eye-witnesses to the taking of most of said property by the Union Army. The witnesses, many of them, are old residents of that vicinity, and some are colored persons, at that time in the employ of the said Campbell.

of that vicinity, and some are colored persons, at that time in the employ of the said Campbell.

"The loyalty of the claimant is fully and conclusively proven by many witnesses. Indeed, his loyalty has never been questioned by any one, as he was one of the few who remained true during the entire period of the war.

"General S. G. Burbridge submits a letter fully acknowledging the taking of the property for Army supplies, and also certifies to the loyalty of the claimant.

"Yourcommittee, therefore, report back to the House the accompanying bill, with amendments, recommending the appropriation of the sum of $6,000 in full satisfaction of the claim.

"[Report No. 441.]

Petitioner represents that during the late war he resided in Washington County, with amendments, recommending the appropriation of the sum of $6,000 in full satisfaction of the claim.

"Petitioner represents that during the late war he resided in Washington County, Virginia, and was the owner of a large property, consisting of salt-furnaces, salt-store goods, salt-sacks, borses, mules, wagous, harness, and cotton yarn, to each of which items he attaches a value, amounting in the aggregate, to $40,210; that the salt-furnaces and salt were taken and destroyed by the Union armics under the commands of Generals Burbridge and Stoneman, and the other articles, amounting in the aggregate, to $5,500, were taken and used as supplies by the armies aforesaid. He therefore prays compensation.

"In addition to his own affidavits, the petitioner filed with his petition the depositions of eight witnesses, establishing beyond question his loyalty to the Union, his ownership, and the value of the personal property, and the fact that it was taken under orders and used by the Federal forces.

"In the course of the Investigation before the House committee, the petitioner seems to have surrendered his claim for compensation to a portion embraced in the list set forth in his petition, and to have committee seems to have made down the salt of the course of the investigation before the House of the placed at $6,762. From the petition of the committee seems to have made down to have surrendered his affine and the placed at $6,762. From the course of the course of the delay attending the prosecution, the petitioner back the House bill without amendment, and to recommend its passage.

"In explanation of the delay attending the prosecution, the petitioner has filed his affidavit. in which he states that within the term for filling his claim before the southern claims commission, who resided within three or four miles of petitioner, who promised petitioner to put it in proper form and file it before the board; and that he did not know of his neglect to do so until after the explration of the period within which is a s of the Government. Your committee cannot for a moment believe that the fact that salt manufactured at these works was sold to private citizens without inquiry as to their re ations to the Government, and especially in the absence of any shown intention that such sale was to aid the rebellion, wou d have the effect to make the wagons, teams, and other property of petitioner contraband, and liable to seizure without right to compensation.

So that your committee feel it to be their duty to again report this bill back and recommend its passage.

Mr. HAMLIN. I believe the claimant in this case alleges that he lost Mr. HAMLIN. I believe the claimant in this case alleges that he lost some sixteen or eighteen thousand dollars. The committee have reported a bill allowing him but $6,000. The body has, I think, been pretty liberal this morning; and if we were to sleep upon this matter we might be more liberal than the committee and allow the petitioner something near what he thinks he has lost. Indeed, if he has lost that sum I see no reason why he should not be paid the whole of it if he is to be paid $6,000. This is a case, however, which I think will keep. I think there is just about enough salt in it to preserve it until tomorrow, and I will move that the Senate take a recess until ten o'clock to morrow. o'clock to-morrow.
Mr. WRIGHT. I hope not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempere. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Mr. WRIGHT. Allow me to ask my friend at all events that the pending order, the railroad bill, may be laid before the Senate, or that it be considered as laid before the Senate, before we adjourn. I trust there will be no recess now, but I want the railroad bill kept in its place.

Mr. WEST. Before that bill is taken up I should like to have an anderstanding with the Senator from Iowa, who is now temporarily charged with its care, as to what he proposes to do and how long he proposes to postpone it now. It has been postponed pro and con to accommodate gentlemen who desire to be heard upon it; but if we have a vote compared to the control of the are to legislate upon the subject, we had better have a vote at some time or other, a fixed time perhaps.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose my friend understood this morning what I said on the subject, that I trusted there would be no objection to have it put over to-day.

Mr. WEST. That is true.

Mr. WRIGHT. I only ask that the bill may be kept in its place.

Mr. WRIGHT. I only ask that the bill may be kept in its place. I do not know that there will be any objection to taking it up to-morrow and passing upon it. I merely want it before the Senate.

Mr. WEST. I desire to say that when the Senate resumes the consideration of that bill I shall press a vote upon it.

Mr. STEVENSON. I gave notice the other day that on yesterday I would call up the bill for the benefit of Warren M. Mitchell. The attention of Senators, however, to the electoral vote prevented me from getting up the bill. I now wish to give notice that on Tuesday next I shall call up the bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. I would remind the Senator from Kentucky that some two hours ago I gave notice that on that very day I would call up for the consideration of the Senate the case of Dr. J. Milton Best, of Kentucky.

of Kentucky.

Mr. STEVENSON. I will give my notice for Wednesday.

Mr. INGALLS. It is due that I should also state that several days since I gave notice to the Senate that at the conclusion of the debate on the Pacific Railroad bill I would ask attention to the bill granting pensions to the soldiers of the war of 1812, and also granting arrears of pensions, making pensions date from the discharge or disability of the soldier. That subject is one of very great importance. It is continually urged upon the attention of the Senate by numerous petitions from all parts of the country, and I shall endeavor with such residuity as I possess when constants of the country.

tions from all parts of the country, and I shall endeavor with such assiduity as I possess when opportunity offers to ask the consideration of that bill by the Senate.

Mr. KELLY. If there is any virtue in giving notice, I give notice that I shall on Thursday after the morning hour call up House bill No. 1316, to adjust the claims of owners of lands within the limits of the Klamath Indian reservation in the State of Oregon. It will be remembered that this bill was considered and discussed at the last session of Congress. I am desirous that it shall be disposed of at an early day, and therefore give notice that on Thursday next I shall call it up.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to say one word. The bill that is now before the Senate I have had no opportunity to say one word upon. I do not propose to say anything at this time. I have made two or three efforts to get the bill before the Senate. I do not know any better time to consider the bill than now. There is nothing about it unusual. It has been twice considered by the committee. It is for the mere payment for property that was taken by our officers and used for the benefit of our Army, precisely such property as we have paid for over and over again. We can do that to-day. I insist that this bill shall either be defeated by the Senate or that we shall vote upon bill shall either be defeated by the Senate or that we shall vote upon it and see what the disposition of the Senate is.

Mr. INGALLS. Which bill does the Senator mean, the railroad bill?

Mr. WRIGHT. Not at all, but this bill which has been reported twice from the Committee on Claims.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow. If the motion for a recess shall prevail, is it the understanding that the same order of business which occurred this morning from ten to twelve shall occur on subsequent days? If such be the understanding the Chair will be so governed.

Mr. SHERMAN. Is it proposed that we shall transact legislative business to-morrow, Saturday?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On Saturday at twelve o'clock, with the same understanding, the Chair understands, as occurred this morn-the same understanding, the Chair understands, as occurred this morning. We cannot adjourn.

Mr. SHERMAN. I was going to say, as I know very well that there will be no business done here to-morrow, that we might as well make the understanding broad enough to give us the whole day. I am however perfectly willing to come back here.

Mr. CONKLING. I venture to suggest to the Senator from Ohio that to-morrow at twelve o'clock, or any other hour, it will be in order to take a recess until the next legal day, which will be Monday. The bill expressly excepts Sunday as one of the days in which it is to operate.

Mr. MERRIMON. Is it to be the understanding that there is to be no business done to morrow? Some of us may want to attend to other matters and desire to be absent at ten o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to

Mr. WITHERS. Before that motion is put, I wish to inquire whether it is the understanding of the Chair that on to-morrow, whether the Senate meets at ten o'clock or twelve o'clock, it will be in order to move a recess until Monday?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. We meet at ten o'clock and take a recess until twelve, and the Senate can take a recess from then until Monday at ten o'clock, if it should see fit.

Mr. CONKLING. And the Senator can judge from the expression of Senators that that will be the purpose of the body.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. G. M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro

A bill (H. R. No. 3367) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Alfred Rouland;
A bill (H. R. No. 1558) to remove the political disabilities of Robert Ransom, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 2736) to remove the political disabilities of N. H. Van Zandt, of Virginia;
A bill (H. R. No. 4473) for the relief of destitute poor of the District

Columbia; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 181) authorizing the Public Printer to bind in cloth the stitched copies of the House compilation entitled Counting the Electoral Vote.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, in response to resolution of the Senate of the 16th ultimo, a report of the Secretary of State, with accompanying papers, relative to the claims between citizens of the United States and Mexico; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and, on motion of Mr.

INGALLS, ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting an abstract of the militia force of the United States, as required by section 232 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed. He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting for the consideration of Congress a deficiency estimate for the year ending June 30, 1876, in the surveying service; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PRINTING OF A BILL.

On motion of Mr. INGALLS, it was Ordered, That the bill (H. R. No. 2454,) amending the laws granting pensions to the soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812, and their widows, with the Senate amendments, be printed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Louisiana desire that the special order shall be called up, that it may be the unfinished business?
Mr. WEST. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That being the understanding, Senate bill No. 984 is the unfinished business. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hamlin] that the Senate take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow.

The question being put, there were on a division-ayes 21, noes 16;

no quorum voting.

Mr. WRIGHT. I call for the yeas and nays in order to test whether

Mr. White T. I can for the just any just come in.

Mr. CONKLING. Several Senators have just come in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Chair will test the question again by a division.

Mr. WRIGHT. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a second to the call for the

Mr. CONKLING. Let us take the question by a division again. Mr. STEVENSON. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted-yeas

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Barnum, Blaine, Booth, Boutwell, Bruce, Burnside, Chaffee, Christiancy, Clayton, Conkling, Conover, Cragin, Hamilton, Hamilia, Hitchcock, Ingalls, Logan, Morrill, Paddock, Sharon, Sherman, Wallace, West, and Windom—25.

dom-25.

NAYS-Messrs. Allison, Bailey, Bogy, Cameron of Wisconsin, Cockrell, Cooper, Davis, Dennis, Eaton, Ferry, Hereford, Johnston, Kelly, McCreery, Maxey, Merrimon, Mitchell, Norwood, Randolph, Ranson, Stevenson, Withers, and Wright-23.

ABSENT-Messrs. Alcorn, Bayard, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Dawes, Dorsey, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Goldthwaite, Gordon, Harvey, Howe, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kernan, McDonald, McMillan, Morton, Oglesby, Patterson, Robertson, Sargent, Saulsbury, Spencer, Teller, Thurman, Wadleigh, and Whyte-27.

So the motion was agreed to: and (at three calculus and ten minutes).

So the motion was agreed to; and (at three o'clock and ten minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Saturday, February 3, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

[CALENDAR DAY, February 2.]

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House re-assembled at ten o'clock a.m., (Friday, February 2.)
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I move that the House take a recess for one hour.

Mr. HALE. Why not make a motion to take a recess until five minutes before twelve o'clock. The Senate, I learn, adjourned with that understanding, and a great many members of the House, knowing that, will not be here before twelve o'clock.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I am quite willing to modify my motion in that way.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say that it is in contemplation to introduce a bill with a view to make it a law changing the original act in reference to counting the electoral vote, and perhaps it will be better that the House should take a recess until fifteen or twenty minutes before twelve o'clock, so that if necessary the bill may pass to-day.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union of the legislation.

tee of the Whole on the state of the Union on the legislative appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order, as there is a motion pending for a recess.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I will modify my motion, so that the House may take a recess until twenty minutes to twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at ten o'clock and two minutes a. m.) the House took a recess until eleven o'clock and forty minutes a. m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the Speaker again called the House to order at eleven o'clock and forty minutes a. m.

SALE OF LANDS IN ALASKA.

Mr. WALLING, by unanimous consent, reported, from the Committee on Public Lands, House bill No. 4560 as a substitute for the bill of the House (H. R. No. 4260) authorizing the sale of certain lands in the Territory of Alaska upon paying the Government price therefor, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, recommitted to the committee, and ordered to be printed, not to be brought back by a motion to reconsider.

FORECLOSURE SUITS.

Mr. LYNDE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4561) to provide for appearance in the behalf of the United States in foreclosure suits; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

· LEGISLATIVE DAYS-ADJOURNMENTS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I ask leave to report from the Committee on Rules, for consideration at this time, a bill which I send to the Clerk's desk. Before it is read I will state that it is approved by such members of the Committee on Rules as I have been able to con-

The title of the bill was read, as follows:

A bill amendatory of an act entitled "An act to provide for and regulate the counting of the votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877.

The bill provides that until the announcement of the final result of The bill provides that until the announcement of the final result of counting the votes for President and Vice-President, and the final adjournment of the joint meeting of the two Houses of Congress, either House, when engaged in legislative business, may order an adjournment until ten o'clock in the forenoon of the next calendar day, Sunday excepted, unless the joint meeting of the two Houses shall have previously provided for a joint session at an hour previous thereto.

No objection was made, and the bill (H. R. No. 4562) was received and read a first and second time.

The question was upon ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

legislative point known as "to-day," whether the House could adjourn, has induced the Committee on Rules to examine the subject, and they have instructed me to report the bill which has just been read and to recommend its passage.

The first difficulty presented under the act which it is proposed now to amend is that, if the joint meeting of the two Houses should be engaged for a week, or for two or four weeks, in arriving at a conclusion relative to the counting of the votes for President and Vice-President, all of the proceedings of the House will have to be journalized as of one day, Thursday, the 1st day of February. Now it does not require a great stretch of imagination to arrive at the conclusion that that would bring great confusion in the public business. I might call your attention, Mr. Speaker, to a few of the consequences that might result, that will result, unless some amendment of the law be made.

We can have nothing but the regular order of business proper to be transacted on Thursday. We can have no Monday for the reference of bills in the morning hour upon the call of States and Territories. We can have no Friday for the consideration of private business

We can have no Friday for the consideration of private business ries. We can have no Friday for the consideration of private business or of business upon the Private Calendar. Of course it would not interfere with the reports of committees that are privileged to report at any time. But for perhaps a month we could have only one morning hour in which committees can be called for reports that they have matured throughout this session of Congress.

Now, in the interest of good legislation and for the purpose of preventing confusion that would result from the transaction of business in the war. I think it is rise to wars this amountation, each legislation.

in that way, I think it is wise to pass this amendatory act. You might hold, Mr. Speaker, that under the terms of the electoral-commission bill you would be justified in ruling that the legislative day, instead of beginning at twelve o'clock, shall begin at ten o'clock; but that would be a forced construction of the terms of the act. You that would be a forced construction of the terms of the act. You might also hold that the House would be justified in having prayers at twelve o'clock each day, in having its Journal read and approved, and beginning in the usual way, when not in joint meeting, to proceed with legislative business; but that would also be a forcing of the terms of the act which we have passed for regulating the count of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President.

I see no other reasonable way by which we can have the time occupied by the two Houses in joint meeting divided as it were into calendar days and the business that is transacted by the two Houses in their legislative capacity journalized and approved. This act merely provides that, instead of taking a recess until ten o'clock in the forenoon of the next calendar day, we may adjourn until ten o'clock of the next calendar day. That would carry everything with it, so far as journalizing our proceedings and reading and approving the Journal are concerned.

the Journal are concerned.

Let me for a moment call attention to some other of the inconsistche not a moment can attention to some other of the inconsist-encies that we will be inevitably led into without some amendment of the law. For example, the President of the United States sends us a communication dated on the 12th day of February, and it is journalized as having been received by the House on the 1st day of February. One of the heads of the Departments sends us a communication dated the of the heads of the Departments sends us a communication dated the 15th of February, and it is journalized as having been received by the House on the 1st day of February. One of our committees empowered to send for persons and papers has a contumacious witness. The committee brings that matter before the House, and the proceedings had in that committee are read as having occurred on the 8th day of February; but we take up and consider the matter on the 1st day of February according to our Journal. That would lead to great day of February according to our Journal. That would lead to great confusion in the correct understanding in future of what we are now doing.

And look at it from another stand-point; I see no advantage that

And look at it from another stand-point; I see no advantage that will be taken of any individual, of any committee, or of any body by the passage of this amendatory act. I have looked at it from every stand-point, I have consulted members of the Committees on Rules of both Houses. I would be glad to have any suggestion made by any gentleman who sees that in any way this amendatory act would cause any difficulty or would work with any friction. I have drawn up this bill hastily, and it may be that some suggestions can be made which would render the matter more clear and more explicit. I have striven to reach the one noint merely, that while we are proceeding striven to reach the one point merely, that while we are proceeding in legislative business our proceedings shall be journalized as of the calendar day.

Allow me to say further that this bill, if it shall become a law, will not prevent us from taking recesses in our legislative proceedings that shall run from day to day. If we do not see fit to adjourn, we can take recesses from day to day, as we have done previously, for two or three calendar days in succession. But it puts it in our power to adjourn from day to day when such adjournment does not in any way conflict with the business of the joint meeting of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that this morning, in conference with the presiding officer of the Senate, he learned that, in accordance with a determination of a majority of the members of that body, the presiding officer will to-day proceed in this manner: the Senate having already provided for a meeting at twelve o'clock, he will, on the arrival of that hour, ask the Chaplain to offer prayer, and will then cause the Journal of the Senate to be read as though and read a first and second time.

The question was upon ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The question raised some hours ago in this day, known as "yesterday" from a calendar stand-point, but from a third time. Still he is quite willing that the question shall be waived for the day, and that the manner of proceeding agreed upon in the Senate shall be adopted in the House.

The remedy for such a construction is of course in some such bill The remedy for such a construction is of course in some such bill as is indicated by the gentleman from Iowa; but to say that a single legislative day shall be indefinitely continued by a series of recesses would in the judgment of the Chair lead to the greatest possible confusion. For instance, a bill sent to the President for his signature ten days hence (if the joint commission should not reach a decision within that time) would appear as if passed and submitted to him on the legislative day of February 1, and, as the Constitution requires that the President shall be entitled to ten days for the consideration of any bill, he would thus be deprived of that constitutional privilege, because, while the bill bore date as having been passed by the two Houses on the 1st day of February, it possibly might not go to him until the 11th of February.

him until the 11th of February.

The Chair is of opinion that some legislation is necessary and, as a member of the Committee on Rules, he assented to the reporting of this bill so that the House might have an opportunity either to pass it or take into consideration the propriety of some other amendatory legislation so as to obviate the present difficulty.

Mr. MONROE. We would be glad to have the bill read again.

The bill was again read.

The bill was again read.

Mr. WHITTHÖRNE. I would like to make a single remark if the gentleman from Iowa will indulge me. Recognizing all the confusion and possible evil that may arise from the present condition of things so far as the legislation of the two Houses is concerned, my view has been directed to the other aspect of this question; and that is, as the Constitution provides that the "votes shall then be counted," whether we can permit other days to intervene before the counting is finished. If we do so, shall we "then" discharge that duty imposed upon us by the Constitution? By adjournment from day to day do we not run the risk of a greater evil than all those which have been pointed out by the Representative from Iowa and by the Speaker? May we not complicate the presidential question? I therefore request the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] not to urge, at least at the present time, the adoption of this measure. time, the adoption of this measure.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to ask unanimous consent that he may conform to the manner of proceeding determined upon by the

Mr. HALE. For this day.
The SPEAKER. For to-day only.
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I will agree to that.
Mr. COX. I was about to make a motion to refer this bill to the Committee on Rules, that there may be some joint consideration and action by both bodies. That will evidently save time. I agree with the Chair that great confusion will result unless something be done to amend the compromise bill in this particular. For instance, if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Bright] should move to-day as the order of business for Friday that the House go into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, the Journal would show that the legislative day was Thursday; that method of journalizing cannot be avoided. So next Monday would, according to the Journal be Thursday, and a motion to suspend the rules could not be in order on that day, and a motion to suspend the rules could not be in order on that day. Great confusion will thus ensue unless we do something in this matter.

I do not apprehend the trouble which my friend from Tennessee [Mr. Whitthorne] apprehended, because there will be a large gap during the consideration by the commission of these questions connected with the electoral vote. Florida will be considered perhaps for days by the commission, and meanwhile the business of the House and the country ought to go on. The appropriation bills must be passed, and I only wish it were possible that no business except the appropriation bills should be taken up until they are disposed of, except this matter of counting the votes, which is a large question and of the greatest importance. greatest importance.

The SPEAKER. As the hour of twelve o'clock is at hand, the Chair asks consent that without any committal on the part of the House to an adjournment the Chaplain may now be allowed to offer prayer. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. To that extent, I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. Waiving the qestion whether there has been an adjournment, the Chaplain will now offer prayer.

The prayer was then offered by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I now yield to the gentleman from Maine,

The SPEAKER. The next proceeding in order, if this were the commencement of a legislative day, would be the reading of the

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That we have not determined. Let that matter be passed over.

The SPEAKER. That question will be waived for the present.

Mr. HALE. I yield for a moment to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] to make a request.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALDRON. I am requested by the Committee on Appropriations to ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. HALE. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important matter, affecting the whole course of our business for the rest of the session, and for one I am glad that the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. WILSON,] from the Committee on Rules has reported this bill. If the Committee on Rules desire as suggested by the gentleman from York York. tee on Rules desire, as suggested by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Cox,] that it be sent to them for further consideration, to that I have no objection; but should that be done, I trust the committee will report very speedily something that will let us out of the difficulty in which we find ourselves. I have great doubt whether if both officers, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of this House, should agree at present, as the law is, the House might adjourn in customary fashion when attending to legislative business, no real objection could be made to that; but perhaps it is not possible for the two Houses under the direction of their presiding officers to come to that agreement, while a bill like this if it is passed saves all questions.

Looking at the law which forms the electoral commission and reulates these proceedings, it is very plain it is intended there should be no dissolution of the joint session. It is also intended and expressed when attending in the separate Houses to the duties under that electoral commission devolved upon the Houses there should be nothing but a recess. At the close of section 5 is this provision:

And while any question is being considered by said commission either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

It is a question whether under that is not carried the power which is extended to every-day legislation, to adjourn from day to day. I for one should have no doubt, if the two officers had agreed upon that construction, which might be done; but this bill at any rate relieves us from the embarrassment.

The gentlemen will readily see some of the embarrassments that will come. We cannot have any Monday, no suspensions of the rules, no morning hour, no private-bill day, but a continuous day's session until this matter is terminated. All the legislative business is heaped and banked into one day of which there perhaps is one journal, and every gentleman will see readily the inextricable difficulty almost in which we are engaged.

which we are engaged.

which we are engaged.

I suggest to the gentleman, instead of providing that we adjourn to ten o'clock from day to day, that he should make it twelve o'clock, and then we are left precisely as we are whenever during the sessions of Congress an adjournment takes place. If by the pressure of business the House wants a portion of the morning, we can, as has been stated, take a recess to ten or eleven o'clock. If we must adjourn every day to ten o'clock the next day, that obliges every gentleman to be here at ten the next day, unless some agreement is made every day that nothing shall be done between ten and twelve o'clock. I do not see any objection as we are to legislate to regulate this to do not see any objection, as we are to legislate to regulate this, to substituting the hour of twelve o'clock for ten o'clock; and if we adjourn we adjourn as we customarily do, and members come at twelve o'clock, and committees attend to their business, and there is no annoyance in having an early hour forced upon us every day. Does the gentleman see any objection to that?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I was going on to remark that this provision dates back to Senator Morton's celebrated bill for counting the electoral votes for President and Vice-President. It has been taken from that celebrated bill, No. 1, almost verbatim. It was a feeling of veneration which induced me to adhere to the provision of the original bill, and as contained in the law under which we are now acting; but if that be the wish of the House, I am willing to change it.

Mr. HALE. As the gentleman does not see any difficulty in fixing twelve o'clock instead of ten o'clock for the hour of meeting every day, I hope that will be done.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. We can provide for the meeting each morning at that hour unless the joint meeting of the two Houses shall be fixed at an earlier hour.

Mr. HALE. You have that provision already in the bill. I think that is already covered. It will suit the business of the House better to make it twelve instead of ten o'clock.

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust there will be no objection to referring this subject to the Committee on Rules. It is manifest the subject will have to be so referred. The embarrassments on either side are so apparent that something must be done. I suggest that it be referred

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I accept the suggestion that it be recommitted to the committee, as we can report at any time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say on the point connected with the suggestion made by the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. WHITTHORNE,] that the Constitution reads as follows:

The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted;—the preson having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such a majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President.

The language of the Constitution would seem to imply that the exercise by the House of that constitutional power should not oc-cur, except immediately after the declaration of the joint convention. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I accept the suggestion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] moves that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Rules. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill is recommitted.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the rules be suspended and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for a moment to offer a resolution.

Mr. HOLMAN. I yield to the gentleman.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. HARRIS, of Georgia, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 4473) for the relief of the destitute poor of the District of Columbia.

COMPENSATION OF REPRESENTATIVE FROM COLORADO.

Mr. CONGER, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be directed to inquire and report, for the instruction of the Sergeant-at-Arms, from what date the compensation of the Representative from Colorado should be computed, with leave to report at any time.

POST-ROADS.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri. I rise to make a privileged report. I submit the report of the committee of conference on the bill to establish post-roads

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill of the House (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads, having met, after a full and free conference, have been unable to agree.

JOHN B. CLARK, Jr.,
L. L. AINSWORTH,
S. F. MILLER,
Managers on the part of the House.
H. HAMLIN,
A. S. PADDOCK,
S. B. MAXEY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the report of the conference committee

The report was adopted.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri. I move that the committee be discharged and that the House ask for a further conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses

The motion was agreed to.

BROWN'S TYPE-DISTRIBUTING MACHINE.

Mr. BALLOU, from the Committee on Printing, reported back, with an adverse recommendation, the petition of F. M. Nichols and others that Brown's type setting and distributing machine may be put upon trial in the Government Printing Office at Washington; and the same was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

PROPERTY OF CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE.

Mr. BALLOU. I desire, also, to report from the Committee on Printing the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask that it may be considered at this time, and referred to the Committee on Appropria-

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the Committee on Appropriations are hereby authorized and directed to report as a part of the sundry civil bill a provision to purchase of the present owners and proprietors of the Congressional Globe all the stereotype plates, bound and unbound volumes, and the copyright, together with the fire-proof building located in the rear of the Globe office, for the sum of — dollars.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that that resolution is subject to objection.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania. I object.

The SPEAKER. The resolution requires the Committee on Appropriations to do what the House does not permit to be done except by a suspension of the rules.

Mr. WALLING. I object. Let the resolution take its regular

Mr. BALLOU. I think if I am permitted to make a statement in explanation there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BALLOU. I wish to state to the House that the property of the Congressional Globe is to be sold; that it consists in bound and unbound books and in stereotype plates; that there are one hundred and eight volumes in all, embracing the debates of Congress from 1833 that here ights there are well as the congress from 1833 that he ights there are present in terretical than the congress from 1833 that he ights there are no particularly the congress from 1833 that he ights there are no particularly in the congress from 1833 that he ights there are no particularly in the congress from 1833 that he ights there are no particularly in the congress from 1833 that he is a statement in the congress from 1833 that he is a statement in the congress from 1833 that he is a statement in the st to 1873; that eighty-three volumes are now in stereotype plates; there being twenty-five volumes that are not stereotyped; that there are about twenty-five thousand copies of bound volumes and about forty thousand copies of unbound volumes. This property is to be sold. It will bring, if sold now, perhaps, only what the type-metal will bring. The volumes will bring only what the paper will bring, and it is thought that it would be better that the history of Congress from 1833 to 1873 should be preserved by us for this and future generations than that it should be otherwise disposed of. Unless it is purchased by Congress in some form, it will probably be destroyed or scattered. The object of this resolution is simply to have the Committee on Appropriations fix a price for the property. It certainly is worth what it will bring for old type-metal and old paper; and if we can get it for that or a little more, it will be the property of Congress and will not be lost. I hope, therefore, there will be no objection as the proposition is that the price shall be fixed by us.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say that this is a resolution proposing to instruct the Committee on Appropriations to do what they have not the power to do under the rules; that is, to report appropriations not in compliance with law or outside the authority of it is thought that it would be better that the history of Congress from law. This the Committee on Appropriations have not the power to do. They have not the power to report appropriations except in obedience to law; and when they report appropriation bills it is uniformly the practice for some gentleman to rise and reserve points of formly the practice for the gradient of the gradient of the gradient them.

Mr. BALLOU. I think it might be done by unanimous consent in a matter of such importance as this.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask for unanimous consent. Is

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask for unanimous consent. Is there objection?

Mr. ATKINS. Objection to what? I think I may be pardoned for asking the question because there is so much confusion that we in this part of the Hall do not know what is going on.

Mr. BALLOU. The proposition is to refer the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island now qualifies his motion. He moves to refer the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations.

his motion. He moves to refer the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WALLING. There is no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. There being no objection, the resolution is referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BALLOU. On reflection, it seems to me that this resolution should pass and then be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It leaves it to their discretion to fix the amount we will pay for the property.

The SPEAKER. The Chair misunderstood the gentleman from Rhode Island. The Chair supposed that he simply desired to have the resolution referred.

Mr. BALLOU. The resolution should be passed, and then referred to the Committee on Appropriations to fix the amount to be appropriated for this name of the committee.

priated for this purpose.

Mr. CLYMER. I object to the consideration of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. In view of the statement of the gentleman from Rhode Island, [Mr. Ballou,] the Chair now asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. CLYMER. I object, though I have no objection to its reference to the committee.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the resolution is not before the House.

REPORT ON LABOR, ETC.

Mr. SINGLETON, from the Committee on Printing, reported back, with a recommendation that it do not pass, a resolution to print 600 copies of the report on labor, &c.; and the same was laid on the table.

MEDICAL AND SURGICAL HISTORY OF THE WAR.

Mr. SINGLETON also, from the same committee, reported back, with a recommendation that it do not pass, the bill (H. R. No. 3535) to authorize and require the Secretary of the Interior to supply at cost the Medical and Surgical History of the War; and the same was laid on the table, and the report ordered to be printed.

BOUNTY LANDS.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent to introduce for Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent to introduce for reference the petition of 290 officers and soldiers of the thirteenth congressional district of Indiana, asking a grant to each honorably discharged officer and soldier of one hundred and sixty acres of the public lands now subject to entry. I desire further to ask that the petition without the signatures, it being very brief, may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The petion to refer was greed to

The motion to refer was agreed to.

No objection was made to printing the petition in the RECORD. The petition is as follows:

To the House of Representatives of the Forty-fourth Congress :

HONGRABLE SIRS: The undersigned soldiers, residing in the district of Indiana, respectfully ask you, at as early date as possible, to pass a bill granting to each soldier, or to his heirs if he be dead, a warrant for one hundred and sixty acres of any lands subject to entry on each honorable discharge which he or his heirs may hold from the service of the United States during the late war. Your early and favorably action in the premises will command our confidence and our hearty thanks.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION.

Mr. GAUSE. I ask unanimous consent to report back from the Committee on Public Lands and ask the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 4312) authorizing the sale and disposition of the Hot Springs reservation in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes.

Mr. HURLBUT. I object.

ADMISSIONS TO THE CAPITOL.

Mr. LORD, by unanimous consent, submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That so much of the concurrent resolution of the 31st ultime as prevents any person from being admitted to the south wing of the Capitol extension be, and the same is hereby, repealed, and that the tickets therein referred to be required only at the doors of the gallery.

ELEANOR N. MEEDS.

Mr. ROBBINS, of North Carolina, from the Committee of Claims, reported a bill (H. R. No. 4563) for the relief of Eleanor N. Meeds, widow of Benjamin N. Meeds, deceased, of Washington, District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and with the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ROBERT L. M'CONNAUGH.

Mr. ROBBINS, of North Carolina, also, from the Committee of Claims, reported a bill (H. R. No. 4564) for the relief of Robert L. Mc-Connaugh; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and with the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MONUMENT TO THE VICTIMS OF THE PRISON-SHIPS.

Mr. BLISS. I ask unanimous consent to present a memorial from prominent citizens of the city of Brooklyn, New York, praying for congressional aid in erecting a proper monument at Fort Greene, Brooklyn, New York, over the remains of the victims to British cruelty on board of the prison-ships in the harbor of New York during the revolutionary war. I ask that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The memorial is as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress:

The memorial is as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress:

The memorial of the undersigned, a committee appointed at a meeting of the citizens of Brocklyn on the 4th of July, 1576, for the purpose of taking measures to secure an appropriate monument over the remains of the victims of British cruelty on board the prison-ships in the harbor of New York during the revolutionary war, respectfully represents:

That the subject of a national memento of the services and patriotism of those citizens of America who perished in the prison-ships at the Wallabout has been repeatedly brought to the attention of Congress and the country. In 1803, and again in 1845, it was presented to the House of Representatives, but on both occasions it failed to secure a vote owning to circumstances in no way due to a want of merit in the application but on the latter occasion to a want of time. In 1808 a popular movement was started for the purpose, and, t. rough the instrumentality of the Tammany Society, of New York, a vault, intended to be surmounted by a monment, was erected near the navy-yard in this city for the reception of the bones of the martyrs, which, slightly buried, had began to be exposed to public view by the washing of the title and other causes, and the bones were with great demonstration and public display placed therein; but with that effort the matter subsided and no monument was raised. Many years later by the pione secretions of an old soldier, Benjamin Romaines Ily improvement of the adjoining grounds; but that structure, left mattended to, decaved, and the vault thus supprotected became again exposed in the midst of a crowded population to ignorant and thoughtless desceration, when at length the authorities of Brooklyn, in June, 1573, caused the remains to be removed to a neighboring spot on the beautiful slopes of Fort Greene appropriated and maintained as a public park and overlooking the waters of the bay, the scene of so much horror and suffering and where so many live

We appeal, in the name of the citizens of Brooklyn, but on behalf of our countrymen everywhere, to the justice and not merely the generosity of Congress. This is a debt imposed upon the Union by the Confederation. It is perhaps the only one of its kind, and as it is without a parallel so it will not be a precedent. It was not discharged in 1803, simply for the reason that the bill was then united with others for individual monuments, the expediency of which was doubted at that time and the necessity of which now no longer exists.

The victims are entitled to burial at the cost of the nation as much so as they were to their support when in service. In expense, the erection of an imposing monument to all of them in common would hardly exceed that of a decent headstone to each in particular. On the other hand, the shaft which would be raised would redound one-hundred-fold to the benefit of the Republic in the incentive it would offer for the present and future generations to patriotism and public virtue.

Your memorialists, therefore, pray that an appropriation of a sum not less than $50.000 be made out of the public Treasury for the purpose here proposed.

Frederick A. Schroeder, chairman; S. B. CHITTENDEN, Hon. C. Murphy, John R. Kennaday, J. Y. Cuyler, John F. Henry, Alonzo Slote, George L. Fox. J. J. Van Nostrand, Henry W. Slocum, Thomas S. Dakin, James McLeer, Charles Schurig, E. C. Parkinson, J. S. F. Stranahan, S. L. Woodford, John C. Jacobs, F. B. Fisher, Silas B. Dutcher, A. J. Perry, T. H. Rodman, Daniel Maujer, John B. Woodward, James Jourdan, R. C. Ward, James Tanner, committee.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. WARD. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record, as a part of the debates of the House, some remarks which I have prepared upon the coinage features in the legislative appropriation, &c., bill.

There was no objection, and the leave was granted.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now insist upon my motion that the Honse resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the legislative, &c., appropriation bill.

Mr. BRIGHT. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Indiana I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Tennessee will be in order after the morning hour; the motion of the gentleman from Indiana is in order either before or after the morning hour.

Mr. BRIGHT. I will withdraw my motion then until after the

Mr. BRIGHT. I will withdraw my motion then until after the morning hour and will then renew it.

TAXES ON BANKING CAPITAL.

Mr. WOOD, of New York, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4565) to repeal all taxes on banking capital and deposits; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

THE DIGEST.

Mr. HOSKINS, from the Committee of Accounts, reported back, with a recommendation that it do pass, the following resolution; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be paid out of the contingent fund of the House such sum as may be necessary to complete the compilation of questions of order decided in the House of Representatives, ordered by the House on the 15th of August last, subject to the approval of the Committee of Accounts.

Mr. HOSKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for the regular order.
Mr. BRIGHT. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. BRIGHT. I wish to know what time the morning hour will expire.

The SPEAKER. It will expire at the end of sixty minutes after it has been entered upon.

Mr. BRIGHT. I suppose it is understood that there is to be a morning hour.

The SPEAKER. Not necessarily.

Mr. BRIGHT. At the end of the hour I shall renew the motion to go into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make himself understood. The motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BRIGHT] is in order at any time after the morning hour on Friday, but the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is in order before the morning hour; and therefore under the rule the Chair is compelled to recognize the gentleman from Indiana to submit his motion and to recognize the gentleman from Indiana to submit his motion and test the sense of the House upon it.

Mr. BRIGHT. I desire to make another parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BRIGHT. Does the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] propose to go into Committee of the Whole pending the morning hour and as part of the morning hour?

Mr. HOLMAN. No; before the morning hour, of course.

Mr. BRIGHT. I will then call for the regular order, the morning

The SPEAKER. The Chair will read from the Manual upon this

A motion to go into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union may be entertained on private-bill day, but the motion to go into a Committee of the Whole House takes precedence. [unless according to the general, although not universal, practice, a special order is pending in the former.]

miversal, practice, a special order is pending in the former.]

Mr. BRIGHT. I call for the regular order, the morning hour.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. BRIGHT. I called for the regular order, which I understand is the morning hour.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, which motion may be made at any time.

Mr. BRIGHT. Is it not proper during the pendency of that motion.

Mr. BRIGHT. Is it not proper during the pendency of that motion to call for the morning hour?

The SPEAKER. The remedy for the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr.

BRIGHT] is very plain. If the House concur with him they will vote down the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, and thus bring about a morning hour; if the House do not concur with him, they will support the motion of the gentleman from Indiana and go on with support the motion of the gentleman from Indiana and go on with the appropriation bill.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Has the Chair held that this is Friday?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not committed himself on that point. Even if he did hold that this was Friday, the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BRIGHT] would not be in order until after the morning hour; while the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] would be in order at any time. If to-day be the legislative day of Thursday, then the gentleman from Tennessee is not at all in order in moving to go into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

messee is not at all in order in moving to go into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

Mr. O'BRIEN. We have already had one morning hour to-day; that is, we had it yesterday, which is a part of to-day or to-day is a part of yesterday. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. If this is still Thursday, then the gentleman from Tennessee would not reach his object, because the Private Calendar and private bills are not in order on Thursday.

The question was then taken upon the motion of Mr. HOLMAN; and upon a division there were—ayes 105, noes 40.

Before the result of the vote was announced, Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi, called for tellers. Tellers were not ordered, there being 5 in the affirmative, not one-fifth of a quorum.

So the motion of Mr. Holman was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. REAGAN in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the title of the bill to be considered by the Committee of the Whole.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The title of the bill was read, as follows: "A bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes."

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the first and formal reading of the bill be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now proceed to read the bill by paragraphs for amendment.

The Clerk read the following:

For compensation of Senators, $342,000; and from and after the 30th of June next the compensation of said Senators shall be $4,500.

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the last clause of the paragraph

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the last clause of the paragraph just read, being the words "and from and after the 30th of June next the compensation of said Senators shall be $4,500 per annum."

For one I regret exceedingly that the Committee on Appropriations should have seen fit to re-open the dicussion upon the question of salaries. If there was any one thing definitely settled last year it was this question of salaries.

I do not propose at this time to discuss the question whether $5,000 a year or $4,500 a year is too much or too little to pay a member of Congress. I have only to say upon general principles that I have been so intimately associated for the past two years with the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN,] the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that I am led to believe that possibly that salary is

But I deprecate the discussion of this question at this time. It was settled in the committee of conference at the last session to the satisfaction, I believe, of both bodies. All this House can expect now is to be coerced, if I may say so, into accepting in the end $5,000 a year each. We put ourselves into the humiliating attitude of desiring to be forced into accepting our present salaries. That is where we will land; that is where every member on this floor expects to land. I say let us act like men and stand up to what we expect the action of Concress to be, and fix the salary as now fixed by law, where the of Congress to be, and fix the salary as now fixed by law, where the conference committee of the last session fixed it, and in accordance with the action of Congress of last session.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr.

FOSTER, there were—ayes 120, noes 24.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no quorum voting, I believe. I call for tellers, this proposition is so extraordinary and the vote so unex-

Mr. HALE.

Mr. HALE. Was there not a quorum voting?

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for tellers; this action is so extraordinary.

Mr. HALE. I hope the gentleman will not impede the progress of the bill by calling for tellers after so decisive a vote.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know that we can have a vote on this question in the House.

Mr. HALE. We want to get the bill through. Mr. FOSTER. I hope the gentleman from Indiana will not make Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. I trust the gentleman will insist on the call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Holman and Mr. Foster were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 133, noes 31. So the amendment of Mr. FOSTER was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall be content to take a vote on this question in the House

Mr. FOSTER. In view of the amendment just adopted, I suggest that the sum fixed in the bill as the gross appropriation for compensation of Senators, $342,000, be increased to $350,000, so as to conform to the vote just taken.

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course the gentleman from Ohio is correct in this motion if the House should confirm the extraordinary vote just taken. I use very mild terms when I say an extraordinary vote. Less than a year ago the House almost with unanimity held that $4.500 was a reasonable salary, and the gentleman from Ohio then went so far as to say to the House that the salary which he had been paid at the close of the war and during the war, when the cost of living was greatly above what it is now, was a sufficient salary. At that time I heard no gentleman advocate a salary above $3,000 or $3,600. That was prior to the time when the country was to determine who should occupy these seats for the coming Congress. That election is over, and now the House, if it shall confirm the vote just taken in Committee of the Whole, goes back directly upon that record and proposes to continue this salary at $5,000 a year, which was fixed at a time when the expense of living in this city was almost twice what it is now. At the same time when the salaries of clerks who have received $1,200 a year and upward are being reduced at the rate of 10,15, or 20 per cent., this House, if the action just taken is to be deemed an indication of what the House will deliberately do, proposes to make no further effort to reduce its own pay below $5,000 per annum.

In 1865, when the cost of living in this capital was twice what it is to-day, a proposition to increase these salaries would have met, I think, with universal reprobation. In 1866, the measure increasing the pay to $5,000 a year was carried through in a very extraordinary manner; and the reason urged for it was that by reason of the inclose of the war and during the war, when the cost of living was manner; and the reason urged for it was that by reason of the inflation of our currency $5,000 was practically not much greater than $3,000 had been at the commencement of the war and a few years preceding that time. And now, when the cost of living is largely decreased; when the value of the money in which members are paid is largely appreciated; when the volume of currency is heavily diminished; when every member sees that it is proper and fair and just to reduce the salaries of all the employés of the Government below the grade of heads of deposition that the cost of the cost of the salaries of all the employés of the Government below the grade of heads of departments, whose salaries are only $8,000 though they are employed during the whole year; when almost every salary of the Government is being reduced, we are to be placed in the position of refusing to reduce our own.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio states that the House only wants to be forced to abandon this amendment. I must say to him that in this remark he speaks for himself; he convicts no other party of that frailty; by his own words he convicts himself of having been of that frailty; by his own words he convicts himself of having been anxions at the last session of Congress to be forced to retain the salary of $5,000 a year. I repeat, the gentleman from Ohio can only speak for himself in this matter. The House, so far as I was able to learn and according to my sincere belief, made an honest persistence last session in the effort to reduce the high salary of $5,000 a year when all other salaries were being reduced; for it was an unseemly thing that the legislators of the people should themselves insist upon the high salaries of the period of war and inflation, while insisting more reducing the salaries of subordinate employes of the Governupon reducing the salaries of subordinate employés of the Govern-upon reducing the salaries of subordinate employes of the Government on the ground that the cost of living had been greatly reduced, [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. HOLMAN. I have not finished my remarks. The five-minute rule is not prevailing. General debate was not cut off on this bill.

Mr. RUSK. Then we had better get out of Committee of the Whole in order to cut it off.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was well understood that no general debate would take place upon this bill—

The CHAIRMAN. The understanding of the Chair is that when in Committee of the Whole upon this bill no special order is necessary to limit the debate upon amendments to five minutes.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope the gentleman from Indiana will not insist upon general debate now. To avoid that I am willing to yield him any time I may have remaining.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am perfectly willing it should be unanimously understood that the five-minute rule is prevailing.

Mr. HALE. I think the committee understood when the reading of the hill began that we were proceeding under the five-minute.

of the bill began that we were proceeding under the five-minute

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly.
Mr. HOLMAN. The reason why I did not move all general debate should be cut off on this legislative appropriation bill was to have the opportunity to speak in reference to this matter at length in the opportunity to speak in reference to this matter at length in case it should arise.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is any doubt on this point the Chair will submit it to the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. If there is no objection, I certainly do not object to closing the general debate and having the further consideration of the bill proceed under the five-minute rule.

Mr. HALE. Would not the gentleman having charge of the bill prefer that course? Will he not see the difficulty we will get in, if general debate he not closed when we are proceeding to consider the general debate be not closed when we are proceeding to consider the bill paragraph by paragraph and item by item.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not presume that this motion would be made.

I did not know that it would be made or else I would have seen the reason why the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] would require more than five minutes of time to show why this extraordinary motion was made.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not take quite five minutes to convince the House I was right.

Mr. HOLMAN. I did suppose there might be some general debate on this bill, on this subject, and therefore did not make the motion to cut off the general debate and to leave the bill proceed under the operation of the five-minute rule.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the regular order of business and the en-

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union shall proceed with the consideration of this bill under the five-minute rule, all general debate

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. WADDELL. Now have the five minutes of the gentleman from

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired and the Chair has recognized the gentleman from North Caro-

Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Chairman, I had no idea of saying a word on

Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Chairman, I had no idea of saying a word on this subject until a moment ago, but I have sat here now for six years "under the drippings of the sanctuary" of the gentleman from Indiiana until I have got an overdose of it. [Langhter.]

The gentleman alluded to the last election, and what the people intended by it. He will recollect the Forty-third Congress kept these salaries at $5,000 a year, and perhaps the gentleman will also recollect one of the results of the election was that he will not occupy a seat upon this floor in the next Congress.

Mr. FORT. That is too hard.

Mr. WADDELL. Now, sir, I for one think, and have always voted in that direction, that the services of a member of Congress are worth $5,000 a year when he quits all other business at home and comes here to give them to the country, or they are worth nothing. Perhaps mine are not worth anything in the estimation of the gentleman from Indiana, but I think they are worth that or they are worth bing. I am tired almost to death, and I say so with respect to the gentleman, of this two-cent economy, and I wish never again to see on this floor any attempt made to cut down the salaries of the servants of the people.

I am one of those who believe the true policy is to reduce the force of the public service to the lowest number, and to keep their salaries up to the highest figure consistent with the character and importance of the duties devolved upon them.

Several Members. And that is right.

Mr. WADDELL. I believe that is true economy and true statesmanship, if it is not ridiculous to use that word in these days.

But, Mr. Chairman, I simply got up to utter my protest and express my disgust at these repeated attempts to chop down everybody's salary on a false idea of economy. And that is all I have to say.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would request the gentleman from Ohio to state exactly the motion he makes.

Mr. FOSTER. My motion is to strike out, in line ten, "$342,000" and in lieu thereof to insert "$380,000;" so it will read: "For compensation of Senators, $380,000; and from and after the 30th of June next the compensation of said Senators shall be $5,000 per annum." This amendment necessarily follows the other.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not surprised at the chagrin of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. If it were proper to refer to what has transpired in committee I might show I warned the gentleman himself against further trifling with this question in this House; that we were bringing ourselves thereby into ridicule, and he could not bring his democratic friends up to sustain him on a proposition of this kind.

If there ever was anything settled in this House it certainly was this salary question at the last session of Congress. But the gentle-man says his side of the House made resistance. Let me call you man says his side of the House made resistance. Let me call you back, Mr. Chairman, to that scene when this House yielded to the demands of the Senate. You could not get the yeas and nays. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations refused to rise to demand the yeas and nays, the chairman of the great Committee of Ways and Means refused to vote for the yeas and nays, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] refused to rise for the yeas and nays on that celebrated occasion. You could not get twenty-two democrats to rise for the yeas and nays on that question to aid the few on this side of the House. It tell you if there ever was niesne few on this side of the House. I tell you, if there ever was an issue in this world settled or if there ever was a body of men who allowed themselves with delight to be forced into the adoption of a proposition, it was this House on the question of retaining their salaries at $5,000 a year.

The gentleman from Indiana tries to involve me in inconsistency The gentleman from Indiana tries to involve me in inconsistency because I moved to reduce the salary of members to $2,700 a year. I did so upon the ground that, if we undertook to reduce by 10 per cent. the pay of clerks that was fixed in 1854, when our salaries were $3,000 a year, to be consistent—and I desire to preserve the consistency of this democratic House—we should make our salaries $2,700 a year. I am not here now to discuss the question as to whether $5,000 is too much or too little. I say that question is settled and I told the gentleman from Indiana that it was settled and that he would find himself leading a very small minority of this House upon that question. That has turned out to be true and I am not surprised at the gentleman's chagrin and disappointment on failing to lead this House on this important question.

Mr. BLOUNT obtained the floor, and yielded his time to Mr. Hol-

Mr. HOLMAN. I am much obliged to the gentleman from Georgia. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] should not The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] should not have published to the House that he was quite indifferent to the taxation of the people of this country and to the drains upon the public Treasury. I am not aware of any instance during the six years that he has been a member of the House in which he has ever exhibited the slightest solicitude to relieve the toiling millions of this country from the several hardons of taxation investors are the several hardons of taxation investors. from the severe burdens of taxation imposed upon them. On the contrary, he has always been eager that whoever desired it might be permitted to make a successful grab at the public Treasury. The gentleman need not have paraded the fact of his indifference to the public interest. It is well known. I cannot, however, but think of the contrast there is between the gentleman and the great men I have seen from North Carolina in other days. The gentleman says that my constituency does not sustain my course in endeavoring to retrench the expenditures of this Government. When the gentleman shall have been in this House for even half the period I have been here he may begin to talk about the judgment of the people. When he has possessed the confidence of a constituency as long as I have done—and which confidence I have the honor to state that I still pos--he will have some occasion to criticise my conduct. But a young man who comes into this House and announces at the very outset that he is tired and ashamed of the attempt at reform and retrench-

Mr. WADDELL. I said no such thing. The gentleman has no right to misrepresent me in that way, and he knows that he misrepresents me when he says it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana is entitled to the

Mr. HOLMAN. He was disgusted. It was disgust.
Mr. WADDELL. It was and is.
Mr. HOLMAN. I think his constituents will feel a profounder disgust for the gentleman than he has expressed here, if the spirit which gust for the gentleman than he has expressed here, if the spirit which animated them, even twenty years ago, still animates them in their desire to reduce the burdens upon labor and to retrench the overgrown and profligate expenses of this Government.

I did not expect that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Fosten] could forego an opportunity of making his usual fling at reasonable retrenchment in the Government. That is the drift of the gentleman's trenchment in the Government. That is the drift of the gentleman's mind. He believes in an expensive government and handsomely salaried officers. But that the statement should come from this side of the House that economy produced a sentiment of disgust was something I was hardly prepared for. If this House refuses to stand by an effort, an honest and fair effort to reduce its own salaries and can at the same time consistently with its own manhood consent to the reduction of the salaries of other employes of the Government, then it must be admitted that the salary paid to members of Congress is higher, considering the period of time occupied in the discharge of their public duties, than the salaries paid to any other employés of this Government, except it may be the persons employed in subordinate positions in the two ends of the Capitol.

No, sir; I believe and I said to my democratic friends everywhere, and to my republican friends everywhere, that the democratic party as a whole was a party which believed that, to secure purity in the Government and to banish venality from its councils, low salaries and severe economy were absolutely necessary. And yet every man knows, Mr. Chairman, that there will be no severe economy in the administration of this Government if the gentlemen who make the laws insist upon salaries for themselves beyond a fair and reasonable compensation for the time complexed.

tion for the time employed.

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. WADDELL. I move to strike out the last word.
Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Indiana has been pleased to allude to the length of service respectively of himself and myself. All I have to say on that point is this: That the gentleman has served long enough to fatigue his constituents, who have chosen his successor, whereas I was elected last November for the fourth time, as I have been elected every time to Congress, by a majority nearly double my previous majority. That shows the estimation in which our respective constituencies hold us.

The gentleman was pleased to say, also, that I had expressed myself as opposed to retrenehment and reform. I am a very plain-spoken man, and I told the gentleman promptly that he misrepresented me man, and I told the gentleman promptly that he misrepresented me in saying that and knew he misrepresented me when he said it. I repeat it, and have no apologies to make for what I said and no excuses for it, one way or another. I believe the people of this country do want certain reforms. I do believe they want (to use an expression peculiar to one portion of the country) to "run" this Government on as economical principles as possible; but the American people are not a mean people, and they do not wish the gentleman from Indiana to serve them, if they wish him to serve them at all, at a less compensation than his services are worth, nor do my constituents wish me to do the like. They elected us at the last election upon our votes in the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses on the salary bill that our services were worth $5.000 a year. services were worth $5,000 a year.

Now, sir, I was suddenly and unwillingly dragged into this debate because I could not repress the indignation I felt at hearing the gentle-man from Indiana, with his long and distinguished service in this House, man from Indiana, with his long and distinguished service in this House, again get up, as he has done at every session heretofore since I have been here, and attempt to induce the House to adopt what I call "two-cent economy." The people do not want it. We might as well speak plainly about this thing. The people want, I repeat, to run this Government on economical principles, and they want reform in certain cases. But they do not want anybody here who leaves his profession to come here and serve for what is less than an adequate salary. And let me say, as a Representative from one section of this country, that if the salaries are cut down—I will not say to $4,500, for if the gentleman were here next session he would move to cut it down to $4,000, and then to $3,500, and then to $3,000, and so on—but if this cutting-down process is continued, people from my section of the country could not afford to come to Congress, for as a general rule we have no income outside of the salary, and those who come here have to give up their profession and business at home, whereby they make an honest living.

That is all I have to say. I have said it unexpectedly. I heard the remarks of the gentleman from Indiana and almost involuntarily took the floor and made the few observations which I have submitted.

Mr. HOLMAN. This "two-cent economy," to which the gentleman has referred, reduced the expenses of the Government, for the cursor con constant and all the control of has referred, reduced the expenses of the Government, for the current year, $25,000,000, a sum almost one-half as large as the entire expense of this Government twenty-five years ago. And it was the pride and boast of this side of the House, as every gentleman on this side of the House whom I look in the face knows, that during the campaign of last summer before the masses, before the men who possess the power to determine who shall fill this Hall, it was the pride and boast of these gentlemen and myself that we, by this "two-cent economy" which the gentlemen has referred to and which so disgusted him, had reduced the burdens of the people $25,000,000. Yet it is from this side of the House that the humiliating confession comes that that was false pretense. I think I speak for every honorable gen-tleman here when I repel that insinuation. It was not a false at-tempt at economy. It was an honest attempt at retrenchment, and I think this side of the House will to-day vindicate themselves from the charge of acting in bad faith before the country during the past the charge of acting in bad faith before the country during the past important political campaign.

The gentleman makes the boast that he comes here by an overwhelming majority from a democratic district. If he would remain in his seat and honor me by listening to me I should tell him that, when he has come here to Congress after Congress representing a republican district, as I have had the honor to do, he will then find whether the people favor this "two-cent economy" or not. He will learn that fact when he shall have represented three or four districts always largely republican as I have had the honor to do. Then he always largely republican, as I have had the honor to do. Then he may come here and pride himself upon being disgusted with "two-cent economy," the "two-cent economy" which gave this House a democratic majority in the next House and which alone gave it that majority.

Mr. Chairman, but a word further. I trust the gentlemen of the committee will not consent to reduce all other salaries under the Government, the salaries of the twelve-hundred-dollar clerks, the fourteen-hundred-dollar clerks, the sixteen-hundred-dollar clerks, and the eighteen-hundred-dollar clerks, and also the salaries of the ladies employed in the Treasury, who are supporting their little children, and keep them at the present reduced standard, and yet to refuse to reduce our own salaries.

Mr. FOSTER. What salary has been reduced? I know of none. Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman is mistaken, none of these ladies get more than $1,000.

Mr. FOSTER, Give me a square answer Say what salary was reduced? I know of no salary that has been reduced.

Mr. HOLMAN. Salaries were reduced by the change of the classification of the clerks, those of one class being changed into another class, and in that way there was a reduction.

Mr. KELLEY. I move to strike out the last two words, and I do it for the purpose of rejoining briefly to the gentleman from Indiana, who in the course of his several speeches has spoken of the economy that characterized the democratic party in past days and to the reduction of expenses by this Congress at its last session. He says they reduced the expenses of the Government $25,000,000 last session. When, in the course of the last campaign, I had the honor of addressing some of the gentleman's constituents, I charged, and I believe I charged truly, that this Congress had been to the American people the most expensive that had ever assembled, and that its economies the most expensive that had ever assembled, and that its economies were wastefully extravagant. What did it do? We are paying rent in every important city for a great number of offices. In Chicago alone I think we are paying for offices from $37,000 to $45,000 a year.

Mr. CAULFIELD More than that; $70,000, I think.

Mr. KELLEY. We are paying $70,000 a year in Chicago, although we have there a building nearly completed and which if completed would save us that amount of rent. We have expended nearly $4,000,000 on that building, and true economy required that we should finish it at the earliest day. But this Congress, under the lead of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN,] withheld the necessary appropriation, and we are still paying $70,000 a year rent and losing the interest on the $4,000,000 invested.

And the same thing is true in regard to my city of Philadelphia, where $3,000,000 has been expended upon a public building. The stone is bought, cut, and fitted for the building; the place to receive it has been prepared, and yet we pay for rents of offices in that city something like $45,000 a year, because the appropriation which was made is so pitiable that as yet the stone is not laid above the ground. And is so pitiable that as yet the stone is not laid above the ground. And so all over the country.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. KELLEY. Not now; I have but five minutes. We could make many small appropriations for the improvement of rivers and harbors, but we made them so bunglingly that the President has withheld one-half of the amount appropriated. We still owe for the public buildings which we have partially constructed; we still owe for the improvements that have been commenced upon our rivers and lie buildings which we have partially constructed; we still owe for the improvements that have been commenced upon our rivers and harbors. The debt does not appear in our debt statement, but the work will be completed some day, and the heaped-up amount of interest must be paid by the tax-paying people of this country.

Again, on this subject of economy, you could not give $2,000,000 in one year to complete our public buildings which are needed so much, but you could pledge the country to pay $2,500,000 of coin interest for purchasing material out of which to make a subsidiary currency, while you were having that currency provided at an actual cost of but $1,400,000 a year. You authorized the purchase of $50,000,000 of silver bullion, to be paid for in coin bonds at 5 per cent., making an annual interest through all time of $2,500,000 of coin for the mere material out of which to manufacture at great expense a substitute for fracout of which to manufacture at great expense a substitute for frac-out of which to manufacture at great expense a substitute for fractional currency which was costing us but $1,400,000 a year.

Look over the whole of your economic legislation, and you will find that it is a blow at labor, at the productive interests of the country. What is a public building $\frac{1}{2}$ As I said to the constituents of the gentleman, it is 95 per cent. of labor and 5 per cent. of capital.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. This question of salaries has been before the House repeatedly within the last three or four years, and offers have been continually made to out them down. It is true and efforts have been continually made to cut them down. It is true the House has kept the salary of its members up to $5,000 a year each, and I have yet to learn of any gentleman having displeased his constituents because he voted for a salary of $5,000 a year. Any man who is fit to come here and participate in the debates and legislation of Congress is truly worth that amount, and his constituents have ratified our action in that respect.

But the economy of the democratic party for the last year or two is beyond all doubt precisely what my colleague from Philadelphia [Mr. Kelley] has said, a wasteful economy. There are two kinds of economy, a sound economy and a false economy. The economy that has been pursued for the last two years under the lead of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] has been a false economy. It has crippled the service of the Government in every direction. It has crippled it in the Land Office, in the Patent Office, in the Surgeon-General's Office, and in the Pension Office. To-day there are applying to the Surgeon-General's Office thousands of men, wounded soldiers, who are entitled to commutation for artificial limbs in place of diers, who are entitled to commutation for artificial limbs in place of legs and arms lost in the late war. They have been denied it in consequence of the miserable appropriation made last year, which was cut down under the lead of the gentleman from Indiana. If I am not mistaken, there is a deficiency bill now before the House which will require the appropriation of something like two hundred or three hundred thousand dollars in order to make up the amount justly due to the goldiers. to the soldiers

Mr. ATKINS. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him a mo-

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Not now.

Mr. ATKINS. You ought not to make that statement.
Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. You can correct him after he is through.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. You can correct me after I am through. In regard to the Patent Office it is the same thing. The appropriation for clerks has been cut down so far that patents cannot be issued as rapidly as they ought to be. In regard to the Land Office the number of clerks has been cut down so much that there are thousands and tens of thousands of settlers in the western country who are not able to get their patents for their lands.

Now this economy has in a measure reached the Pension Office. The force in the Pension Office has been cut down so low that there are, I think, some twelve hundred pension cases filed and awaiting examination because of the want of a sufficient clerical force to bring them forward.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. The work in the Pension Office is about two years behind.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I am corrected and am told by a gentleman of the Committee on Pensions that there are eighty-four thousand pension cases behind in the Pension Office awaiting examination because of the want of sufficient clerical force. So it has been throughout all the Departments of the Government. Everywhere the cutting down of clerical force has retarded the operations of the Govcertaing down of ciercal force has retarded the operations of the Gov-ernment and prevented men who are entitled to have their cases ex-amined by one Department or another from having them examined. These cases are postponed from day to day, from month to month, from year to year. - I protest against this niggardly economy because I consider it ruinous to the public service and injurious to the best in-

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KELLEY withdrew his pro forma amendment.

Mr. MacDOUGALL. I move to amend by striking out the last three words; and I yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Kelley.]

Mr. Kelley. I thank the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Mac-

DOUGALL, and gladly avail myself of his courtesy to continue my remarks. Having referred to the suspension of work on public buildremarks. Having referred to the suspension of work on public buildings and the improvement of rivers and harbors, I had remarked that the policy pursued by the present Congress in those matters, as in the case of the currency, was a blow at labor. A public building is 95 per cent. of labor and but 5 per cent. of capital; and in this terrible season of depression the expenditure of the ordinary sum for public buildings would have been a relief to tens of thousands if not hundreds of thousands of families.

hundreds of thousands of families.

I had asked what is a public building? The cellar is a mere matter of labor. The foundation is stone, without value save in the presence of a market. Labor extracts it, shapes it, lays it. The superstructure is material of a finer character, manufactured from the clay of yonder brick-field, handled by skilled labor and converted into enduring brick. Again, that superstructure is iron-ore and coal and limestone of little value save in the presence of a demand. Labor digs these, labor brings them to the furnace; labor watches them until the iron is made for the rafters and beams and ornaments, or until converted into steel for parts requiring strength and beauty. Public buildings and other public improvements are in the first instance timber upon the field, obstructing the progress of western settlement and civilization, and of little or no value until the woodman's ax hews them and labor transports them and transforms them into shapes of strength, utility, or beauty, to, be embodied in public into shapes of strength, utility, or beauty, to be embodied in public works.

Thus, sir, in order to strike a blow at the depressed labor of the respective to the lead of the gentleman from Indiana, country this Congress, under the lead of the gentleman from Indiana, left us subject to all the rents we are paying for Government offices in cities where there are incomplete buildings; wasted the interest on the many millions already invested, and then went through the country to preach economy. Thank God the American people have some intelligence!

The gentleman from Indiana assured the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] that his economy had secured a majority in the next Congress. Ah, indeed! The democratic majority now is about equal to two-thirds of the House; in the next Congress it will be a questionable majority of two or four; and the gentleman will stand out in the cold to-look at it. His own constituents went be-hind his rhetorical phrases of economy, and looking at the consum-mate extravagance into which he had urged this House, voted accordingly. Sir, there is a pretended economy that is wasteful and there is a seeming extravagance that is economical and beneficent. Against is a seeming extravagance that is economical and benencent. Against the latter the gentleman has arrayed himself; and the people will hold him and his political associates chargeable as the most oppressive Congress to the laboring-people of the country that they have known in their day and generation.

The gentleman said that to lessen the expenses of the Government $25,000,000 was to reduce them half the sum that was necessary to carry on the Government at a time before the war when there was no Chicago, no San Francisco, and had been no rebellion.

[Here the hammer fell.] Mr. CARR. Mr. Chairman, while I favor this amendment, I still Mr. CARR. Mr. Chairman, while I favor this amendment, I still believe in retrenchment and reform; and I think I understand something about what the people mean by those terms. By the term retrenchment they mean that the wasteful expenditure of the public money shall be stopped, that the robbery of the public Treasury which has been going on for the last ten or fifteen years shall be ended; that no extraordinary appropriations shall be made for fancy jobs, such as letting large mail contracts upon straw bids and the like. What they mean by reform is that a better class of men shall be given in charge of our public affairs; that there shall be greater integrity.

What they mean by reform is that a better class of men shall be given in charge of our public affairs; that there shall be greater integrity and ability brought into requisition in governmental concerns.

But I have never understood retrenchment and reform to mean that those who are employed by the Government shall be starved, nor do I believe them to mean that the ordinary and necessary expenditures of the Government shall be cut down below a living figure. I believe it is a mistaken idea of retrenchment and reform to cut down the salaries of so high a grade of public servants as members of either House of Congress. I believe the people demand a higher order of brains, greater intellect and capacity, rather than a lower grade of salaries. I believe that the people will commend us if we now put into operation a law which will command in the future a higher order of intellect, greater and more comprehensive capacity for the disof intellect, greater and more comprehensive capacity for the dis-charge of public concerns, instead of allowing a mere pittance which charge of public concerns, instead of allowing a mere pittance which will command at best but second or third rate men.

I do not expect to be a member of either House of Congress in the succeeding term, and therefore can speak on this subject without being charged with interest in it.

I say that $5,000 a year is not too much for service of that kind which is rendered by members holding these positions. I say that men of sufficient capacity cannot afford to leave their professions at home or other luminess at a less any neal salary than this home or other business at a less annual salary than this

The people will not require of us any action of this kind or character. Five thousand dollars is as little as a man can afford to leave his home for, especially to come here; and the people understand this. While I dislike very much to differ with the able chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and while I can commend his conduct and course through all the past in his efforts at retrenchment and reform, still I must think that committee has made a slight mistake in endeavoring to cut down the salaries of Senators and Representaives to $4,500 a year.

Mr. McDOUGALL, by unanimous consent, withdrew his amend-

Mr. HOLMAN. I renew it.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Kelley] has made a somewhat remarkable speech. It seems to be gratifying has made a somewhat remarkable speech. It seems to be gratifying to him that my constituency left me, to use his expression, "out in the cold." The gentleman has never represented a district that did not agree with him in political opinion, while I represent at this time the largest republican district in the State of Indiana.

Mr. CONGER. Let me ask the gentleman from Indiana a question.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no; excuse me. It is not an exceedingly profitable subject for me to discuss, however courteous it may have been on the part of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to refer to it. I do not know it is yeary nunsual for men to be heaten in a political connot know it is very unusual for men to be beaten in a political contest where the political sentiment is strongly against them. But I never heard the gentleman from Pennsylvania ever represented a constituency which did not fully agree with him on all questions of Mr. KELLEY. I have represented such a constituency.

Mr. HOLMAN. A nomination in such an instance is all that is required. The gentleman would be glad to have the people of this whole country suffer that vast sums of money might be spent in Philadelphia. We have already spent in that city on a palatial building far beyond the necessities of the public service a very large sum of money. I wish to refer to that for a moment.

money. I wish to refer to that for a moment.

Mr. KELLEY. I have already called attention to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. We have spent there in that city on a large palatial building, at the expense of the general industries of the country, $3,350,000.

Mr. KELLEY. And now you are losing the interest on that large

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman makes efforts every Congress, year after year, to get very handsome sums appropriated to be expended under his eye. The country understands the spirit in which these vast appropriations are made. He will not expect to be left out in the cold so long as he has the public Treasury to go to, to pour into the lap of his constituency. He makes a boast of it that through his instrumentality and influence these wast expenditures at the expense of the general constituency. He makes a boast of it that through his instrumentality and influence these vast expenditures at the expense of the general industry have been thrown among his own constituents. industry have been thrown among his own constituents. He whines about his own constituency suffering by the depression of the present year, and asks to have them relieved by the taxation of the entire country. We appropriated for that public building this present year $350,000—there was no necessity for that building at all; $350,000, when we have spent on that palatial building already $3,350,000 of the money drawn from the people by taxation.

The gentleman's colleague [Mr. Townsend] talks about our economy by which $25,000,000 were saved to the body of the people of the country for the present year. He talks about our economy in omy by which $25,000,000 were saved to the body of the people of the country for the present year. He talks about our economy in the Departments. Can the gentleman say so when he knows that under the eye of his political chieftain these same employés of the Government who are receiving the money from the Treasury were taxed, and taxed heavily, to carry on a political campaign? One statement, taken under oath, shows that no less than $25,000 was taxed upon these employés to carry on the campaign of the party with which he is identified. Yet he would insinuate the salaries of those employés are too low. If they were too low, then how dishonorable to tax them for such a purpose!

A Member. And besides, they were furloughed for two months to go home to yote.

go home to vote.

go home to vote.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes; and in addition they were allowed two months' furlough to go home and vote, and yet the gentleman says the public service suffers because of the reductions made by this House at the last session, saving to the people over $25,000,000.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CLYMER. Mr. Chairman, this discussion has wandered far from the initial point, which was the motion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Foster] to strike out the amount for salary of Senators, and of course for members of this House. There might be su housest

Ohio [Mr. Foster] to strike out the amount for salary of Senators, and of course for members of this House. There might be an honest difference of judgment, sir, upon that question. Some persons may conceive the services of members here to be worth $5,000 and others may think they are worth a smaller sum. But, sir, last year, in obedience to what the Committee on Appropriations and this House then believed to be a well-defined sentiment of the people of the United States, they introduced a bill which was passed almost without dissent, in this House, reducing the salaries to $4,500. The Senate of the United States resisted this effort, and, after a long and protracted struggle between conference committees this House finally yielded to the demand of the Senate. Rightly, as I think, the Appropriations Committee at this session have adhered to what they had a right to conceive to be the settled judgment of this House, representing the conceive to be the settled judgment of this House, representing the settled convictions of a large majority of the people, when they were uninfluenced by the action of the Senate, who are not directly responsible to them. Therefore, in obedience to this conviction and in obedience to what they conceived to be right as a general principle, they have introduced this proposition for reduction.

It is surprising to me that either on this side of the House or the other the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations should be reproached for this effort toward economy. Sir, it is tions should be reproached for this effort toward economy. Sir, it is but a part and parcel of the same effort which was started in this House last year and by which this country was saved $30,000,000 in expenditures for one year alone. For, sir, if we do not reduce our own salaries, by what right can we reduce the salaries of others? And I say, if that be true, while it may not be personally or individually pleasant or agreeable, or convenient, yet a member who desires to act on a principle should vote for this portion of the bill as it has been reported by the committee.

And let me say to you, sir, and to other members of the committee, has been reported by the committee.

And let me say to you, sir, and to other members of the committee, that it is ill-becoming in any one here to attempt to revile or belittle the efforts of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations on behalf of economy. If he may be reviled here he will not be reviled among our masters, the people. If he may be reviled now he will not be reviled hereafter; for the people will ever hold in grateful remembrance the name of one who, during a long service on this floor, has stood the very watch-guard of the Treasury, through whom and by whom more disgraceful jobs have been prevented, more attempted robberies of the Treasury of the United States have been prevented, than, I venture to say, by any one other man who has ever served the robberies of the Treasury of the United States have been prevented, than, I venture to say, by any one other man who has ever served the public as a representative in Congress. And, sir, that he does not appear in the next House will be a source of deep regret to every one everywhere who desires purity and economy in the public service. I know no one who is to take his place and stand here to guard the Treasury from the thieving hands of the hundreds who would rob it. From my heart I thank him for his services in the past and wish him all good fortune in the future.

Mr. KELLEY. I seek the floor for perhaps a few apologetic words to my friend from Indiana, [Mr. HOLMAN.] No man on this floor, not my colleague who has just taken his seat, has a higher estimate of the integrity of purpose of the gentleman from Indiana as well as his industry. What I object to in him is that he has so long contemplated dimes and threepences that in financial matters his vision has become microscopic, and that in consequence he has misled his party. I did not mean to make any invidious remark about the gentleman when I reminded him that he had been left out in the cold. I take leave to say that I have been a Representative of my district take leave to say that I have been a Representative of my district when a majority of its votes were against me. I meant to class him with the whole class of dead men on the other side. Why, sir, when we pass there on the way to the committee-rooms the impression is that we are going through a morgue on that side of the House, and when the atmosphere becomes a little uncertain one sees as it were in the air the "sheeted and gibbering ghosts" of dead members of Congress flitting about. Therefore I hope he will apply my remarks not as personal to him, but to that majority which his unwise and inhuman economy came so near to extinguishing.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we have had discussion enough upon this question. I move that the committee rise for the purpose of closing

Mr. HALE. Let us take a vote now.
[Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]
Mr. HOLMAN. I withdraw the proforma amendment.
The question being taken on Mr. Foster's amendment, there were ayes 104, noes 40.

Mr. HOLMAN. A quorum has not voted; but as we will take a vote on this in the House I do not make a point on that.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For mileage of Senators, $36,000.

Mr. WHITE. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out the line just read and insert the following:

For mileage of Senators, twice the amount of their actual traveling expenses by the most usually traveled route from their respective homes to the capital and thence back again, each session of Congress.

Mr. CLYMER. I make the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, let him have a vote on it.

Mr. CLYMER. I make the point of order that the amendment proposes a change of law, and it does not appear that it is a reduction, and I do not suppose it is a reduction.

Mr. FOSTER. It does not appear on the face of it that it is a re-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:
For compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others receiving an annual salary in the service of the Senate, namely: For Secretary of the Senate, including compensation as disbursing officer, $4.896, and for hire of horses and wagons for the Secretary's office, $000; Chief Clerk, $2.500, and the additional sum of $1,000 while the said office is held by the present incumbent, and no longer; principal clerk, principal executive clerk, minute and journal clerk, and financial clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, $2.500 each; librarian, and seven clerks in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, at $1.800 each; clerk of printing records, $2.000; five clerks, at $1.800 each; keeper of the stationery, $1.600; one messenger, $1.200; four laborers in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, $7.20 each; one special policeman, $1.200; Chaplain, $900; secretary to the Vice-President, $2.000; clerk to the Committee on Finance, $2.200; clerk to the Committee on Appropriations, $2.500; clerk to the Committee on Commerce, $1.800; clerk to the Committee on Private Land-Claims, $1,800; assistant keeper of the stationery, $1,200; Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper, $4,000; assistant doorkeeper, $2,000; acting assistant doorkeeper, $2,000; three assistant doorkeepers, at $1,800 each; Postmaster to the Senate, $2,100; assistant postmaster and mail-carrier, $2,000; four mail-carriers, at $1,000 each; superintendent of the document-room, $1,800; two assistants in document-room, at $1,400 each; superintendent of the folding-room, $1,800; one assistant in the folding-room, $1,200; twenty-one messengers, one of whom shall act as upholsterer, at $1,200 each; one laborer in charge of private passage, $340; chief engineer, $1,700; three assistant engineers at $1,400 each; assistant engineer in charge of the elevator, $1,200; conductor of elevator, $900; messenger in charge of store-room, $1,200; two firemen, at $300 each; eight skilled laborers, at $340 each; ten laborers during the session, at $720 each per annum; to pay Kate Dodson, in charge of the ladies retiring-room, $720; telegraph-operator, during the session, $600; making, in all, $145,976.

Mr. ATKINS. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out in lines 55 and 56 the words "$1,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,440;" so that it will read "one assistant in the folding-room, $1,440."

My purpose in offering the amendment is to equalize the salaries between these officers. The assistants in the document-room and folding-room ought manifestly to receive the same pay, and my purpose in offering the amendment is to equalize their pay. But I am informed, however, by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that it was agreed that the salaries of these assistants should tions that it was agreed that the salaries of these assistants should be $1,200 instead of $1,440, and therefore I withdraw my amendment and offer an amendment to strike out, in lines 53 and 54, $1,440 and insert in lieu thereof $1,200; so that it will read, "two assistants in document-room, at $1,200 each."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I desire, Mr. Chairman, to make a trifling amendment.

I move to insert, after line 54, what I send to the Clerk's desk, and which will be very much for the convenience of every member of this House; and if the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will give it his attention, I think he will assent to it. It is to insert in line 54 the following:

To enable documents in the folding-room to be properly stamped on the outside of the envelope with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

I suppose, Mr. Chairman, there is no member of the Honse who has not found great inconvenience in regard to all the speeches and other documents which are inclosed in wrappers in the folding-room without anything upon the outside to distinguish them. The consequence is that if you want a speech of one particular gentleman, unless you are very careful in keeping the bundles apart, you are unable to distinguish them. I understand from the superintendent of the foldingroom that there is no appropriation which enables them to put on that little steneil stamp. I propose to offer a similar amendment when we come to the appropriations of the House.

Mr. HALE. I would suggest to the gentleman that the amendment would come in better at the end of the fifty-sixth line.

Mr. HOAR. Very well; I will offer it at that point. There is probably no member of the House who has not suffered from this inconvenience.

venience.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts is laboring under a mistake. The appropriation for the current year was made with the understanding that it was amply sufficient for all the service in the folding-rooms of the House and the Senate. I supposed that all the documents were stamped. If they are not all stamped it is only an occasional document that is not stamped.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose I have in my pressession after eight years' only an occasional document that is not stamped.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose I have in my possession, after eight years' service, more than a thousand speeches of gentlemen in this House, some of them of great interest to the public and for which I have frequent applications. Now they are all folded alike, without anything on the outside to distinguish the one from the other. Suppose the gentleman from Indiana makes a speech which he publishes in pamphlet form; there ought to be a stamp on the outside wrapper, "Mr. Holman's speech," of whatever date, or some little stamp of that kind, to distinguish it from other speeches. I was informed at the folding-room that that could not be done, because there is no appropriation for it. The head of the folding-room told me that the appropriation would not permit that to be done.

Mr. HOLMAN. During a presidential campaign millions of these

Mr. HOLMAN. During a presidential campaign millions of these speeches are sent out. That was the case during the last campaign, but of course during the coming fiscal year the number sent out will be comparatively small.

Mr. HOAR. The sending out of those speeches is done by the committees of the political parties at their own cost. This is a different thing. What I want is that if any gentleman in this House has his speech folded in the folding-room in pamphlet form there should be a stamp on the outside, designating what the inclosure is. It is a very trifling matter and it is hardly worth while to say much about it, but it would be a matter of great convenience to members of the

Mr. YOUNG. I may say to the gentleman from Masssachusetts [Mr. HOAR] that I had occasion to investigate the matter to which he refers and I learned in the course of investigation in the folding-room that all documents folded are stamped.

Mr. HOAR. That is not true as to speeches.

Mr. YOUNG. The reports of the Agricultural Department, of the Secretary of the Interior, and various other documents are circulated under the existing law of Congress without postage, and they are always stamped as he desires. I think the amendment well enough, but I give the gentleman this information because it came to me in the course of investigation. the course of investigation

Mr. HOLMAN. This is a very small matter; but would not this amendment require a stamp to be prepared for every member of the Senate and the House, and also that more or less persons should be employed to put the stamp upon every speech that would be sent

Mr. HOAR. If my friend will permit me, exactly what will be done is this: there will be a little round stencil or hand-stamp into which Mr. HOAR. If my friend will permit me, exactly what will be done is this: there will be a little round steneil or hand-stamp into which type can be put. For instance, the gentleman from Indiana makes a speech on economy or on any public question, and whenever that speech is printed in pamphlet form and folded, the type "Speech of Mr. HOLMAN," on such a day and on such a subject, will be set in a little hand-stamp, and the folder will stamp that on the wrappers as fast as he can move his hand, and every gentleman who gets that speech will have something on the outside of the wrapper to designate whose speech it is and what it is about; and if any one writes to him three years afterward for that speech he can readily find it; otherwise he cannot do so.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have seen more than forty boys engaged in folding these speeches at one time. Now if we put upon the wrappers the words "part of Congressional Record," as I believe is done now, it seems to me that will be sufficient. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] will lead us by this operation into an expenditure that he does not now dream of. I have seen as high as forty boys employed in folding these speeches.

Mr. HOAR. One boy can stamp five thousand of these speeches in an hour, as fast as his hand can move.

Mr. HOLMAN. But he will be obliged to have a different stamp for each member, and that will require a great number of them. I do not like to antagonize an item so small as this, but I really wish the gentleman from Massachusetts would not press his amendment. The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. HOAR; and upon a division there were—ayes 76, noes 26.

Mr. HOLMAN. No quorum has voted, but I will not raise that point now. I will give notice that I will ask for a separate vote in the House on this amendment.

No further count being called for, the amendment was declared the House on this amendment.

No further count being called for, the amendment was declared

Mr. RIDDLE. I move to amend by striking out "21," in line 57, and inserting "22" as the number of messengers; also, to insert after the word "each," in line 58, the words "and one of whom shall be employed to stamp, cut, and prepare paper for folders, at $1,200;" so that the clause will read as follows:

Twenty-two messengers, one of whom shall act as upholsterer, at $1,200 each; and one of whom shall be employed to stamp, cut, and prepare paper for folders, at $1,200.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is not necessary.

Mr. RIDDLE. My reason for offering the amendment is this: a messenger to perform the duties provided for in my amendment has been recommended by the Doorkeeper of the House. His employment has also been recommended by the assistant superintendent of the folding-room. His services are said to be necessary. A resolution was referred a few days since to the Committee of Accounts, and I understand they entertain it favorably; but to prevent any further consideration of that resolution by them I would be very glad to have this amendment adopted. I am assured by those officers of the House who ought to know that the services of such a messenger as this is necessary.

as this is necessary.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Senate has asked for nothing of the kind.

Mr. RIDDLE. I beg pardon; I thought this was the paragraph relating to the House. I will withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

House of Representatives:

For compensation of Members of the House of Representatives and Delegates from Territories, $1,359,000; and from and after the 30th of June next, the compensation of said Members and Delegates shall be $4,500 per annum.

For mileage $100,000.

Mr. WHITE. I move to amend by striking out line 129, "for mileage, $100,000," and—
Mr. FOSTER. I hope the gentleman will withdraw for a moment until I can move an amendment to come in before that.
Mr. HOLMAN. I object to going back in the bill.
Mr. FOSTER. I rose in time.
Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman did not rise until the next parameters by was read. I specified that Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman did not rise until the next paragraph was read; I observed that.

Mr. FOSTER. I rose while it was being read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I object to going back.

Mr. FOSTER. O, well, if the gentleman wants to make a distinction between the two Honses—

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, for once in my life I object. [Laughter.]

Mr. ATKINS. I hope the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will not make that objection. Let the pay of members of the House be made the same as the pay of Senators.

Mr. FOSTER. I propose to move an amendment, to make the sal-

Mr. FOSTER. I propose to move an amendment, to make the salaries of members of the House conform to the salaries we have fixed for members of the Senate.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection to the gentleman offering his amendment in the House.

fixing the salaries for members of the House after the 30th of June

Mr. HOLMAN. I object; I rise to a question of order.
Mr. FOSTER. I want order.
The CHAIRMAN. What is the amendment which the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Foster] proposes to move?

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out all of the paragraph from and including the words "and from and after" in line 125 of the printed

The CHAIRMAN. Did the gentleman rise while the Clerk was

The CHAIRMAN. Did the gentleman rise while the Clerk was reading that paragraph?

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the gentleman was in time.

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the words "and from and after the 30th day of June next, the compensation of said Members and Delegates shall be $4,500 per annum."

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask the Chair to rule on that question.

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has ruled.

Mr. HOLMAN. I object to going back.

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has ruled once.

The CHAIRMAN. If the Chair understands the gentleman from Ohio correctly, he has stated that he rose before the conclusion of the reading of that paragraph.

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir; the gentleman from Ohio will not say that. The CHAIRMAN. If that is so—

Mr. FOSTER. The chairman recognized me.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] will not say that he rose in time.

Mr. FOSTER. I ask a vote.
Mr. HOLMAN. If the gentleman will say that he rose in time, I will yield at once.

Mr. FOSTER. If the gentleman from Indiana does not like the decision of the Chair, he may appeal from it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the objection of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman has not said that he rose before the reading of the next paragraph was commenced. Mr. FOSTER. I rise to a question of order; after the chairman has once ruled upon a point, discussion upon that point is not in order except upon an appeal.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio did not rise until the except upon an appeal.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio did not rise until the next paragraph was read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has ruled upon that point.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope that my distinguished friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, will not make any such point as this. In my opinion he will not strengthen this bill, he will not strengthen the cause he advocates, by making a point of this kind. Certainly the House ought to have an opportunity to express its view on this subject. It has expressed it adversely to the views of the majority of this committee. I sympathize with my distinguished friend upon this subject; I vote with him, and I have no sympathy with the gentlemen who have assailed him this morning. I think he has rendered great service to the country in years past, and especially at the last session of Congress; but I cannot sustain him in a position which I think is wrong. The sense of the House ought to be had fairly; and when it has been had I do not think the gentleman ought to make such a point of order as this.

Mr. HOLMAN. Now, Mr. Chairman, my friend from Tennessee [Mr. Atkins] makes serious what was rather a matter of pleasantry.

Mr. ATKINS. I am always serious in legislation.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio was not following the reading of the bill; he was very negligent and only became vigilant when he heard the salaries of members of the House mentioned. Then his vigilance was excited wonderfully, but it was not aroused quite soon enough. I think the gentleman from Ohio should be content—

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has decided that the amendment was

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has decided that the amendment was offered in time.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the gentleman should be content to offer this amendment in the House, but still I shall not press the objection. I presume that a vote will be taken in the House at any rate.

Mr. FOSTER. I trust by common consent the amendment may be agreed to, and that the gross sum appropriated may be changed accordingly.

ordingly.

Mr. HOLMAN. I take it for granted that such is the sentiment of the Committee of the Whole; and inasmuch as a vote will be had in the House I think it unimportant to object further. Let the change be made.

The amendment of Mr. Foster was agreed to.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope now that the aggregate sum will be increased to correspond with this amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is not necessary. At the end of the bill the Clerk will of course be authorized to change these footings wherever

Mr. WHITE. I move to amend by striking out the paragraph in regard to mileage and inserting the following:

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has recognized me, I believe.
Mr. HOLMAN. I shall object to going back.
Mr. FOSTER. I ask for order. I move to strike out the clause

In lieu of mileage, each Representative and Delegate shall be entitled to receive twice his actual traveling expenses from his home to Washington, and thence back to his home, once each way for each session of Congress.

Mr. CLYMER. I rise to a point of order on this amendment.
Mr. WHITE. Before that point of order is decided I would like to state that a few moments ago a point of order was raised that this amendment on its face did not show that it would make a reduction of expenditure. Now, I do not see how that can be made to appear on the face of the amendment unless I put in words to that effect. I am prepared to show that it is a reduction. In 1866 the mileage of Members and Delegates in this House was $196,000. Under the act of Congress which gave actual traveling expenses instead of mileage those expenses for one year in the Forty-third Congress were only $23,476. Now, if it is not plain on the face of this proposition that it is a reduction I would like some gentleman to tell me how it can be made plain.

made plain.

Mr. CLYMER. The point of order, I have no doubt, will be sus tained. There is another reason in support of it. The amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky is so indefinite that whether it be a saving or an increase of expense would depend—

Mr. WHITE. I rose expressly to make that point plain; and the gentleman is assuming that the very thing I propose to prove is un-

mr. CLYMER. No, sir; I made no assumption of that kind, as I will explain. My idea is that whether this would be a saving or an increase of expenditures would be entirely dependent upon the tastes, habits, and inclinations of different members. If you allow members to be paid their expenses going and coming, there is no telling what bills of expenses may be incurred.

Mr. WHITE. I undertake to say—

Mr. CLYMER. I believe I am entitled to the floor. After I am through the gentleman from Kentucky may take it.

As I was about to say, the effect of the amendment would be to leave the subject quite open. I believe that this whole system of mileage is an abuse which should be remedied in some way if we can get at it. My fear is that the proposition of the gentleman from Kentucky would lead to still greater abuse. If we could equalize mileage so as to make it precisely just as between members residing near the capital and those living farther away, I should accede to the proposition gladly. sition gladly.

Mr. WHITE. I make the point on the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CLYMER. I believe I have not yielded the floor.
Mr. WHITE. I make the point on the gentleman from Pennsylvania that he is arguing the negative of a question which should have

Mr. WHITE. I make the point on the gentleman from Pennsylvania that he is arguing the negative of a question which should have the affirmative argued first.

Mr. CLYMER. And the gentleman from Kentucky is neither arguing the affirmative nor the negative, which is the way with him. If he can show this is an actual saving I would not insist on the enforcement of the rule. It is a mere presentation of the case on the individual opinion of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. WHITE. Not at all.

Mr. CLYMER. I trust the gentleman will refrain from making any remarks until I have yielded the floor. I do not know his opinions on subjects of this kind or any other are entitled to such great weight and consideration in this House as to put it at sea in regard to this expenditure. I insist on the point of order.

Mr. WHITE. The gentleman has availed himself of the opportunity to make the assertion that he did not know my opinion in regard to these matters was worthy of any considerations on this subject or any other. I am aware, Mr. Chairman, that generally the gentleman from Pennsylvania puts himself a little more before this House, that in a greater degree his sympathetic manner would cause tears to be shed more than most men, but I will prove to the Chairman of this House before I sit down, if gentlemen will only give me their attention, that my opinion is worthy the consideration of this House.

The object of my amendment Mr. Chairman is simply this: that

The object of my amendment, Mr. Chairman, is simply this: that the Members and Delegates in this House may receive equal consideration or absolute equality in regard to mileage or actual traveling expenses. The only fear the gentleman has is that there will be some dishonesty on the part of some dishonest member. I do not believe it, Mr. Chairman. When each member in this House is required to state over his own signature what his actual expenditures are from home to the capital and from the capital home again, he will be more likely to put it at a lower figure than to overstate it. It is to his interest to do it. Policy would demand this of him if he were not honest enough to do it.

What are the facts in this case? I find a statement carefully pre-what are the facts in this case? I find a statement carefully prepared by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. SMITH,] in which he shows by the accounts of members in 1866 the mileage actually received was $196,557. I turn over a leaf and find in the Forty-third Congress the actual traveling expenses of members, asked for and received, were only $23,476. Does not that show on the face of it there is to be a saving of the difference between $196,000 and 23,000 ?

My friend from California reminds me there were two sessions of Congress. Admit it. Divide by two, and there is still a difference between $98,000 and $23,000, which is worth saving.

If we double the twenty-three thousand dollars and subtract the product from $98,000, we still have over $50,000 remaining.

I have risen for this purpose, to call the attention of the House to this matter, which I am sure the country does not fully understand, and never will, for we do not understand it ourselves. $5,000 a year of salary, twenty cents a mile once each way for our mileage, and $125 a year for stationery. Why not say our salaries shall be five thousand so many hundred dollars, or $5,000, and stop there. I would be willing to see it put at $4,000, or even less. I do not believe, if we wish the country to indorse the action of the House in favor of economy, retrenchment, reform, and all that sort of doctrine which the opposition has been preaching this year, they will ever believe it unless we practice what we preach.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair, in following the rulings already made heretofore on this same point, holds that, when a process of reasoning is necessary to determine the fact an amendment reduces expenditures, the amendment is not then to be allowed under the rule. The Chair therefore systains the point of order.

Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others receiving an annual salary in the service of the House of Representatives, including compensation as disbursing officer of the contingent fund, $4,500, and for hire of horses and wagons for the use of the Clerk's office, $600; Chief Clerk, journal clerk, two reading clerks, and tally-clerk, five in all, at $2,500 each; disbursing clerk, file clerk, printing and bill clerk, and enrolling clerk, four in all, at $2,250 each; for assistant to Chief Clerk, assistant to enrolling clerk, four in all, at $2,250 each; disbursing clerk, newspaper clerk, superintendent of document-room, index clerk, and librarian, seven in all, at $1,800 each; distributing clerk, $1,600; station-cry clerk, $1,600; document-clerk, and upholster and locksmith, one chief messenger in the office of the Clerk of the House, and one messenger assisting librarian four in all, at $1,400 each; bookkeeper and four clerks, $1,600; each; one chief engineer, $1,700, and two assistant engineers, $1,200 each; and all engineers and others who are engaged in heating and ventilating the House shall be subject to the orders, and in all respects under the direction of the Doorkeeper; for five firemen, at $900 each; one laborer, at $320 each; and four laborers, at $720 each; and one telegraph operator, $600; for clerk to the Committee of Ways and Means, $1,200; clerk to the Committee on Appropriations, $2,500; messenger to the Committee of Ways and Means, $1,200; clerk to the Speaker's table, $1,800; private secretary to the Speaker, $1,800; Sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; clerk to the Committee on War Claims, $2,000; clerk to the Speaker's table, $1,800; private secretary to the Speaker, $1,800; sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; four messengers at $1,000 each; eight messengers at $1,000 each; clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; four messengers, at $1,000; four messengers, at $1,000; clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, $2,000; four messeng

Mr. ROBERTS. I offer the following amendment:

In line 152 strike out "two" and insert "four," and in line 153 strike out "$1,200" and insert "$1,440" in lieu thereof; so that it will read—
And four assistant engineers, $1,440 each.

And four assistant engineers, $1,440 each.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee to the disparity that exists in regard to the employés of this House and the Senate who take care of the ventilating and heating apparatus of the respective Houses. The Senate at this time employs four assistant engineers. The House virtually employs only one assistant engineer to regulate three costly and expensive engines. There are two provided for in the bill, it is true; but the fact of the case is that one is employed solely as the electrician, having in charge the lighting of this House and of the Dome and the various portions of this side of the building; so that, practically speaking, there is but one engineer who takes charge of the heating of this House and of all the committee-rooms. He goes on duty in the morning at seven o'clock, and in the event of a night session he is compelled to remain here from morning till night and during the night, without any one to relive him. I say that, simply regarding our own health and the safety of the members of this House, it is but just to ourselves to see that we have a sufficient number of employés to discharge the duties connected with the heating and ventilating of the House.

I desire furthermore to call the attention of the House to the fact that we pay this one individual $1,200 per annum while the four on the Senate side received $1,440 each. I say this disparity should not exist. There is a statute now in existence which declares that eight hours per day should be regarded as a day's labor; and yet the employés of this House, many of them, are compelled to go on duty early in the morning and some of them remain on duty all the night without receiving any additional compensation. I ask the House to take into consideration the fact of this disparity and the injustice that is done both to the members themselves and to the employés.

out receiving any additional compensation. I ask the House to take into consideration the fact of this disparity and the injustice that is done both to the members themselves and to the employés.

Mr. ATKINS. I will state to the gentleman from Maryland that the salary of the assistant engineers of the Senate was put at $1,200. I admit in the bill it is $1,440, but that is a clerical error.

Mr. ROBERTS. The paragraph appropriating for the Senate employés has already been passed upon by the committee, and they assented to giving these assistant engineers $1,440 each. I desire to see the one force on an exact equality with the other; especially as those on the Senate side have not to discharge anything like the same duty as those on this side. There are few who at all appreciate the amount of labor involved in connection with the heating and ventilation of this House; and it would be well for gentlemen to make an lation of this House; and it would be well for gentlemen to make an examination for themselves, which would enable them to vote intelexamination for themselves, which would enable them to vote interligently on the subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will say to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Roberts] that I presume we shall not differ about this. There is a possibility that a third engineer is required. We have got along very well hitherto; but the Senate seems to require three assistant engineers, and that furnishes some argument why there should be the same force on this side.

Mr. ROBERTS. Let me say that it was at the special request of the gentleman from Indiana that I made an inquiry into this matter. I do not know why the chairman of the Committee of Accounts should be considered to have charge of this, although it has been the custom for some years, and I am willing to surrender the duty; but at the special request of the gentleman from Indiana I have made a careful examination not only on the Senate side but on the House side.

Mr. HOLMAN. And you think three are required on this side?

Mr. ROBERTS. Yes; I say three are required on this side and a fourth one to act as electrician.

fourth one to act as electrician.

Mr. HOLMAN. It seems to me there may be reason, as the gentle-man suggests, that the number of assistant engineers on this side of the Capitol should be increased from two to three, although they have the Capitol should be increased from two to three, although they have got along without any inconvenience hitherto. But I think the gentleman should confine his motion to an increase of the number to three—the same number that is employed in the Senate. I find on examination that in the bill the salary of the assistant engineers in the Senate is as the gentleman has stated, $1,440. That, however, I believe, is a mistake; we shall ask unanimous consent to have it changed, and if there be objection an amendment will be offered in the House.

Mr. ROBERTS. I have not the slightest objection to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. And I am willing that the number on this side be increased to three and the salaries fixed at $1,200. I ask that by unanimous consent in the clause at line 61, "three assistant engineers at $1,440 each," the amount "$1,440" be struck out and "$1,200" be substituted. That would be in conformity with the views of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ROBERTS. I do not object to that. I understand the gentleman from Indiana to assent to my amendment modified in like manner.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the amendment proposed

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection, and the amendment was made.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Roberts] modify his amendment?

Mr. HOLMAN. I would suggest to the gentleman that he make the number three instead of four.

Mr. ROBERTS. I think it ought to be four, and if the gentleman from Indiana will permit me to say a word I will make this statement.

There are at this time three engines on the House side of the Capitol. Those engines cost the Government of the United States nearly a million of dollars. It is utterly impossible for those engines to be a million of dollars. It is utterly impossible for those engines to be properly cared for without an engineer for each particular engine. The duties of these officers do not cease with the adjournment of Congress; they must remain here, and perhaps the most arduous part of their duty is done during the recess of Congress. They are compelled to be here from one end of the year to the other, and the electrician has everything to do that he can do now. It should be taken into consideration that the engineers employed on the Senate side have nothing whatever to do with the Rotunda or the old Hall of the House of Representatives, and that all that comes under the charge of the House side, and therefore these additional engineers are needed in my opinion, and in the opinion of the engineers themselves.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from Maryland will be content with three. I move to amend the amendment so as to make the whole number three instead of four.

whole number three instead of four.

whole number three instead of four.

Mr. ATKINS. I will state to the chairman of the Committee of Accounts that this bill appropriates money for the year ending June 30, 1878, and it does not affect the present service at all.

Mr. ROBERTS. I am very well aware of that fact, and if I did not believe that the provision I propose ought to be in existence at this time I would not offer it for next year.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland so as to make the number three instead of four. We had a very thorough examination of this matter last year by a sub-had a very thorough examination of this matter last year by a subcommittee, and we thought then that two engineers were sufficient.

But upon the statement made by the gentleman from Maryland we are willing, I think, to vote for three.

Mr. ROBERTS. I accept the modification of my amendment suggested by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I desire to inquire whether that amendment makes any increase of salary?

Mr. HOLMAN. It fixes the salaries of these officers at $1,200 each.
The amendment of Mr. Roberts, as modified, was agreed to.
Mr. BLOUNT. In line 191 I move to strike out the words "$400" and insert "$200;" so that it will read:

Three clerks in the folding-room, one at $1,600, and two at $1,200 each.

That is the amount fixed by the law of last session. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations understands that this is a clerical error. Certainly the question as to the increase of these salaries was never discussed in the committee, and until I discovered it in the bill as printed and reported from the committee my attention was not called to it. It is an increase of the salaries of each of these employés of $200 a year, and there was no reason made known to the committee why such increase should take place. So far as I can learn from the gentlemen of the committee around me, they think the amendment a proper one.

Mr. CLYMER It was an error

Mr. CLYMER. It was an error.
Mr. BLOUNT. My friend from Pennsylvania reminds me that it was an error, and that there was no purpose to increase the salaries established last year.
The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I offer the following amendment to come in after line 192. It is the same provision in regard to the folding of documents that was put in the clause providing for the Senate:

To enable documents in the folding-room to be properly stamped on the outside of the envelope with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

That provision has already been put in the provision for the Senate and I hope gentlemen will not object to our making the same provision for the House.

Mr. ATKINS. I did not say anything when the gentleman from Massachusetts offered his amendment to the provision for the Senate, but I think the gentleman will find that in detail the amendment but I think the gentleman will find that in detail the amendment would be impracticable.

Mr. HOAR. If it should prove so, the plan can be abandoned.

Mr. ATKINS. To execute the plan you would have to have over three hundred stamps.

Mr. HOAR. This matter seems to be very much misunderstood. The whole cost of the thing is for a little hand-stamp into which type can be set, and when the speech is folded they will put on it with the hand-stamp the name of the speaker.

Mr. ATKINS. O. then I have no objection.

Mr. ATKINS. O, then I have no objection.
The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. STONE. I move to strike out in lines 196, 197, and 198 the

Mr. STONE. I move to strike out in lines 196, 197, and 198 the words "eight messengers, at $1,200; ten messengers, at $1,000," and insert in lieu thereof eighteen messengers, at $1,500 each.

By reference to the appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1876, I find that there were eight messengers employed at $1,800 and ten at $1,440, aggregating $28,400.

I was a member of that Congress and I did not think we were better served by the messengers then than we had been in the preceding Congress. I find in the bill for the year ending June 30, 1877, that the same number were employed, eight at $1,200 and ten at $1,000, making an aggregate of $19,600, or a reduction as compared with the year ending June 30, 1876, of $9,200.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I propose by this amendment to have eighteen messengers at salaries of $1,500 a year, which will aggregate $27,000, and there will thus be a saving of $1,800 from the amount appropriated for the year ending June 30, 1876.

I am one of those who believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire. Having been a laborer all my life, I appreciate the services of the gentlemen who act as messengers to this House. For one I say that the simple pittance we are now giving these messengers will not the simple pittance we are now giving these messengers will not even pay their expenses to and from their homes to this capital, much less clothe them respectably and provide them subsistence during their term here. I therefore hope that gentlemen on this floor will vote for my amendment providing for eighteen messengers at $1,500 a year each.

The question was taken upon the amendment; and there were—

ayes 9, noes 34.

Before the result of the vote was announced,
Mr. STONE said: No quorum has voted; I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. STONE and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed. The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there vere 3 in the affirmative.

Before the negative vote was counted, Mr. STONE said: I will withdraw the call for a further count, as gentlemen do not seem to understand the amendment.

Mr. STONE said: I will withdraw the call for a further count, as gentlemen do not seem to understand the amendment. So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. FRANKLIN. I move to amend the paragraph so as to make the salary of the paying teller for the Sergeant-at-Arms $2,100 instead of $2,000 as proposed by this bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, these salaries were fixed at the last session.

Mr. FRANKLIN. I have only a word to offer in favor of this amendment. The Committee on Appropriations I see have allowed the clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms a salary of $2,100. I do not think that salary is too high; in fact, if anything, it is too low. But taking it for granted that the committee have placed it at the proper sum, $2,100, I am at a loss to know why the salary of the paying teller should be fixed at $2,000 when his duties are equally onerous, and equally as much ability and certainly as much integrity is required of the paying teller as of the clerk.

I think the chief clerk and the paying teller should have $2,500 each. I cannot see why any discrimination in this respect should be made by the Committee. Gentlemen may say that it is in accordance with the law of last year; that does not make it right. These men are employed from early morning until late in the evening. It requires men of integrity, not only of integrity but of ability, to fill these places. I do not think the salary of the paying teller should be put below that of the clerk, especially when the salary of the clerk is placed at a very low figure.

/ Mr. ATKINS. This is simply adjusting salaries to labor; that is all. 1 am not very familiar with the operations of banks, but I understand that in the banks in our large cities tellers get from $1,500 to $2,000 a year, while the clerks of the banks get from $2,000 to $3,000 a year, while the cierks of the banks got like $3,000 a year.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. RIDDLE. I move to amend the pending paragraph in line 198, before the words "four laborers under the superintendent of the folding-room," by inserting the words "and one special messenger to perform the duties of stamping, cutting, and preparing paper for the folders in the folding-room, at $1,000."

I desire to call the attention of the Committee on Appropriations to the fact that the employment of this messenger has been recom-

I desire to call the attention of the Committee on Appropriations to the fact that the employment of this messenger has been recommended by the proper officers of the House under whom he would be a subordinate. I desire also to call the attention of the committee to the fact that the employment of this special messenger will be recommended, is recommended now, by the Committee of Accounts of this House. A resolution to this effect was introduced into the House sometime ago, and referred to the Committee of Accounts, and that committee I understand is ready to report that the services of this officer are necessary for the proper conducting of the business in the folding-room. I would be very glad to have the Committee on Appropriations accept this amendment and not offer any opposition to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust this amendment will not be pressed. The Committee on Appropriations have carefully inquired into the force necessary for the folding-room and are satisfied that the force now employed there is sufficient. This is the 2d of February, and gentlemen must see that if we go back over the action of the last session of this Congress and undertake to do everything over again, this bill will read be present. this bill will never be passed. I trust that the force now employed, which is sufficient, and with which we are getting along very well, will be left as it is. There is an everlasting tendency to create new employments and to increase salaries; that is well known to us all. We should let the matter rest when it has been settled on a reasonable heads. able basis.

able basis.

Mr. FORT. I certainly have no disposition to increase the force employed about this House; I take it that all gentlemen understand that. Nor do I have any disposition to increase the expenditures of this House. Yet, as an humble member of the House, I have endeavored to look into these matters somewhat, and I am thoroughly convinced that the amendment now proposed is a proper one.

More than that. If I had offered it myself I would have made the salary $1,200 a year instead of $1,000. If the amendment adopted by the House on the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] was right, then this amendment is eminently proper.

Mr. RIDDLE. I will modify my amendment by adding to it these words, "and that he also stamp speeches and documents, and that the $500 appropriated for that purpose shall be applied to the payment of his salary pro tanto."

of his salary pro tanto."

Mr. FORT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment as now proposed is,

Mr. FORT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment as now proposed is, in my judgment, better than it was in its original form. It is clear to me that this officer ought to be provided for by law. It is necessary that these documents should be stamped; it is necessary to have the paper prepared; for, as the House is aware, the folding is now done by contract, the folders receiving so much per thousand. They are not expected to cut and prepare their paper; they claim that this is an extra job, which ought to be attended to by some other person. I take it that they are right in this, because the amount which they earn in folding by the piece is but a very small compensation.

Mr. HOLMAN. We already have four persons to do this work.

Mr. FORT. The honorable gentleman from Indiana is mistaken.

Mr. FORT. Twelve or fifteen persons have been engaged off and on in folding. At times perhaps four folders could do the work; but if there are but four folders I want the gentleman from Indiana to tell the House why he thinks it necessary to have a gentleman from his district employed at a large salary to superintend those four men. The gentleman is mistaken; that is all there is about it. Often a large number of folders are engaged; and this person ought to be provided to prepare the paper and do the stamping for the folders, because otherwise the duty will not, in my judgment, be properly performed. It is in the interest of economy to make provision for a certain person who shall do this work so that it shall not fall upon the folders who are engaged upon piece-work.

Mr. GOODIN. Which is often done very hadly.

son who shall do this work so that it shall not fall upon the folders who are engaged upon piece-work.

Mr. GOODIN. Which is often done very badly.

Mr. FORT. I am informed that the work is sometimes done badly. To avoid this we must have some system, and in doing so we must incur some expense. In my judgment the better and cheaper way is to have some man appointed to do this work who will be responsible for it, because now it is not properly done.

It seems to me that this amendment ought to be adopted—perhaps not in the exact words in which it is offered, because it ought to have been adopted before the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts. However, that appropriation is included in this, and I certainly hope that the House will adopt the amendment.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I ask the Clerk to read a statement on this subject from the Doorkeeper, showing that he considers this assistance necessary

The Clerk read as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Washington, D. C.

To the Committee of Accounts:

I would respectfully represent to your committee that a special messenger or employé is necessary in the folding-room to cut and prepare and stamp paper for the folders; and I recommend the permanent employment of such a messenger, as I regard such a position indispensable to the proper conduct of the business in that

R. D. BROWN, Foreman House F. R.

John H. Patterson, Doorkeeper.

I state that a person has always been employed at cutting and stamping paper, and that the one so employed before we came in received $1,314 per annum.

R. D. BROWN.

Mr. FORT. That is the very position provided for by this amendment, and is in accordance with what has always been done. Now that the folding is done by the piece, it is very necessary that this assistance should be provided.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment will not be adopted. My friend from North Carolina has just had read a communication from the Doorkeeper to enlighten this House in regard to its employes. This is not the first effort of the kind that has come before the Committee on Appropriations. During the last session there was not a Department or bureau of this Government from which documents of this kind did not flood in upon the committee. Employés documents of this kind did not flood in upon the committee. Employés who expected to be turned out of employment by these reductions were here with their friends; and we were told that we were going to ruin the public service. We did make large reductions in the number and pay of employés, but we have never heard anything since of the ruin which was predicted as the result. On the contrary I have heard gentlemen of both parties speak of it as a matter of congratulation that these reductions in the Departments had been made. As we have rejected appeals of this kind when they came from the Departments, I hope we shall treat them in the same manner when they come from our friends, unless there is some good reason to the contrary. trary

I have great respect for the Committee of Accounts; but I remem-I have great respect for the Committee of Accounts; but I remember quite well how carefully during the last session of Congress the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Wells] and the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. Foster,] acting in conjunction with the present Speaker of the House, went into a detailed examination of the duties of the various employés of the House and made report thereon. We remember the struggle which was then had on the several appropriation bills with the Senate. After careful labor, upon a full examination during a long session of Congress, with the amplest opportunity for investigation, we reached a conclusion which was satisfactory.

Now there is hardly any proposition for increase of service which cannot be accompanied by some plausible statement; but I do hope that the progress of this bill is not to be delayed in this manner. I hope we shall be content to accept the work of the last session, done in deliberation, in preference to anything which may be attempted at hope we shall be content to accept the work of the last session, done in deliberation, in preference to anything which may be attempted at this short session and which must be done in haste.

Mr. ROBERTS. I move to amend by striking out the last word. While I am not opposed to any proper economy, I state frankly what is within my knowledge, that the number of employés in the House at the present time is greatly below what a proper organization of the business of the House requires. As chairman of the Committee of Accounts, I shall be compelled to make application for an increase of force under the Doorkeeper, in order to meet the emergency now. of force under the Doorkeeper, in order to meet the emergency now existing.

It is a notorious fact that the employés of this House who are upon the messengers' roll have in many cases been placed in other locations than they should have been. Indeed laborers at $720 a year have been assigned as messengers. Even pages upon the floor of the House have been compelled to go to the doors and act as doorkeepers. Now while true economy is one thing, parsimony is quite another, and in my judgment the proper policy on the part of the House is to recognize the wants and needs of the House and to supply them in a way conformable to what is right and just.

Mr. FORT rose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope by unanimous consent after the gentleman from Illinois has concluded what he has to say all further debate on this paragraph cease; otherwise I shall move the committee rise for that purpose.

Mr. FORT. I will not occupy the floor but a moment.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose and a message was received from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, which announced the passage of the following bills; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

An act (S. No. 805) relating to indemnity school selections in the State of Calfornia;

An act (S. No. 912) for the relief of Thomas II. Halsey, paymaster United State Army; An act (S. No. 1109) relating to public accounts and claims; and An act (S. No. 1147) for the punishment of persons making or havin possession dies, molds, &c., for manufacturing counterfeit coin.

THE LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. FORT. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Blount] seem to have the idea there is a disposition to increase the force of the House. Now the Committee on Appropriations reduced that force at the last session to a very great extent. Much of what was done no doubt was proper, but allow me to remind the gentlemen of that committee that in doing so they cut down the Doorkeeper's force so that for the Committee of Accounts at the present session there was no messenger to attend its door. That committee has had the service of a messenger in attending to their door ever since the first day of this session, when there was no law for his employment and he had to serve and get his pay by piecemeal out of the contingent fund. I would like to know whether that is not a true statement.

Mr. ROBERTS. Not the Committee of Accounts, but the Committee on Appropriations have had the use of a messenger at their door when there was no law providing for such officer, and therefore none when there was no law provided for his pay.

Mr. FORT. I stand corrected by the chairman of the Committee of Accounts, and I am obliged to him. What I meant to say was that the Committee on Appropriations so cut down the Doorkeeper's force at the last session of Congress that that committee had nobody to attend to the door of the committee-room, and it had to employ for that purpose an irregular messenger who has served there up to this years day without any appropriation therefor. The Committee for that purpose an irregular messenger who has served there up to this very day without any appropriation therefor. The Committee of Accounts has been called upon to pay that man who attended the door of the Committee on Appropriations out of the contingent fund, and I submit to this House whether there is any economy in this House pursuing any such policy as that.

Mr. FRANKLIN. Where is the necessity of having any one to attend the door of the committee-room?

Mr. FORT. They can answer that question for themselves.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is not by our request.

Mr. RANDALL. We told these officers repeatedly we did not need any spen man at the deep of the Committee on Appropriations at the any such man at the door of the Committee on Appropriations at the

Mr. HOLMAN. The committee never dreamed of asking for such an officer

Mr. FORT. I am informed the messenger has served there all the

Mr. FRANKLIN. You are a member of the Committee on Territories, and I ask you whether that committee ever had any one to attend its door at the last session?

Mr. FORT. No, sir; not to my knowledge. Mr. FRANKLIN. Do we need any?

Mr. FRANKLIN. Do we need any f
Mr. FORT. I think not. The Committee on Appropriations, however, are in session every day, and they have had the services of a man to attend the door without any appropriation by law for his pay.

Mr. RANDALL. He is assigned there by the Doorkeeper, and so far as my knowledge extends, during the last session we never wanted him. He is not needed there now, and never has been. Mr. ROBERTS. We understand he is not assigned by the Door-keeper. The Doorkeeper expressly said he did not need his services, and yet he is retained by the Committee on Appropriations. One of the members of that committee presented and had referred to the Committee of Accounts a resolution which is pending at this time. The party himself says it is done with the assent and approbation of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ATKINS. I as one of the members of the Committee on Appropriations never heard anything of it in my life—never.

Mr. RANDALL. The idea that the Committee on Appropriations need a man on the outside of the door is altogether a mistake, for they can keep people out by merely dropping the latch, whenever they can keep people out by merely dropping the latch, whenever they want to.

Mr. HOLMAN. The committee gave no intimation of a desire to have any such messenger employed at the door of the committee-room. Very recently it was discovered that a man was employed there. But we took it for granted that it was simply an assignment by the Doorkeeper of one of his employés.

Mr. ROBERTS. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I renew it. I wish to state to the House the number of messengers employed. The number of messengers now employed by this House is thirty-two, the same number as has been employed for the last ten years. The bill before the House last session did not decrease that number, nor does this. It has been customary that these messengers should act as doorkeepers of the respective committee-rooms during the sessions of those committees, and the doorkeeper assigned last week to the Committee on Appropriations was one of the regular messengers. We have also twenty-four or twenty-five laborers on the pay-roll who are provided for by appropriations. The difficulty arises that prior to the passage of the last legislative bill there had been employed under the Doorkeeper in the folding-room a number ranging from seventy-five to one hundred employés, many of whom had never been in that room from the time they were placed on the pay-roll. Under the present law the folding-room is conducted on a different system. Men are paid by the piece. Consequently a difficulty has arisen on the part of members because their friends have been dismissed and have not been employed as heretofore in that department. heretofore in that department.

Now, I wish to state further that the pay-roll in the folding-room for folding books now ranges from $300 to $500 a month; while prior to the inauguration of the present system it ranged over $4,000 a month. For the same duties and the same amount of work performed pay now from $300 to $500 a month what used to cost us from $4,000 to $4,500 a month.

We have employeesufficient, I believe, Mr. Chairman, to discharge the duties around this Capitol without any increase. As regards the amendment which has been offered to employ an extra man to do the stamping and to cut the paper, I think the foreman of the folding-room can do all that is necessary to assist the folders in their duties. It is very easy to increase the numbers of employés in this House. But we have found it very difficult, as we did last session, to go through the different departments of this House and put them on a proper footing. We had a great deal of difficulty in performing that duty, and I am sorry the Senate did not concur with the House when the conference committee made a change in the manner of conducting our business in regard to employés.

regard to employes.

Mr. FORT. I would ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that these folders, the men who were on the folders' roll, were engaged on other duties, such as those of messengers and doorkeepers, and that when the folders' roll was cut off these men were necessarily cut off? The the folders' roll was cut off these men were necessarily cut off? The folders' roll was made to bear the names of many persons engaged in other duties, and the folding per se never did cost such a sum of money as has been named by the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. That may be so. But we have provided a sufficient number of messengers to keep the doors also. As regards the folding-room, if the gentleman will take the trouble to make an examination he will find that there were men on the payroll of the folding-room who had never been in it, men who had been not there because they asked for employment. put there because they asked for employment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that by unanimous consent debate on this paragraph be closed.

Mr. RIDDLE. I ask the indulgence of my friend from Indiana to make a remark or two.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana, that debate on this paragraph be now closed?

Objection was made.

Mr. RIDDLE. I desire only a moment or two. I have not been in the habit of consuming the time of the House, and I do not propose to do so now; but I do propose to call the attention of the House to the fact that this messenger is declared to be necessary by the Committee of Accounts, and I submit the question, which one of those committees is the better judge of the necessity of the employment of this officer, the Committee on Appropriations, on whom devolves such immense and multitudinous labor, or the Committee of Accounts, which has the supervision of matters of this kind? It seems to me the Committee of Accounts should know whether his services are necessary or not.

essary or not.

I have been in favor of economy all the time. I give the Committee on Appropriations credit for all they have done in that direction. But I do not think that we antagonize true economy in employing those officers who are declared to be necessary by the proper committees of the House. I stated in my own district the other day, and I repeat it now, that the Committee on Appropriations is entitled to the thanks of the country for reducing the expenditures of the Government $30,000,000 and that they would do a good work if they could go on and make the reduction $50,000,000. I voted to-day for reducing my own salary and will do so again whenever I have the opportunity. my own salary and will do so again whenever I have the opportunity But when the recommendation comes before us for the employment of an officer whose employment is declared to be absolutely necessary of an officer whose employment is declared to be absolutely necessary for conducting a certain department in this Capitol, I shall always vote for it. And it must be remembered that this appropriation, under the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. Hoar,] involves additional labor. That labor is imposed on this officer. Five hundred dollars has already been appropriated, and by the terms of this amendment another $500 will be appropriated, which will give him $1,000 a year. will give him $1,000 a year.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that by unanimous consent debate be closed upon this paragraph.

Mr. DURHAM. I want to introduce some amendments and to make an inquiry or two as to other matters embraced in this paragraph. So far as this amendment is concerned I have no objection to closing debate.

The CHAIRMAN. No objection being made, the debate is closed upon the pending paragraph.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I did not understand the proposition; I want to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will have that opportunity.

The question was put on Mr. RIDDLE's amendment; and there were ayes 20, noes not counted.

ayes 20, noes not counted.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I offer an amendment to come in after line 196.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is closed on-this paragraph.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. But I have a right to offer amendments to it. If I had understood the proposition to close debate I should have objected, for I wanted to add a few interesting remarks to the amendment which I now offer, which is to strike out in line 196 after the word "dollars" down to line 197 after the word "dollars" lars," as follows: "eight messengers at $1,200," and insert, "eighteen messengers at $1,200 each."

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division there were yeas 7, ayes not counted.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. DURHAM. I did not understand that by unanimous consent all debate was closed upon this paragraph, but simply upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. EDEN. I object to debate. All debate is closed.

Mr. DURHAM. I think debate was only closed on the pending amendment to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate was closed upon the entire paragraph.

Mr. DURHAM. But I objected to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not understand the gentleman as objecting. Mr. DURHAM. I move then to amend the paragraph by striking out in lines 164, 165, and 166 the words "messenger to Committee on Appropriations, $1,200."

Mr. FORT. That is all right; they said they did not want him.

Mr. DURHAM. I want to test the sincerity of the committee in the reduction of expenses.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. Before the vote is put upon that amendment I desire to say a word.

Mr. DURHAM. If there is to be any debate, I should like myself to have five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. No debate is in order. The question was put and the Chair announced that the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. Is there no chance to be heard at all?
The messenger referred to in the bill—
Mr. DURHAM. I object to debate. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations himself moved to close the debate, and the Chair has declared the amendment carried, and we have passed to other busines

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to hear what the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Wells] wants to say.

Mr. Wells, of Missouri. I want a division upon the adoption of the amendment

Mr. GOODIN. The gentleman was on his feet calling for a division when the Chair announced the result of the vote.

Mr. BOONE. I understand that there is no debate allowed on this paragraph; and I make the further point of order that there is so much confusion in the Hall that it is impossible for me to understand what is going on.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I endeavored to get the attention of the Chair to get a division on the question.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order.

Mr. FORT. The members of the Committee on Appropriations closed the debate themselves.

Mr. ATKINS. But I ask for a division upon the adoption of the

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I was endeavoring to obtain the attention of the Chair when he put the vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order.

Mr. ATKINS. Nobody wants to debate, but we want a division

Mr. ATAINS. Nobely wants to debate, but we want a division upon the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. FRANKLIN. It is too late.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I call the attention of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. DURHAM] to the fact that he is mistaken—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will again put the question to the

The question was put; and on a division there were-ayes 34, noes

Mr. DURHAM. No quorum has voted; and I call for tellers, and I ask that the amendment be again read.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

Mr. CLYMER. This man is really the assistant clerk of the com-

Mr. DURHAM. Then why did not you say so in the bill ?
Tellers were ordered; and Mr. DURHAM and Mr. ATKINS were appointed.

Mr. GOODIN. I ask unanimous consent that permission be given Mr. DURHAM. I have no objection to that.
Mr. HOLMAN. It cannot be done.
Mr. DURHAM. I understand that there is some misapprehension about this matter, and if the gentleman be allowed to explain the House will understand it.

The CHAIRMAN. No explanation is in order.

Mr. RUSK. Let them call him assistant clerk and we will let it go.

Mr. HOLMAN, O, we do not want to call him that.

Mr. RUSK. Why not?

Mr. HOLMAN. He performs the duty of both offices.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 16, noes 56.

Mr. DURHAM. I am satisfied that there is not a quorum here, but I will not insist upon a further count so as to retard the public busi-

No so the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. DURHAM. I have another amendment to offer. I move to amend by striking out of lines 161, 162, and 163 the words "messenger to the Committee of Ways and Means, $1,200." I move to

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. It requires unanimous consent in Committee of the Whole to go back in the consideration of a bill.

Mr. DURHAM. I am not going back; I am moving an amendment to the paragraph now pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The entire paragraph is open to amendment, but we delect in order.

but no debate is in order.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I hope the amendment will not be adopted. This messenger is simply an assistant clerk of our com-

Mr. FORT. I understand he gets pay for another service.

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division there were—ayes 18, noes 46.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not adopted. The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

For twenty-eight pages, while actually employed, (including three riding-pages,) at $2.50 per day, and for hire of horses, $500, $14.700.

Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri. I move to amend by inserting after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

That there be and is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Hon. John Y. Brown the sum necessary to pay him the pay and mileage of a member of the Fortieth Congress, less the sum of $2,500 heretofore paid him.

Mr. FOSTER. That is right.
Mr. FRYE. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Philips] if this $2,500 was paid to Mr. Brown as his expenses in an election contest.

Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri. It was.

Mr. FRYE. Then I do not see the slightest propriety in excepting Mr. FRYE. Then I do not see the slightest propriety in excepting the payment of $2,500. If the amount proposed to be appropriated is due to the gentleman from Kentucky the whole amount is due, and clearly the expenses to which he was subjected in that contest should not be excepted. I therefore move to amend the amendment by striking out the words "less the sum of $2,500 heretofore paid him." Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri. I accept the amendment. The amendment, as modified, was then agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

For compensation of the Librarian, $4,000; and for fifteen assistant librarians, two at $2,200 each, one at $2,000, four at $1,600 each, two at 1,400 each, two at $1.200 each, two at $1,200 each, one at $1,000, and one at $900 per annum; in all, $26,300.

two at $1,200 each, one at $1,000, and one at $900 per annum; in all, $26,300.

Mr. MONROE. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$2,200," and inserting "$2,250" as the salary of the first two assistant librarians. I desire to state to the committee a few facts in regard to the two officers whose salaries it is proposed by this bill to fix at a less rate than they have ever been heretofore.

These two officers, as is well known, had $2,500 each until the appropriation bill of last year was passed. That bill fixed their salaries at $2,250 each; $50 more than the present bill does.

I should perhaps have said nothing in regard to this matter—as there has been a kind of understanding that we would take the legislation of last year as the basis of the legislation of this year upon the subject of salaries—if the Committee on Appropriations had not still further reduced the salaries of these officers by this bill.

They are the most important assistants in the Congressional Library, being those upon whom Mr. Spofford principally relies in his

They are the most important assistants in the Congressional Library, being those upon whom Mr. Spofford principally relies in his great work. The first of them, Mr. Hoffman, has charge, as the gentlemen are aware, of the law library, to which many of us are often so glad to resort. The labor that he has to perform is very important, I know; and I think any person will see by talking with these gentlemen and learning their circumstances, the expense to which they are put necessarily for the support of their families, the responsibilities of their position, and the peculiar character of the work which they have to do, that the sum proposed by this bill is too low, and that it ought at least to be as high as it was fixed last year. Indeed, it never ought to have been reduced below $2,500.

It may seem to be a small matter to members to add but $50 a year to this salary; but I can assure gentlemen that in the condition in to this salary; but I can assure gentlemen that in the condition in which these gentlemen are $50 more is a matter of some consequence. I would be glad to put the salaries of these two officers back to $2,500 a year, what it used to be. But I will not move to do more than put them back to what they were fixed in the appropriation bill of last year.

The other assistant, Mr. Solyom, has charge of what is called the catalogue department. I am assured by a gentleman who has every means of knowing, that this officer has a very fair knowledge of at least nine different languages. He is the only man in that department who understands Sanscrit. Being at the head of the catalogue department, it is his business to assign to each book coming into the Library its locality. To the efficiency and ability which he exhibits we are largely indebted for being able to find at any moment any book we may wish. I sincerely hope that the chairman of the Combook we may wish. I sincerely hope that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will at least allow the salary to be restored to what it was last year. The difference is but slight.

Mr. ROBERTS. As an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. MONROE,] I move to insert, in lieu of the paragraph just read, the entire paragraph contained in the law of the last session under the head of "Library of Congress." This goes a step further than is indicated by the gentleman from Ohio. The only objection I have to his amendment is that it does not go far only objection I have to his amendment is that it does not go far enough. The effect of this amendment will be to insert after the words "hundred" in line 265, the words "and forty," and to insert after the word "hundred," in line 268, the words "and sixty."

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman cannot submit more than one amendment at the same time.

Mr. ROBERTS. I have offered but one amendment, which is to insert the entire paragraph of the law of last session.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio moved an amendment to which the gentleman from Maryland moves another amendment.

ment, to which the gentleman from Maryland moves another amendment, which being only in the second degree is in order.

Mr. ROBERTS. I connection with this amendment and as an illustration of the manner in which the law of last session operated with respect to many of these assistant librarians, I wish to say that Mr. Hoffman, to whom the gentleman from Ohio just made allusion, has stated to me that those in charge of the Law Library were compelled to supply themselves with stationery; and when called upon to facilitate members of the House in working up cases were compelled to buy the paper, ink, and pens with which this was accomplished. I suggest that this is not exactly a proper thing; and I sincerely trust that the substitute I have submitted will be accepted since it simply carries out the expressed wish of the House as contained in the law passed at the last session.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, the salaries of a large class of a employés in this House and in the Departments are diminished by employes in this House and in the Departments are diministed by this bill. Indeed, sir, the movement for reform in this Government will stop far short of the expectations of the country if it does not go beyond the legislation of last session. The employés of the House and the Senate and other employés about the Capitol, such as those and the Senate and other employes about the Capitol, such as those connected with the library, are associated with us so that we encounter them every day; but I submit to the fair-minded gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Monroe,] and the equally just gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Roberts] that nothing is so unfair as a system of discrimination in favor of this particular class of employés. We should not allow our feelings of personal friendship to operate in favor of these continuous areas a system of these continuous areas and as while we represent the selection of the gentlemen around us, while we remorselessly reduce the salaries of officers deserving just as much but who are not here with us.

The reduction here proposed is very slight. These gentlemen no doubt perform their duties just as well as any other employes of the Government; but their services are no more valuable than those of others. They are admirable gentlemen, all of them, and do their duties well; but if personal considerations of friendship are to swerve our judgment in matters of this kind it seems to me we shall become eminently chargeable with partiality in our legislation. I would be very glad to put these salaries higher if it could be done consistently with the condition of the country and the standard of compensation prevailing throughout unofficial branches of business; but these salaries are not reduced any more than others.

Let me get the ear of the gentleman from Ohio for a moment.

Does he know that according to the reports from the Treasury Department our public debt is increasing at the rate of over two million and a half dollars per month. Had it not been for what gentlemen regard as the system of remorseless economy adopted in the last Congress, the addition to the public debt at this time would be simply frightful. The increase has been $2,000,000 for the last month, four and a half million dollars for the previous month, and half a four and a half million dollars for the previous month, and half a million dollars for the month before. Yet it is proposed to keep salaries at the high standard we reached during the war and during a period of inflated currency. But for the efforts at retrenchment made during the last session of Congress, the public debt during the last month would have been increased more than $4,000,000.

All over this country skilled laborers in the various departments of industry are begging for employment at $1.50 a day, yet such salaries as $2,000 are regarded as niggardly on the part of this Government. On the ground of fairness to those who pay the taxes, on the ment. On the ground of fairness to those who pay the taxes, on the score of economy and purity in the Government, I insist that every one of these official salaries shall steadily be reduced until it has reached a compensation corresponding with that paid in the private employments of life for similar service. My friend will admit that all these salaries are now above that standard.

We do not touch the salary of the Librarian, Mr. Spofford. We talked about it last session, but the general sentiment being against it, we let it stand. The other reductions made this session are moderate and reasonable, corresponding to those made in other places under the Government. I trust my friend will not press his amendment.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have generally acted with the gentleman from Indiana in his reduction in the expendi-tures of the Government. I sustained him at the last session in making very general and in some respects very radical reductions in expenditures about this Capitol. I think, however, he should discriminate more than he seems disposed to do in respect to the class of employés to whom these reductions should be applied. The clerks in the Congressional Library are, so to speak, skilled artisans in a par-ticular branch requiring great study and experience. The persons to whom my friend refers as wishing to be employed at a dollar and a half a day wish to be employed in a class of employment the duties of which can be discharged by any one who walks the streets but the ability to discharge these special and important duties, requiring years of practice and great study, intelligence, and the acquisition of literary knowledge, I submit with all respect to my friend cannot be acquired at once or without a great deal of labor. And when we have in the employment of the Government persons who are specialists in a particular branch, important in its character, to which all have to look for information to enable us to legislate intelligently, I submit the reduction made last year in their pay should be considered as sufficient even at this time.

The bill now reported by the committee makes a further reduction in the compensation of these clerks. I think therefore in that view the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland is certainly reason-able and fair, and while I am for sustaining every possible economy, I do think there are some things in reference to which it is false economy to make any further curtailment. I am in favor, therefore, of the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland and hope it will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the amendment is exhausted. Mr. MONROE. I will speak to the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on that amendment is exhausted.

Mr. MONROE. I move then to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a word or two in reply to my friend from Indiana. I do not at all antagonize, and was not intending to do so, the general system which he is endeavoring to carry on for the relief of the tax-payers of the country. I sympathize with many of his efforts and often vote with him; but I think it is making too much of this simple matter to regard it as a hostile movement directed against honest attempts at retrenchment and economy, directed against the interests of the tax-payers of this great country. Why, sir, the tax-payers, in my humble judgment, have not the slightest objection to having these skilled gentlemen in the Congressional Library receive $2,250 a year instead of $2,200 a year.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is not all.
Mr. MONROE. Why, sir, the gentleman from Indiana speaks as if I were engaged in the work of increasing the national debt. I do not understand the national debt to be increasing. I understand it to be on the average steadily decreasing; but, whatever may be the fact in regard to that, I do not think it is going to help us pay the national debt to economize on our own means of intelligence on this floor. It debt to economize on our own means of intelligence on this floor. It is not going to help this House to legislate for the country in any direction for members to go into that Library and not be able to find at once an important book which they need in the intelligent discharge of their duties on this floor. It is not going to help pay the national debt to put out our own eyes, to darken our own souls, to shut off from inquiring minds here the means of information in regard to questions of the greatest importance which come before the House. No, sir; it is good economy to have the means of informa-tion. It is good economy to know where to find at once the books we need and the information we require to perform the service to the country we undertake here.

Now, sir, these two men are not personal friends of mine. Now, sir, these two men are not personal irreless of finite. I have no personal interest in them in the ordinary sense. I simply have an interest in the rare and peculiar and skillful and most valuable work that they perform. That is the thing in which I have an interest. And it seems necessary, Mr. Chairman, if we would make that Library available, if we would make it useful to us, that we should not put out these two eyes of that great institution. These are the two most important helpers that Mr. Spofford has. Their work is all under his supervision. They are responsible to him. But they are of the greatest importance to him.

Sir, there is no difference between the gentleman from Indiana and myself but this: He would agree with me that we need those officers, that we need the rare, peculiar sort of skill and of knowledge which they possess. And he will agree with me, also, that they should be decently paid; that they ought to have enough to keep their families from lacking bread while they are engaged in this important service for us. The only point in dispute is, what is enough for this? And I submit that $2,250 is not too much. Twenty-five hundred dollars I know is not too much; but I name $2,250 because that is the amount of last year's bill, which I understood the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Singleton] to say would be taken as the basis for operations

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that $2,200 is a very handsome salary. The point of difference between the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MONROE] and myself is this: My friend inadvertently and unintentionally yields to the force of his associating largely with that peculiarly favored class of persons who are classed among the literary men of the time, while I conceive that my sympathies are more with the laboring masses of the people, and I will not believe and I cannot believe that it is more important for this Government—and I certainly differ from my friend from New York on that point, that it is more differ from my friend from New York on that point—that it is more important to this Government to give handsome salaries to men enterprise that gaged in literary pursuits than to men of skill in the industries that add to our wealth. I know the gentleman from Maryland can go to gaged in literary pursuits than to men of skill in the industries that add to our wealth. I know the gentleman from Maryland can go to his own city of Baltimore and find there men of as high attainments as any in this Capitol, skillful men who are mechanics; and yet if these men get $500 or $600 a year by hard labor, such as men of intellectual pursuits are never called upon to perform, they regard themselves as doing well, and their wives and children are by these meager means kept furnished with the necessities of life, while here we talk about $2,200 a year as being an insufficient salary. I had before me only a moment ago a newspaper, one of the leading and most influential papers connected with industry, drawing attention to the fact that while a gentleman of elegant leisure and an office-seeker was drawing up a letter asking a salary of $2,000 a year, a laboring-man, with his wife and children at his side, with hammer and ax on the carpet, was wringing his hands and appealing for work at $2 a day. We talk about $2,000 a year as being an insufficient salary because it is a literary man who is to receive it, not a man learned in that learning which adds to the national wealth of the country.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York, rose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish only to add that the increase proposed by Mr. HOLMAN. I wish only to add that the increase proposed by the gentleman from Maryland in these salaries amounts to about $3,000 a year.

Mr. ROBERTS. You are mistaken.

Mr. MONROE. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I move that the committee rise.

Mr. ROBERTS. If the gentleman from New York will withhold that retire for a more part of the salaries for a way.

that motion for a moment or two I desire to say a word.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I will withdraw the motion if the committee want to vote on the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let us hear the gentleman from Maryland and then take a vote.

Mr. ROBERTS. I only desire to say that I do not wish it to be understood that the gentleman from Indiana is the only one here to express an interest in the masses of the people of this country. I am just as much interested in them as he is; and they are interested in this matter equally with everybody else. They are interested in seeing that justice is done.

The gentleman from Indiana made a remark which seemed to indicate that I had some personal interest in this matter.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no; I disclaim that entirely.

Mr. ROBERTS. I desire to say I have no interest in any of these librarians beyond the fact of my meeting them in the respective libraries. It is a sense of justice alone that has actuated me in offering this amount. ing this amendment, and I trust sincerely that it will be favorably acted upon by the committee.

Mr. FOSTER. I understood my friend from Indiana [Mr. Holman] to say that the public debt was increased in January.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Union, a newspaper of this city, puts down the increase at something over $2,000,000.

Mr. FOSTER. It is a decrease of $2,000,000.

Mr. KELLEY. It is a decrease for the month of $2,000,000 and a

Mr. KELLEY. It is a decrease for the month of $2,000,000 and a decrease on the year so far of $8,000,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. The statement I referred to is that there was an increase of the debt during the past month of $2,069,000.

Mr. FOSTER. The gentleman is wrong about that. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, whose services I appreciate and whose withdrawal from the House I shall regret, ought to be careful when he makes a statement of this kind. There is another matter to which I shall advert. The gentleman from Indiana, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has done a great many ter to which I shall advert. The gentleman from Indiana, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has done a great many good things in the interest of economy and he is in great distress about the laboring-men of the country. I find this to be the fact:

We are paying, in this bill, the laborers and the messengers all about this Capitol $720 a year, and also the same class of employés in all the Departments, and my friend from Indiana has never in a single instance proposed a reduction of the pay of those engaged in this class of service, when he knows that private employers do not pay within 50 per cent. of that amount. I cannot understand why, in the enunciation of his principle that public employés should not be paid more than private ones, on the pay of this class of employés he de-more than private ones, on the pay of this class of employés he declines to make any reduction whatever.

Mr. HOLMAN. I read from the Union of February 2 that the increase of the public debt during the past month was $2,069,669.71. I only wish to add that it was upon that authority that I made the statement.

Mr. FOSTER. That is a democratic newspaper, and I do not think that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations should, upon a statement in a democratic newspaper, say to the country what may not be true. He ought to get his information from official sources.

Mr. KELLEY. Allow me to say that the public debt has been diminished $6,000,000 this year. And now there is a further diminition of $2,069,669.71.

Mr. HOLMAN. We shall have the debt statement to-morrow and

Mr. HOLMAN. We shall have the debt statement to-morrow and then we shall know what the exact figures are.

Mr. KELLEY. Unless by deducting $2,000,000 from $6,000,000 you can make $8,000,000 the gentleman's figures were a mistake.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now ask unanimous consent that debate be closed upon the pending paragraph.

Mr. HURD. I object. I desire to say a single word as to the duties of one of the assistant librarians. I refer to the assistant librarians. librarian who has charge of the law library. The importance of his labor must be familiar to anybody who has occasion to examine the books in his department. He is required to purchase books for that library, both those published in the United States and those published in foreign countries. He is required to systematically arrange and classify those books so that those who desire to examine them may have speedy and satisfactory access to them; he is required to have a familiarity with the law in order to render assistance to members of Congress who have occasion to visit the library.

His duties require a knowledge of modern and ancient languages, a thorough knowledge of law, a knowledge of the reports of law cases, and likewise a general knowledge of literature.

The present incumbent possesses these qualifications in an eminent degree. He speaks four foreign languages, French, Italian, Spanish, and German. He is thoroughly versed in the ancient languages, and during the many years that he has held this position he has given universal satisfaction to those who have had occasion to visit that universal satisfaction to those who have had occasion to visit that library. His salary originally was $1,800 when there were but eight thousand volumes in the Library, and now when there are forty thousand volumes he receives only $2,500, and it is proposed to reduce that amount. I submit that his knowledge of languages and his familiarity with law fit him better for the place than any one else who would be likely to be appointed, and that his compensation is not too great; indeed, in my judgment it is too small. I hope the amendments proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Monroe] and the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Roberts] will be adopted.

The question was taken on Mr. Monroe's amendment; and it was not agreed to.

not agreed to.

The question recurred on Mr. Roberts's amendment; and on being put there were upon a division ayes 61, noes not counted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let it go as adopted. I shall call for a separate vote in the House.

So the amendment was agreed to.
Mr. WADDELL. I move that the committee do now rise.
Mr. HOLMAN. If the House wishes to take a recess until this evening I have no objection to that motion, otherwise I must object.
[Loud cries of "Regular order!"]
The CHAIRMAN. No debate is in order upon a motion that the

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. We had an evening session a few days ago on an appropriation bill.

Mr. WADDELL. I insist upon my motion—

Mr. FOSTER. That we take a recess until to-night.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. We came here one night and what was the result?

Mr. FOSTER. We can have a distinct understanding as to the business that is to be transacted to-night.

The question was taken on Mr. WADDELL's motion; and it was

The Committee of the Whole accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. REAGAN reported that, pursuant to the order of the House, the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the Union generally and particularly the special order, being the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House now take a recess until half past seven o'clock this evening, with the understanding that the session shall be devoted to the consideration in Committee of the Whole of the legislative appropriation bill.

Many Members. "No!" "No!"

Mr. WADDELL. I move to amend so that the House shall take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division there were—ayes 76, noes 45.

Before the result of the vote was announced,
Mr. HOLMAN said: I will have to ask for tellers on this motion.

I trust that gentlemen will bear in mind that this is the 2d day of February, and it is very important that we should take prompt action on the appropriation bill.
Mr. WADDELL. I object to debate.

The question was taken upon ordering tellers; and there were 22 in the affirmative, not one-fifth of a quorum.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe that no quorum voted on the last vote.
The SPEAKER. If the gentleman makes that point, the Chair will order tellers.

order tellers

Mr. HOLMAN. As the House seems inclined to hold no session to-night, under the circumstances I will not call for a further count upon the motion to take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

No further count being called for, the motion of Mr. WADDELL was accordingly agreed to.

Pending the announcement of the result of the vote,

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 3156) to perfect the revision of the statutes of the United States.

SARAH E. THOMPSON.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a re-port from the commissioners of claims in the case of Sarah E. Thomp-son, of Tennessee; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

SALE OF WASTE TIMBER ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, recommending legislation authorizing the sale of waste timber on Indian reservations; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

EXTENSION OF CADET BARRACKS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting estimates for the extension of cadet barracks; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

YUMA, ARIZONA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report from the Adjutant-General on the bill (H. R. No. 4179) to sell quarry reservation to the village of Yuma, in Arizona; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

FRANK A. PAGE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, concerning a report on the case of Frank A. Page, late lieutenant of the United States Army, retired; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

JOHN STEWART.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the Adjutant-General in the case of John Stewart, late captain Fifteenth Michigan Infantry, and a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting papers in the case of John Stewart, late captain Fifteenth Michigan Infantry; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

FORT DUNCAN, TEXAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the Quartermaster-General, relative to improvements on the site of Fort Duncan, Texas, made by the Government; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

E. F. WENCKEBACH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the Adjutant-General in the case of E. F. Wenckebach, late captain United States Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

MILL CREEK HARBOR OF REFUGE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secre tary of War, transmitting a report on the harbor of refuge at Mill Creek, on the Ohio River; which was referred to the Commistee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI AT GLASGOW, MISSOURI.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report on House bill No. 4342, providing for a bridge across the Missouri River near Glasgow, Missouri; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

IMPROVEMENT OF DES MOINES RAPIDS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of engineers on House bill No. 4169, for the relief of employés on the improvement of the Des Moines Rapids; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

LANDS IN SAN FRANCISCO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report on House bill No. 4180, concerning certain lands in San Francisco County, California; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

DEFICIENCY FOR COMMISSARY SERVICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting an estimate from the Commissary-General for a deficiency in the appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

NEW JAIL IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting estimates of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury of the amount required to complete the new jail in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

DEFICIENCY FOR SURVEYING.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House letters from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting deficiency estimates for the surveying service for the year ending June 30, 1877; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

T. J. GALBRAITH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, in relation to a re-appropriation to pay balance due late Indian Agent T. J. Galbraith; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

COMMISSARY AND QUARTERMASTER STORES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting lists of four hundred and forty-nine claims for commissary and quartermaster stores; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a preamble and resolution from the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, relative to additional room for the collections of the Institution; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

FOUNDATIONS OF WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the president of the Washington Monument commission, transmitting the results of an examination of the foundations of the Washington Monument; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

SCOTT LEGION OF MEXICAN VETERANS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a resolution of thanks from the Scott Legion of Mexican Veterans of Philadelphia, in relation to the passage of the pension bill; which was laid on the table.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LANDS FOR COLORADO.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, asking a grant of land to the agricultural college of that State; which was referred to the Committee on Publie Lands.

PATENT-OFFICE REPORT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Commissioner of Patents, transmitting his annual report; which was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

TESTING IRON AND STEEL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Committee on Appropriations:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I desire to call the attention of Congress to the importance of providing for the continuance of the board for testing iron, steel, and other metals, which by the sundry civil appropriation act of last year was ordered to be discontinued at the end of the present fiscal year.

This board, consisting of engineers and other scientific experts from the Army, the Navy, and from civil life, (all of whom except the secretary give their time and labors to this object without compensation,) was organized by authority of Congress in the spring of 1875, and immediately drafted a comprehensive plan for its investigations and contracted for a testing machine of four hundred tons capacity, which would enable it to properly conduct the experiments. Meanwhile the subcommittees of the board have devoted their time to such experiments as could be made with the smaller testing machines already available. This large machine is now just completed and ready for erection at the Watertown arsenal, and the real labors of the board are therefore just about to be commenced. If the board is to be discontinued at the end of the present fiscal year, the money already appropriated and the services of the gentlemen who have given so much time to the subject will be unproductive of any results.

The importance of these experiments can hardly be overestimated when we consider the almost endless variety of purposes for which iron and steel are employed in this country and the many thousands of lives which daily depend on the soundness of iron structures. I need hardly refer to the recent disaster at the Ashtabula bridge in Ohio and the conflicting theories of experts as to the cause of it, as an instance of what might have been averted by a more thorough knowledge of the properties of iron and the best modes of construction.

These experiments cannot properly be conducted by private firms, not only on account of the expense but because the results must rest upon the auth

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 30, 1877.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted— To Mr. Phelps, for one week from Monday next on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. O'NEILL, until Monday next.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave for withdrawal of papers was granted

To Mr. Walling, in the case of Ralph Spencer;
To Mr. Dunnell, in the case of James M. Lee; and To Mr. Slemons, in the case of J. J. Busby.

REMOVAL OF TAXES ON BANKS.

Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri, by unanimous consent, presented a petition of numerous citizens of the State of Missouri, for the removal of war taxes on banks; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD without the signatures, as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of the undersigned respectfully showeth, that war-taxes, both heavy and unequal in their burden, are imposed on the national banks, State banks, savings-banks, and private bankers of this country, which taxes have been for several years productive of great commercial injury; that in no other country are such taxes incurred by the business of banking, and the exigency having passed away, the war taxes can be taken off without any sacrifice to the Treasury at all commensurate with the benefits which will result to the agricultural, financial, and commercial interests of the country.

That the present time is a proper one for Congress to interfere for the relief of these interests; that the taxes now levied by the General Government on the deposits, circulation and capital of all banks should be immediately repealed, and the subject of bank taxation be remitted to the several States and Territories as before the war.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

JANUARY, 1877.

And then, in pursuance of the vote previously taken on the motion of Mr. WADDELL, the House (at four o'clock and forty minutes p.m.) took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. BEEBE: The petition of citizens of Rockland County, New York, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of citizens of Orange County, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BLOUNT: The petition of Thomas J. Williams, for compen-

By Mr. BLOUNT: The petition of Thomas J. Williams, for compensation for property taken by the United States Army, to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CANNON, of Utah: The petition of William W. Magnire, G. D. Folkman, Morroni Skeen, and others, of Plain City, Utah Territory, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Post-Roads.

By Mr. CRAPO: The petition of John Kenrick and 30 others, of Orleans, Massachusetts, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Timothy Gordon and 19 other citizens of Plymouth, Massachusetts, for the removal of the tax upon deposits and capital of banks, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. DURAND: Four petitions of citizens of Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of citizens of Michigan, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. EGBERT: The petition of citizens of Emlenton, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. FRYE: The petition of Charles Lana and others, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. FRYE: The petition of Charles Lana and others, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Henry E. Peelle, J. H. Cloud, and other citizens of Cambridge City, Indiana, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GARFIELD: Memorial of Henry Talcott, of Jefferson, Ohio, against repealing the law by which banks are taxed, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HENDERSON: The petition of H. B. Carpenter and 33 other citizens of Rock Island County, Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HUMPHREYS: The petition of citizens of Indiana, for a post-route from Hillham, via Simmons's and Ellis's, to Celestine, Dubois County, Illinois, to the same committee.

By Mr. HUNTON: The petition of W. W. Mackall, of, Virginia, for the removal of the disabilities imposed upon him by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to the Committee on the Judiciary. mittee on the Judiciary

Also, the petition of Henry B. Tyler, of Virginia, of similar import,

By Mr. HURD: The petition of citizens of Ohio, for a post-route from Fayette, Fulton County, to Pioneer, Williams County, Ohio, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. KASSON: The petition of citizens of Iowa, that pensioners

By Mr. KASSON: The petition of citizens of Iowa, that pensioners be granted arrears of pension from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LUTTRELL: The petition of the president of the National Bank of Napa, California, for the repeal of the check-stamp tax, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of J. P. Crockett and others, of California, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. By Mr. McMAHON: The petition of Michael Jackson, for a pension, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, the petition of Hugh B. Mockin, late of Company A, Eighth United States Veteran Volunteers, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: Resolutions of the city council of Baltimore, requesting the removal of Fort Carroll in the harbor of Baltimore, the same being an obstruction to the commerce of said city, to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. O'NEILL: The petition of insurance companies, shipping merchants, and others interested in maritime affairs, for an appropriation for printing charts and sailing directions, to the same com-

By Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas: Resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, favoring such legislation as will appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands in the several States afflicted with grasshoppers to those States, to be used in the payment of bounties for the destruction of such grasshoppers, to the Committee on Public Lands

Also, the petition of citizens of Minneapolis, Kansas, for the removal of the tax on banks, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. JAMES B. REILLY: The petition of citizens of Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. STENGER: The petition of citizens of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. THORNBURGH: The petition of David R. Sasseen, late of Company D, Third Tennessee Cavalry, for the correction of his military record, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WELLS, of Missouri: The petition of citizens of Missouri, for the removal of the tax on banks, to the Committee of Ways and to the same committee.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: The petition of W.D. Fulton, S. Claybrook, and other citizens of Williamson County, Tennessee, for a post-route from Nashville to Leiper's Fork, Tennessee, via Granny White and Hillsborough, Tennessee, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-

By Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia: The petition of Isaac L. Simers and 9 others, of White Pine, West Virginia, for cheap telegraphy,

IN SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 3, 1877-10 a. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. PADDOCK. I move that the Senate take a further recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate accordingly took a re-ess until twelve o'clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate will come to order. The Secretary will read the Journal of yesterday.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, February 2, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. No. 3156) to perfect the revision of the statutes of the United States; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

CREDENTIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented the credentials of HENRY G. DAVIS, elected by the Legislature of the State of West Virginia a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which were read, and ordered to be filed.

Mr. PADDOCK presented the credentials of ALVIN SAUNDERS, elected by the Legislature of the State of Nebraska a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which were read, and ordered to be filed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter of the Secretary of the Interior, communicating estimate of appropriations required for the surveying service to supply deficiencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF COAST SURVEY.

Mr. ANTHONY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution to print extra copies of the report of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, reported it without amendment; and it was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That there be printed 1,000 extra copies of the report of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey for 1876, for the use of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

Mr. ANTHONY. I offer the following resolution for reference to the Committee on Appropriations:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be instructed to report a bill making appropriation for the support of the Government Printing Office.

I am apprised by the Public Printer that the appropriation for the printing of Congress is nearly exhausted, with the exception of the fund appropriated for the publication of the RECORD, and that in a few days he will be unable under the law to execute the orders of the two Houses of Congress for printing. I move the reference of the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

C. G. FREUDENBERG.

Mr. SHERMAN. If there be no further resolutions, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 189, a private bill reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (S. No. 189) placing the name of C. G. Freudenberg upon the retired list of the United States Army was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment.

The amendment was in lines 7 and 8 to strike out the words "15th day of December, 1870" and insert the words "and after the passage of this act."

Mr. WEST. Is there a report in that case?

Mr. BURNSIDE. There is no report in the case. The amendment only changes the date at which the bill is to take effect so as to make it take effect from and after its passage.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT DALLES MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. KELLY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of Fort Dalles

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion?
The Chair hears none, and the bill will be read for information.
The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there a report accompanying the bill? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is.
Mr. ALLISON. Is the bill before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not. The Chair was about putting the question, Will the Senate proceed to its consideration? The PRESIDENT pro tempore put the question, and declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

Mr. KELLY and Mr. MITCHELL called for a division.

Mr. WEST. We know what the result of that will be. There is no quorum here.

Mr. KELLY. As soon as the report of the committee is read there will be no doubt about the bill.

Mr. WEST. I move that the Senate take a recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senator from Louisiana to withdraw the motion for a moment. I desire to present one or two memorials. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. WEST. Before yielding to the solicitations of Senators who desire to present morning business, which I shall do, I wish to say that according to my understanding upon our adjournment last evening it was understood that the Senate should transact no business to-day of a legislative character. I think it is due to those who were here who had that understanding with us that the Senate should now take a recess. I desire to say, however, that I shall withdraw the motion in order to allow Senators to offer morning business and at the conclusion of the morning business I will again renew the motion to take

Mr. McMILLAN. I present a joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota instructing her Senators and requesting her Representa-

Mr. KELLY. I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana has moved to take a recess, which motion has priority.

Mr. KELLY. The Senator from Louisiana has withdrawn his mo-

Mr. KELLY. The Senator from Louisiana has withdrawn his motion as I understand. I hope he will withdraw it, at least.

Mr. McMILLAN. I have the floor by the consent of the Senator from Louisiana, for the purpose of presenting morning business.

Mr. WEST. I have withdrawn the motion to take a recess in favor of morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana has violed for morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana has yielded for morning business.

Mr. DAVIS. I submit, Mr. President—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from West Virginia desire to speak to the motion for a recess?

Mr. DAVIS. I desire to speak to the ruling of the Chair a moment ago that the Senator from Louisiana resigned the floor for any particular purpose or for anything after moving a recess. I think as the Senator from Louisiana resigned the floor and withdrew his motion the floor belongs to the Senator from Oregon who had the floor when a recess was moved. Am I right in that?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia is correct.

Mr. DAVIS.

Mr. DAVIS. Then the Senator from Oregon has the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood that there was no objection to the reception of morning business. The Senator was no objection to the reception of morning business. The Senator from Oregon made no objection.

Mr. KELLY. I make no objection whatever to morning business provided that it does not interfere with my right to the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana yielded to morning business, and on that ground the Chair recognized the Senator from Minnesota. The Senator from Oregon was taken from the floor by the motion for a recess. That motion being withdrawn the floor by the motion for a recess. That motion being withdrawn the Senator from Oregon is entitled to the floor but yields to morning business, the Chair understands.

Mr. KELLY. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia is quite correct. The Chair will entertain morning business.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, in favor of legislation providing a bounty to be paid for the destruction of grasshoppers and their eggs; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Minnesota, praying the establishment of a mail-route from Fergus Falls to Pesham in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-

Mr. WHYTE presented a resolution of the first branch of the city council of the city of Baltimore, requesting the Senators and Representatives from Maryland to urge the passage of a law providing for the removal of Fort Carroll, it being an obstruction to the commerce of Baltimore; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY, from the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the United States, which was instructed by a resolution of the Senate of the 12th of January to inquire into the propriety of providing for the publication of a new edition of the Revised Statutes, reported a bill (S. No. 1216) to provide for the preparation and publication of a new edition of the Revised Statutes of the United publication of a new edition of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. HAMLIN, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1155) to amend section 8 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes," approved July 12, 1876, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

He also from the same committee to whom the subject was re-

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. No. 1221) to authorize the Postmaster-General to pay the rent as it may fall due under leases by the Government of certain premises for post-offices, now held and occupied by post-masters of the third class; which was read twice by its title.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HITCHCOCK asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1217) to incorporate the Metropolitan Life-Insurance Company of the United States of America; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (8. No. 2218) to establish a certain post-road; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Koads.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1219) authorizing the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent of Horace A. Stone for improvement in the manufacture of cheese; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. TELLER asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1220) for the relief of James W. Richard and J. S. Brown & Brother, of Denver, Colorado; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO AN APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. HAMLIN, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, reported three amendments intended to be submitted by him to the bill (H. R. No. 4187) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1578, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

FORT DALLES MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. KELLY. The bill that was read a while ago, Senate bill No. Mr. KELLY. The bill that was read a while ago, senate bill No. 1001, the consideration of which I have moved, originated with the Committee on Military Affairs. I think the reading of the report of that committee will perhaps be better than anything that I can say. It will show fully the ground upon which the bill is based. I therefore call for the reading of the report of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read if there be

The Secretary read the following report submitted by Mr. Cock-RELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, January 30:

RELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, January 30:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of Fort Dalles military reservation and accompanying report heretofore made from this committee, have duly reconsidered the same and the additional facts, and submit the following report:

"The former report made by your committee is as follows, to wit:

"Mr. Cocknell submitted the following report, (to accompany bill S. No. 1001:)

"The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of citizens of Oregon, asking Congress to grant to the State of Oregon, for the purpose of a State insane asylum, the lands and buildings known as the Dalles military reservation, have duly considered the same, and submit the following report:

"Two petitions were presented and referred to your committee.

"General O. O. Howard signs one of these petitions, with the following statement:

"The old fort will probably never be used again for military purposes, and I do not know of a better disposition of the land and old buildings than to donate them to the purposes of an asylum, as proposed."

Your committee addressed a letter of inquiry to the Secretary of War, and received the following answer, to wit:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, June 26, 1876.

War Department,

Washington City, June 26, 1876.

Sir: Returning the petitions inclosed in your letter of 3d of April last, from citizens of Oregon, asking that the land and buildings known as the Dalles military reservation be granted to the State for an insane asylum, I have the honor to invite your attention to the inclosed copy of letter from the Secretary of War to the United States Senate, dated May 25, 1874, recommending the passage of an act to authorize the relinquishment of this reserve to the control of the Secretary of the Interior, it being no longer needed for military purposes.

The present area of the reservation is about four hundred and two acres. The Inspector-General reports the surrounding country hilly or rather mountainous; soil in the valleys along the creeks (Mill Creek, Three, Five, Eight, Ten, and Fifteen-Mile Creeks) very productive, on the hills light and sandy, but producing excellent pasturage for stock. Timber rather scarce in the vicinity of the post, but plentiful about eight miles west. All the cereals can be raised to perfection in the valleys. River navigable the whole year by steamers.

Early in 1871, the improvements consisted of two frame buildings, for company quarters, requiring considerable repairs; two frame buildings for officers' quarters, in serviceable condition; one quartermaster and one commissary storehouse, both substantial frame buildings. Hospital built of logs in 1848; in sinking condition. Two-story gnard-house; lower story of stone, upper story framework, serviceable. Cavalry stables for sixty-seven horses; balloon frame, in good order.

The inclosed map shows the present limits of the reserve, buildings, &c.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. D. CAMERON,

Secretary of War.

J. D. CAMERON,

Hon. F. M. Cockrell, Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate.

The letter of the Secretary of War sent to the Senate March 26, 1874, and referred "WAR DEPARTMENT, May 26, 1874.

"The Secretary of War has the honor to recommend to the United States Senate legislation by Congress authorizing the transfer of the military reservation at Fort Dalles, Oregon, to the Secretary of the Interior for disposition for cash according to existing laws of the United States relative to the public lands, the said reservation being no longer needed for military purposes.

"As there are certain buildings upon the lands it is recommended that the land be sold, subject to the condition of the ist section of the act of 24th February, 1871. (16 Statutes, 420-431.)

"WM. W. BELKNAP. "Secretary of War.

"Secretary of War.

"Secretary of War.

"Secretary of War.

"The United States own this reservation, about four hundred and two acres, sitnate in the State of Oregon.

"Your committee see no greater reason or grounds for granting this particular four hundred and two acres of the public domain with the buildings thereon to the State of Oregon, for an asylum or any other object, than there would be for granting any other portion of the public domain in the State of Oregon for this purpose.

"No greater claims are shown to exist in favor of this particular grant to the State of Oregon than may exist in favor of any other grant to said State, or to any other State, of public lands within its territorial bounds.

"Your committee are not advised that Oregon has not received her full share of the public lands from the United States, with other States.

"Your committee are not advised that Oregon has not received her full share of the public lands from the United States, with other States.

"Your committee, therefore, see no special reason for this grant as prayed, and therefore recommend that the prayer of the petitioners be not granted, and that the said reservation be transferred to the Department of the Interior for disposition, and that the accompanying bill for that purpose be passed."

Since the recommitted of the foregoing report and the said bill, (S. 1001,) Senator Kelly, of Oregon, appeared before your committee, and suggested certain amendments to said bill by adding certain additional words to section 1 and adding an additional section at the end of the bill.

Your committee could see no impropriety or injustice in such amendments; but, desiring to be exact, your committee submitted said bill and said proposed amendments to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and received the following report, to wit:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

Washington D. C. Japangara, p. 1877

report, to wit:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January —, 1877.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Senate bill No. 1001, providing for the disposal of Fort Dalles military reservation, and accompanying papers, referred by you to this office for an examination and report. I see no objection to the bill as amended by Senator Kelly, and would accordingly recommend its pas-

I herewith return the bill and accompanying papers. Very respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,

Hon. F. M. COCKRELL. United States Senator.

Your committee, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying bill, being the same as originally reported, with the amendments submitted to and approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of this bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of Fort Dalles military reservation.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized to transfer to the custody and control of the Secretary of the Interior, for disposition for cash, according to existing laws relating to the public lands, after appraisement, to the highest bidder, and at not less than the appraised value, nor at less than $1.25 per acre, the United States military reservation known as the Fort Dalles military reservation, at Dalles in the State of Oregon, as the same was established by order of Brigadier-General W. S. Harney, in the year 1859, excepting any portion of said reservation as may have been granted to any settler under the act of Congress making donations of the public lands in Oregon to settlers, approved September 27, 1850, or which may have been granted under any other act of Congress previous to the time when such military reservation was established.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior, if in his opinion the public interests require it, may cause the said lands in said reservation, or any part thereof, to be subdivided into tracts less than forty acres each, and into town-lots, or either; and, in such cases each subdivision or lot shall be appraised and offered separately for sale to the highest bidder, as before provided, after which any tract or lot so offered, and not sold for want of bidders, shall be subject to sale at private entry at the appraised value.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the improvements, buildings, materials, and other property, which may be situate upon said reservation, or upon any such tract or lot into which the same may be subdivided, to be appraised, and may cause the same to be sold, together with the tract or lot upon which the same may be situate, at not less than the appraised value of the land and improvements, &c., or may, in his discretion, cause the said improvements, &c., to be sold separately at public sale at not less than the appraised value, to be removed by the purchaser within such time as the Secretary of the Interior may direct; and if the improvements are offered and not sold for want of bidders, then the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to sell the same at private sale for not less than the appraised value.

SEC. 4. That the land lying between the northern boundary of said military reservation, and the northern boundary of the military reservation as established by order of Major G. I. Rains in the year 1855, shall be disposed of under and according to the provisions of title 32, chapter 8, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, except any portion of the same to which there may be a valid pre-emption claim; and all controversies arising under this act, in regard to the right or title to any part of said lands, shall be decided by the register and the receiver of the proper land office, subject to an appeal to the Commissioner of the General Land Office by any person or party interested therein.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, this bill comes before us in such

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, this bill comes before us in such questionable shape that I believe I must speak to it. It seems to me to be remarkable in several particulars. In the first place, it omits to state both in the report and the bill what is the value of this reservation or the area of it. It also fails to furnish us with any information as to the number of settlers upon the reservation or the value of the improvements that they have made; and, most remarkable of all, if I understand the amendments proposed by the committee, it proposes to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to go into a town-site speculation and divide this reservation up into town lots and sell them out to purchasers. Now, such a departure as this from the established policy of the Government in regard to the disposition of the public domain certainly requires some explanation, and it appears to me that in the present condition of the Senate the Senator from Oregon that in the present condition of the Senate the Senator from Oregon ought not to insist upon the consideration of this bill.

Mr. KELLY. Mr. President, I think the explanation that I can give will show that the bill ought to be passed. As I stated, the bill originated with the Committee on Military Affairs, upon a petition presented by General Howard and a number of other gentlemen, asking that this military reservation be donated to the State of Oregon for the purpose of establishing an insane asylum. After due consideration, the Committee on Military Affairs thought it not proper to grant to the State of Oregon this land, but recommended that it should be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior to be disposed of by him according to law. The reason of this recommendation is that the fort at that place is altogether useless, now being in the midst of a settled country, and, of course, will never be used for milimidst of a settled country, and, of course, will never be used for military purposes again. There are many buildings upon it going to decay and loss, and, for this reason, it should be disposed of. The Senator from Kansas says there is no statement of how many settlers are on it. There are no settlers upon it.

Mr. INGALLS. Then why does the bill provide that that portion of the reservation shall be excepted which has been granted to set-of the reservation shall be excepted which has been granted to settlers under the act of Congress making donations of public lands to settlers, approved the 27th of September, 1850?

Mr. KELLY. That I will explain. This reservation was laid out in 1859. It had been previously laid out or established by Major Rains in 1855. As it was altered in 1859, it excluded a portion of a donation claim that had been established long before that time.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there any town near this reservation?

Mr. KELLY. Yes, sir.

Mr. INGALLS. What is its name?

Mr. KELLY. The town of The Dalles.

Mr. INGALLS. How many inhabitants has the town?

Mr. KELLY. Fifteen hundred or two thousand.

Mr. KELLY. Fifteen hundred or two thousand.
Mr. INGALLS. Is that town on the reservation or immediately adjoining ?
Mr. KELLY.

Mr. KELLY. Immediately adjoining. There is this donation claim, which of course could not be taken away from the owner without his consent. He was never paid for it; or at least that is the claim.

There is another portion of the reservation to which section 4 applies. In 1855 there was a reservation established by Major Rains, as I stated before. In 1859 it was reduced for the purpose of allowing stated before. In 1859 it was reduced for the purpose of allowing settlements to be made at that place, and it has been settled upon, houses have been built, and no title can be procured to that portion of the former reservation. This bill recommends that that portion lying between the old and the new reservation shall be disposed of according to the town-site law; and I do not know of a more equitable and just way of disposing of it. The town-site law provides that where persons have settled upon lands they shall have a lot not to exceed a certain extent, so many thousand feet; that they shall have the right, as it were, to pre-empt it at $10; and where it is not occupied that it shall be sold to the highest bidder. That is the town-site law. The bill only requires that that portion lying between the old and the new reservation shall be sold according to the town-site law. Of course those gentlemen desire to have some title to their lots and they cannot get it in any other way, I presume, than according to the town-site law of the United States. That is an equitable and just law. Therefore I hope that this bill will pass.

Mr. COCKRELL. I was delighted with the criticisms of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] upon this bill. Unfortunately for him, his criticisms do not correspond with or reflect upon the report of the committee. He says there is nothing said about the quantity of land. If he will turn to the first page of the report, in the communication of Hon. J. D. Cameron, Secretary of War, he will see that the present area of the reservation is about four hundred and two acres. I think that the quantity of the land is very fully stated.

Mr. INGALLS. May I interrupt the Senator for a moment?
Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.
Mr. INGALLS. Section 4 provides—

That the land lying between the northern boundary of said military reservation and the northern boundary of the military reservation, as established by order of Major G. I. Rains in the year 1855, shall be disposed of under and according to the provisions of title 32, chapter 8 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, except any portion of the same to which there may be a valid pre-emption claim.

That is the uncertain quantity. The limits of the present military reservation comprise four hundred and two acres, but there is nothing said as to what are the contents or the amount of the land lying ing said as to what are the contents or the amount of the land lying between the present reservation and the northern boundary established by Major Rains.

Mr. COCKRELL. If your committee had been competent to have copied the map which accompanied the papers, that would have been shown very definitely. The map that accompanied the report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office explains it definitely. In regard to the improvements upon the reservation, this statement from the Secretary of War is just as definite as it could be. to the State of Oregon for the benefit of an asylum. I referred to the State of Oregon for the benefit of an asylum. I referred the matter to the Secretary of War, and it was then referred to the commanding officer in Oregon, and here is a description of the reserva-

The inspector-general reports the surrounding country hilly or rather mountainons; soil in the valleys along the creeks (Mill Creek, Three, Five, Eight, Ten, and Fifteen Mile Creeks) very productive, on the hills light and sandy, but producing excellent pasturage for stock. Timber rather scarce in the vicinity of the post, but plentiful about eight miles west. All the cereals can be raised to perfection in the valleys. River navigable the whole year by steamers.

Early in 1871, the improvements consisted of two frame buildings, for company quarters, requiring considerable repairs; two frame buildings for officers' quarters, in serviceable condition; one quartermaster's and one commissary store-house, both substantial frame buildings. Hospital built of logs in 1848; in sinking condition. Two-story guardhouse; lower story of stone, upper story frame-work, serviceable. Cavalry stables for 67 horses; balloon frame, in good order. Two quartermaster stables, frame, one serviceable and one unserviceable. Corrals built of boards and slabs; in good order.

In 1874 the Secretary of War, in a communication to Congress, recommended the disposition of this land which is made by this bill; and the matter has been pending ever since.

In regard to the Secretary of the Interior going into town-lot speculations, I am very much astonished at that criticism from the Senator nlations, I am very much astonished at that criticism from the Senator from Kansas. He is certainly very familiar with chapter 8, title 32, of the general statute, the law of the land, which provides expressly for the reservation of town lots and the Secretary of the Interior going into the sale of them. That act was passed in 1863; it was amended in 1864; again in 1865; again in 1867; and again in 1868.

I think certainly that this bill is only in compliance with that general law, and only refers to that general law. I think the bill is correct. It is approved by the Secretary of War. The amendments proposed by the Senator from Oregon were submitted to the Secretary of posed by the Senator from Oregon were submitted to the Secretary of the Interior; and the Commissioner of the General Land Office approves of them. It is but fair and proper that the bill should pass just in the shape that it is in. The interests of the United States will be protected and no injustice will be done to any citizen or other per-

Mr. INGALLS. I certainly have no objection to this bill if the interests of the United States are protected. It certainly cannot concern me as a local matter whether this property in Oregon is sold or cern me as a local matter whether this property in Oregon is sold or whether it remains as it is at the present time; but by the admission of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Kelly] here is a tract comprising several hundred acres of land immediately adjacent and contiguous to one of the most populous and thriving towns in the State of Oregon. So far as I can judge from the very cautious declarations and statements made by the Senator, a portion of this land, in violation of law, has already been taken possession of by some enterprising settlers; I conclude, also, if I can put a proper estimate upon his language, that in some mysterious way a certain portion of the town of Fort Dalles has crawled over on to this reservation in violation of law; has been cut up into town lots and improvements made upon them by has been cut up into town lots and improvements made upon them by various gentlemen who have not in any way yet secured any legal title to the property; and they are now endeavoring in some way or other to secure the title at a dollar and a quarter an acre.

It appears, what was not known to me before, that this is not the first effort that the State of Oregon has made to obtain possession of this property; that a short time since they were not so anxious to have the property sold or laid out in town lots, but that the first scheme was to obtain possession of the reservation for the purpose scheme was to obtain possession of the reservation for the purpose of making it the site of some State institution, I believe, for the care of the insane. That having failed, this bill is now introduced, and it is evidently the purpose, although not expressly avowed by the Senator from Oregon, to in some way ratify and confirm titles that now exist upon this property, upon which these persons have unlawfully and in violation of the regulations of the military authorities of this Government made settlement. If this land is adjoining to one of the most populous and thriving towns in the State of Oregon, and is partly covered at the present time by an addition to that town, it certainly is worth more than a dollar and a quarter an acre; and what I object to is the effort that is being made by the Senator to obtain possession of this property at a figure that is very much less than its actual cash value. The first section of the amendment pro-

That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized to transfer to the custody and control of the Secretary of the Interior, for disposition for cash, according to existing laws relating to the public lands, after appraisement, to the highest bidder, and at not less than the appraised value, nor at not less than $1.25$ per acrethe whole of this reservation.

Mr. MITCHELL. I would ask the Senator from Kansas if under this bill the Government would be compelled to dispose of it at one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre?

Mr. INGALLS. No; but they will.
Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to know how the Senator from

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to know how the Senator from Kansas knows that.

Mr. INGALLS. I have seen this thing tried too often. I know just what the result will be. If there are at the present time claims made upon this property to cover the whole of it—and I do not doubt that there are; I do not doubt that there are claimants for every foot of this property—if that is the case, and they are sufficiently numerous, as I presume they are, to make a respectable faction in the State of Oregon, I venture to say that there will be none of the land sold at more than $1.25 an acre. It would not be healthy for any man to go in there and offer to pay more than a dollar and a quarter an acre.

Mr. MITCHELL. I object to the Senator from Kansas illustrating the Oregon case by anything that may have happened in regard to railroad lands in Kansas.

Mr. INGALLS. I have a right to illustrate it by that, because I

Mr. INGALLS. I have a right to illustrate it by that, because I am entirely familiar with the rule that has been pursued in these

Mr. MITCHELL. That may be the rule in Kansas but it is not the

Mr. MITCHELL. That may be the rule in Kansas but it is not the rule in Oregon.

Mr. INGALLS. I know how it is done; and therefore the Senator from Oregon does not dispute me when I allege that this whole property is to-day covered by illegal claims.

Mr. KELLY. No, sir; that is not the case.

Mr. INGALLS. I suppose half of it is.

Mr. INGALLS. Are there no town lots upon the reservation?

Mr. KELLY. Yes, sir.

Mr. INGALLS. Who claims them?

Mr. KELLY. I will state to the Senator that there are two—

Mr. INGALLS. Answer my question.

Mr. KELLY. Not upon the reservation established by Major Rains.

Mr. INGALLS. That is included in this bill?

Mr. KELLY. No, sir; the portion that was established by Major

Mr. KELLY. No, sir; the portion that was established by Major Rains was thrown out for the purpose of permitting the town to set-tle upon it, and that portion which lies between the new and the old reservation it is now proposed to dispose of according to the town-site law of the United States. So far as the new reservation is concerned, that is to be disposed of by having the land appraised

Mr. INGALLS. Are there not pre-emption claims upon this reservation ?

Mr. KELLY. No, sir; not one.
Mr. INGALLS. What does this language mean in lines 7 and 8 of Except any portion of the same to which there may be a valid pre-emption claim?

Mr. KELLY. That means upon that small portion that is thrown off by the last reservation; that is, the portion of that is thrown off by the last reservation; that is, the portion of the land which is embraced between the old and the new reservation, but it is not in the reservation that it is now proposed to sell.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is not in it at all.

Mr. KELLY. It is not in it at all.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the value of land in the immediate vicinity of Fort Dalles ?

Mr. KELLY. I cannot say, but I suppose that those who make the appraisement will ascertain that fact.

appraisement will ascertain that fact.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask the Senator to give me his information as to the value of the land in the vicinity.

Mr. KELLY. Perhaps five, ten, fifteen, or twenty dollars; in the neighborhood, I mean.

Mr. INGALLS. Not more than $20 \circ*

Mr. KELLY. No, I think not.

Mr. MITCHELL. Some of it is not worth one-tenth of that.

Mr. INGALLS. The bill under consideration proposes to sell this land at $1.25 per acre. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] endeavored to correct me in regard to my interpretation of the townsite law. In section 2 the provision is entirely in contravention of site law. In section 2 the provision is entirely in contravention of the town-site law. It makes no reference whatever to the town-site law, but simply provides-

That the Secretary of the Interior, if in his opinion the public interests require it, may cause the said lands * * * to be subdivided into tracts less than forty acres each, and into town lots, or either; and, in such cases, each subdivision or lot shall be appraised and offered separately for sale to the highest hidder, as before provided, after which any tract or lot so offered, and not sold for want of bidders, shall be subject to sale at private entry at the appraised value.

If that is not an extraordinary and suspicious provision to incorporate in a bill for the sale of public lands, I certainly am unable to construe the English language correctly.

I believe that this bill has not been properly considered, and I move that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands for further con-

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. ANTHONY in the chair.) The Senator from Kansas moves that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. KELLY. It seems to me the remarks made by the Senator from Kansas are somewhat extraordinary. They certainly reflect upon the Military Committee; but I leave the committee to defend itself. The Military Committee; but I leave the committee to defend itself. The gentlemen of that committee can defend themselves, and I know are well able to do it. This was not a bill that originated with me, nor with my colleague, nor with any Senator; but it originated, as I said before, with the Committee on Military Affairs itself. Petitions had been presented in the Senate asking that this land might be given to the State of Oregon for an insane asylum. They were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. That committee, thinking that the State of Oregon was not entitled to it, reported this bill for the disposition of that fort. Without any suggestion from me, without any state of Oregon was not entitled to it, reported this sin to the disposition of that fort. Without any suggestion from me, without any suggestion from any one, the Committee on Military Affairs reported that this land should be turned over to the Secretary of the Interior to be by him appraised, that is, subdivided into lots, so that it might bring the most that it possibly could. The bill provides that the land shall be subdivided into lots, and the lots appraised, and then put up and sold to the highest bidder; and in case no one bids the appraised value, then there is no sale; but the land shall be subject to private "alue, then there is no sale; but the land shall be subject to private entry by paying the appraised value. It is to be put up at auction at a certain time and sold to the highest bidder. Is there any other disposition which can be made of this public land that would pay more to the United States than that? It must be remembered that this fort is useless for military purposes. It must be remembered that the buildings are going to decay; and is the land to be kept in the possession of the Government utterly valueless, or is it to be disposed of? If it is to be sold, why not sell it, as this bill proposes, to the highest bidder; and why not sell it in small quantities, because it will bring more by being sold in small parcels than it would if the whole tract should be put up and sold to one individual purchaser? Therefore this bill does just what the Senator from Kansas says it ought to do, it proposes to sell the land to the highest bidder.

With respect to the other portion, some twenty-five or thirty acres,

With respect to the other portion, some twenty-five or thirty acres, which lies between this reservation and the old reservation, and which has been settled upon by individual claimants of the land, that is proposed to sell under the town-site law of the United States. it is proposed to sell under the town-site law of the United States. What more equitable and proper way to sell it is there than under the general law of the United States, whereby it will bring money into the Treasury of the United States instead of letting it remain, as it is now, unsold? These gentlemen who have been for the last eighteen or twenty years living upon these lots desire to procure titles to their land; and I do not know a better way to dispose of it than under the general law of 1864, which authorizes lots to be sold. I must read a section of that law to show how equitable and just it is.

I read section 2382 of the Revised Statutes:

I read a section of that law to show how equitable and just it is. I read section 2382 of the Revised Statutes:

That in any case in which parties have already founded, or may hereafter desire to found, a city or town on the public lands, it shall and may be lawful for them to cause to be filed with the recorder for the county in which the same is situated a plat thereof for not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, describing its exterior boundaries according to the lines of the public surveys, where such surveys have been executed; also giving the name of such city or town, and exhibiting the streets, squares, blocks, lots, and alleys, the size of the same, with measurements and area of each municipal subdivision, the lots in which shall each not exceed four thousand two hundred square feet, with a statement of the extent and general character of the improvements; the said map and statement to be ver fied under oath by the party acting for and in behalf of the persons proposing to establish such city or town; and within one month after such filing there shall be transmitted to the General Land Office a verified transcript of such map and statement, accompanied by the testimony of two witnesses that such city or town has been established in good faith, and, when the premises are within the limits of an organized land district, a similar map and statement shall be filed with the register and receiver, and at any time after the filling of such map, statement, and testimony in the General Land Office, it shall and may be lawful for the President to cause the lots embraced within the limits of such city or town to be offered at public sale to the highest bidder, subject to a minimum of $910 for each lot; and such lots as amy not be disposed of at public sale shall thereafter be liable to private entry at said minimum, or at such reasonable increase or diminution thereafter as the Secretary of the Interior may order from time to time, after at least three months notice, in view of the increase or decrease in the

There is a just and reasonable way provided for disposing of town sites, and it is proposed to dispose of this land in that way. If any one can produce a more just and equitable law than that, I should like to see it. Certainly the Senator from Kansas who objects to the passage of this bill ought to devise some way by which a better disposition can be made than the present law of the United States provides.

Mr. MITCHELL. I must confess that I am surprised at the objec-tions made by the Senator from Kansas to this bill, and not so much surprised at the objection as I am at the criticisms of the honorable Senator upon the different provisions of the bill. What is the bill? What does it propose to do? The Senator from Kansas seems to intimate that there is some cat in the meal-tub; that there is something wrong about this bill.

Mr. INGALLS. A hen on.

Mr. MITCHELL. That there is a hen on; that there is some speculation on foot. I am afraid the fears of the honorable Senator from Kansas are the result more of some speculations that have occurred, perhaps, in his own State than of anything that appears on the face of this bill or in connection with the report submitted by the unanimous vote, as I understand, of the Military Committee. What is the bill? What is there wrong about it? What is there in connection with the bill that is so different from the usual course as to excite the fears and apprehensions of my honorable friend from Kansas? What is there in any provision of the bill that would indicate that there is "a hen on," to use the language of my friend from Kansas; that there is a cat in the meal-tub; that somebody is to be swindled; that the interests of the Government are not to be protected; that some citizen of Oregon, or of some other place to the honorable Senator from Kansas unknown, is to realize profit from some speculation arising out of some provision in this bill?

There is nothing in the bill to justify the apprehensions of the honorable Senator from Kansas. The bill is in the regular line of legislation of this character in reference to the abandonment and throwing open to settlement of military reservations. Here is a mili-tary reservation established in the first instance in 1855 by a military reservation established in the first instance in 1855 by a military officer. Afterward, in 1859, the boundaries of that reservation were changed and a new reservation was established known as the Fort Dalles reservation, by order of Brigadier-General W. S. Harney. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The morning hour having expired it becomes the duty of the Chair to call up the special order, which is the unfinished business of yesterday, being the bill (8. No. 934) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean" & 6.

Pacific Ocean," &c.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask the consent of the Senate to be allowed to finish what I have to say. It will only take a few moments. I shall get through in five minutes.

Mr. WRIGHT. I have no objection to that, but I propose to move an executive session, as there is important executive business to be transacted. I propose to make that motion after the Senator from Oregon gets through.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Sen-

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not wish to interfere with my friend from Oregon, but will allow him to conclude his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon will proceed by unanimous consent on the bill relative to the Klamath reser-wation.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is conceded, Mr. President, by the report of the Military Committee, by everybody, that this reservation is no longer required for military purposes; that when it was established it was in the midst of an Indian country, and it was established for a feet the protection of the cartless against the Indians. Now it was in the midst of an Indian country, and it was established for a purpose, for the protection of the settlers against the Indians. Now it is in the midst of a widely settled country. It has been abandoned as a matter of fact for years, as appears from the report of the War Department and from the report of the Military Committee, and it is proposed by the bill to direct the Secretary of War to turn over this nilitary reservation to the Secretary of the Interior; that the lands included in it shall be appraised by the Secretary of the Interior or under his direction; that that appraisement shall not be less than $1.25 an acre as to certain portions of it; and that then it shall be sold, but it shall not be sold for less than $1.25 an acre, and sold a auction to the highest bidder. Can there be anything more fair than that? Is there any room for manipulation, or management, or speculation? Everything is to be done openly and aboveboard; the land is to be sold at public auction.

is to be sold at public auction.

Then in reference to that portion of the reservation which was formerly the reservation lying between the northern boundary of the military reservation as it now exists and the northern boundary of the reservation as established by order of Major G. I. Rains in 1855, it is proposed that that shall be disposed of under and according to the provisions of title 32, chapter 8, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, excepting always "any portion of the same to which there may be a valid pre-emption claim." There is nothing wrong about that. It proposes to exempt any valid pre-emption claim, just as section 1 proposes to exempt from the operation of the bill any donation claim that may have been made to any citizen of Oregon under the provisions of the donation law of Oregon of September 27, 1850, and the amendments thereto. There are perhaps some claims of that kind. It frequently occurs in reference to these reservations in the different States and Territories that, prior to the time when the that kind. It frequently occurs in reference to these reservations in the different States and Territories that, prior to the time when the reservations have been laid out either by executive order or by Congress, grants have been made to citizens. If there are any of this kind of grants within this reservation to citizens under the donation law of September 27, 1850, which applied to Oregon alone, and not to the whole country, then persons claiming under these grants are excepted from the operation of the provisions of the bill; and that is right. So in reference to that portion which is to be sold under the provisions of the town-site law: if there are any valid pre-emption claims there, of course they are not to be affected by this proposed act.

Mr. MERRIMON. The Senator from Oregon seems to be familiar with this subject, and I should like to ask him a question or two.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state that my colleague is more familiar with the subject than I am. Still I shall try to answer any question which the Senator from North Carolina may ask.

Mr. MERRIMON. Is the land mentioned in the first section of the proposed amendment and the land mentioned in section 4 the same or two distinct bodies of land-?

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand it to be two distinct bodies. That specified in section 1 refers to the land included within the boundaries of the present reservation, and the other section refers to a piece of land lying between the northern boundary of the present reservation and the nor hern boundary of the reservation as originally established by Major Rains in 1855

lished by Major Rains in 1855

Mr MERRIMON. Then there are two distinct bodies of land?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to ask the Senator what are the special motives for putting this land into market at this time? Why not let it lie there until the country becomes populous, when the Government can realize something like its value?

Mr. MITCHELL. This reservation lies right in the immediate vicinity of one of the thriving towns of Oregon, and I cannot see any propriety or sense in tying up this tract of land in this settled country and holding it for years in order to get a higher price for it.

Mr. KELLY. The buildings are going to decay. There were very valuable buildings put upon this reservation when it was first laid out, quite a number of them, and these buildings are going to decay. If the reservation is permitted to remain in the condition it now is, they will go to decay and the Government will lose the benefit of them. The bill provides for an appraisement of these buildings, as the Senator from North Carolina will see by a reference to the bill. Section 3 provides: Section 3 provides:

That the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the improvements, buildings, materials, and other property which may be situate upon said reservation, or upon any such tract or lot into which the same may be subdivided, to be appraised, and may cause the same to be sold, together with the tract or lot upon which the same may be situate, at not less than the appraised value of the land and improvements, &c.

Mr. MERRIMON. Is the land worth $1.25 an acre?
Mr. MITCHELL. Some of it may not be worth more than that and some of it very much more.

Mr. EOGY. It would be a very fair sale of it if the lands could be sold for $1.25 an acre, and it would be a good thing for that new State and a good thing for the Federal Government.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have no doubt that this reservation would be appraised at more than $1.25 an acre and that it would sell for more than that. Some portions of it may not be actually worth $1.25 an acre, because a portion of it laps over on a rocky bluff, and that I imagine is not worth probably twenty-five cents an acre. I am very familiar with the tract of land; I have been over it any number of times.

I hope the Senator from Kansas will withdraw his motion to refer the bill to the Committee on Public Lands. It has been carefully examined by the Military Committee, and they have reported in favor of the bill.

Mr. MERRIMON. I see that by the fourth section judicial powers are conferred upon the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. MITCHELL. What does the Senator from North Carolina re-

Mr. MERRIMON. The Commissioner of the General Land Office, by the fourth section, is to decide all questions arising out of the title to this land; so that if an action of ejectment were brought by anybody, I suppose it would have to be brought before the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. KELLY. I will suggest to the Senator that this is nothing but what is the ordinary course of proceeding in the disposal of all the public lands of the United States.

public lands of the United States.

Mr. COCKRELL. And has been for the last fifty years.

Mr. MITCHELL. And does not exclude any proceedings in the courts.

Mr. KELLY. Not at all.

Mr. MERRIMON. I should think that a very unwise provision.

Mr. KELLY. It is only preliminary to final adjudication.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is preliminary to the issuance of a patent.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think I shall have to call for the regular order.

Mr. MITCHELL. We shall get through in a moment.

Mr. WRIGHT. The understanding was yesterday that we would not do any legislative business to-day.

Mr. MITCHELL. I think we can have a vote now.

Mr. WRIGHT. If that was the understanding, it ought to be carried out. Therefore I move that the Senate proceed to the consid-

Therefore I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. MITCHELL. I hope the Senator from Iowa will not press his motion for a few moments.

Mr. WRIGHT. I understand the Senator from Kansas intends to insist on his motion to refer the bill to the Committee on Public Lands.
Mr. MITCHELL. That we can vote upon at once.
Mr. INGALLS. I am not half through yet.
Mr. WRIGHT. I insist on my motion that the Senate proceed to Mr. KELLY. Then that will leave this bill as the unfinished business for Monday.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I offer the following proviso as an amendment to

Provided. That any bona fide settlers on any part of said reservation shall have the prior right to purchase so much of said land as is occupied by him or them, at the appraised value thereof.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is a very good amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion pending is to refer the bill, and the amendment is not in order at this time. The Senator from Colorado can give notice that he will offer the amendment when it is in order.

Mr. CHAFFEE. Very well.

Mr. SARGENT. I hope we shall proceed to the consideration of

Mr. WRIGHT. I insist on my motion.

Mr. KELLY. Let me understand. If we take a recess now, this bill is left as the unfinished business, as I understand, for Monday.

Mr. WRIGHT. The railroad bill is the unfinished business by the undersanding

Mr. BLAINE. This bill will be the unfinished business in the morning hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business was laid aside informally, being the railroad bill. The unfinished business of Monday will be Senate bill No. 984.

Mr. WRIGHT. I insist on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Iowa, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After fifteen muutes spent in executive session the doors were re-opened, and (at one o'clock and twenty-six minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Monday, February 5, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877. [CALENDAR DAY, February 3.]

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House (at ten o'clock a. m. Saturday, February 3) resumed its session.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ATKINS. I move that the House take a recess till ten minutes before twelve o'clock.

Mr. CLYMER. I think we might go on with the legislative appro-

Mr. CLYMER. I think we might go on with the legislative appropriation bill, instead of wasting these two hours.

Mr. ATKINS. There is no quorum.

Mr. CLYMER. Then let some member raise that question.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. We are getting along toward the close of the session, and there is so much business to be done that I think this time ought to be utilized by going into Committee of the Whole on the appropriation bill. If a quorum is not here it can be brought here under the rules of the House.

WASHINGTON CITY AND SAINT LOUIS RAILROAD.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. The bill (H. R. No. 2798) to authorize the Washington, Cincinnati and Saint Louis Railroad Company to construct a narrow-gauge railway from tide-water to the cities of Saint Louis and Chicago is now in Committee of the Whole, where it will probably not be reached during the session. I desire unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole may be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be made a special order for some day next week.

Mr. SAVAGE. I object.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to resume the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. Reagan in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes. The Clerk continued the reading of the paragraphs relating to the Library of Congress.

Mr. MONROE. I take the liberty of stopping the reading for the sake of being sure that I understood the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] in regard to this matter. As I understood him, all the paragraphs in regard to the Library of Congress have been restored to the position in which they stood under last year's bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no; I meant that the appropriations for salaries, as made by the existing law, had been substituted for the amounts named in the bill.

Mr. MONROE. Then I misunderstood the gentleman. I desire to make a motion to restore these paragraphs so as to conform to the law passed last year.

law passed last year.

Mr. HOLMAN. The whole of them?

Mr. MONROE. Yes, sir; so as to restore all these paragraphs to the basis adopted last year. I hope the gentleman will not interpose any objection to going back.

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course if the gentleman misunderstood me and supposed that I referred to all the provisions in regard to the Library, I cannot object to his going back. I supposed he referred to the sala-

Mr. MONROE. I move to amend by striking out "$5,000" and inserting "$7,000" as the appropriation for the purchase of books for the Library. This amendment conforms precisely to the present law.

Mr. HOLMAN. The reason why the amount was not made $7,000 was this: It is well known that there is a very large amount of books was this: It is well known that there is a very large amount of books which cannot be placed in the Library and never can be until the new Library is built or increased facilities furnished for putting up the books. In the next place, a very large accumulation of books is occurring every year by the deposit in the Library without cost to the Government of one copy of each work that is issued. We thought, therefore, that $5,000 in addition to that enormous increase of books annually would be a very ample appropriation. It is not an item large enough to have any controversy about it; but I trust the gentleman from Ohio will see that it is one of those items where a slight retrenchment can occur without any possible injury to the country.

Mr. MONROE. I was about to give in a word the reasons for my proposing this amendment. I am aware that the Library is in some departments overcrowded. But the reason for this appropriation of $7,000 last year was this: It is true that a great number of books come into the Library under our copyright system, and it is true that a considerable number is secured in the way of exchanges; but the come into the Library under our copyright system, and it is true that a considerable number is secured in the way of exchanges; but the object of having an appropriation of $7,000 a year in addition to replacing books that are lost or anything of that sort, is—and that is the especial object—to purchase rare books which come out and happen to be for sale, the opportunity for procuring which may pass not to return; and I do not think $7,000 too much for that purpose. I take the bill of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] of last year as my standard. I thought that a pretty good bill, and the gentleman from Indiana ought not to object to the system of retrenchment which we then adopted.

ment which we then adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, we only commenced it then. My friend must know that the expenses of this Government, if it is to be administered with any degree of economy, must come down thirty-five millions lower than they are now. But I think we can agree upon this. We appropriate $1,500 for purchase of files of periodicals and newspapers. I suggest to the gentleman from Ohio that that may be increased to Suggest to the gentleman from Onto that that may be increased to $2,500, the appropriation for purchase of books remaining as it is.

Mr. MONROE. Very well; I agree to that. The increase of that appropriation is very important, because, as the Librarian informs me, he is now compelled to break a great many of his files.

I withdraw the amendment and accept the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. I offer then the following amendment: In line 273 strike out "$1,500" and insert "$2,500" in lieu thereof.

I ask the Clerk to read the paragraph as it will be if thus amended. The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase of books for the Library, $5,000; for the purchase of law-books for the Library, $2,000; for purchase of files of periodicals and newspapers, $2,500; for expenses of exchanging public documents for the publications of foreign governments, $1,000; in all, $9,500.

The amendment offered by Mr. HOLMAN was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For postage on copyright business, $

Mr. MONROE. I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana if he has any objection to increasing this appropriation to $700?

Mr. HOLMAN. The appropriation made here is the same as last

Mr. MONROE. The appropriation was $700 last year, and I am told it was not too much.

Mr. HOLMAN. We did not get that impression from the Librarian.

Mr. MONROE. I have before me the law of last year, and the paragraph is as follows:

For postage on copyright business, $700.

Mr. HOLMAN. Is the gentleman assured by the Librarian that that amount is necessary?

Mr. CLYMER. I saw the Librarian yesterday, and he made no complaint about this matter.

Mr. MONROE. He did not make half the amount of complaint which he wanted to make.

Mr. CLYMER. He made various suggestions, as my friend from Ohio will remember, and I do not think this was one of them.

Mr. MONROE. I move to amend by striking out $500 and inserting $700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill and read the following paragraph:

For compensation of the President of the United States, $25,000; and section 153 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed, so far as the same relates to the salary of the President.

Mr. KEHR. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out "$25,000" and insert "$50,000;" so that it will read: "For compensation of the President of the United States, $50,000."

The question being taken, the Chairman stated that in the opinion of the Chair the "noes" had it.

Mr. KEHR. I make the point that a quorum has not voted. Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman will not insist on a quorum. We will give the gentleman a vote in the House upon that.

Mr. KEHR. Very well. I do not insist on further count.

Mr. FOSTER. I was not in when the Clerk finished reading the portion of the bill making appropriations for public buildings and grounds, and I desire to go back to that point in order to offer an amendment which was agreed to by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ATKINS. That can only be done by unanimous consent.
Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman that we will not object to his going back when we get through the bill.
Mr. FOSTER. It was a little matter, and it was agreed to by the committee.

I offer the following amendment:

After line 335 add the following:

That there be allowed and paid to the two watchmen in the Smithsonian grounds, the two laborers in the Capitol building, one public gardener, and one watchman in Lincoln Square, discharged by reason of the second section of the act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 39, 1877, and for other purposes, approved August 15, 1876, the sum equal to the amount of their respective pay from August 16, 1876, to September 15, 1876, $420.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following

Supervising Architect:
In the construction branch of the Treasury: For Supervising Architect, $4,000; chief clerk, $2,250; photographer, $2,000; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; two clerks of class one; one clerk, at $900; and one messenger; in all, $19,190.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I offer the following amendment:

In line 444, after "$2,000," insert "one principal clerk, at $1,800;" and strike out ne words "two clerks of class four" and insert "one clerk of class four, at $1,800."

Mr. FOSTER. Why is the salary of the principal clerk made $1,800 while the other is $1,800 also?

Mr. HOLMAN. That was agreed to by the committee. It is all

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

Second Comptroller of the Treasury;
For Second Comptroller of the Treasury, $4,500; deputy Comptroller, $2,500; five chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; five clerks of class four; twelve clerks of class three; thirteen clerks of class two; eight female clerks of class one; and three laborers; in all, $33,200.

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania. I ask the chairman of the committee if there is not a clerical error at line 462 where eight "female" clerks of class one are spoken of. I do not understand that there are any female clerks of that class.

Mr. HOLMAN. The word "female" should be stricken out. It is a clerical error. I ask that that correction may be made.

There was no objection, and the word "female" was stricken out.

The Clerk read as follows:

Commissioner of Internal Revenue:
For Commissioner of Internal Revenue, $5,500; one deputy commissioner, $3,200; seven heads of division, at $2,250 each; one stenographer, $1,400; twenty clerks of class four; thirty clerks of class three; thirty-five clerks of class two; twenty-five clerks of class one; fifty clerks, at $900 each; four messengers; and ten laborers; in all, $244,410.

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania. I offer the following amendment. I move to insert after the word "each," in line 630, the fol-

And that so much of the act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, approved March 3, 1875, which declares "that on and after January 1, 1876, the appointments of this" (Treasury) "Department shall be so arranged as to be equally distributed between the several States of the United States, Territories, and District of Columbia, according to population," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the gentleman offer that amendment at this

Mr. WALLACE of Pennsylvania. Certainly I do.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not know but it should be repealed, but it is quite manifest it is not a measure of retrenchment and changes ex-quite manifest it is not a measure of retrenchment and changes existing law. It has not been before the Committee on Appropriations. It has been insisted on for several years by some gentlemen. It got into the law through a conference committee. I hope the gentleman will not press it. If he does I must insist on my point of order.

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania. I have no interest in the matter. It was put in the appropriation bill a few years ago and there is no sense in it. I think it is a provision not business-like. If it is a good thing it should be applied to all the Departments. It applies now only to the Secretary of the Treasury, a responsible officer of the Government, and, while we hold him responsible for the proper discharge of his duties, we declare where he must get his clerical force.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not press this. He can offer it at the close of the bill.

Mr. RUSK. It is new legislation and not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. If the point of order is insisted on, it will have to be sustained.

to be sustained.

Mr. ATKINS. It is just and fair and ought not to be repealed, and I therefore insist on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order and rules the amendment out.

The Clerk read as follows:

For dies, paper, and stamps. $450,000; said engraving and printing to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department, provided the cost does not exceed the price paid under existing contracts.

Mr. CLYMER. I move in line 636, after the word "department," Mr. CLIMER. I move in line 655, after the word "department," to insert the following words: "to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. HOLMAN. It will still require the work to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Mr. CLYMER. Most certainly.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out "four hundred and fifty" in line 633, and to insert "four hundred and sixty-six;" so it will read

Mr. Chairman, $466,000 was the amount appropriated last year. The Committee on Appropriations reduced it to $450,000. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue thinks it should be still higher. We have not had time to consider the subject before the Committee on Appropriations. My amendment merely proposes to increase the amount to what was appropriated last year for this purpose.

The amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

For salaries and expenses of collectors, $1,675,000; and from and after the 30th day of June next there shall be no more than one hundred and twenty collection districts; and it shall be the duty of the President, and he is hereby authorized and directed, to reduce the internal revenue districts to not exceeding the number aforesaid, in the manner heretofore provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause a careful examination to be made of allowances to collectors of internal revenue under the provisions of section 3145 of the Revised Statutes, for collection of revenue in the several districts, and to equalize the same, and reduce the aggregate of such allowances not less than 5 per cent. on the amount of the same.

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of saying that, for one, I do not agree to the proposition of the Committee on Appropriations to reduce the collection districts to one hundred and twenty. I do not propose to test the sense of the House on that question, but I do desire to enter my protest against it. I believe, sir, we have carried this too far already, and that in our attempt at economy in this direction we are losing vast sums of money, largely in excess of any amount heretofore saved.

withdraw the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

For detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal-revenue laws, or conniving in such crime, including payments for information and detection, $60,000.

Mr. CABELL. I move in line 660 to strike out "60,000" and insert

"40,000;" so it will read "$40,000."

I take it for granted this system has arrived at that degree of per-

I take it for granted this system has arrived at that degree of perfection the appropriation for that duty can be lessened, and I hope it will be the pleasure of the House to adopt my amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not think the Committee on Appropriations will have any objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia. The appropriation heretofore made was $100,000; but there is great force in the suggestion that year after year, under our internal-revenue system in time of peace, matters are becoming more arrefunctived, and there would not seem to be the same necessity as systematized, and there would not seem to be the same necessity as in former years for large appropriations.

Mr. HARRISON. I rise to oppose that amendment. I think gentlemen are not aware of one difficulty the country will have to encounter for the next few years. We are commencing to coin silver, and machinery is now more extensively engaged in striking off silver coin than it has been for years in striking off greenbacks.

Mr. CABELL. I would suggest to the gentleman that this appropriation relates to the internal revenue, and has no connection whatever with the matter he is now discussing,

Mr. HARRISON. I thought this referred to the regular detective

Mr. CLYMER. I suggest to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. CA-BELL] to name in his amendment $50,000.

Mr. CABELL. I accept that suggestion, and modify my amendment accordingly.

Mr. HALE. I hope that this amendment will not be insisted upon. If it should be, it is a matter of so much importance to the department that I think we ought to have a full vote upon it. The appropriathat I think we ought to have a full vote upon it. The appropria-tion now in the bill is lower than the former appropriation; and while what has been said about simplifying details may be true, it is an actual fact that there has been more trouble in the collection of internal revenue within the last few months, and more need for this force in detecting frauds, than at any time during the last three or four years. If any change should be made in this appropriation of $60,000, it ought to be increased rather than decreased. I will say to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that I do not think we should be doing justice to the department by assenting on the part of the committee to this amendment. The Department would be glad to have more than the sum named in the bill and believes that it requires more. I think the appropriation had better be left as it is at $50,000.

left as it is, at $50,000.

Mr. CABELL. I would be perfectly willing to agree to that if I did not think that, in view of the perfection to which the system ought to be brought by this time, $50,000, as suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER,] should be sufficient. An appropriation of $60,000 was made last year; and from all that I can ascertain that has been entirely sufficient. It is to be presumed that the department is going on perfecting this system month by month and year by year; and if $60,000 were sufficient last year, $50,000 should and year by year; and it soo, boo were sumceent as tyear, $50,000 salond certainly be enough for the present year. The system in any aspect is a bad one, and if we could do without it, ought not to be continued. I would not undertake to hamper the Government in its operations now, though if we could get rid of such a system, it would be very much better. I know that this detective system has aided in some degree in the detection of crime, but at the same time it is often provocative of crime. The gentleman must see that the system has in many cases operated badly. The disclosures which have been made from time to time before committees of Congress have shown that the men occupying these positions as detectives are frequently not such persons as should be sent out by the Government, and do many other things besides the duties assigned them by their official superiors.

Mr. HALE. I agree fully with the gentleman that any detective system is likely to be abused; and I do not doubt that there have been abuses in this department. The detective system in the collection of customs dues is a system which at times runs pretty rank, involving exactions and espionage upon citizens which to my mind are very offensive. I have no doubt that in the collection of the revenue in that large portion of the country lying south of us such things have come about. But you may depend upon it, Mr. Chairman, that so long as we collect a large portion of our revenue through this Internal Revenue Bureau, and so long as there is temptation for fraud in the manufacture of liquors and tobacco, we must have a large and efficient detective force. The remedy for what the gentleman speaks of is not so much with us in cutting down appropriations as with the Department in enforcing a good service, and securing as its agents men of character, capacity, shrewdness, and nerve, who will attend to the legitimate duties of their offices. That is not a thing which we can regulate. Thirty million dollars or forty million dollars cannot be colregulate. Thirty million dollars or forty million dollars cannot be collected as the internal-revenue tax upon liquors of one kind and another without a large and efficient force of this kind. The department is fully satisfied that this appropriation of $60,000, instead of being too much, is not sufficient; and taking off $10,000 will cripple the operations of the department. We are all interested in having the revenue system properly enforced.

Mr. CABELL. I would remind the gentleman from Maine that I have consented to a modification of my amendment to the extent of $10,000, so that the appropriation shall be $50,000 instead of $60,000.

Mr. HALE. Still I say that if this reduction of $10,000 be made it will seriously cripple the department. I have no doubt the department would prefer more; and it may be that an attempt will be made in the other branch of Congress to increase the appropriation. I am in favor of sticking to this appropriation of $50,000, and if anything more should be added in the Senate, doing as we did last year—insisting on the House figures. I think the gentleman will be better satisfied in the end if, instead of changing this appropriation which the committee has agreed upon, we let it go at $30,000, with the understanding that if it should be put up elsewhere we shall hold the department to $60,000.

Mr. CABELL. I think $50,000 are amply sufficient. I ask a vote on my amendment.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. Cabell, it was not agreed to.

Mr. CABELL. Mr. FOSTER. Mr. CABELL. I shall ask for a vote in the House.

You cannot get it.
I will endeavor to get it, at any rate.

Mr. LAPHAM. I offer the following amendment, to come in after

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to employ, in addition to those now in the service, fifteen special agents of the Treasury, whose compensation shall not exceed $3 per day, with actual necessary traveling expenses when employed.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall have authority to assign a special agent to duty as supervising special agent of the Treasury Department, to be paid such compensation as he may deem proper.

Mr. HALE. Is not that amendment subject to a point of order?

Mr. LAPHAM. I hope the gentleman will not make it.
Mr. HOLMAN. I shall have to insist upon the point of order, for the amendment changes the existing law.

Mr. LAPHAM. I hope the gentleman will not do that.
Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from New York will not press the amendment, for I shall have to insist upon the point of order.
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order, and the amendment is not in order.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For temporary clerks for the Treasury Department and the several Executive epartments, according to the exigencies of the public service, to be apportioned to the Secretary of the Treasury, $60,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall a paid to any officer or employé of the Government as additional compensation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to insert after the word "Treasury," in line 667, the words: "including such employment as may be required in the Sixth Auditor's Office."

The reason why that bureau is mentioned especially is that it is a growing bureau and it is desirable that the force actually required there should be furnished, for it is one of the most important bureaus of the Government.

Mr. FOSTER. What Department does the bureau belong to?
Mr. HOLMAN. The Treasury Department.
Mr. FOSTER. Then is not the amendment rather a reflection on Mr. FOSTER. Then is not the amendment rather a reflection on the Secretary of the Treasury? Mr. HOLMAN. Not at all; we leave it discretionary with him as to what force should be employed.

Mr. FOSTER. Does that amendment come from the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. HOLMAN. It has been submitted to the committee.

Mr. FOSTER. I think there is no occasion for it.
Mr. HOLMAN. The Sixth Auditor's Office is in the Post-Office Department, but under the Treasury Department, and it is a growing

Mr. FOSTER. But it is a part of the Treasury Department, and

Mr. FOSTER. But it is a part of the Treasury Department, and this would be a direct reflection upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no; no reflection at all.

Mr. ATKINS. It is in the Post-Office Department building,
Mr. FOSTER. But it is attached to the Treasury Department, and you should east no reflection upon the officers of that Department.

Mr. ATKINS. It is not a reflection at all.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment is offered in perfect harmony with the riseasure of a president of the Treasury Department.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment is offered in perfect harmony with the views of a prominent officer of the Treasury Department.

Mr. FOSTER. The views of the Sixth Auditor himself.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have offered the amendment at the instance of a prominent officer of the Government.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, the Auditor himself, I suppose.
Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio must see that there is no objection to the amendment. I dislike occupying time about such a matter as this.

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division there ere—ayes 29, noes 20.

Mr. FOSTER. Has a quorum voted ?
The CHAIRMAN. No quorum has voted.

Mr. FOSTER. I must insist upon a further vote. Mr. HOLMAN. Then I withdraw the amendment.

It was offered at the especial request of a very important officer of the Government, but I will not break up a quorum by insisting upon it. I withdraw it. The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

INDEPENDENT TREASURY.

Office of the Assistant Treasurer at New York:
For assistant treasurer, $7.200; for deputy assistant treasurer, $3.240; cashier and chief clerk, $3.780; chief of coin division, $4,000; chief of note-paying division, $2,700; chief of chee receiving division, $2,700; chief of cheek division, $2,700; chief of free hieroreta division, $2,250; chief of free hieroreta division, $2,250; chief of fractional-currency division, $2,250; chief of bond division, $2,160; chief of canceled-cheek and record division, $1,800; two clerks, at $1.000 each; six clerks at $1,530 each; ten clerks, at $1,530 each; ten clerks, at $1,200 each; four clerks, at $1,300 each; four clerks, at $1,200 each; four clerks, at $1,200 each; five messenger, $1,200; keeper of building, $1,620; chief detective, $1,620; assistant detective, $1,260; three hallmen, at $1,000 each; six watchmen, at $730 each; one engineer, $1,000; one porter, $900; in all, $137,540.

Mr. MacDOUGALL. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out, in lines 744 and 745, "one thousand six hundred and twenty" and sert "two thousand."

I offer this amendment from the fact that this is really the most important man about the Treasury, excepting perhaps those who are intrusted with the money. He has to remain in the building six hours every night including Sandays. He must live in the city, and cannot live in the country, where rents and living are cheaper, and it seems to me that his salary should be increased. For six months he spends six hours of every night in the building and six hours of every day, not even excepting Sundays.

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was not agreed

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For checks and check-books for disbursing officers and others, and certificates of eposit for offices of the Treasurer and assistant treasurers and designated deposits.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out "$6,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$8,000" in lines 867-'8; so that it will read:

For checks and check-books for disbursing officers and others, and certificates of deposit for offices of the Treasurer and assistant treasurers and designated depositaries, $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following under the head of "Mint at San Francisco, California."

For wages of workmen and adjusters, $250,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend by striking out "$250,000" and inserting "$275,000."

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division

there were—ayes 5, noes 20.

Mr. PIPER. No quorum has voted. I desire to say that the appropriation asked for by the Director of the Mint for this purpose is

Mr. HOLMAN. I will consent that a vote may be had on this amendment in the House.

Mr. PIPER. Very well, if that can be done I will not press the matter now.

It was accordingly agreed by unanimous consent that a vote be taken upon the amendment in the House.

The Clerk read the following under the same head:

For material and repairs, fuel, lights, chemicals, and other necessaries, $75,000.

Mr. PIPER. I move to amend the clause just read by striking out "$75,000" and inserting "$100,000."

Mr. CLYMER. Let a vote be taken on that in the House

Mr. PAGE. I hope the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] will consent that the amendment be adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am willing that a vote be taken upon it in the House.

Mr. PAGE. We have some papers which we would like to submit.
Mr. HOLMAN. We have some papers also which I will submit to the gentleman before we get through with the bill. We can vote on this amendment in the House.

There being no objection, it was agreed that a vote be taken upon the amendment in the House.

The Clerk read the following:

Assay-office at Charlotte, North Carolina: For salary of assayer and melter, $1,500; for labor and other expenses, $250; in all, $1,750.

Mr. HALE. Before we pass from the portion of the bill relating to the Treasury Department, I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to one thing. I desire to move an amendment in the paragraph relating to the Supervising Architect of the Treasury. That paragraph was just passed when I came in this morning. I had no idea that this bill would come up this morning.

this morning. I had no idea that this bill would come up this morning.

Mr. HOLMAN. We will be very glad to go back when we get through the bill; and the clerk of our committee will call the attention of the gentleman from Maine to this point.

Mr. HALE. There will be no objection to going back then?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following:

Territory of Washington:
For salaries of governor, chief-justice, and two associate judges, at $2,500 each; and secretary, at $1,800; $11,800.

Mr. JACOBS. I move to strike out the paragraph just read and to insert in lieu thereof the substitute which I send to the Clerk's desk. The Clerk read as follows:

Territory of Washington:
For salary of governor, $2,500; and for chief-justice and two associate justices, at $3,000 each, and secretary at $1,800, $13,300.

Mr. JACOBS. The salary of the judges in all the Territories at the present time. I believe, is $3,000 each. That amount was fixed several years ago, and was made to apply to the judges of all the Territories. It was adjusted as being a fair salary.

Prior to that time in most of the Territories of the United States the judges could not live upon the salaries paid them by the United States, and at the same time pay the large traveling expenses which they were required to pay. Therefore the territorial Legislatures were in the habit of making an appropriation to pay these judges an additional amount, so that they might be able to support themselves. It is but fair to these judges in the Territories, whose traveling expenses are very large, that their salaries should remain at least as high as they are now by law. In all the States provision is made to pay the traveling expenses of the district judges, when they are compelled to go outside of their districts. While the cost of living in the Territories is about the same as it is here, yet the expenses of traveling are very much greater.

For instance, the judge in my Territory living at Walla Walla is obliged to travel one hundred and fifty miles to attend court at one place, and one hundred and twenty-five miles to attend court at place, and one hundred and twenty-five miles to attend court at another place, and he has to attend the session of the court at those places twice a year. There is no public conveyance by which he can go to those places, and it costs him at least $10 a day in gold coin while he is traveling, and it takes him from four to five days to make the trip. I say it is no more than fair and just that the salaries of these judges should be left where they are now, at $3,000.

Besides, as every lawyer knows, the jurisdiction of these territorial courts is more extensive than that of any other court in the United States. They have jurisdiction over the enforcement of all the laws of States. They have jurisdiction over the enforcement of all the laws of the United States, criminal and civil, and also admiralty jurisdiction, the United States, criminal and civil, and also admiralty jurisdiction, as well as the enforcement of the laws passed by the territorial legislation. In the district in which I live there is a large admiralty jurisdiction, and the judge of that district is in the habit of going to different places in the district for the purpose of hearing and determining the admiralty causes; and he pays his own expenses while doing so, thus saving to the Government of the United States a large sum of mover. He is not convelled to go and should be remained to them. money. He is not compelled to go, and should he remain at home he would be justified in doing so if his salary was reduced as it is proposed to be reduced by this bill. And in that way the Government of the United States would be a large loser by this reduction of

I hope that as a matter of justice to these justices their salaries will not be reduced below what they are now fixed by law.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is believed by the Committee on Appropriations, after careful inquiry, these salaries are high enough and all the Territories are put on the same footing. The salary of the governor is virtually $3,000 a year, as I understand he receives the benefit of the contingent fund of $500 appropriated by this bill for each one of the Territories.

As to the judges, I can only say these salaries are above the average salaries paid in the United States by the States themselves. It is fully up to the salaries paid in any one of the States of the Northwest, according to my information, and $1,000 more than is paid certain judges in some of the States of the Northwest. That is a consideration I hope the gentleman from Washington Territory will not overlook. It is important these appointments shall be made from citizens of the Territories. As long as the salary is disproportionately high the tendency is to make these appointments from the States instead of from the citizens of the Territories. When salaries are comparatively low, at least as low as the salaries paid in the States, there is less motive to press for these offices on the part of citizens outside of the Territories. I think myself it is desirable these officers should be appointed from the citizens permanently located in the several Territories of the United States.

The committee has considered the propriety of dispensing with the office of secretary of the Territory, and the general impression seems that office might be dispensed with, but we have left that officer with a salary of $1,800 a year in the bill. I do not think the gentleman should urge discrimination in favor of his own Territory, but that all should be put upon the same footing. Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Chairman, I can see no justice in paying to the district judge living at Portland, whose duties are not night as onerous, and who has no traveling expenses at all, four to five thousand dollars a year, when the duties of that judge, so far as the Government of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned, are not as onerous as the duties of the United States is concerned. ties of the district judge in the third judicial district in Washington Territory at a salary no higher than is proposed in this bill. The ad-Territory at a salary no higher than is proposed in this bill. The admiralty jurisdiction of the judge of the third judicial district in Washington Territory is far more extensive than that of the United States district judge from Oregon. The United States criminal jurisdiction for that judge is far more extensive than that of the district judge in Oregon. Then why should the district judge for Oregon receive four or five thousand dollars a year and his traveling expenses paid in addition if he goes out of that district, while this judge of the third judicial district, going wherever sailors are arrested, and trying them under the law for summary proceedings, and paying his own expenses, only receives the salary here provided for? I say where is the justice of such discrimination? If this Congress will make provision for paying the traveling expenses of the judges it will be all right. If that be done, I shall not complain. It is not because we want high salaried officers, but because we want competent judges in the Territories that I are concessed to the reduction of their solaries. tories, that I am opposed to the reduction of their salaries. I make no opposition to the reduction of salaries so far as the other officers are concerned, but I say the salaries of these judges should be left where they are.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 12, noes 20.

Mr. JACOBS. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that no quorum has voted.

The CHAIRMAN. No quorum having voted, the Chair will order

Mr. JACOBS. I will be content if the gentleman from Indiana will agree to give us a vote in the House on this proposition.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am willing to let the gentleman have a vote in the House on the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the amendment will be considered as agreed to for that purpose."

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to detail not exceeding twenty enlisted men for clerical service in his Department in addition to those hereinbefore provided.

Mr. WELLS, of Missonri. I move in line 1211 to strike out "twenty" and insert "thirty;" so it will read "thirty enlisted men."

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

For compensation of the Secretary of the Interior, $8,000; assistant secretary, $3,500; chief clerk, $2,250; four clerks, at $2,000 each, one of whom shall be disbursing clerk; four clerks of class four; five clerks of class three; five clerks of class two; five clerks of class one, one of whom shall be the telegraph operator of the Department; three copyists; two messengers; two assistant messengers; and four laborers; in all, $58,650.

Mr. FOSTER. I move in line 1324 to strike out "four" and insert

Mr. FOSTER. I move in line 1324 to sure out.

"eight."

Mr. Chairman, there are now in the Secretary's office eight clerks, who are receiving a salary of $2,000 a year, and I know of no reason why a distinction should be made now between the clerks in this office. They have been classified as at present for years. They occupy very responsible positions, equal probably to similar positions held in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, where the compensation is much larger. I think at least all these officers, who are the eyes and ears of the Secretary of the Interior, should be treated equally. I hope therefore my amendment will be adopted, so these officers will be reinstated as they now are.

Mr. HOLMAN. That will be a greater disproportion. I hope the gentleman will agree to six.

gentleman will agree to six.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not know where to draw the line.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is placing this Department in a much more favorable position than the other Departments.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope my amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think six will be ample; four I believe to be sufficient, but I do not wish to break a quorum, and I trust the gensumcient, but I do not wish to break a quorum, and I trust the gentleman will not object to six.

Mr. FOSTER. Eight is hardly enough.

Mr. HOLMAN. Take six.

Mr. FOSTER. I will compromise on seven. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend the amendment by inserting six.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 30, noes 28.

So the amendment to the amendment was agreed to

So the amendment to the amendment was agreed to. The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I think that in making up the bill there must have been a mistake made at line 1323. The salary of the chief clerk of the Department of the Interior is cut down from $2,500 to $2,250, while the chief clerks of the other Departments are getting $2,500. I do not think it could have been intended to make this difference.

He is not the chief of a bureau, but the chief clerk of a Department.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend from Maine is mistaken in his statement of the facts. If he will turn to page 46, line 1115, he will find that we have put the chief clerk of the War Department on exactly the same footing. He will find there this item:

One chief clerk, at $2,250.

I wish to remind my friend of the fact that all through the expensive period of the war the chief clerks of the various Departments received only $2,000. Even as the bill stands now it is an increase of $250 over the salaries in the most expensive period of our

Mr. HALE. This has always been $2,500.
Mr. HOLMAN. Not at all.
Mr. HALE. I think the gentleman is mistaken. If we give $2,500 it is not a large salary for such an office.

Mr. HOLMAN. If we agree to that we will have to go back through the whole bill to make salaries correspond in the other De-

Mr. HALE. The chief clerk in the Treasury Department has

Mr. HOLMAN. But in the War, Navy, and other Departments we have put the salaries of the chief clerks at $2,250.

Mr. HALE. In those Departments they have not as onerous duties as in the Interior Department.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we cannot discriminate between the Interior and those other Departments.

Mr. HALE. It is the next largest Department, so far as the duties are concerned, to the Treasury Department.

The question being taken on Mr. HALE's amendment there were—ayes 31, noes 49.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

For expenses of packing and distributing official documents, (including salary of superintendent, at $1,600,) $5,000.

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania. I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1347 strike out "$1,600" and insert "$2,600," and in line 1348 strike out "$5,000" and insert "$6,000."

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania. The superintendent of documents occupies a laborious and responsible position. His correspondence is probably as extensive as that of any officer in the Government.

In addition to the care of documents and their distribution to colleges, public libraries, &c., he has the supervision of the library of the Department, and also of the requisitions for printing and binding, and the postage of the Department. Besides, it is made his duty by statute to prepare the Biennial or Blue Book of the Government, which necessitates much care and labor and readers. which nece sitates much care and labor, and requires more than ordinary ability.

I think we ought not to reduce his salary.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania, it was not agreed to—ayes 33, noes 47.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph under the head "General Land Office:"

For maps of the United States, (including paper.) $2,000.

Mr. WALLING. I offer the following amendment: Strike out "$2,000" and insert "$4,000."

The amount hitherto appropriated for publishing these maps has been $6,000 annually. The sum here proposed to be appropriated, $2,000, will scarcely pay for the change in the plates from which the maps are printed. It will not furnish any maps for general distribumaps are printed. It will not furnish any maps for general distribution, and probably hardly enough for departmental purposes. Having received from the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations a request to state the amount that will be necessary for this purpose, the Committee on Public Lands were willing to go as far as they possibly could in cutting down expenses; but we think it would be destroying the utility of this branch of the service to cut the appropriation down to $2,000. But desiring to make a reduction of expenditures wherever possible the Committee on Public Lands ask the House to make the amount $4,000, instead of $5,000 as it has been heretofore.

Mr. CLYMER. The amount of this appropriation last year was $5,000. It is one of those appropriations which ought from the nature of the case to decrease from year to year; for nearly all the members and others who need these maps and are entitled to them have already and others who need these maps and are entitled to them have already been supplied, and the Committee on Appropriations think that $2,000 would be ample for the purpose. But if the Committee on Public Lands feel that there is a necessity for any increase above that, we are willing to increase the amount to $3,000, but certainly not to $4,000. I think this is a case where we can effect a saving without any injury to the public service.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio accept the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. WALLING. I do not think that we can accept that proposition. I think we cannot get along without $4,000.

Mr. CLYMER. I move to amend the amendment by inserting "$3,000" instead of "$4,000."

The question being taken on the amendment to the amendment, it

The question being taken on the amendment to the amendment, it was agreed to; and the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. GOODIN. I desire to offer an amendment at line 1357.

Mr. CLYMER. I suggest that that part of the bill has been

Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi. The Clerk was reading so fast that the gentleman could not stop him in time.

Mr. GOODIN. I ask unanimous consent to go back to that paragraph.

Mr. CLYMER. What is the gentleman's proposition?

Mr. GOODIN. To strike out "$1,800" as the salary of the recorder of the General Land Office and to insert "$3,500."

Mr. CLYMER. We cannot consent to any such increase as that.
Mr. GOODIN. I do not at present ask your consent to the amendment, but I ask that I may be allowed to propose it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to going back to the paragraph indicated by the gentleman from Kansas? The Chair hears

The paragraph is as follows:

General Land Office:
For the Commissioner of the General Land Office, $4,000; chief clerk, $2,000; law clerk, $2,000; recorder, $1,500; three principal clerks at $1,500 each; five clerks of class from, twenty-two clerks of class three, forty clerks of class two, seventy clerks of class one; one draughtsman, $1,600; one assistant draughtsman, $1,400; two messengers; three assistant messengers; eight laborers; and two packers; in all, $213,440: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to use any portion of said appropriation for piecework, or by the day, month, or year, at such rate or rates as he may deem just and fair, not exceeding a salary of $900 per annum.

Mr. GOODIN. I offer the following amendment:

In line 1357 strike out "$1,800," and insert in lieu thereof "$3,500;" so that it will read: "recorder, $3,500."

I desire to say that I have given considerable attention to this matter of the compensation of the recorder in the General Land Office. I understand that this office was established with a compensation to that officer of $2,000. I understand that at the time the office was established this officer had fully three-fourths of the clerical force of the office under his immediate superintendence and supervision. I understand further that by a subsequent act of Congress the office of solicitor has been abolished and the duties of that office devolved upon the recorder. He has at this time over one-fourth of the entire clerical force of the office under his care and supervision, and it does seem to me that the compensation which is now given him in this bill, of $1,800 a year, is not enough, and my amendment proposes to increase it to $3,500.

I have investigated this matter very carefully, and I will say further that the committee of which I have the honor to be a member, the Committee on Public Lands, have also taken it under consideration, and I believe I may state that it is the unanimous wish and desire of that committee, after investigation, that this increase should be made.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. FOSTER. Before that motion is put I desire to correct a

Mr. FOSTER. Before that motion is put I desire to correct a statement made yesterday by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] in reference to the public debt.

Mr. HOLMAN. Allow me to say that after the adjournment I saw the official statement of the public debt, and found that there had been a reduction of two million sixty-nine thousand and odd dollars, instead of an increase, as published in a city paper. I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Reagan reported that the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union had had, according to order, under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House take a recess until twelve colorly.

o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at eleven o'clock and fifty-nine minutes a. m.) the House took a recess until twelve o'clock m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session at twelve o'clock m.

The SPEAKER. The Chair asks unanimous consent that the Chaplain now offer prayer.

No objection was made, and prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

THE FLORIDA ELECTION.

Mr. HOPKINS. By unanimous consent, the report of the committee on the Florida election was to come up to-day after the reading of the Journal. Inasmuch as the Journal is not to be read and in of the Journal. Inasmuch as the Journal is not to be read and in order to avoid any discussion or confusion about the matter, after conference with the minority of the committee, I ask unanimous consent that the subject shall go over, keeping its present position until after the Journal shall be read the next time.

Mr. HALE. What is the proposition? I could not hear it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, unanimous consent having been heretofore given that the subject of the Florida report be considered to-day after the reading of the Journal and in consequence of no Journal being read to-day, asks that it may be considered immediately after the first time the Journal is read, and the Chair thinks that is an equitable arrangement.

Mr. HALE. Saving all rights.

Mr. HOPKINS. Certainly. I conferred with the gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. DUNNELL,] a member of the minority of the committee, before making this request.

mittee, before making this request.

No objection was made, and it was so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now insist upon my motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the legislative, &c., appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. (Mr. Reagan in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. REAGAN in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and indicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes; the pending question being upon the amendment offered by Mr. GOODIN, in line 1357, under the heading of General Land Office, to strike out "$1,800" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,500;" so as to read: "the recorder, $3,500."

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division, there ere—ayes 5, noes 22.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not agreed

The Clerk read the following, under the same heading:

For diagrams, stationery, parchment paper for land patents, furniture and repairs of the same, miscellaneous items, (including two of the city newspapers, to be filed, bound, and preserved for the use of the office.) for the actual expenses of clerks detailed to investigate fraudulent land entries, trespasses on the public lands, and cases of official misconduct, and for advertising and telegraphing, $25,000.

Mr. GOODIN. I move to amend that paragraph by striking out in line 1381 "$25,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$27,500."

Mr. Chairman, I understand, on conference with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that the last appropriation for this purpose amounted to $27,500, and that that amount has been entirely in-adequate for the purpose named. This amendment simply proposes to give for this purpose the same amount that was given last session. The question was put, and the Chair announced that it was deided in the negative.

Mr. GOODIN. I call for a division; not more than a dozen members vote on any of these amendments.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 7, noes 27.

No further count being insisted on, the amendment was not agreed to. The Clerk read the following:

Indian Office:
For compensation of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,000; four clerks of class four; seven clerks of class three; one stenographer, at $1,600; hine clerks of class two; twelve clerks of class one; eight copylists, at $900 each; one messenger; one assistant messenger, and one laborer; in all, $61,450.

Mr. FOSTER. I move to amend the paragraph just read so as to make the salary of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs $3,000 instead make the salary of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs $3,000 instead of $3,000, as proposed by this bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. The present salary of the Commissioner is $3,000.

Mr. FOSTER. And I propose to make it $3,600.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is an increase of salary.

Mr. FOSTER. Of course it is.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ought to make a point of order on that amendment.

ment.

Mr. FOSTER. It is too late to do that. The effect of this amendment if adopted will be to place the Commissioner of Indian Affairs ment it adopted will be to place the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in point of salary upon the same footing as the Auditors of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Pensions being an officer of like importance. No one will deny but what it is one of the most responsible positions under the Government, and in my judgment the salary proposed by this bill is inadequate to the position. My amendment simply proposes to make the salary of this officer conform to the salaries of other officers of similar grade. We have in one case increased the salary of the Commissioner of Customs to correspond with like salaries of Computedlers of the Treasury. It is but fair that the salary of this Comptrollers of the Treasury. It is but fair that the salary of this officer should be made to correspond with the salaries of other officers of like importance.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am very glad to bear testimony to the high character and official integrity of the present incumbent of this office; but the law fixes his salary at $3,000 a year, and we have but followed the law in this appropriation bill.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. Foster, and it was not exceed to it was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

Pension Office:
For compensation of the Commissioner of Pensions, $3,600; chief clerk, $2.000; medical referee, $2,250; twenty-six clerks of class four: fifty-two clerks of class three; eighty-four clerks of class two; one hundred and twenty-two clerks of class one; one skilled mechanic, at $1,200; twenty-five copyrists, at $900 each; one messenger, twelve assistant messengers; eight laborers; two watchmen; one engineer, at $1,200; and one assistant engineer, at $1,000; in all, $444,430; Provided, That upon application of the Secretary of War, when the necessities of the public services or require, a transfer of not exceeding fifteen clerks may be made from the force employed in this office, to serve in the office of the Surgeon-General of the Army.

Mr. DANFORD. I raise the point of order against the proviso of the paragraph just read that it changes existing law, and is therefore not in order in this bill. Mr. HOLMAN. Even if it did change existing law, I trust the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Danford] will not seek to deprive the Department of the benefit of this clerical force. I believe it is a change of law as to number, but it is not a change of law as to principle, for the same thing has been done heretofore. It is so important that the Surgeon-General's Office should have these clerks that I trust there

Surgeon-General's Office should have these clerks that I trust there will be no objection to this proviso.

Mr. DANFORD. In reply to the remarks of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. Holman] I desire to say that this Pension Bureau is one in which the very poorest and most needy classes of our people have great interest. In conversation with the Commissioner of Pensions only this morning, I was informed that there were in round numbers 80,000 unadjudicated cases in his bureau at this time. He also gave me a statement from the chief of the mail division, showing that, at the close of last week, there remained unanswered over thirty-seven hundred letters, and that there are received over one thousand letters weekly. The full statement from the chief of the mail division is as follows: the chief of the mail division is as follows:

Pension Office-summary of letters of inquiry received.

	Inv.	Wid.	1812	Med.	Fin.	B. L.	S.S.D.	Miss.	Total.
Not answered last week. Received this week	2, 309 668	356 243	57 24	4 5	106 57	88 41	119 27	585 108	3, 624 1, 173
To be answered Answered this—	2, 977 618	599 213	81 15	9 9	163 59	129 30	146 3	693 111	4, 797 1, 058
Not answered this date	2, 359	386	66		104	99	143	582	3, 739

JANUARY 27, 1877.

There should be no contingency in which this important bureau of the Government should be called upon to give up the services of any of its clerks to any other bureau. And the Surgeon-General's Office is in the same condition. I am informed that in that office there are between twelve thousand and thirteen thousand unadjudicated cases.

Both of these bureaus unquestionably need a greater clerical force in order to enable them to meet the daily demands made upon them by the almoners of the Government. I insist that this contingency should not be allowed to hang over the Pension Bureau, but that we should give to the Surgeon-General's Office the necessary force in order that the duties of that office may be performed in accordance with the demands of the public service. I insist upon the point of order

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course the gentleman cannot make a speech, and then insist upon his point of order.

Mr. DANFORD. I made my remarks in reply to the gentleman.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman made a speech upon the merits of the question.

the question.

Mr. DANFORD. Just as the gentleman himself did.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman cannot make his speech, and then avail himself of the point of order.

Mr. DANFORD. It was all upon the point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman, for of course he is entitled to a vote on his proposition—

Mr. FOSTER. Let us have the point of order decided.

man, for of course he is entitled to a vote on his proposition—
Mr. FOSTER. Let us have the point of order decided.
Mr. HOLMAN. I am following the example of my friend. The delay in answering these letters is occasioned by the difficulty in the Surgeon-General's Office. The force in the Pension Office is very ample, but the delay in communicating with the applicants for pensions results from the delay in the Surgeon-General's Office.
Mr. DANFORD. Let me ask the gentleman a question.
Mr. HOLMAN. Excuse me a moment. The object of this proviso is simply to enable the War Department to increase the force of the Surgeon-General's Office when required, and when the clerks are not required in the Pension Office.

required in the Pension Office.

Mr. DANFORD. Will the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. HOLMAN] answer just this one question? As I am informed there are but between twelve and thirteen thousand unadjudicated cases in the Surgeon-General's Office, while there are in the Pension Bureau in round numbers eighty thousand unadjudicated cases; how does it happen, then, that the failure to make prompt answers in the Pension Bureau depends upon the delay in the Surgeon-General's Office?

Mr. HOLMAN. That is easily explained. It is a delay in obtaining communications from the Surgeon-General's Office, which frequently requires the writing of several letters. The gentleman will observe another fact: that is, that as you diminish the service in the Pension Bureau there is a growing tendency to enlarge the correspondence. It will be found that frequently the same letters are writspondence. It will be found that frequently the same letters are written over and over again, without any explanation being made of the necessity of constantly writing the same letters, calling for the same proof, even after it has been understood by the party that the proof has been furnished. I call for a vote.

Mr. DANFORD. I insist on the point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall not insist that the question of order has been waived. If the Chair thinks the point a good one, let it be sus-

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. RIDDLE. I move to amend by striking out "$600," so as to make the compensation of the Commissioner of Pensions $3,000 instead of $3,600. I make this motion in order that a statement may be made to go upon the record why there is this discrimination in regard to the compensation of the different commissioners. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue gets, I believe, $6,000 a year.

Mr. HOLMAN. Fifty-five hundred dollars.

Mr. RIDDLE. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs gets only $3,000, while the Commissioner of Pensions gets $3,600. It seems to me that these offices are of equal dignity, and I desire the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to state why the compensation is not the

Mr. HOLMAN. In answer to the honorable gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. Riddle,] I wish to state that the law has always made a distinction between the salary of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and that of the Commissioner of Pensions. The reason for this distinction seems to me quite manifest. The duties of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, while important to the country, do not require the same range of acquirements nor the same special devotion of time and talent on the part of the Commissioner as do the duties of the Pension Bureau. An efficient Commissioner of Pensions is a matter of vital concern not cally to the very bedy of pressure and vital concerns. of vital concern not only to the vast body of persons applying for pensions, but also for the purpose of securing reasonable economy in that branch of the public service. It is a branch whose operations extend to every section of the country, affecting almost every class of our people; and a thoroughly trained legal mind is required to meet the constantly recurring questions so difficult to decide as to the rights of the applicant on the one side and the rights of the Government on the other. I think the law has provided wisely and reasonably in making this distinction; for while the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs is one of the best officers of our Government, an honest, uprigot man, who deserves well of the country for his good intentions and earnest purposes in the discharge of official duty, yet the position of the Commissioner of Pensions is unquestionably more important; and I trust the present incumbent will be found a valuable officer

Mr. RIDDLE. I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows, under the head of Pension Office:

For actual expenses of clerks detailed to investigate suspected frauds and attempts at fraud, as provided by law, $40,000.

Mr. DURHAM. I move to amend so as to make this appropriation $50,000 instead of $40,000. I certainly do not want one dollar appropriated beyond what is necessary to protect the Government and Pension Department; but I am satisfied that there are now upon the pension-rolls a great many persons who ought not to be there. There is but one way in which this abuse can be obviated, and that is by increasing the efficiency of the detective system provided for in this part of the bill. I have been informed, and have brought the matter to the attention of the Commissioner of Pensions, that in my own district quite a number of individuals now upon the pension-rolls are no more entitled to pensions than I am, although I never was engaged in the late war. These persons have made statements of their cases which have been submitted to the proper department, and upon the prima facie case pensions have been granted; yet to-day those individuals are as well able to make a living at their various occupations as perhaps any gentleman upon this floor. It is true that in some cases these men may have been wounded for the time being, yet they have not been disabled to the extent provided for in the pension laws.

Under the existing system it seems to be impossible for the Commissioner of Pensions to send out agents into the various States to missioner of Pensions to send out agents into the various States to investigate these matters and to discover the persons who are improperly borne upon the pension-rolls. I am thoroughly satisfied from what I have heard that upon a rigid examination nearly 10 per cent. of those now borne upon the pension-rolls ought to be stricken from them. If this be true, an additional appropriation of $10,000 for the detection of these frauds, these impositions upon the Treasury, would effect a saving of two millions and a half of dollars to the Treasury without doing a particle of injury to any interest that ought to be protected.

In addition to this consideration, the economy which may be accomplished by striking from the pension-rolls those not entitled to pensions will enable the Government more easily to place upon the rolls the class of persons specified in the bill passed by the House a short time ago; I refer to those who served in the Mexican war. Thus it time ago; I refer to those who served in the Mexican war. Thus it may occur that if the pension laws should be carried out strictly, no additional charge would be incurred by the Treasury in consequence of the passage of the bill granting pensions to Mexican soldiers. For this reason, with the view of having absolute fairness dealt out as regards the interest of the Government and the interests of pensioners, I move to increase this appropriation $10,000, so as to put it within the power of the Government to send out agents for the detection of the frauds now being practiced upon the department.

Mr. MUTCHLER. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that there has been more abuse in the expenditure of this special fund for the Pension Bureau than in the expenditure of any other fund appropriated by Congress. I am willing to admit there are many persons upon the Bureau than in the expenditure of any other fund appropriated by Congress. I am willing to admit there are many persons upon the pension-rolls whose names ought not to be there, but I am not willing to admit so large a fund as proposed by the gentleman from Kentucky is necessary to detect the fraud of persons whose names are improperly upon the pension-rolls.

This fund, as I understand it, is used for the purpose of paying the expenses of clerks who are detailed to travel through the country to ascertain what names are upon the pension-rolls which ought not to be there, and to detect other frauds in that bureau. The special agents' account in the Pension Office, I am informed, shows thousands of dollars to have been charged to a late Commissioner of Pensands of dollars to have been charged to a late Commissioner of Pensions himself. He never attempted to investigate a single case, but whenever he took a trip through the country his expenses were paid out of this fund. I am also credibly informed that a certain individual who occupied a position as chief of the special division from July, 1875, to December of that year, drew in addition to his salary of $1,800 a year an average of three or four dollars a day from this fund; that he drew his traveling expenses time and again between Washington and Mount Vernon, Ohio, where he lived, although he never investigated a solitary case. This is the way this special fund is abused in this bureau. is abused in this bureau.

is abused in this bureau.

I am prepared, Mr. Chairman, to show also from Table 3 of the Commissioner's report that the statement made by the Commissioner is not true; that there is a false showing of the expenditure of this fund. The Commissioner says that during the year there were 2,633 cases investigated. Now, sir, out of the 2,633 cases investigated there were but 513 dropped from the roll. So that it cost the sum of $33,142.80 of the $40,000 appropriated last year to investigate 2,100 cases which are still upon the roll, going to show this fact: that during the campaign whenever a clerk in the Pension Bureau or anybody attached to the bureau desired to travel through the country for electioneering purposes or to go home to yoté he collected a lot of these tioneering purposes or to go home to vote he collected a lot of these cases, traveled off with them at $4 a day and mileage during the time of his absence.

The Commissioner also attempts to show in his report there was a sum of $140,000 saved during the last year. If you will add together all the items he claims to have been saved, you will find it amounts to $99,400. So upon the face of the report itself there is a discrepancy of nearly $38,000, which he claims to have shown was saved, which was not saved at all.

There are other inaccuracies, Mr. Chairman, in this report that I might call the attention of the House to, as, for instance, the Commissioner claims the amount due in each claim is estimated at $577.29. Now, sir, in response to a resolution passed by this House two or three years ago, inquiring what the average amount of pension due to each claimant was, one of the clerks in the bureau gathered together fifty cases. He took them indiscriminately out of the originals, and the average of the fifty cases was the amount stated of $577.29. Since that average of the fifty cases was the amount stated of $577.29. Since that time, the limitation has interevened, and pensioners now draw pensions from the date of their application. Before that they drew from the date of disability and death, and I affirm now the average amount due applicants for pensions to-day does not amount to one-quarter of what the Commissioner says it does in his report, and consequently the amount saved to the Government in that item is not the amount the Commissioner says it is.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. DURHAM's amendment was disagreed to.

Mr. MUTCHLER. I now move to strike out "40,000" and insert "25,000," so as to reduce the appropriation from $40,000 to $25,000.

Mr. RUSK demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 33, noes 67. So (no further count being demanded) the amendment was dis-

The Clerk read as follows:

United States Patent Office:

For compensation of the Commissioner of the Patent Office, $4,000; for assistant commissioner, $2,750; for chief clerk, $2,250; three examiners in-chief, at $2,750 each; examiner in charge of interferences, $2,500; trade-mark examiner, $2,250; twenty-two principal examiners, at $2,500 each; twenty-two first assistant examiners at $1,800 each; twenty-two third assistant examiners, at $1,600 each; twenty-two third assistant examiners, at $1,400 each; one machinist, $1,600; four clerks of class four, (one of whom shall receive $200 additional for services as financial clerk, and shall give bond in such amount as the Secretary of the Interior may determine;) five clerks of class three; fifteen clerks of class two; and twenty-five clerks of class one; also for twenty permanent clerks, at $1,000 each; for forty copyist-clerks, at $900 each; for three skilled draughtsmen, at $1,200 each; for one messenger and purchasing clerk, $1,000; for one skilled laborer, $1,200; for four attendants in model room, at $1,000 each; for three attendants in model room, at $900 each; for three attendants in model room, at $900 each; for threy-five laborers, at $720 each; for six laborers, at $600 each; in all, $347,900.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I move to amend in line 1443 by inserting, after the word "three," "one of whom shall be designated as translator of languages." It now reads "five clerks of class three." I pro-pose to add, after the word "three," "one of whom shall be designated as translator of languages." This will not increase the expense at all, as translator of languages." This will not increase the expense at all, but it is, I am informed, much desired by the Department.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. For the purpose of asking the

For the purpose of asking the gentleman from Indiana a question, I move to strike out the last word.

I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations if I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations if it is not true that the present bill cuts down the force in the Patent Office seventy-nine below last year; that is, below the fiscal year ending 30th of June last? Is not that true?

Mr. HOLMAN. There is some reduction.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I want to ask the gentleman if he thinks it is wise to reduce that force below what that office absolutely needs? I think that our sources of information ought to be from those in charge; but I am assured by the Commissioner of Patents that, while they may be able to get along with the present force, yet a reduction like the one proposed, a reduction of seventy-nine in number, will cripple the Patent Office. I am told that in some portions of the office now they are two months behind. I do not offer an amendment, but I wish to hear what the gentleman has to say about that. about that

Mr. HOLMAN. The appropriations made by this bill for the pur-coses of this office are $347,900 as against $384,900, as I understand poses of this office are $347,900 as against $384,900, as I understand for the present year.

I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, that there is no bureau of the Government where, as a general proposition, the salaries are so high as are the salaries of this particular office. There is no bureau where a thorough reform is more absolutely demanded. The theory that this bureau is self-sustaining has had a very curious effect on the management of the office. It has given rise, as the gentleman from North Carolina is aware, to more criticisms as to the employés and as to the number of persons on the pay-roll and drawing pay while rendering no service then perhaps any other office in recent years. The committee in attempting a slight retrenchment in this bill have simply sought to promote the purity of the public service there; so that the amount shall be the sum required, but no more than the sum required for the economical administration of the bureau.

In comparison with other governments ours is the most extrava-

In comparison with other governments ours is the most extravagant—I mean in comparison with the amount of business done—of all the patent offices in the world. In the government of Great Britain while an amount equal to $350,000 of our money is expended annually it yields a revenue to the government of $400,000 of our money, while, with all the elements taken into account, this Patent Office of ours, out of which grow a great many questionable monopolies injurious to the public interests, scarcely supports itself; and in the only case where we are able to make a comparison with Great Britain it is, as I have said, an important source of revenue to the Government

The Committee on Appropriations are satisfied that an effort at reasonable retrenchment in this bureau is absolutely necessary to promote the purity of that branch of the service. We understand that the head of that Department has taken that matter in hand and is determined that that bureau shall be administered upon a more economical principle and with more of an exclusive regard for the public service than heretofore.

Mr. SAMPSON rose.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I withdraw the pro forma amendment, that my friend from Iowa [Mr. SAMPSON] may renew it.

Mr. SAMPSON. I renew the pro forma amendment.

I only desire to say a word or two in relation to this office. The gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. Holman,] as I understood him, made the remark that the Patent Office was barely self-sustaining. Now, sir, I took occasion at the last session of Congress to examine this question. tion, and I found that there were in the Treasury to the credit of this office nearly $1,000,000; that not only has it been self-sustaining, but that it has actually brought in a revenue to the Treasury of nearly $1,000,000, the surplus overpaying the expenses of the office amount-

I desire to say also that it is reported by that office that it is impossible to keep up with the great number of applications made by inventors. Men will employ their time and their money, some of them years upon years, in the preparation of these important inventions and discoveries, and make applications to this office for their patents, and then they are delayed for want of service on account of Congress cutting down the appropriations for this office. It is but just, as it seems to me, that these applications by inventors should be passed upon promptly. But even with the force they had before they were unable to keep up with the business of the office. These inventors are constantly writing letters, sending their attorneys, and pressing upon the Commissioner and examiners to have their cases decided, and it is but an act of justice to them that there should be a sufficient force there to pass upon these applications. There are now thousands and thousands of them lying there, and the office is unable to take them up and consider them. It seems to me that the force of this office, under these circumstances, ought not to be further re-

I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

For contingent and miscellaneous expenses of the Patent Office, namely: For stationery for use of office, repair of model-cases, stationary portfolios for drawings, furniture and labor connected therewith, repairing, papering, painting, carpets, ice, advertising, books for library, moneys refunded, printing engraved patentheads, international exchanges, plumbing, gas-fitting, extra labor on indexes and abstracts for annual reports, itting rooms, and other contingencies, $50,000; and no money appropriated by this paragraph shall be expended for advertising in newspapers published in the city of Washington other than the Patent Office Official Gazette.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I offer the following amendment: In line 1465 strike ont "$50,000" and insert "$60,000."

Last year the amount appropriated for this purpose was $70,000. believe there is no objection to my amendment on the part of the committee not sufficient.

Mr. CLYMER. What is the reason for it?
Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. The reason is, because $50,000 is of sufficient. Last year $70,000 was appropriated.

There are two or three of the items under this heading which I think ought to be increased, and I think the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will give his consent to have them increased a very small amount. I will indicate them as they are reached.

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following

For photolithographing, or otherwise producing copies of drawings of current and back issues, for use of the office and for sale, including pay of temporary draughtsmen, $20,000; the work to be done under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents, who shall receive competitive bids therefor.

Mr. HUBBELL. I offer the following amendment:

In line 1473, after the word "Patents," add these words "in the city of Washington."

If I can get the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for a few minutes, I think I can explain this matter so that he will not object to the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to reserve all points of order on the amend-

Mr. HUBBELL. I can show the inconsistency of the language in this law as it stands. This work must necessarily be done under the personal supervision of the Commissioner of Patents. Originally it personal supervision of the Commissioner of Patents. Originally it was done in the Patent Office. But as the volume of business increased it began to be done outside, but always under the supervision of the Commissioner. It is a work that requires celerity and dispatch. The drawings are the drawings which go with the patents issued to the inventive geniuses of the country. And a patent cannot be issued without the drawing, and the drawing after being photolithographed has to be compared before the patent can issue. Now under the present system it is required that the work shall be done under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents, and that competitive bids be received. Well, a similar provision was in the corresponding clause of the appropriation bill of last year, and under that provision the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner, being required to receive competitive bids from parties residing in dif-

ing required to receive competitive bids from parties residing in different parts of the country, was required to receive bids from parties in San Francisco, in New Orleans, in Boston, in New York, and in every place. But in his contract with the parties with whom he contracted there was a provision inserted that the work should be returned in seven days.

Now let us see what the working was under that provision. Last year, under the provisions of law, the contract for "current work" was awarded to Osgood & Co., of Boston, and required the work to be returned in seven days. That contract was awarded on the 1st of September, 1876, to take effect upon October 1, 1876, the work to be delivered within seven days from the receipt of copy. No work was ever delivered, within the time specified, by Messrs. Osgood & Co. The contract ran so far behind the work for October 10 that the office was compelled to go outside and get the work done for October 17 and 24. From that time to November 29 the contractors failed to deliver drawings for nearly four hundred patents. The quarto-page drawings have never been received except for October quarto-page drawings have never been received except for October 3 and 10, and those were nearly two months late. The issues of October 17, 24, and 31, and of November 7, 14, 21, and 28, more than five hundred pages in all, were never photolithographed. In the drawings for October 3 and 10 five errors, omissions, occurred. The rejectives are received except for October 3.

Well, Mr. Chairman, the Commissioner of Patents was compelled to annul that contract. The men who had applied for patents, and who found their cases so far behind, became so clamorous that he was compelled to annul that contract and let another. When it was known that this contract was to be annulled the patent attorneys of the country representing the inventions coming the country representing the inventions. the country, representing the inventive genius of the country, presented a petition to the Secretary of the Interior, a copy of which I hold in my hand and will ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To the Hon. Secretary of the Interior:

The undersigned, doing business in the United States Patent Office as solicitors of patents, respectfully suggest that in consequence of the delay caused in procuring copies of drawings under the present arrangement, great delay is caused in issuing patents, and that such delay often works great hardship to our clients, as well as to ourselves.

It is not an uncommon thing for the issuing of patents to be delayed several weeks; even now patents which should have been sent out, of the issue of October 10, are yet held by the office on account of the delay in furnishing the drawings. There are also many of intermediate dates in the same condition, some copies of which have been forwarded to the office and have been several times rejected on account of imperfect workmanship.

One fruitful cause of this delay is that in sending the negatives to New York and getting proof-copies here for examination and approval and the returning them to be printed, and waiting for the return by steamer of the printed copies, consumes a considerable amount of time; but when several attempts are made to get fair copies, which are unsuccessful, as is often the case, the time consumed becomes a grievous burden.

We venture to suggest that, whoever may be awarded the contract for the printing of these drawings, it should be done here, where it can be supervised by the employées of the office, so that the time now lost in transporting them from New York here may be saved. We beg leave to remind your honor that during all of the time that the printing was done in this city there never was a delay of a single day in sending out a current issue consequent upon a delay in printing the drawings.

We venture also to call your attention to the fact that there is in the law making day in sending out a current issue consequent upon a delay in printing the drawings.

We venture also to call your attention to the fact that there is in the law making provision for this work a provision that the Commissioner of Patents shall supervise the same, which, it seems to us, cannot properly be done while it is executed in a distant city. Newton Crawford, Blanchard & Singleton, Prindle & Co., Charles E Foster, Bakewell & Kerr, T. W. Ritter, jr., Daniel Breed, Dodge & Son, T. J. W. Robertson, A. W. Hart, Hill, Ellsworth & Spear, Ellis Spear, E. E. Masson, R. D. O. Smith, Alexander Mason, T. H. Alexander & Co., Leggett & Leggett, H. A. Seymour, C. H. Watson & Co., Johnson & Johnson, Geo. W. Dyer, Wm C. McIntire, Hamway & McCallum, Jno. W. Frazee, Jno. J. Halstead, J. S. Brown, Chas. A. Neale, Wm. H. Brereton, Stanbury & Muno, H. S. Abbot, D. P. Holloway, Worth Osgood, B. E. J. Eils, Baldwin, Hopkins & Peyton, De Witt C. Allen, W. Read, Gilmore, Smith & Co.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 27, 1876.

Here the hammer fell.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the amendment be again read.
The amendment was again read.
Mr. HOLMAN. I do not suppose that this amendment is subject to the point of order which I reserved, but I wish to submit to the gentleman from Michigan that this provision should not be allowed to interfere with fair competition for the doing of this work.

Mr. HUBBELL. It does not at all.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Patent Office is a source of great expense to the Government, instead of being a source of yery great revenue, as the patent offices under other governments are. It is not with us, every element considered, a self-supporting bureau. As I remarked a moment ago, the experience of last year shows that in Great Brit-ain, with a less number of patents and not a material difference in the charges for obtaining patents, the revenues of Great Britain were very large from this source, exceeding, in fact, $400,000, the expenses being about half what the expenses are with us for carrying on the bureau. I suggest therefore that in providing for this bureau the expenses should not be increased.

Mr. HUBBELL. Let me say one word in regard to that. I think the gentleman is quite mistaken about the Patent Office not paying, for I think if he will examine the balance-sheet of the Patent Office for the past year he will find that the net profits of that office were for the past year he will find that the net profits of that office were $105,000. Now those profits come from the inventive talent of the country. My friend is all right in the main in his desire that this work should be thrown open to competition. I claim that all work should be thrown open to competition, but I claim that this peculiar class of work is one which needs to be done under the direct and personal supervision of the Commissioner of Patents. It is a work in which the inventive talent of the country is interested. I will undertake to say that there is hardly a member upon this floor who has not received a letter from some of his constituents desiring him to inquire about some patent the issue of which has been unduly delayed, some about some patent the issue of which has been unduly delayed, some-times even suspecting the honesty of the attorney who has the matter in charge. This all grows out of the fact that there is so much delay in sending the drawings abroad and having them photolithographed and then brought here and then returned. A photolithographic establishment does not cost much money, and all the persons engaged in invention ask that the work shall be done here, where it may be under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents and where they can have dispatch, and after the patent is issued the drawings attached to it can be furnished in a day or two, so that the patent may go home to the man who claims it.

It is not a monopoly. If it required a great outlay of money to build up what would be called a photolithographic establishment, then it would be different. But we are expending from $60,000 to $100,000 and $120,000 a year, and there is no reason why we cannot be economical and at the same time meet the honest and fair demands of the inventive classes of our people. in sending the drawings abroad and having them photolithographed of the inventive classes of our people.

Mr. CLYMER. The point of order was reserved against this amendment by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, [Mr. Holman,] and I rise to insist upon it, and I will state my reasons. This proposition is to require this work to be done in the city of Washington, which will require the Commissioner of Patents to have this work done in this city investment in the cost. That is now logisly work done in this city irrespective of the cost. That is new legislation, and it is not shown that is will reduce expenditures. It is manifest that, if this work is open to competition all over the country, we will be very much more likely to have the work done cheaply than if it is confined to this city, where, so far as I am informed, there are no facilities for doing the work. I therefore insist upon the point of order that this amendment is new legislation and does not show upon its face that it reduces expenditures. The mere statement of the proposition renders it probable that the expenditures would be increased rather than decreased by the adoption of this amendment.

proposition renders it probable that the expenditures would be increased rather than decreased by the adoption of this amendment, and I therefore insist upon the point of order.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I suggest to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HUBBELL] that his amendment had better come in after the words "the work to be done," instead of after the words "Commissioner of Patents," so that it shall read, "the work to be done in the city of Washington under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents,"

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being insisted upon, the

The CHARMAN. The point of order being insisted upon, the Chair will have to sustain it.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I would call the attention of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HUBBELL] to the paragraph contained in lines 1482 to 1485, and suggest that he had better move his amendment to come in after the words "to be done," in that paragraph. The paragraph relates to the three preceding paragraphs, and the amendment would more appropriately come in in that paragraph than in the one now under consideration.

Mr. HUBBELL. I will accept the suggestion of the gentleman

Mr. HUBBELL. I will accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Townsend.]

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order was made against this amendment, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. PAGE. Cannot the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hubbell] withdraw his amendment now and offer it when we reach the paragraph indicated by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Town-graph interests of the second of the second amendment at this time.

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I move to amend the pending paragraph by striking out "$20,000" and inserting "$25,000."

Mr. CLYMER. I believe there is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

For photolithographing, or otherwise producing copies of the weekly issues of drawings, to be attached to patents and copies, $20,000.

Mr. VANCE. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$20,000" and inserting "$25,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

The work of the said photolithographing, or otherwise producing plates and copies, referred to in this and the two preceding paragraphs, to be done under the supervision of the Commissioner of Patents, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I move to amend the paragraph just read by inserting after the words "to be done" the words "in the city of

Mr. CLYMER. I make the same point of order upon that amendment that was made upon it when it was moved by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HUBBELL] to a preceding paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must sustain the point of order.

Mr. HUBBELL. I am inclined to accept the modification sug-

Mr. HUBBELL. I am inclined to accept the modification suggested by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, [Mr. HOLMAN,] which would relieve the amendment from the point of

Mr. CLYMER. I would have no objection to the amendment if it is so modified that the work shall be done as cheaply here as elsewhere under competitive bidding.

The amendment was modified to read as follows:

In the city of Washington, if as cheaply as elsewhere

Mr. CLYMER. Add to that "under competitive bidding."
Mr. HUBBELL. That is already in the bill.
Mr. CLYMER. It will do no harm to repeat it.
Mr. PAGE. Very well, let that be inserted also.
The amendment was again modified, so as to read:

In the city of Washington, if as cheaply as elsewhere, under competitive bid-

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to. The Clerk read the following:

For surveyor-general of California, $2,500; and for the clerks in his office, $8,000.

Mr. PAGE. I move to amend the paragraph just read so as to make the salary of the surveyor-general of California $3,000 instead of $2,500. At the last session of this Congress the Committee on Appropriations reported a reduction of the salary of the surveyor-general of California from $3,500 to $3,000. It is proposed in this bill to make a further reduction of $500. I hope the Committee of the Whole will not adopt the provision as reported by the Committee on Appropriations. It will be far better to abolish the office altogether than to give this inadequate sum for so important an office as the office of surveyor-general of California.

I find that this bill gives to the surveyor-general of Arizona a salary of $2,750. There are to-day in the State of California over seventy-five million acres of unsurveyed public land. In a recent conversation with the chairman of the committee he informed me that it was the inwith the charman of the committee he informed me that it was the intention of the committee to do away with the offices of surveyor-general in all States and Territories now provided by law. If that is his object and he will present his proposition I will vote for it. But I will not vote to cut down the salary of the surveyor-general of California to this inadequate sum. It was reduced $500 at the last session of Congress, and I hope the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. Holman] will not now insist upon a further reduction of $500.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, it is quite manifest now that the office of surveyor-general in the various States and Territories can be dispensed with, and that the public lands yet requiring to be surveyed can be surveyed under direct contract by the Commissioner of the General Land Office. I think that all gentlemen who have looked into this subject are satisfied that the entire surveyor-general system can be dispensed with. Considering that the principal duties of these surveyors-general will be to wind up the duties of their offices, it seems to me that a salary of $2,500 is ample. The aggregate amount of surveyed public lands undisposed of on the 30th of June last was 175,876,165 acres. In the State of California there are 21,102,966 acres surveyed and unsold. It is manifest from the statement which I will submit as a part of my remarks that but slight appropriations ought hereafter to be made for the survey of public lands; that the system of public surveying is greatly in advance of settlement, and has inured to the benefit of speculators, enabling them to select and buy at the minimum price of $1.25 an acre the best lands of the Government. We think that a salary of $2,500 is reasonable and corresponds substantially with other salaries paid in this branch of the public service.

I incorporate as part of my remarks a letter and an accompanying statement from the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. O., January 19, 1877.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a communication dated the 11th instant, from the House Committee on Appropriations, requesting to be furnished with a statement of the lands surveyed and unsold in the States and Territories west of the Mississippi River and in the Southern States.

In reply, I have the honor to transmit, herewith inclosed, a statement prepared to show the amount of surveyed land undisposed of under the laws of Congress at the end of the last fiscal year, which is a near approximation.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,

Hon. WILLIAM S. HOLMAN, Chairman Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

Statement showing amount of surveyed land undisposed of June 30, 1876.

	A.Cres.
Louisiana	4, 866, 948
Florida	8, 018, 832
Alabama
Arkansas
Iowa
Missouri
Minnesota
Kausas	29, 789, 121
California	21, 102, 966
Nevada	7, 066, 248
Oregon
Nebraska	16, 912, 750
Dakota
Colorado
New Mexico Territory
Idaho Territory
Washington Territory	5, 677, 639
Montana Territory	5, 823, 177
Utah Territory	4, 327, 514
Wyoming Territory	4, 266, 353
Arizona Territory
2210000 2011003	1,010,110
Total	175 976 165

Mr. LUTTRELL. I would like to put one question to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. Why is this discrimination made against the surveyor-general of California? Why is the surveyor-general of Arizona allowed a larger salary than the surveyor-general of our State?

Mr. HOLMAN. Until this moment, I had not noticed that discrimination. I do not think it should exist. The salary of the surveyor-general of Arizona should be the same—$2,500; and whenever it is in order I am prepared to move such an amendment on behalf of the committee. In Arizona, as gentlemen very well know, there is very little land adapted to cultivation, so that the duties of the surveyor-general in that Territory are comparatively light. I see no reason why his salary should be more than $2,500.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Now I will venture to say that, at a salary of

Mr. LUTTRELL. Now I will venture to say that, at a salary of $2,500, you cannot find a competent engineer or surveyor in my State who will accept this compensation. I hope that the amendment offered by my colleague [Mr. PAGE] will be adopted. I do not think the reduction proposed in the bill should be made at this time. This officer not only superintends the surveying of the public lands, but also the surveying of what are known as the Spanish grants, in regard to a large number of which the surveys have have not yet been perfected. This is one of the most important offices to the people of

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust the gentleman from California will submit an amendment proposing to increase this salary to $2,750. Although I have not consulted with the members of the Committee on Appropriations, such an amendment will not perhaps be subject to objection.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Five hundred dollars is a very small matter when we take into consideration the importance of this office and the fact that a first-class man is required to fill the position. Many hundred Spanish grants in the State of California are to be surveyed; the surveys need to be perfected and examined. We need for such duties a man of first-class talent. I hope the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will assent to the amendment offered by my

Mr. HOLMAN. We cannot do that; but if the amendment be modified so as to make the salary $2,750, I do not know that there will be objection.

will be objection.

Mr. PAGE. One word in reply to the gentleman from Indiana, the chairman of the committee. He stated that he was in favor of discontinuing these offices. Let me inform him that, if he will examine the mineral laws of Congress, he will find that it is the duty of the surveyor-general of California to appoint deputy surveyors for the purpose of surveying mining claims. There are to-day one hundred and twenty deputy mineral surveyors who have to report to the surveyor-general of the State. Of course in these cases the surveys are small, ambraging in same instances not more than four or five acres, and in the embracing in some instances not more than four or five acres, and in the case of quartz claims perhaps not more than two acres. I ask the gentleman whether he believes that the people of that State can dispense with this important officer?

It is well known, Mr. Chairman, that $2,500 will not secure the services of a fit man to occupy the position of surveyor-general of that State. It is very well known that salaries are higher in California than in many States of this Union.

services of a lit man to occupy the position of surveyor-general of that State. It is very well known that salaries are higher in California than in many States of this Union.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no reason for it.

Mr. PAGE. There is a reason for it. The reason is that it costs more to live; that a public officer must pay all his expenses in gold coin; and when he receives his pay in legal-tenders or greenbacks he must lose a discount of 10 or 12 per cent.

Mr. CLYMER. The premium on gold is only 4 per cent. to-day.

Mr. PAGE. I do not know what it may be now. But not long ago an officer receiving in California a salary of $125 a month would not realize in coin more than about $112. I hope, therefore, that my amendment will prevail. To reject it would, it seems to me, be an act of injustice; for the salary of this officer was cut down $500 at the last session of Congress.

It is suggested to me by my colleague [Mr. LUTTRELL] that the surveyor-general of California is obliged to act as a judge upon each one of these different mineral cases submitted to him. I therefore ask the chairman of the committee to permit this salary to remain as the committee fixed at the last session of Congress, at $3,000.

Mr. LUTTRELL. One word more and I will yield the floor to the gentleman on the other side. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of mining claims, valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars, have to be passed upon by this surveyor-general, and we cannot expect a first-class man who is qualified to assume this responsible position and pass upon these claims at a salary of $2,500 a year. I hope, therefore, the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. CLYMER. I move to insert $2,750 instead of $3,000.

Mr. Chairman, my object in doing that is this: The highest salary paid to any one of these surveyor-general of the Territories is $2,750, the salaries ranging from $2,000 to $2,750. I believe a majority of the committee is willing the surveyor-general of California should be paid a salary equal to that of the highest class. It wi until a year or two ago a surveyor-general,) they are not paid more than the sum here proposed. With the large amount of clerk hire provided in this bill, $8,000, as compared with that allowed in any other Territory, it is apparent we have provided amply and fully for the office of surveyor-general in California.

Mr. MacDOUGALL. What has clerk hire to do with the surveyor-

Mr. CLYMER. It lessens the amount of work put upon the surveyor-general.

Mr. PAGE. I accept the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and will modify my amendment by making it

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For surveyor-general of the Territory of Montana, §2,750; and for the clerks in his office, §2,500.

Mr. MacDougall. I move to strike out "$2,500" and insert "$4,000," and yield the floor to the Delegate from Montana to explain the reason for this amendment.

Mr. Maginnis. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] to the fact that they are laboring under a misapprehension about this matter of clerk hire. I know the lan-guage of the paragraph is for "clerk hire," but that covers draughtsguage of the paragraph is for "clerk hire," but that covers draughtsmen in the surveyor-general's office. If gentlemen are familiar with the work of these surveys, they know contracts are made with men who go into the field and return their field-notes to the surveyor-general's office. All those field-notes have to be transcribed and all township plots have to be drafted. I undertake to say there is not a surveyor-general's office in any of the Territories which can be run without a draughtsman and two transcribing clerks; and certainly the sum of $2,500 would not compensate more than one clerk and one draughtsman. I suggest therefore to the gentleman from Pannsul. draughtsman. I suggest, therefore, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania this work in Montana cannot be done for the sum of $2,500, and I hope he will not interpose any objection to increasing the apand I nope he will not interpose any objection to increasing the propriation to $4,000.

Mr. CLYMER. I suggest the amendment be allowed to pass.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well.

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows

That public lands situated in States in which there are no land offices may be entered at the General Land Office, subject to the provisions of law touching the entry of public lands; and moneys received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for lands entered by cash entry shall be covered into the Treasury.

Mr. GOODIN. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the word "lands" in line 1564:

And that the necessary proofs and affidavits required in such cases may be made before some officer competent to administer oaths, whose official character shall be duly certified to by the clerk of a court of record.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is right.

Mr. GOODIN. I desire to say that in my opinion the Committee on Appropriations must have had in view the action of Congress at the last session in abolishing the offices at Chillicothe, Ohio, Indianapolis, Indiana, and Springfield, Illinois. Those local land offices were abolished, but no provision was made whatever by which any of the public lands in those States could be entered. The attention of the Committee on Public Lands was called to it, as well as of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and therefore I have offered the amendment, now pending.

offered the amendment now pending.

Mr. HOLMAN. Those words were omitted, and I had prepared an amendment to cover the omission. I hope the gentleman's amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

For compensation of the Postmaster-General, $8,000; three assistant postmasters-general, at $3.500 each; superintendent of money-order system, $3,000; superintendent of foreign mails, $3,000; topographer, $2,500; chief of division of mail depredations, $2,000; chief of division of of dead letters, $2,250; chief of division of postage-stamps, $2,250; superintendent of post-office building and disburging officer, $2,100; chief clerk to the Postmaster-General, $2,200; three chief clerks to the assistant postmaster-sgeneral, at $2,000 each; chief clerk to the superintendent of money-order system, $2,000; chief clerk to the superintendent of foreign mails, $1,800; chief of division of free delivery, $2,000; superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; assistant superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; chief of division of free delivery, $2,000; superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; chief of division of free delivery, $2,000; superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; chief of division of free delivery, $2,000; superintendent of blank agency, $1,800; assistants of blank agency, $1,200 cach; two assistants of blank agency, $1,200 cach; stenographer, $1,800; seventeen clerks of class four; sixty-three clerks of class three; forty-cight clerks of class two; sixty-five clerks of class one; forty-seven female clerks, at $900 cach; one messenger to Postmaster-General, $900; three messengers to assistant postmaster-general, $240 cach; soven assistant messengers, $720 each; captain of the watch, $1,000; nine watchmen, at $720 each; twenty-seven laborers, $720 each; one engineer, $1,400; one assistant engineer, $1,000; one carpenter, $1,200; one fireman, who shall be a blacksmith, $900; one fireman, who shall be a steam-fitter, $900; one fireman, $720; three female laborers, $480 each; one for many clerks, $10,000; making, in all, $434,240.

Mr. MacDOUGALLL. I move, in line 1694, to strike out "forty-

Mr. MacDOUGALL. I move, in line 1694, to strike out "forty-seven" and insert "fifty;" so that it will read, "fifty female clerks." I am informed by the Postmaster-General that the work of the dead the informed by the Postmaster-General that etter office is nearly a year behind.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

For compensation of the Commissioner of Agriculture, $3,000; chief clerk, $1,800; entomologist, $2,000; chemist, $2,000; assistant chemist, $1,400; superintendent of experimental gardens and grounds, $1,800; statistician, $1,800; disbursing clerk, $1,600; superintendent of seed-room, $1,600; librarian, $1,400; botanist, $1,800; microscopist, $1,800; three clerks of class four; three clerks of class three; four clerks of class two; six clerks of class one; engineer, $1,200; superintendent of folding-room, $1,200; two copyists, at $900 each; two attendants in the museum, $1,000 each; one messenger, at $340; two assistant messengers, at $720 each; one carpenter, at $900; two watchmen; and eight laborers; making, in all, $61,640.

Mr. CALDWELL. I move, in lines 1630 and 1631, to strike out "1,800" and insert "2,000."

"1,800" and insert "2,000."

The effect of this amendment is a very small increase of the salary of the chief clerk of this Department. The Committee on Agriculture, after a careful observation of the duties of this officer—

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we will not come in conflict with the gentleman upon that point. That brings the appropriation up to about the same as the expenditure for the present year.

Mr. GOODIN. What is the increase proposed?

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. Two hundred dollars.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I am instructed also by the Committee on Agriculture to move the same increase in the salary of the statistician connected with that Department; an increase of $200. I offer the following amendment:

In line 1635 strike out "$1,800" and insert "$2,000;" so that it will read: "statistician, $2,000."

In support of this amendment I desire to say that there is no officer connected with the Department of Agriculture who renders more efficient service than the statistician. All of the statistics in the agricultural reports connected with the agricultural interests of this country are compiled by this officer or under his immediate supervision; and I venture the assertion that there is not an officer having the same qualifications to be found in any employment, either private or public, who is so poorly compensated as the statistician in the Agricultural Department. The salary attached to this office was originally $2,500; and in the anxiety of the Committee on Appropriations to make reductions I think they have made a serious mistake in reducing the salary of this officer to $1,800. I therefore offer the amendment, and I trust it will be adopted.

The question being taken, the amendment was adopted, ayes 66, noes not counted.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I am authorized by the Committee on Agriculture to offer another amendment, which I send to the desk. The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1637, before the word "librarian," insert "lady superintendent of flower seed, $900."

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I desire to submit a single fact in support of the amendment. When the Department of Agriculture was first established the flower-seed department was put under the superintendence of a lady who has presided in the division ever since; a worthy elderly lady, and she has been receiving the compensation of a day laborer.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much?

Mr. HOLMAN. How much is Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. She has received $720 a year for her services. And it is doing no injustice to any one connected with the Agricultural Department to say that this superintendent of that division, although not so classed by name, is more familiar with the work assigned to her, and has been more serviceable to the Department than any other one of the employés. I speak of those now who are engaged in distributing valuable seeds. Seven hundred and twenty dollars is not a just compensation for her labor. The effect of this amendment is to make an increase upon her salary of only $180 per annum. Nine hundred dollars is the amount asked for.

Mr. HOLMAN. We will agree to that, and at the same time reduce the number of laborers from eight to seven.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I wish to say further, that if you give this superintendent of the flower-seed department the salary asked for, she is only put on a footing with the lowest female clerks in any Department. I trust the committee will agree to the amend-

Mr. HOLMAN. I have intimated that we will consent to this proposition, but I trust it is the last amendment the geutleman has to offer. We are running this Department up too much; but we propose, Mr. Chairman, to accommodate the views of the gentleman from Alabama, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, by fixing this lady's salary at $900 and reducing the number of laborers to seven.

this lady's salary at $900 and reducing the number of laborers to seven. The amendment of Mr. Caldwell, of Alabama, was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now move to amend by striking out the word "eight" in line 1649 and inserting "seven;" so that it will read: "And seven laborers." That makes a slight increase; this lady, s salary being raised from $720 to $900, while her present salary is covered by the appropriation or eight laborers at $720 each. I propose that the number shall be reduced to seven.

The question being taken on Mr. Holman's amendment, it was agreed to.

agreed to.

Here the committee informally rose, and the Speaker having taken the chair, a was communicated to the House, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, announcing that the Senate had passed a bill (S. No. 189) placing the name of C. G. Freudenberg upon the retired list of the United States Army; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

The message further announced that the Senate had adopted a resolution, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, providing for the printing of one thousand extra copies of the Report of the Coast Survey for 1876, for the use of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For collecting agricultural statistics, and compiling and writing matter for monthly, annual, and special reports, $5,0.0: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to any person receiving at the same time other compensation as an officer or employé of the Department.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I beg the indulgence of the House while I offer one other amendment. I move to amend by striking out "$5,000" in line 1653, and inserting in lieu thereof "$15,000."

The effect of that amendment would be to increase the appropriation for collecting agricultural statistics, compiling and writing matter for the monthly, annual, and special reports from $5,000 to $15,000.

I beg leave to state in this connection that the original appropriation for this purpose was $20,000. During the last session of Congress the Committee on Agriculture c nferred with the Committee on Appropriations, and there was an agreement and an understanding between the two committees that certain clerks were to be provided for who would discharge the duty now discharged by the men employed out of this appropriation of $15,000. The statistical division of the Agricultural Department is one of great importance, as I had occasion to say a month ago. Under the bill which passed the House at the last session, the statistical division of the Department could the have got along with a smaller appropriation, because that bill gave them a greater number of clerks. But in the conference committee the arrangement which had been agreed upon was defeated. I send to the desk a communication from the statistician of the Department, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk commenced the reading of the letter.

Mr. HOLMAN, (interrupting.) It is not necessary to read the whole of that. It is a very voluminous letter. I suggest to the gentleman from Alabama that we will agree to make this appropriation the same that was made for the present year, $10,000. The committee thought that was too large a sum and reduced it to $5,000. The farmers of the country are glad to furnish all this information. They do it voluntarily over the entire country. In addition to this, it should be the country are glad to furnish all this information. They do it voluntarily over the entire country. In addition to this it should be considered that the agricultural portion of the people are now relying mainly on the information derived from the great agricultural papers to a much greater extent than they do on the reports of the Commissioner of Agriculture; indeed the arrangements among the farmers of the several States of the Union are made almost perfect, so that the farmer depends on the information he receives of the exactso that the farmer depends on the information he receives of the exactcondition of the crops in that way rather than upon any official report from the Agricultural Department. I find that the farmers among whom I live depend almost altogether upon these independent sources of information. And they give as a reason that the sources of information upon which the Department relies are persons, lawyers and others, in the towns and cities, while the agricultural people themselves depend upon their practical farmers for information, and I think therefore that an appropriation of $10,000 for this purpose will be ample. will be ample.

will be ample.

Mr. CLYMER. I make the point of order that this amendment changes existing law. The existing law appropriates $10,000, and this is an appropriation of $15,000 and is a change of existing law. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. What law?

Mr. CLYMER. The last appropriation bill.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That was only an appropriation for last year and terminated with the close of the fiscal year. Unless the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture wishes to speak, I desire to submit one or two remarks upon this opposition.

to submit one or two remarks upon this question.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I hope the gentleman will proceed. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It is true, Mr. Chairman, that the farmers of the country have to rely on themselves and in a great measure upon agricultural journals for information. The farmer of to-day is a reader, always well informed, sometimes a scholar. But I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana to this fact: that we have not in the United States an agricultural journal that is national in its character, nor is any periodical devoted to national agriculture except the Department reports. There are agricultural journals in Iowa, for instance, which treat of the agricultural affairs of that State and perhaps of the entire Northwest; there are eastern agricultural journals, which treat of matters relative to the East, and there are southern journals which do the same relative to the South. But the climate, crops, systems, and soils are different in all these sections of the countries. try, and hence the information conveyed by the local journals is of little value to those living in different sections except as relates to conditions common to all sections.

There are other considerations that may be brought to bear upon this question, which I think no member of the Committee on Appropriations has ever dreamed of. Let me call the attention of the gentleman to this as a sample: The British government is running a tleman to this as a sample: The British government is running a railroad system away up into the temperate zone of India. They shipped, if I recollect properly, 40,000,000 bushels of wheat to England last year, a country that previously got its supplies mostly from America and Russia. There is a question now to be determined between farmers of the United States and those of Russia and British India, who shall furnish these breadstuffs to the European countries that cannot supply themselves. We want agricultural statistics on this question, to know not what is being done in Iowa but what is being done all over the United States and in the world in that respect, covering cost of transportation from each grain field to market spect, covering cost of transportation from each grain field to market, in order that we may determine what is best for us individually and our country in the future.

Let me state another fact. The meat supply of the United States is not keeping pace with the growth of its population. Did it ever occur to you that to-day it costs more to buy a beefsteak than it did at any time before, except perhaps for a few years during the war; that the laborer of the United States, like the laborer of Europe, is not now able at all times to eat meat, and the question arises whether we are raising in the United States, and if so in what States, as many animals for food supply as we have been raising in former years? A careful examination of the census report will show that the number of live animals in proportion to the number of individuals is gradually decreasing. Correct information relative to that fact can be ascertained and disseminated now only once in ten years through the census reports. The whole condition of agriculture in many departments may change in ten years, but the statistics upon this point could be disseminated every year from the Agricultural Department, which is the only Department in the United States looking all over the country, and which can tell one State what the other States are doing in this matter as well as what the world is doing and indicate in what direction the brain and muscle will find most profitable employment.

These are only samples. Again, there is a struggle now going on between the cheese-makers of the United States and the cheese-makers of Great Britain, and I think the time will come when we will furnish cheese and butter to the foreign market almost entirely. The foreign dairyman is being driven out of the business and compelled to raise meat, while the American farmer is attempting to make a living by producing grain instead of producing first-class meat to supply the foreign demand.

Information upon these points should be communicated to the agricultural portion of the people of this country, who produce at least nine-tenths of what we export; a fact which I think is not very well understood. We cannot now get this information. I think, Mr. Chairman, that the small amount asked for by the chairman of the Agricultural Committee ought to be given, and that we ought either to do something with this Department of Agriculture and not hamper it in its operation, or else abolish it altogether.

in its operation, or else abolish it altogether.

Copies of its reports are sent to every newspaper in the land. If it fails to give new and current statistics relative to the growth of agriculture at home and abroad in all its departments, then it is comparatively valueless. No country in the world does so little to spread agricultural information as ours. It seems as if this great interest, that keeps all others going, is to be ignored as the one industry that cannot be constitutionally fostered; and yet our wheat, meats, dairy products, cotton, tobacco, &c., are the life of the nation. We are an agricultural people, almost exclusively. We buy annually six hundred million dollars' worth of foreign wares and pay for them with the products of the farm, mainly. The balance of 'trade, so heavily in our favor, is the result of the development of scientific agriculture. All other interests languish, but the farmer is quietly lifting the na-All other interests languish, but the farmer is quietly lifting the nation up to higher planes morally, intellectually, materially, religiously, by fidelity to duty as a citizen, toward family, school, farm, church, and country. We can instruct him in no duty, but we can provide means whereby he can see his condition compared with farmers olsewhere. We can enable him to see the situation; he will be quick to turn it to his own and his country's advantage.

Mr. DAVIS. One word in favor of the amendment. The amount of information collected by this-Department cannot be procured from any other source at a cost of ten times as much as is asked for by the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. [Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama.] There are from three to five correspondents in every county in each State of the United States. Those correspondents are generally farmers, not, as my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] says, lawally farmers, not, as my friend from Indiana [Mr. HoLMAN] says, lawyers in the towns. They are renerally farmers, who give information to the Department, and that information, the most reliable that can be obtained, is sent out to the country by the Department. The agricultural journals generally get their most reliable information from these reports. The amount proposed here to be appropriated for this purpose really would not more than pay postage on the reports that come up from the various farmers all over the land.

This matter is of great importance to the agricultural interest of the country, and that is much the largest interest in the United States. There are from twenty-five to thirty millions of people supported by

There are from twenty-five to thirty millions of people supported by those engaged in agriculture to produce what is needed to fill the mouths of forty-five millions of people in this country. Yet that great interest does not receive as much attention from the Government as the mining, the railroad interest, the manufacturing interest, or many other of the great industries which I could name. In behalf of the twenty-five or thirty millions of people supported by farming, I ask that this appropriation be made. It seems to me that it is not unreasonable; I think it should be restored to what it was originally, $20,000; I certainly think $15,000 is not unreasonable.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. The institution of a monthly specific that the former and the report of agriculture has been of great benefit to the farmer, and also to the consumer in every part of the country. That benefit arises from the fact that it lays before the producer and before the consumer monthly accounts of the condition of the crops throughout the country. It has tended to prevent speculation in breadstuffs all over the country, and in that way it has prevented speculative prizes in the price of breadstuffs, and thus has been of great advantage to

It has been of advantage to the producer, because from it he could ascertain exactly what was the condition of crops throughout the Union, and could make an estimate whether or not prices would rise or fall and be enabled to form an independent judgment as to what he should ask for his produce, rather than to depend upon what the speculator might offer him.

It has also been of benefit to the consumer, because from the same source of information he could obtain sufficient knowledge to enable him to judge when he was paying proper prices for breadstuffs, or whether the speculators were imposing upon him.

The small increase of the amount proposed by the bill, I think, will be repaid ten times over, probably a hundred times over, to the people of the country by information brought before them readily and frequently.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I desire to say one word in favor of this amendment. The first word I have to say is that if the Committee on Agriculture desire to make the amount $20,000 I am prepared to vote for it. It would seem that every interest in this country can obtain appropriations more readily than the agricultural interest. Yet we are an agricultural nation. God has given us, from the peculiar position in which find ourselves, advantages for getting ahead of all the rest of the world in agricultural productions. There is where our strength lies, and there is where we want information, there is where we want knowledge.

I do not mean to make a speech upon this subject. on not mean to make a speech upon this subject. I have but one word more to say. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman] says that most farmers depend upon their agricultural papers for information. That is so; but where are the agricultural papers to obtain the statistics that will be collected by this bill? They must get them from this bureau or go without them. It is for the purpose of supplying the information that will be disseminated through the local agricultural papers that these statistics are to be collected by the Agricultural Bureau.

Mr. HARRIS, of Georgia. I desire to call the attention of the House to the disproportion that exists between the appropriation for House to the disproportion that exists between the appropriation for the collection of statistics in the Treasury Department and the appropriation for collecting statistics in the Agricultural Department. We ask for only $15,000 to enable us to collect statistical facts in regard to agriculture, the products of the country, &c., from every county in every State in the Union. We ask only about one-fourth of the amount which is appropriated for the collection of commercial statistics in the Treasury Department.

To show you the importance of this information, I might say the transcendant importance of the one over the other, I will venture to assert that there are thousands of reports of the agricultural reports of the Agricultural Department called for annually by our constitu-of the Agricultural Department called for annually by our constituents to where there is one single copy called for of the reports of the Treasury Department.

The trouble is, we are appropriating too much to commerce and too little to agriculture and our productive interests. That is the trouble with our country to-day. Our commerce languishes because production is paralyzed. We think that we are very modest when we ask but for $15,000 to scatter broadcast over this country a knowledge of the condition of the crops and information which will contribute to the condition of the crops and information which will contribute to build up the material interests of the country and restore that prosperity which is desired by every one.

Mr. CUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the proposition of the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, [Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama.] In the early part of this session it was my privilege to introduce a joint resolution asking the Committee on Appropriations to report an appropriation of $5,000 toward the expense of publishing this monthly report during the residue of the fiscal year. At the last session the Department of Agriculture asked at the hands of this this monthly report during the residue of the iscal year. At the last session the Department of Agriculture asked at the hands of this committee $15,000 for the publication of the annual report as well as the monthly report. The committee gave only $10,000, and the result has been that last December the monthly publications were necessarily abandoned because there was no money to pay for them; and unless this amendment be adopted the further publications of the monthly reports must be suspended and the great agricultural intersects of the country be not in isomorphy.

monthly reports must be suspended and the great agricultural interests of the country be put in jeopardy.

Now, when it is remembered that there are over seven thousand correspondents of this bureau who in every section of the country are gathering statistics and other material for the use of this bureau and the community, and that their only compensation is in receiving the monthly and annual reports of this Department, it seems to me bad policy on the part of this committee to array themselves against the great agricultural interests of the country in withholding this small appropriation: for certainly the giving of these reports in against the great agricultural interests of the country in withholding this small appropriation; for certainly the giving of these reports in compensation for the services of these correspondents is but a small return and poor remuneration. The agricultural interest of the country is the most important interest; it is the power, the wealth of the country; and every effort to elevate it and add to its power should be approved and encouraged.

should be approved and encouraged.

I trust, therefore, that the Committee on Appropriations will withhold all further opposition to this amendment and that the Department of Agriculture may thus be enabled to furnish to all its correspondents the monthly and annual reports for which this appropriation of $15,000 is intended to provide, and thus afford the Department of Agriculture the means and facility of adding to the material wealth of the country by furnishing information to this great

Mr. CLYMER. I am quite sure that no member of the Committee on Appropriations would willingly impair the usefulness of the Agricultural Bureau of this Government. We all have entire confidence in its administration under the distinguished gentleman who now has charge of it. We have seen, as others have, and value as highly as others the results flowing from the operations of this Bureau. But, sir, it is our duty, so far as in us lies, to protect the revenues of this Government. It is our duty, if possible, to repress the extravagance and lop off the excrescences which habitually grow up in all these Bureaus and Departments. In this, I believe, we are but following the general desire of the people; and I am quite certain that no class throughout this country are more seriously intent upon such results throughout this country are more seriously intent upon such results than those engaged in agricultural pursuits. I represent them very largely; they predominate decidedly in my county. I know them very well. I belong to them, I am happy and proud to say. But when it is claimed that $15,000 are necessary for the collection of agricultural statistics and for compiling and writing matter for these reports, I say that it is an extravagant estimate of the amount required for such purposes.

Gentlemen appeal to me and say that a large amount is necessary for postage. Now, sir, I have made a calculation in which I assume that there are in this Union twenty-two hundred and eighty counties, and estimating that in each county there are three correspondents.

and estimating that in each county there are three correspondents, each one of whom writes twelve letters annually to the Department, the expense for postage upon this correspondence would be less than the expense for postage upon this correspondence would be less than $2,500. This would leave $12,500 of this appropriation to be expended for the other purposes set forth in the item. I think the amount is extravagant. I cannot believe such an appropriation necessary. I know that the Committee on Appropriations are willing to give this Department $10,000 for these purposes; and that sum I believe to be amply sufficient. I believe I can say with entire truth, not only for myself personally but for the committee of which I am a member, that, if we did not thus believe, we would grant any reasonable sum which the Committee on Agriculture might propose. But able sum which the Committee on Agriculture might propose. But able sum which the Committee on Agriculture might propose. But our duty to ourselves and to the country forbids us to stand here and see these appropriations, increased item by item so that at the end the appropriations made by this bill may be swelled to such enormous proportions as cannot be justified.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Agriculture feel as profoundly impressed as the Committee on Appropriations in regard to their duty in protecting the public Treasury. After careful consideration of this proposition the Committee on Agriculture came to the conclusion that to deny this appropriation of $15,000 would be an absolute stab at the statistical division of the Agricultural Department. As I before stated, the Committee on Appropriations had provided for a sufficient number of clerks to prepare the matter for the annual and the monthly report. A failure to make this appropriation will result in crippling the operations of the Department. It will deprive the public of the report which now reaches them monthly, containing matters interesting and important to all engaged in agriculture. I trust the chairman of the Committee on Apriculture that this appropriation is important in order to carry on successful this. culture that this appropriation is important in order to carry on successfully this Department of the Government. If gentlemen do not desire to sustain the Agricultural Department, let them make a motion to strike out the whole appropriation for this Department.

Mr. DURHAM. How much does the Department ask for this pur-

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. Only $15,000 to carry on the statistical division.

Mr. RUSK. The Department wanted $20,000; but we have cut it

Mr. RUSK. Th down to $15,000. Mr. HOLMAN. down to $15,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. I fully indorse the views of the honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER,] who lives in the heart of one of the most highly improved agricultural sections of the Union, who is himself identified with agriculture, and fully sympathizes with all that pertains to progress in that field of industry. These lawyers and professional gentlemen in this House misconceive the temper of the farmers of this country. I have the misfortune to represent almost alone the farmers of this House.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. I beg the gentleman's pardon; we are all farmers. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Gentlemen who live in towns and practice law for a living, while they engage in farming as a pleasant or mamental pura living, while they engage in farming as a pleasant ornamental pura living, while they engage in farming as a pleasant ornamental pursuit, may call themselves farmers.

Mr. RUSK. They are not farmers, but agriculturists.

Mr. HOLMAN. There are, however, few real farmers here—men devoted to the actual pursuit of that industry. I think not one farmer out of every five thousand ever receives a copy of this statistical report. It is sought to be issued once every two months, and yet it is quite clear that whatever of value of statistical information can be furnished by the Agricultural Department would be confined to three receives nished by the Agricultural Department would be confined to three reports in the progress of the year—in the spring, during the summer, and again late in the fall.

As I have already stated, Mr. Chairman, for one farmer who receives this monthly statistical report there are thousands upon thousands who never see it. Lawyers and other professional men in and out of Congress are much more apt to receive copies of that statistical report than such bona fide farmers as my friend from Iowa, [Mr.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Our impression is this, that the Department sends to every newspaper in the United States a copy of this monthly statistical report, and the statistics thus supplied are placed within the reach of all who read those newspapers. Without the sum here asked for, the Department will not be able to continue this dis-

Mr. HOLMAN. This information is distributed to comparatively few. Now if this Committee on Agriculture, composed of bona fide agriculturists as it should be, but I fear not so made up—if they had reported in favor of abolishing the flower garden run at great expense to the Government for the cultivation of exotic plants, if they had reported to do away with the conservatory started upon the theory of being necessary for the general diffusion of information concerning economic plants, if they had abolished that and done away with the fancy establishment to furnish bouquets to special friends around about this capital, then we could have appropriated this $10,000 without any increase in the aggregate expenditures for this Department.

Mr. DAVIS. The gentleman from Indiana is much mistaken because the elegant department to which he refers belongs to the Committee on the Library and not to the Committee on Agriculture. It is entirely under the charge of my friend from Penusylvania, [Mr. CLYMER.] [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. That which is under the charge of Professor Smith is the Botanical Garden, and of course it has the finest collection of exotics in this whole country. But that is not the one to which I refer. Under the pretense of cultivating economic plants for the benefit of farmers and manufacturers throughout the country a handsome conservatory was established upon the agricultural grounds. They efit of farmers and manufacturers throughout the country a handsome conservatory was established upon the agricultural grounds. They are there cultivating fuchsias, japonicas, and an endless line of—

A MEMBER. Hollyhocks. [Great laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. And an endless variety of exotics for the benefit of the farmers of the country I suppose. [Laughter.] Gentlemen get very elegant bouquets of course from that conservatory for their friends. I ask my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER.] although he gave arguments which cannot be answered against this growing extravagance, to withdraw all objection and to yield to these fancy farmers, or, rather lawyers, who constitute the Agricultural Committee. [Laughter.]

[Laughter.]
Mr. CLYMER. I cannot resist such an appeal as that, and therefore will yield to the fancy farmers on the Agricultural Committee.
Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. In the name of the people, we thank

Mr. DAVIS. And the gentleman from Pennsylvania, in the name of the ladies, should be thanked for keeping up the Botanical Garden which supplies them with so many bouquets. [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRIS, of Georgia. I wish to state, Mr. Chairman, that the course pursued by the Committee on Appropriations in withdrawing objection is a complete vindication of the propriety of the action objection is a complete vindication of the propriety of the action suggested by the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. RUSK. I ask that the communication from the Agricultural Department be printed.

Mr. GOODIN. No; I ask that it be read.

Several MEMBERS. Let it be printed at least in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The communication is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, February 1, 1877.

Washington, February 1, 1877.

SIR: In response to the request of your committee for a showing of the inadequacy of the proposed appropriation for the statistical division of this Department, allow me to present the following considerations:

The appropriation is for the entire expenses, including clerical service of this division, the current work of which includes—

1. Statistical investigation in more than twenty-five hundred counties of the United States

2. The crop-reporting system, now including our organized corps of correspondents in seventeen hundred of the principal counties.

3. Investigations for furnishing advanced and practical original material for the annual volume.

4. Record and tabulation of such statistics, with current data from official statistics of States, boards of agriculture and of trade.

5. Translation and compilation of foreign official and other statistics of agriculture.

5. Translation and compilation of foreign official and other statistics of agriculture.

6. Writing and editing fifteen hundred printed pages, annually, of regular and special reports, and preparing an equivalent of one thousand pages more for industrial, and commercial, and other organizations; in all an annual average of seventy-five hundred manuscript pages.

For this work, at its initiation, thirteen years ago, $2,000 was appropriated in addition to the salary of the statistician. With the decrease of appropriations, a few years later, as the war-begotten labors of other branches of the civil service declined, the pro rata system of reduction was applied to this new work, when its importance and usefulness demanded increase, and the appropriation was cut down to $15,000. Last year it was reduced to $10,000 for all these purposes, when the salaries of the regular force of clerks employed in tabulating and recording amounted to $10,600, leaving nothing for collecting statistics, statistical investigation, or the preparation of material for the annual volume or other work. This staggering blow might have been regarded as a vote of censure but for the fact that on the day before an appropriation of $130,000 was voted for the printing for congressional distribution of 300,000 copies of the annual, for which no future provision was apparently desired. But it was evidently an accident of the conference committee, as it was less than provision made in the House bill, which was enlarged by a Senter of the printing proposed in the present bill, $5,000, if all applied to the collections of the proposed in the present bill, $5,000, if all applied to the collections of the present was properly to the proposed of the propo ate amendment.

The appropriation proposed in the present bill, $5,000, if all applied to the collection of statistics, will not give twenty cents for each monthly county return or pay the postage between our county correspondents. If applied to the routine office work exclusively, it would not pay $2 each per day for the smallest force for its possible accomplishment. If used for investigations and writing for the annual, all other work being discarded, it could not produce a volume worthy an edition of 200,000 copies, or even 10,000. In fact, it would be far better to blot out the $5,000 and the division and its work together, and with it the Department, rather than to degrade and dwarf to utter inefliciency a branch of the service which has possibilities of eminent usefulness and needed protection to both producers and consumers, who have already been saved the plunder of millions by heartless speculators through its instrumentality.

You know well the history of agricultural appropriations; that a hundred dollars has been given in the aid of commerce to every dollar appropriate for the promotion or protection of agriculture. There is no lack of provision for investigation in aid of other industries. One of the geological explorations of the Rocky Mountains in 1876 obtained $75,000; another $40,000; a third $25,000, and $40,000 more were given for illustrations of two of them. In the same year the appropriation for the observation and report of storms was $470,000, for the benefit of commerce. There was appropriated for clerical service in compiling commercial statistics, during the same year, $59,440, and an additional fund of $20,000 for special investigation. There was also as large a sum appropriated for the preparation of a single annual of mining statistics, in the same year, as was given for all the operations of the statistical division. And yet there is no Government publication for which the popular demand is so imperative and public appreciation so marked as for the reports of agriculture.

We have at least the value of $150,000 per annum in gratuitous service of public-spirited citizens. We need $50,000 per annum to supplement this work and render it truly efficient. But for the present year $20,000 is as small a sum as should be given for present purposes.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. DODGE,

J. R. DODGE, Statistician Department of Agriculture.

Hon. John H. Caldwell, Chairman Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Caldwell's amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase and distribution of new and valuable seeds and plants, $60,000; for expense of putting up the same, including purchase of one paper-box machine, for labor, bagging paper, twine, gum, and other necessary materials, $5,000; in all, $65,000.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I move, in lines 1658 and 1662, to strike out the word "sixty" and insert the word "seventy."
Mr. Chairman, the supply of those new and valuable seeds and plants

Mr. Chairman, the supply of those new and valuable seeds and plants is entirely inadequate to the demand. It was a good thing to institute the introduction of new seeds into the country, the value of which has been found recently by the propagation very extensively of some of the new cereals. New kinds of wheat, new kinds of corn, and new kinds of oats have been introduced. They are being constantly sent about the country. The farmers write to the seat of Government expression thanks to manhers of Congress who furnish them with these about the country. The farmers write to the seat of Government expressing thanks to members of Congress who furnish them with these new seeds, and they say that they are an improvement on the old seeds that we have been cultivating for a long series of years. It is well known that the introduction of new seeds upon soils that have been used for a long time in the cultivation of any particular kind of cereal improves the grain that is raised; and for that reason a large benefit is derived all over the country from the introduction of these new seeds. This would be the case from the introduction of a single one, but we have introduced more than half a dozen. Take, for instance, the article of oats alone. A new kind of oats has been distributed in various parts of the country that is highly prized by all the farmers.

the farmers.

The agricultural population numbers about 54 or 55 per cent. of all the occupations of the country, and I notice that in this bill there is only about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriated for that great interest. I think they do not get their fair share, and I think it is right and will be beneficial to the country in every respect that we should give them every facility possible in the way of the introduction of these new seeds and the dissemination of information throughout the land. There is not a mail that comes to me but contains requests for the agricultural reports the annual or monthly contains requests for the agricultural reports, the annual or monthly reports of the Department, and also that I should send some of the seeds that are being distributed by that Department, and I feel that the supply that is furnished to me is entirely inadequate to the demand. This little item of $65.000 is quite insufficient to meet the demand that is made upon the Department for these seeds and plants, and I trust there will be no hesitation on the part of the Committee on Appropriations about allowing the amendment to be adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the fact that the Committee on Agriculture do not ask for this increas

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. It does not make any difference whether the Committee on Agriculture asks it or not. The people ask it. They are asking it continually, and there is not a member of the House that is able to supply the demand of his constituents in agricultural districts.

ents in agricultural districts.

Mr. HÖLMAN. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that so far as I am aware there has not been in the last four years any new variety of seeds or plants sent out to the country. We are simply sending out again and again, through members of Congress, the same varieties of seeds and roots and cuttings that have been cultivated for years in our respective neighborhoods. I trust this amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I am aware that there are new kinds of wheat and new kinds of oats that have been introduced within the last two or three years, and, as I have said, the sumply is within the last two or three years, and, as I have said, the supply is entirely inadequate to the demand.

Mr. HOLMAN. I mean varieties which could not be obtained from

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I speak of those imported from abroad.

Mr. HOLMAN. Intelligent farmers of this country are not depend-Mr. HOLMAN. Intelligent farmers of this country are not dependent for getting their cereals and their garden and field seeds upon the Agricultural Department. There are depots for furnishing supplies of these in all the leading cities of the country from one ocean to the other. These seeds that are sent out by the Agricultural Department go to a few favored persons. I ask for a vote.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. Townsend, of Pennsylvania, there were—ayes 47, noes 39; no quorum voting.

Mr. HOLMAN. I insist on a further count. The Agricultural Committee do not ask for this.

Committee do not ask for this,

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Townsend, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

Mr. MILLER. I ask that the amendment may again be reported. The amendment was again read.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported, ayes 70, noes not counted.

So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. DUNNELL. I offer the following amendment:

Between lines 1662 and 1663 insert the following: For the purchase of garden and field seeds and for their distribution in those States which in 1876 were ravaged by grasshoppers and locusts, $5,000.

It will be remembered by the House that two years ago $20,000 were appropriated for the purchase of garden and field seeds for those States which had been afflicted by the ravages of the locusts. I wish to say in support of this amendment that there are counties in Minnesota and in Northern Iowa and in Nebraska, especially the two former States, that have been utterly cleaned out by these insects for the last four years

Mr. HOLMAN. This involves a matter of $5,000. The appropriation is now very large and if this sum is to be taken out of the appropriation already made, I will not object to the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. DUNNELL. Let the condition of the gentleman from Indiana

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend the amendment by adding these words:

The same to be deducted from the foregoing appropriation.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I ask that the whole amendment, as proposed to be amended, be reported.

The amendment, as proposed to be amended, was read.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I think we should add the Colorado bug. My State has been terribly ravaged by it. [Laughter.]

The amendment to the amendment was adopted, and the amendment, as amended, was adopted.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

United States courts:

For the Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, $10,500; and for eight associate justices, $10,000 each; in all, $90,500; and hereafter the marshal of the United States for the District of Columbia shall, in addition to his own official duties, perform those heretofore appertaining to the office of marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States; and so much of sections 677 and 680 of the Revised States as an whorizes the appointment and payment of a marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States is hereby repealed; and all acts and parts of acts now in force relating to and prescribing the duties of the marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States shall apply to the said marshal of the United States for the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOLMAN. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out all of the paragraph after "$90,500" and insert the following: "For marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States, $2,500."

The Committee on Appropriations, Mr. Chairman, after some consideration has thought it was proper to restore the old practice of the marshal for the District performing the duties of marshal of the Supreme Court. The geutleman proposing that change seems to desire that the marshal should be appointed by the court, and the Committee on Appropriations have recommended this amendment to be made, tee on Appropriations have recommended this amendment to be made, giving the court the appointment of their own marshal.

Mr. HALE. I only wish to say that all the members of the Committee on Appropriations do not agree in the proposition just stated by the gentleman from Indiana. The court has had its marshal for years, and I think should now. The dignity of the court and its uses and needs require that the marshal should be maintained there as he has been for years past. I hope the amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Why, that is the effect of the proposition as it now stands in the bill

Mr. HOLMAN. Why, that is the effect of the proposition as it now stands in the bill.

Mr. HALE. The gentleman does not deny that the committee propose to abolish the present marshal of the Supreme Court?

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman is laboring under a misapprehension. That provision is in the bill, but my motion is to strike out that and to insert a provision for the salary of the marshal of the Supreme Court. The old practice used to be that the marshal of the District of Columbia acted as marshal of the Supreme Court. That was the rule up to six or seven years ago, when a gentleman from Supreme Court. The old practice used to be that the marshal of the District of Columbia acted as marshal of the Supreme Court. That was the rule up to six or seven years ago, when a gentleman from Ohio was appointed, under authority of law, marshal of the Supreme Court. Mr. Parsons, a former member of this House was the first appointee. We proposed originally to abolish this office and devolve the duties of the marshal of the Supreme Court upon the marshal of the District of Columbia. I have now, as I have already said, moved to strike out that provision and to insert in lieu thereof a provision for the payment of the salary of the marshal of the Supreme Court.

Mr. HALE. Perhaps I did not fully understand the gentleman's amendment, for I have but just come into the House. What is the amendment now pending ?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is to strike out the provision of the bill requiring the duties of the marshal of the Supreme Court to be performed by the marshal of the District of Columbia and make an appropriation of $2,500 for the salary of the marshal of the Supreme Court.

The question was taken on the amendment; and it was agreed to. Mr. DURHAM. I have an amendment to offer which is to add at the end of the paragraph just passed, after line 1706, the following: And shall make a semi annual report, the same as other United States marshals of the United States are required by law to do.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, I hope the gentleman will not press that amendment. This marshal does not serve any process. The Supreme Court has scarcely any original jurisdiction. The court is simply an appellate court, and there are no processes to be served and there are no fees in the office and he would have nothing to report upon.

Mr. DURHAM. If that is true, I will not insist on the amendment

ment.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no; there are no fees in the office.
Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama. The marshal is simply an officer of that court alone.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, only of that court. Mr. DURHAM. I was laboring under the I was laboring under the impression that he acted as marshal for the whole District.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no. There is a District marshal besides.

Mr. DURHAM. Then I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For salary of the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, $2,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. I desire to offer an amendment in relation to that paragraph providing the salary for the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court. The salary used to be $2,500. The Committee on Appropriations thought that it might be omitted, but on further examination, inasmuch as three hundred copies of the reports are furnished to the various courts of the United States at $5 each, it would require an appropriation of $1,500 to meet that amount, and that would leave the pay of the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court $1,000 a year. On conferring with gentlemen familiar with this subject and with those members of the Committee on Appropriations who have had their attention called to it, I think perhaps that the original appropriation should be restored. I therefore move to amend by inserting after the word "thousand," in line 1714, the words "five hundred."

The amendment was agreed to.
The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Office of the Attorney-General; $8,000; Solicitor-General, $7,000; three assistant attorney-general at $5,000 each; one assistant attorney-general of the Post-Office Department, $4,000; solicitor of internal revenue, $4,500; examiner of claims, $3,000; law clerk and examiner of titles, $2,500; chief clerk, $2,000; stenographic clerk, $1,600; one law clerk, $2,000; three clerks of class four; additional for disbursing clerk, $200; two clerks of class two; two clerks of class one; five copyists; one telegraph-operator, at $1,000; one messenger; one assistant messenger; two laborers; and two watchmen; in all, $70,340.

Mr. LAWRENCE. I desire to move to amend that clause, in lines Mr. LAWRENCE. I desire to involve to anicht that the state 1736 and 1737, by striking out "$3,000" and inserting "$3,500;" so that it will read: "examiner of claims, $3,500."

I would ask if this is not the only reduction of salaries in the State Department ?

Mr. HOLMAN. There is a slight reduction.
Mr. LAWRENCE. I hope the reduction will not be made. I hope
I may have the attention of the members of the Commistee on Appropriations for a moment as to this matter. This is the only salary in the Department of State which has been reduced by this bill. In fact, I think that this officer, the examiner of claims, is not strictly and technically an officer of the Department of State, but rather of the Attorney-General's office, and although his title is examiner of claims he is in fact an assistant attorney-general, the adviser of the United States in one of the most important offices in the Department. He is the law adviser of the Department of State and all matters relating to our foreign intercourse and in all matters, as I understand it, when a legal opinion is required in the Department.

Now it will be apparent to every gentleman here that a salary of $3,000 is utterly inadequate to command the talent and services which such an officer should have. No other officer connected with the State Department has been reduced, and I submit that there is no reason why they should be reduced; in fact there is an increase of $500 in the pay of one of the officers of the Department.

Mr. HOLMAN. Where?

Mr. LAWRENCE. In the salary of the law clerk just following

Mr. HOLMAN. Whereabouts?

Mr. HOLMAN. Whereabouts?

Mr. LAWRENCE. I do not know exactly where it is, but I know there is an increase. I know the examiner of claims in the State Department. He is a gentleman of talent and great learning, whose long experience in the Department renders him particularly valuable. Now my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] knows that I have almost uniformly voted with him in favor of every reduction which has been proposed during the last year in the salaries and expenditures of this Government. In that respect I have differed with some of my party friends. I am now ready to go with him in cutting down many, many of the salaries of the Government, and many of the expenditures even below what they are now. But I submit that this is a matter of too much consequence, and we ought not to cripple the service of the State Department by this reduction of salary. Of course I am not authorized to speak for the examiner of claims, but I believe that he will not continue to hold the office if his salary is reduced as prohe will not continue to hold the office if his salary is reduced as proposed.

Mr CAULFIELD. You speak of this service as in the Department of State.

Mr. LAWRENCE. The duties of this officer are in the Department of State, and he has a room in that building; but he is an officer of the Department of Justice, just as there is an Assistant Attorney-General whose business and room where he transacts his official business are located in the building of the Interior Department, although he is an officer of the Department of Justice. He is the legal advisor of the Interior Department, but actually an officer of the Department of Justice.

The Department of Justice is unlike almost any other Department. A number of its officers are scattered about in the various Departments of the Government for convenience in giving advice to the heads of the various Departments. That is the condition of the examiner of claims in the Department of State. I submit that the gentleman from Indiana ought not to object to restoring the salary of this man from Indiana ought not to object to restoring the salary of this officer to $3,500 a year.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAWRENCE] predicates his motion on the assumption that the salary of the clerk and examiner of titles has been increased $500.

Mr. LAWRENCE. The law clerk.

Mr. HOLMAN. Instead of that, the present salary of that officer is but $2,700, while the salary proposed by this bill is $2,500. That is a reduction of the salary of $200, instead of an increase of salary. I know the gentleman from Ohio naturally sympathizes with his own profession. profession.

Mr. LAWRENCE. Yes, sir.
Mr. HOLMAN. Naturally. But I know very well that there is no class of employés of this Government whose salaries generally range so high as officers in the Attorney-General's Department. We think that the salary of the examiner of claims in comparison with the salary of the examiner of claims in comparison with the salary of the examiner of claims in comparison with the salary of the salary of the examiner of claims in comparison with the salary of t ries of officers in other and corresponding employments is very ample at $3,000 a year. That is as much as we pay to the head of a bureau.

Mr. LAWRENCE. How much do you pay to an assistant attorney-general?

Mr. HOLMAN. I know; that is what I am complaining about,

Mr. HOLMAN. I know; that is what I am complaining about, the attempt to raise all that class of salaries.

Mr. LAWRENCE. Why cut down this, and not the others?

Mr. HOLMAN. The attempt is to raise all this class of salaries, as though the profession of law was entitled to greater compensation than any other. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs receives but $3,000 a year, although he is the head of a bureau expending four or five millions annually. The attempt is made to put the salary of the examiner of claims above the salary of the head of a bureau. I have understood that this is a very competent officer.

examiner of claims above the salary of the head of a bureau. I have understood that this is a very competent officer.

Mr. LAWRENCE. Of course an assistant attorney-general should be put above the head of a bureau; it is a more important office.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend is the last man who should talk about trying to run up some salaries because others are high. Why not reverse that proposition and reduce the other salaries? You first create a fulcrum in the shape of a high salary and then propose to raise all other salaries up to that standard. No one ever proposes to equalize the salary of a head of a department or of a bureau by taking a all other salaries up to that standard. No one ever proposes to equalize the salary of a head of a department or of a bureau by taking a lower standard; it is always up.

Mr. LAWRENCE. O, well, let me state a fact. The examiner of claims in the State Department, according to my information, has examined and passed upon claims amounting to $13,000,000 in the last five years. Now the idea of getting an inferior officer for such a position as that is one which I do not believe the Committee of the Whole will sanction or tolerate for one moment.

Mr. HOLMAN I wish to say that as far as the information of the will sanction or tolerate for one moment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to say that, as far as the information of the Committee on Appropriations is concerned, we would much prefer seeing the salary of the clerk and examiner of titles, an office now held by a very excellent gentleman and a very good lawyer, restored to what it was, $2,700 a year, than to see the salary of this officer increased to $3,500 a year. Indeed, as far as the committee are able to form a judgment, there should be no difference between the two salarios

Mr. LAWRENCE. One thing at a time.

Mr. LAWRENCE. One thing at a time.

Mr. HOLMAN. And my friend complains because the one is $2,500 and the other is put at $3,000 a year.

Mr. LAWRENCE. One thing at a time. Let us attend to this officer now and then we can decide with regard to the other.

Mr. CLYMER. I believe there is no amendment pending.

Mr. LAWRENCE. I move to strike out "$3,000" and insert "$3,500," as the salary of the examiner of claims in the State Department. You cannot expect an assistant atterney general to sarve for the same salary. cannot expect an assistant attorney-general to serve for the same salary as the head of a bureau.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. LAWRENCE; and upon a division, there were—ayes 25, noes 46.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not adopted. The Clerk read the following:

For official postage-stamps for the Department of Justice, $5,000.

Mr. CAULFIELD. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$5,000" and inserting "$1,500." I am very much surprised to find that a committee practicing so much economy in this House should allow a matter of this kind to pass unnoticed. As one of the members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department. of Justice, I made last year, together with other members of the committee, a very careful examination in regard to the expenditures of that Department. I found that the year previous $10,000 had been appropriated for postage-stamps.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman will allow me to say that this appropriation of $5,000 is in accordance with the estimate. Practically, of course, this is only an appropriation to the Post-Office Department; that is all there is about it. If the gentleman thinks that $1,500 will be sufficient we do not object to that amendment, for it does not make a particle of difference.

Mr. ATKINS. I want to say in reply to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CAULFIELD] that the $5,000 appropriated last year was I think recommended by the very committee of which the gentleman

Mr. CAULFIELD. Not at all. In our examinations into the expenditures of the Department of Justice we found that of $10,000 appropriated for this purpose the year before only $750 had been expended for postage-stamps. Therefore our committee recommended to the for postage-stamps. Therefore our committee recommended to the Committee on Appropriations that the appropriation for this purpose should not exceed $1,000; but the committee, against our remonstrance, reported an appropriation of $5,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. Last year?

Mr. CAULFIELD. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. O, no.

Mr. CAULFIELD. The papers on file in your committee-room will sustain my statement. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. DURHAM] joined with me in reporting that the appropriation should be cut down to $1,000, but the Committee on Appropriations reported $5,000 for this purpose; and now the same item is reported in this bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is a matter of no possible consequence how much we appropriate for this purpose, as my friend must see. The only

Mr. HOLMAN. It is a matter of no possible consequence how much we appropriate for this purpose, as my friend must see. The only object we have in indicating any sum at all is to have a more accurate notion of the amounts which go to make up the deficiency of the Post-Office Department. This is not an appropriation of money in the ordinary sense. In the law of last session the amount of the estimates was adopted in this respect for the various Departments.

Mr. CAULFIELD. Then the gentleman is willing to cut this appropriation down to $1,500?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. DURHAM. Certainly.

Mr. DURHAM. I move to amend by striking out the last two. I want to verify the statement of my colleague on the committee, [Mr. CAULFIELD.] I hold in my hand the report of the Attorney-General CAULFIELD.] showing exactly the expense of postage-stamps for the past year; it

Mr. ATKINS. Why then did the Attorney-General estimate $5,000?

Mr. DURHAM. I cannot tell.
Mr. HOLMAN. It does not make a particle of difference.
Mr. DURHAM. Why should the Committee on Appropriations pro-

Mr. DURHAM. Why should the Committee on Appropriations propose to appropriate more than is necessary?

Mr. SPARKS. That is the question; why do they act so extravagantly? [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no extravagance at all.

Mr. DURHAM. I am astonished at the extravagance of my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Do not gentlemen see that this is simply an appropriation for the support of the Post-Office Department? All the way through we have simply taken the estimates, regarding these as way through we have simply taken the estimates, regarding these as appropriations of so much money for the Post-Office Department, to be taken into account in determining how much we should appropriate for the deficiency in that Department.

The amendment of Mr. CAULFIELD was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Solicitor of the Treasury:
For compensation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, $4.000; assistant solicitor, $3.000; chief clerk, $2.000; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; two clerks of class two; three clerks of class one; one messenger; and one laborer; in all, $23,700.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend by striking out $4,000 and inserting $4,500 as the compensation of the Solicitor of the Treasury. The effect of this amendment is to continue the present salary. This is one of the most important offices of the Government. The Solicitor of the Treasury is called upon to deal with most extensive questions, of the Treasury is called upon to deal with most extensive questions, requiring for their proper examination a first-class lawyer. The salary has been $4,500, and it should not be reduced. I cannot see what justice there is in allowing to the Solicitor of the Internal Revenue Department (which is in fact a bureau of the Treasury Department) a salary of $4,500, as we have done in a paragraph already passed, while the Solicitor for the whole Treasury Department is cut down to $4,000. I did not notice until a moment ago that this discrimination had been made. Certainly an inferior officer of a bureau in this Department should not receive a larger salary than his super in this Department should not receive a larger salary than his superior officer who is Solicitor for the whole Department. I do not think the gentleman from Indiana himself will oppose leaving this salary where it has been, at $4,500. I hope there will be no opposition to the amendment.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were—ayes 25, noes 36.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is not agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Has a quorum voted?

The CHAIRMAN. No, sir.

Mr. HALE. The provision of the bill is manifestly so unjust that if this discrimination is to be made, I must insist on its being done

Mr. HOLMAN. There will be no objection to a vote in the House. Mr. HALE. No, sir; it must be settled here. I cannot consent to this injustice.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Holman and Mr. Hale were appointed.

The House divided; but before the tellers had reported,
Mr. HOLMAN said: I shall not object to the amendment being regarded as pro forma. It goes to the House for a vote.

Mr. HALE. That will be satisfactory. I desire only that it shall come up as an amendment which has been adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 3. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. HALE. I raise the point of order on that section that it is the very essence of new legislation, repealing nobody knows what and no-body knows for what reason. I have never known any such sweeping provision of repeal in an appropriation bill before.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is clearly within the rule in reference to the appropriations made for the several purposes indicated in this bill. The rule is that no provision changing the existing law shall be in order unless germane to the bill and retrenching expenditure. The Chair will perceive if a salary was fixed by law at $3,000 and the appropriation was reduced by this bill down to $2,500 it was intended by the reduction to fix the salary at the lower sum hereafter. If there were no such provision as this contained in this bill, parties might go to the Court of Claims and recover the balauce between the sum fixed in this bill and that which the law has heretofore provided. It is not in the line of retrenchment, but I am willing to substitute for the language here other language which I have prepared.

Mr. HALE. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Indiana that he is going upon the assumption that everything we have done here has been in the way of reduction of salaries, and therefore the repeal of all previous laws would carry out such reduction. Now, we may and actually have in this bill increased certain salaries, as we had a right to do. Here, then, is a provision in contravention of what we have done in this bill. You are actually repealing by this wearing always a law which was given been always that sweeping clause a law which may give a less salary than that provided for here. I do not suppose the gentleman from Indiana would claim the rule adopted last winter provided for any such contingency as that.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection to substituting other language for that contained in the bill.

Mr. HALE. I insist first that we shall have the ruling of the Chair on my point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. I propose to offer as a substitute for the language in this section, as follows:

That the sums respectively appropriated by this act for the salary and compensation of officers and employes herein named shall be the salary and compensation of such officers and employes.

The CHAIRMAN. As it does not seem to be denied that there are cases where the bill provides for increase of salaries as well as for cases where salaries are decreased under the rulings heretofore made, the Chair must sustain the point of order raised by the gentleman The section therefore is stricken out.

from Maine. The section therefore is stricken out
Mr. HOLMAN. I move to insert the following:

That the sums respectively appropriated by this act for salary and compensation of the officers and employés herein named shall be the salary and compensation of such officers and employés.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLYMER. I ask, by unanimous consent, to return to the paragraph commencing with the line 1518, page 63, and to strike out "seven hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred;" so it will read: "For surveyor-general of the Territory of New Mexico, $2,500;" and in line 1530 to strike out "four" and insert "five;" so it will read: "And for the clerks in his office, $5,000."

There was no objection; and the amendment was received and agreed to.

Mr. FENN. I ask, Mr. Chairman, by unanimous consent, to go back to line 987, so I may be permitted to offer the amendment which I send up to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out lines 957 and 988, as follows: "For preservation and care of the building, $1,000;" and insert:

Assay office at Boisé City, Idaho Territory:

For salary of assayer and melter, $1,800; for wages of workmen, $1,200; for fuel, crucibles, chemicals, repair, and incidental expenses, $500; in all, $3,500.

Mr. ATKINS. It is not in order to go back unless by unanimous

Mr. FENN. -I believe I have the consent of the chairman to go back in reference to this matter.

Mr. HOLMAN. Inasmuch as it was agreed to at the time the gentleman from Idaho should have the right to go back and offer his amendment, I think there will be no objection to letting it come before the committee.

Mr. FENN. I was absent, and consulting with the chairman of the committee it was understood that I should have the opporthe committee it was understood that I should have the oppor-tunity without objection to move this amendment when the bill had been gone through with.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to the amendment.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 30, noes 67.

Mr. LANE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. FENN. I insist that this matter shall be agreed to now, and therefore call attention to the fact that no quorum has voted.

Mr. LANE demanded tellers

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. LANE and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection to giving the gentleman a vote

Mr. LANE. That is all we ask for.
Mr. FENN. It will be satisfactory to me to have a vote on this amendment in the House.

The amendment was agreed to, with the understanding that a vote should be taken on it in the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out lines 1143, 1144, and 1145, as

In the Bureau of Military Justice : One clerk, at $1,800. For contingent expenses, $250.

And in lieu thereof to insert the following:

In the Bureau of Military Justice:
One chief clerk, $1,800; one clerk of class three, $1,600; two female copyists, at 900 each; in all, $3,200.
For contingent expenses, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out all of section 2 after the word "Congress" in the sixth line.

The section was as follows:

Sec. 2. That the Secretaries respectively of the Departments of State, Treasury, War. Navy, and of the Interior, and the Attorney-General, are hereby authorized to make requisitions upon the Postmaster-General for the necessary amount of postage-stamps for the use of their Departments, not exceeding the amount stated in the estimates submitted to Congress; and, upon presentation of proper vonchers therefor at the Treasury, the amount thereof shall be credited to the appropriation for the service of the Post-Office Department for the same fiscal year; and that the Postmaster-General in his annual report shall state the sum credited to his Department on account of each of the Departments aforesaid for postage-stamps.

Mr. HOLMAN, On reflection, I think the whole of that section.

Mr. HOLMAN. On reflection, I think the whole of that section ought to be stricken out. I move to strike out the section.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have one other amendment to offer. I offer the following:

After line 1729 insert these words:

For defraying the contingent expenses of the courts, and the fees, per diem, and traveling expenses of the United States marshal in the Territory of Utah, with expenses of summoning jurors, subpomaing witnesses, of arresting and guarding and transporting prisoners, of hiring and feeding guards, of supplying and caring for the penitentiary, arising under the act of June 23, 1874, in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, to be paid under the direction and order of the Department of Justice upon accounts duly verified and certified, $20,000

This $20,000 is the amount required to be appropriated under the act of 1874 in regard to the Territory of Utah, as gentlemen will call to mind. This same appropriation was made for the present fiscal

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. COX. I ask unanimous consent to go back to page 27 for the purpose of making a correction.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to going back to the point

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to going back to the point indicated by the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The

Mr. COX. I would like to have stricken out after "$466,000," in line 634, the words:

Said engraving and printing to be done in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department.

So that the paragraph as thus amended would read:

For dies, paper, and stamps, $466.000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; provided the cost does not exceed the price paid under cristians on the treasury. existing contracts.

This would make the Treasury Department entirely responsible for the conduct of this critical business Mr. FRANKLIN. I object.

Mr. COX. Unanimous consent was given that I should make that motion.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I object to going back. The CHAIRMAN. The Chair asked if there was objection to the request of the gentleman from New York and no objection was made.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) Gentlemen could not object until they knew what it was they were to object to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will again submit the request of the gentleman from New York that by unanimous consent the committee return to the paragraph he has indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I object.

Mr. COX. I believe there was no objection when I made the re-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair put the request before the matter was understood.

Mr. COX. I should like to have a vote on it.
Mr. FRANKLIN. I object.
Mr. COX. The gentleman should have objected sooner.
Mr. FRANKLIN. It was impossible to object until we knew what the gentleman from New York wanted to go back to.

I offer this amendment because no vote of the Hous has been taken on this substantive proposition that the Secretary of the Treasury shall have the right to direct this business to be done on the cheapest plan, whether that be in the Treasury or out of the Treasury.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair directs to be read the section as proposed to be amended.

The section, as proposed to be amended, was read.

Mr. FRANKLIN. I withdraw my objection. I agree to have the amendment of the gentleman from New York voted upon in the

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the committee rise and report the bill

The motion was agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Reagan reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the special order, being the bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message, in writing, from the President of the United States was presented by Mr. SNIFFEN, one of his secretaries, who also announced that bills of the following titles, having been presented to the President on the 20th of January and not returned by him to the House within the ten days prescribed by the Constitution, had become laws with-the ten days prescribed by the Constitution, had become laws without his signature:

An act (H. R. No. 940) for the relief of Edwin Ebert;

An act (H. R. No. 2842) granting a pension to Robert S. Toland;

An act (H. R. No. 1521) granting a pension to Louis A. McLaughlin;

An act (H. R. No. 3500) granting a pension to Nelson Ainslie;

An act (H. R. No. 2242) granting a pension to George McColly;

An act (H. R. No. 4155) amending the act of July 28, 1876, entitled

"An act for the relief of Kendrick & Avis, Kuner, Zisemann & Zott, Kuner & Zott, all of Saint Louis, Missouri, and Nachtrieb & Co., of Galion, Ohio;" and

An act (H. R. No. 767) for the relief of Samuel B. Stauber and others.

An act (H. R. No. 767) for the relief of Samuel B. Stauber and others.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote desired on any of the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole to the legislative appropriation bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. During the progress of this bill through the Committee of the Whole, there were certain propositions considered by the committee and not acted upon, with the understanding that they should be voted upon in the House. I am not able at this moment to recall what the propositions were.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk has a record of all such.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; I call the previous question on the bill and amendments.

and amendments.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. HALE. I suggest to the gentleman from Indiana that the amendments he refers to are very slight, amounting only to a few hundred dollars; and as he wants to get the bill through to-night, in order to send it to the Senate, he had better let the amendments go. The SPEAKER. The Chair will put the question on the amendments in gross, on which a separate vote is not asked.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think it will be better for the Clerk to read over the propositions on which a separate vote has been called.

the propositions on which a separate vote has been called.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments on which it had been stated in the committee that a separate vote would be called in the

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for a separate vote on the salaries of the members of the Senate, those of members of Congress, the salary of the President of the United States, and upon the two small appropriations of $500 each to stamp the names of the members on the speeches made by them. I will add, also, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. Hale,] increasing the salary of the

Mr. HALE. I think the gentleman can afford to let that go.
Mr. HOLMAN. Let it come before the House for a vote.
Mr. HALE. That was considered as passed. I think the gentleman might allow that to pass and take a vote on the other matters.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will ask a separate vote on the amendments in reference to the salaries of the members of the House, the members of the Senate, the President, and the Solicitor of the Treasury; those

Mr. HALE. I think the gentleman had better let the solicitor go, for that is also a small matter.

Mr. LANE. I ask a separate vote on the amendment offered by the Delegate from Idaho, [Mr. FENN.]

The SPEAKER. The amendment to which the gentleman from Oregon alludes is marked upon the Clerk's record as having been rejected.

Mr. LANE. It was adopted with the understanding that a separate vote should be taken upon it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe it was understood that the gentleman should have a vote in the House and I will consent that it shall be offered, if I can do so.

Mr. LANE. That was clearly the understanding.

The SPEAKER. It is now too late.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope, as that was the understanding, that it will now, by unanimous consent, be considered as having been offered before the previous question was called.

The SPEAKER. Then it had better be entered upon the record of the Committee of the Whole that it was adopted.

Mr. HALE. I understand that that amendment was ruled out because it was objected to.

The SPEAKER. As the Chair is informed it was rejected on the vote of the committee, but no quorum voted, and the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Lane] insisted that there was no quorum on that vote; whereupon an arrangement was made by which he was to be allowed to have a vote upon it in the House.

Mr. LANE. That was the distinct understanding.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be considered as having been offered before the previous question was

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. Mr. COX. I ask a separate vote on the amendment which I offered upon page 27.

The SPEAKER. What amendment?

Mr. O'BRIEN. The one in relation to the printing of the Treasury Department.

The SPEAKER. That amendment is not in.

Mr. COX. That amendment is in, with all due respect to the Chair. It was the last amendment offered, and all objections to it were withdrawn.

The SPEAKER. The present occupant of the chair has nothing to do with what took place in the committee. The Clerk will report what was the action of the committee upon that amendment.

Mr. COX. I know there is a local interest in it, but I must abide by these little local interests.

San Francisco.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has nothing to do with localities. The Chair must abide by the report of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. HALE. The amendment is certainly not before the House.
Mr. COX. I beg to say that it was the understanding of the committee that I should have a vote on the amendment in the House.

Mr. O'BRIEN. There is not a doubt about that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no objection whatever, but he can only be guided by the report of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. COX. I ask unanimous consent that a vote be taken upon it.
Mr. HARTZELL. As I understand the proposition, I am obliged to object. Gentlemen have no right to make an objection and then go back on it. I must object to the withdrawal of the objection made to

The SPEAKER. This took place in the Committee of the Whole, and the Clerk informs the Chair that the report of the committee corresponds with the statement that the amendment was not admit-

Mr. PIPER. It was also agreed that we should have a separate vete upon the two amendments which I offered in relation to the mint at

Mr. O'BRIEN. Let us reject the bill or recommit it.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was agreed that the gentleman from California should have a right to offer an amendment in the House in relation to the mint at San Francisco.

The SPEAKER. That amendment is upon the list of amendments upon which a separate vote was demanded.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for a separate vote on that amendment.

The Clerk then read the amendments upon which the right to a separate vote was reserved I would like to rise to a point of order as to my amendment. I understand the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Hartzell] objects to the withdrawal of the objection of the gentleman from Mary-and, [Mr. O'BRIEN.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair has nothing to do with anything that occurred in Committee of the Whole. The Chair must be governed by the report of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole, and those gentlemen who have offered amendments will be maintained in their rights if those amendments have been adopted.

Mr. COX. Will the Chair hear me a moment? If the report of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole is unintentionally erromeous, cannot we have it corrected?

Mr. BUCKNER. Would you go behind the certificate?

Mr. COX. Well, then I must move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that it is not competent for the House to adjourn at this time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I would like to say a word about this matter. the amendment was offered by the gentleman from New York in the Committee of the Whole, I objected to its consideration because he proposed to go back, and I was the only one who did object; all other objections had been withdrawn. I then withdrew my objection, and it was perfectly understood that a vote should be taken on the amendment in the House; by unanimous consent it was agreed that a vote should be taken.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope unanimous consent will be given.
Mr. HALE. I was watching at the time, and should have objected if necessary. I understood that after the amendment had been offered in Committee of the Whole, as suggested by the Chairman, it was satisfactory to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Cox,] and his amendment was withdrawn. I did not understand that any leave was given to have a vote on his amendment in the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recollects that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] asked consent to go back for the purpose offering his amendment. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole asked for objection and there was none. But when the paragraph came to be read, so that the committee could understand it, then there was objection made to going back and the Chairman sustained the objection.

Mr. COX. Those objections were withdrawn. I think, as the Hon. Speaker was standing here at the time, he must remember that the objections were withdrawn.

Mr. O'BRIEN. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. MILLIKEN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Franklin] made the objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] now asks unanimous consent that a vote be taken upon the amendment he has suggested.

he has suggested.

Mr. HALE. I must object.

Mr. COX. I do not care about an objection in the House; I go back of the Committee of the Whole as regards the objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know how the gentleman can go back to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CAULFIELD. The gentleman wants to go behind the returns.

[Laughter.] Mr. COX. I move to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered, for the purpose of offering my amendment and having a vote upon it in the House. If the amendment is voted down, I will be content.

The question was taken upon the motion to reconsider; and upon a division there were—ayes 43, noes 75.

Mr. COX. Is there a quorum present?

The SPEAKER. No quorum has voted.

Mr. COX. May I be allowed to say a word upon this matter?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman want a further count?

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair will order tellers; and the gentleman from New York, Mr. Cox, and the gentleman from Maine, Mr. Hale, will act as tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—

ayes 37, noes 69.

Before the count was completed, Mr. COX said: Would it be in order to move that the House now take a recess

The SPEAKER. It would be.

The tellers proceeded with their count, and finally reported that there were—ayes 66, noes 93.

So the motion to reconsider was not agreed to.

Mr. WILLIS. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, as a portion of the debates of this House, some remarks which I have prepared upon the pending appropriation bill.

No objection was made, and leave was granted accordingly. [See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. If there is no objection, the question will first be taken upon agreeing to all the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole, except those which have been reserved for a separate vote.

No objection was made, and the amendments were accordingly

The first amendment upon which a separate vote had been demanded was to strike from lines 11, 12, and 13 of the bill the follow-

And from and after the 30th of June next the compensation of said Senators shall be $4,500 per annum.

The question was taken upon agreeing to the amendment, and upon a division there were ayes 110.

Before the negative vote was counted, Mr. HOLMAN called for the yeas and nays upon agreeing to the

Mr. PAGE. Pending that I move that the House now adjourn.
The SPEAKER. A motion to adjourn is not in order.
The question was taken upon ordering the yeas and nays; and upon a division there were—ayes 32, noes 132; not one-fifth voting in the affirmative.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for tellers upon ordering the yeas and nays and I trust that the House will allow the yeas and nays to be taken on the amendment. The question was taken upon ordering tellers, and there were 26 in the affirmative, not one-fifth of a quorum. So tellers were not ordered, and the yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was accordingly agreed to.

Mr. HALE moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. COX. I move that the House now take a recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has an important message from the President. If the motion for a recess shall prevail, the Chair would ask the privilege of reserving the announcement of the vote on that motion until the message is read.

No objection was made.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. HOAR. I will be unable to be present on Monday, and I therefore ask consent to introduce and have referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions some pension bills.

No objection was made, and accordingly the following bills were received, read severally a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 4566) granting a pension to Elizabeth E. Holbrook;
A bill (H. R. No. 4567) granting a pension to Simeon E. Ball, of Leicester Massachusetts:

A bill (H. R. No. 4567) granting a pension to Simeon E. Ball, of Leicester, Massachusetts;
A bill (H. R. No. 4568) granting a pension to D. W. Plympton, of Grafton, Massachusetts;
A bill (H. R. No. 4569) granting a pension to Susan E. Alger, of Worcester, Massachusetts; and A bill (H. R. No. 4570) granting a pension to Helen James, of Worcester, Massachusetts.

The question was then taken upon the motion of Mr. Cox for a recess; and it was not agreed to; upon a division, ayes 52, noes not counted.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a message from the President of the United States; which was read, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The SPEAKER laid before the House a message from the President of the United States; which was read, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

By the act of Congress approved January 1873, "to provide for the resumption of specie payments," the 1st of January, 1873, is fixed as the date when it shall actually become obligatory upon the Government to redeem its outstanding legal-tender notes in coin on presentation, but it is certainly most desirable and will prove most beneficial to every pecuniary interest of the country to hasten the day when the paper circulation of the country and the gold coin shall have equal values:

At a later day if currency and coin should retain equal values it might become advisable to authorize or direct resumption. I believe the time has come when by a simple act of the legislative branch of the Government this most desirable result can be attained. I am strengthened in this view by the course trade has taken in the last two years, and by the strength of the credit of the United States at home and abroad.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, the exports of the United States exceeded the imports by $190,213,103; but our exports include $40,560,621 of specie and bullion in excess of imports of the same commedities. For the six months of the present fiscal year, from July 1, 1876, to January 1, 1877, the excess of exports over imports amounted to $103,744,809, and the import of specie and bullion exceeded the export of the precious metals by $1,192,147 in the same time. The actual excess of exports over imports for the six months, exclusive of specie and bullion announted to $113,757,040, showing for the time being the accumulation of specie and bullion in the country amounting to more than $6,000,000 in addition to the national product of these metals for the same period. In the same time. The actual results of the precious metals can be utilized at home in such a way as to make it in some manner remmerative to the holders, it must seek a foreign market as such

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 3, 1877.

The SPEAKER. The message will be referred to the Committee

The SPEAKER. The message will be referred to the committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. BLAND. As there was a commission appointed at the last session of Congress for the purpose of taking into consideration the resumption of specie payments and the remonetizing of silver in connection therewith, I think that this message should be referred to that commission. I therefore move that reference.

Mr. KELLEY. The message refers to the payment of a certain portion of the public dalt and prayiding the means therefor. It seems

Mr. KELLEY. The message refers to the payment of a certain portion of the public debt and providing the means therefor. It seems to me that it belongs legitimately to the Committee of Ways and Means and should receive that reference. The distinction hitherto, as between the Committee on Banking and Currency and the Committee of Ways and Means, has been that whatever related purely to banks, bank currency, &c., should go to the former committee, and that whatever touched the public debt and the means of extinguishing any part of it, belonged legitimately to the Committee of Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. The Chair indicated the Committee of Ways and Means, because the President in his message suggests legislation providing for an additional issue of bonds. Questions of that kind have always been under the control of the Committee of Ways and Means. It is, however, entirely within the power of the House to determine

It is, however, entirely within the power of the House to determine upon whatever reference it may deem proper. The Chair will therefore entertain the motion of the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. BLAND, upon which the judgment of the House can be tested.

Mr. BLAND. Allow me to make one further suggestion. The resolution under which this commission was organized authorized and required an investigation of the subject of the return to specie payments. That is a part of the duty of the commission; and it does seem to me that this message should go to the special committee charged with that duty.

charged with that duty.

Mr. SPRINGER. I raise a point of order on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. BLAND.] I submit that it is not in order to refer a message of the President to a commission. This commission is not one of the standing committees of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the gentleman from Missouri as proposing the reference to a commission, but he supposed the reference suggested was to a committee of this House.

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; to the silver commission.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot entertain that motion.

Mr. ROBBINS, of Pennsylvania. I move the reference of the message to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Is not a proposition pending to refer the message to the Committee of Ways and Means?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Kelley] as making that motion; and the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Robbins] will be regarded as an amendment.

Mr. KELLEY. The Committee on Banking and Currency have nothing to do with the issue of bonds.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. Robbins, of Pennsylvania, to refer the message to the Committee on Banking and Currency, it was not agreed to.

The question then recurring on the motion of Mr. Kelley to refer the message to the Committee of Ways and Means, it was agreed to.

Mr. Kelley moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MILITIA FORCE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting an abstract of the militia force of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on the Militia.

JOHN JACKSON.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, in relation to the bill (H. R. No. 4318) to authorize the President to restore John Jackson to his former rank in the Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

DISTRIBUTION OF UNITED STATES ARMY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, relative to the distribution and location of the United States Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

BUILDINGS AT FORT DUNCAN, TEXAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, in relation to the estimated value of the buildings at Fort Duncan, Texas; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

REGIMENTAL RANK.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secre-The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a petition of Lieutenants Volkman, Ferbush, King, and Augur, of the Fifth Cavalry, against the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 4256) to give officers who were voluntarily transferred from the unassigned list the same date of rank in their new regiments as they had in the Army prior to said transfer; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

IMPROVEMENTS ON SANTEE RESERVE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, in relation to an appropriation for improvements on Santee reserve, removal of saw-mill and erection of grist-mill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

WHITE-EARTH CHIPPEWAS.

The SPEAKER also, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting an estimate of appropriation for White-Earth Chippewas; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The question next recurs on the second amendment from the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, on which a separate vote has been asked, which the Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 56, under the heading "Senate," insert the following:
To enable documents in the folding-room to be properly stamped on the outside of the envelope with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

The House divided; and there were ayes 106, noes not counted.

Mr. HOLMAN. As members seem to desire this accommodation I withdraw all further demand for a division.

The SPEAKER. The amendment then is concurred in.

The next amendment from the Committee of the Whole on which a separate vote was demanded was as follows:

Page 6, under the heading "House of Representatives," strike out the following words: "and from and after the 30th of June next, the compensation of said Members and Delegates shall be $4,500 per annum."

Mr. HOLMAN. I demand the yeas and pays on the adoption of The House divided; and there were ayes 16.

Mr. HOLMAN. Count the other side; I wish to see how many members will not go on the record.

The SPEAKER proceeded to count the negative.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will not insist on the Chair counting any further. [Great laughter.]

So the yeas and nays were not ordered. The amendment was then concurred in.

The next amendment from the Committee of the Whole on which a separate vote was demanded was on page 9, line 192, under the heading "House of Representatives," to insert the following after the word "dollars:"

To enable documents in the folding-room to be properly stamped on the outside of the envelope with the name of the document inclosed, $500.

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment from the Committee of the Whole on which a separate vote was demanded was on page 15, line 238, to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "fifty;" so it will read, "for compensation of the President of the United States, $50,000."

Mr. HOLMAN. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. Those in favor of increasing the President's salary to $50,000 will vote no

The SPEAKER. The amendment has been read and it is not within the province of the Chair to direct how members shall vote.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the amendment be again read.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is apparent to all members that a vote in the affirmative is in favor of increasing the President's salary to $50,000 and a vote in the negative is to let it remain as it was reported by the Committee on Appropriations, at $25,000.

Mr. HALE. Striking out $25,000 and inserting $50,000 is merely letting the selection as it was reported.

letting the salary remain as it now is.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 47, nays 126, not voting 117; as follows:

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 47, nays 126, not voting 117; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs Adams, George A. Bagley, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Bradley, Horatio C. Burchard, Caswell, Crounse, Denison, Dunnell, Eames, Hale, Hanoock, Benjamin W. Harris, Hathorn, Hoar, Hubbell, Hurd, Kehr, Kelley, Lapham, Lynch, MacDougall, McDill, Nash, Norton, Oliver, Page, Platt, Rainey, James B. Reilly, Seelye, Sinnickson, Smalls, Stone, Stowell, Strait, Thornburgh, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Waddell, Alexander S. Wallace, G. Wiley Wells, James Williams, Alan Wood, jr., and Woodburn—47.

NAYS—Messrs, Ashe, Atkıns, Bagby, John H. Bacley, jr., John H. Baker, Banning, Bland, Blount, Bradford, Bright, Buckner, Cabell, John H. Caldwell, William P. Caldwell, Campbell, Candler, Cannon, Carr, Cate, Carllfield, Chapin, Clymer, Cochrane, Collins, Conger, Cowan, Crapo, Culberson, Cutler, Darrall, Davis, De Bolt, Dibrell, Durham, Eden, Faulkner, Felton, Finley, Forney, Fort, Foster, Franklin, Goode, Goodin, Gunter, Andrew H. Hamilton, Robert Hamilton, Hardenbergh, Henry R. Harris, Hartzell, Hatcher, Haymond, Hendec, Henderson, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Holman, Hopkins, Hoskins, House, Hunphreys, Hunter, Jenks, Thomas L. Jones, Kimball, King, Knott, Lamar, Franklin Landers, George M. Landers, Lane, Lord, Lewis, Lynde, Magoon, McFarland, Metcalfe, Milliken, Mills, Monroe, Morgan, Mutchler, Neal, Odell, Packer, John F. Philips, Piper, Poppleton, Rea, Reagan, John Reilly, Rice, Riddle, John Robbins, William M. Robbins, Robbins, Sobrins, Sampson, Savage, Scales, Sheakley, Singleton, A. Herr Smith, Springer, Stanton, Stenger, Stevenson, Tarbox, Terry, Thompson, Tufts, Van Vorhes, John L. Vance, Robert B. Vance, Waldron, Warner, Erastus Wells, Whithorne, Wigginton, Willard, Andrew Williams, Charles G. Williams, Jere N. Williams, William B. Williams, Willis, Benjamin Wilson, James Wilson, and Yeates—126.

NOT VOTING—Messra, Abbott, Ainsworth, Anderson, Bass, Beebe, Belford, Bell, Blackburn, Blair, Bliss,

So the amendment was not concurred in.

During the roll-call, Mr. LAPHAM stated his colleague, Mr. Blackburn, was sick and unable to be in the House to-day.

Mr. LAPHAM stated that his colleague, Mr. Leavenworth, was detained at home by illness.

Mr. HANCOCK stated his colleague, Mr. THROCKMORTON, was absent on account of sickness.

Mr. EDEN moved the reading of the names be dispensed with;

which motion was agreed to.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was demanded was on page 28, line 667, to strike out "sixty" and insert "fifty;" so it will read:

For temporary clerks for the Treasury Department and the several Executive Departments, according to the exigencies of the public service, to be apportioned by the Secretary of the Treasury, $50,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to any officer or employe of the Government as additional compensation.

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was asked was on page 38, line 929, "mint at San Francisco," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five;" so it will read:

For wages of workmen and adjusters, $275,000.

The House divided; and there were ayes 32, noes not counted. So the amendment was not concurred in.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was asked was read, as follows:

In line 931, under mint at San Francisco, California, strike out "75,000" and inert "$100,000;" so that it will read:

For material and repairs, fuel, lights, chemicals, and other necessaries, $100,000.

The question being taken, there were ayes 12, noes not counted. So the amendment was not concurred in.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was requested was the following:

At line 1092 strike out these words:

Terri ory of Washington:
For salaries of governor, chief-justice and two associate judges, at $2,500 each; and secretary at $1,800, $11,800.

And insert in lieu thereof the following:
Territory of Washington:
For salary of governor, $2,500; and for chief-justice and two associate judges, at $3,000 each; and secretary at $1,800, $13,300.

The amendment was not concurred in.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was asked was an amendment to the paragraph making an appropriation for the assay office at Boisé City, Idaho Territory.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent to substitute for the amendment reported by the committee the following words:

Assay office at Boisé City, Idaho Territory:
For salary of assayer, who shall also perform the duties of melter, $1,800; wages of workmen, fuel, chemicals, repairs, and other incidental expenses, $1,300.

That will be satisfactory to the Committee on Appropriations. There was no objection, and the amendment of Mr. Holman was

Mr. HOLMAN. There was also an amendment increasing the salary of the Solicitor of the Treasury $500, on which the right to a separate vote was reserved. The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1761 strike out "$4,000" and insert "$4,500;" so that it will read: "For compensation of Solicitor of the Treasury, $4,500."

The amendment was not concurred in.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that by unanimous consent where changes have been made in the amounts by the amendments which have been adopted the enrolling clerk be directed to make the corresponding changes in the footings.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed

Mr. HOLMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was assed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

APPOINTMENT ON COMMITTEE.

The Chair desires to announce the appointment The SPEAKER. of Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, as a member of the Committee on Commerce in place of Mr. Hereford, of West Virginia, who has ceased to be a member of this House.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. TURNEY, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for a few days on account of sickness.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. TARBOX, by unanimous consent, leave was given to withdraw from the files of the House the papers in the case of Julius S. Bohrer, a master in the Navy, accompanying report No. 4035, there being no adverse report thereon.

ESTATE OF JACOB SENSENEY.

On motion of Mr. TERRY, by unanimous consent, the bill (8. No. 947) for the relief of the estate of Jacob Senseney, of Winchester, Virginia, was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TERRY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was referred to the Committee of Claims; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

TAX ON NATIONAL BANKS.

Mr. HENDERSON, by unanimous consent, presented a petition of Hon. J. W. Gould and 180 others, citizens of Moline, Illinois, praying for the repeal of laws imposing certain taxes on national banks; and the same was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York, by unanimous consent, presented three several petitions of citizens of Troy, New York, praying for a reduction of taxes onnational banks; and the same were referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

PRESIDIO RESERVATION.

On motion of Mr. HARDENBERGH, by unanimous consent, the reference of a communication from the Secretary of War, relative to the Presidio reservation in California, heretofore made to the Committee on Public Lands, was changed to the Committee on Military Affairs.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF COAST SURVEY.

On motion of Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, by unanimous consent, the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print extra copies of the report of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey for 1876 was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask, by unanimous consent, that when a recess is taken this evening until ten o'clock on Monday it be understood that no business shall be transacted, but that a recess shall again be taken from that hour until ten minutes before twelve o'clock taken from that hour until ten minutes before twelve o'clock.

Mr. CONGER. Why does the gentleman make that proposition?

I should like to have a reason for it.

Mr. HOLMAN. The committees are anxious to meet on Monday morning. That is the sole reason.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks that it may be understood that when the House meets at ten o'clock on Monday a further recess be taken until ten minutes before twelve o'clock. Is

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The Chair will have to be taken formally at ten o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The object being as suggested by the gentleman from Indiana, to allow the committees an opportunity to meet on Monday morning. It is necessary for the House to meet at ten o'clock on Monday under the provisions of the law; and the gentleman from Indiana asks that it be understood by unanimous consent that there shall then be a further recess until ten minutes of twelve o'clock on the same day.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

And then, on motion of Mr. HOLMAN, (at five o'clock p. m.,) the House took a recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

The following petitions were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

the rule, and referred as stated:

By the SPEAKER: The petition of John George Sohrzer, for a pension, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, the petition of William Moore, late colonel Seventy-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, for re-imbursement for the loss of a horse, to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ABBOTT: The petition of national-bank officers and others, of Boston, Massachusetts, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. ADAMS: Three petitions from citizens of New Market, Phænix, and Newburgh, New York, of similar import, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. BAKER, of New York: Three petitions from citizens of Geneseo, Middleport, and Granville, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

the same committee.

By Mr. GEORGE A. BAGLEY: The petition of 140 citizens of Brooklyn, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BEEBE: Three petitions from citizens of New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

ilar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BELL: The petition of Seneca A. Ladd and other citizens of Meredith, New Hampshire, of similar import, to the same com-

By Mr. CROUNSE: The petition of R. S. Norval and other citizens of Nebraska, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois: The petition of A. A. Terrell and others, of Sterling, Illinois, that pensioners be allowed arrears of pension from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid

By Mr. CANDLER: The petition of citizens of Atlanta, Georgia, for the removal of the tax on banks, to the Committee of Ways and

By Mr. COX: The petition of Elmira H. Kain, of New York, for the removal of all her political disabilities, and that she be declared a citizen of the United States, clothed with the power to vote and hold office to the same extent as male citizens, to the Committee on the Judiciar

By Mr. CUTLER: Three petitions of citizens of the respective cities of Elizabeth, Somerville, and Camden, New Jersey, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. DE BOLT: The petition of T. J. Johnson, C. Crossen, and 170 other persons from the tenth congressional district of Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. DOUGLAS: The petition of citizens of Virginia, for a post-route from Cappahosic to Gloucester, Virginia, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr EAMES: The petition of John J. Reynolds and other citizens of Wickford, Rhode Island, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. FAULKNER: Two petitions, signed by J. C. Beeson and others of Marion County, and Edward Tearney, G. A. Porterfield, and others of Jefferson County, West Virginia, of similar import, to the same committee. same committee

By Mr. FOSTER: Five petitions from citizens of Troy, Cuyahoga Falls, Sandusky, and Conneaut, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. FLYE: The petition of W. W. Thomas and 20 others, of Portland, Maine, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. FRYE: The petition of J. G. Pendleton and others, of Searsport, Maine, of similar import, to the Committee on Banking and Cur-

Also, the petition of citizens of Somerset, Maine, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HALE: Three petitions, signed by N. B. Nutt and 150 others, S. M. Smith and 73 others, C. J. Staples and 26 others, for an appropriation for establishing a light-house in Eastport Harbor, Maine, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. HAMILTON, of New Jersey: The petition of 79 citizens of New Jersey, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HATCHER: Four petitions, signed by citizens of Madison, Saint Genevieve, Cape Girardeau, and Randolph Counties, Missouri, of similar import, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. HAYMOND: The petition of citizens of Stark County, Indiana, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HENDEE: Two petitions, one from John L. Hanmond and 90 other citizens of Orrville, Vermont, the other from Parley Starr and 13 other officers of banks in Vermont, for the repeal of the banktax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOAR: The petition of Charles Curtis and others, of Taunton, Massachusetts, of similar import, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. HOGE: The petition of citizens of South Carolina, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. HOUSE: The petition of A. G. Goodlett and other citizens of Montgomery County, Tennessee, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of George Stacker and others, of Cumberland City, Tennessee, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LORD: The petition of Clifton P. Sarvery, for a pension, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, three petitions from citizens of New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAPHAM: The petition of citizens of New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. MacDOUGALL: The petition of 57 citizens of Keeseville, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the same committee.

By Mr. McFARLAND: The petition of George D. McClister, as guardian for the minor heirs of Stephen D. Simmons, deceased, late a private in Company G, Fourth Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, for a pension, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, two petitions, one signed by A. L. Burem and 2° other citizens of Hawkins County, the other by C. Austin and 39 other citizens of Washington County, Tennessee, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of M. Burns and others, bankers, of Tennessee, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. MEADE: Two petitions, one from citizens of Castleton, the other from citizens of Canajoharie, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MONROE: The petition of Frederick Hinkel, that his naturalization as a citizen of the United States may be annulled, to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, three petitions, signed by citizens of Wooster, Doylestown, and Wadsworth, Ohio, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: The petition of Hamilton Easter and other citizens, of Baltimore, Maryland, of similar import, to the Committee of

Ways and Means

By Mr. ODELL: Two petitions, one from citizens of New York City, the other from citizens of Buffalo, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri: The petition of citizens of Macon, Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PLATT: Three petitions from citizens of New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. RICE: Two petitions, one from A. Farrington and other citizens, of Shelby, Ohio, the other from R. M. Muncy, of Painesville, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SEELYE: Four petitions from citizens of the cities of Westminster, Boston, and Lowell, Massachusetts, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SPRINGER: The petition of J. J. Hauslin and Stephen French, of Sangamon County, Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. STANTON: The petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, that the subject-catalogue of the National Medical Library be printed, to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. STONE: The petition of citizens of Missouri, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. STRAIT: The petition of citizens of Minnesota, for a postroute from Minnesota Falls, via Sorlein's Mills, Wood Lake, Railroad Grove, Curry's Crossing, to Marshal, Lyon County, Minnesota, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. TARBOX: Two petitions, one from citizens of Holyoke and other towns of Massachusetts, the other from citizens of Boston, Massachusetts, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Ways and Means

Ways and Means.

By Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina: The petition of H. C. Metcalf and others, of North Carolina, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WALDRON: The petition of A. Sherman and 55 other citizens of Paw Paw, Michigan, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of C. M. C. Andrews and 27 other citizens of Jerome, Michigan, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania: The petition of citizens of Washington and Beaver Counties, Pennsylvania, that pensioners receive arrears of pensions from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WARREN: The petition of F. A. Sanford and 45 other citizens of Connecticut, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WELLS, of Mississippi: Two petitions from citizens of Mississippi, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means

By Mr. WHITING: The petition of citizens of Canton, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of 63 bankers and business men of Peoria, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLARD: The petition of H. K. White and 42 other citizens of Lapeer, Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of New York: The petition of J. Lapham and others, of Glens Falis, New York, of similar import, to the same com-

By Mr. A. S. WILLIAMS: The petition of Daniel T. Wells, captain Eighth Infantry United States Army, that the Secretary of War be directed to change the record of the dates of his service as a first and second lieutenant, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia: Two petitions from citizens of West Virginia, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

IN SENATE.

Monday, February 5, 1877-10 a. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. MORRILL. I move that we take a further recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate accordingly took a recess until twelve o'clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m.
Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Byron Sunderland, D. D.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate will come to order. The Secretary will read the Journal of Saturday.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, February 3, was read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. WRIGHT. I take pleasure in presenting to the Senate the credentials of my successor, Samuel J. Kirkwood, showing that he has been elected by the Legislature of Iowa a Senator from that State for six years from the 4th of March next. I ask that they be read. The credentials were read and ordered to be filed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a memorial and resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, in favor of a grant of public lands and the right of way to the Golden, Georgetown and Central Railroad Company; which was referred to the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. SPENCER presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, in favor of a grant of the public lands in that State not heretofore disposed of, in aid of public schools; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, in favor of an appropriation for the improvement of the Alabama River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, in favor of so amending the revenue laws as to allow the distillation of spirits from fruits free from tax or duty; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the State He also presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama, in favor of an amendment of the homestead law of 1862, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," so as to authorize the General Land-Office to issue patents on homestead entries upon certificate of such entries; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BOGY presented two petitions of citizens of Missouri, praying for an amendment of the pension laws, so as to allow arrearages of pension; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a patition of citizens of Missouri, praying for an amendment of the pension of the pension of the pension of the solution of the pension.

pension; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Missouri, praying for a repeal of the law imposing a tax upon the deposits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Allison. I present a memorial of the Board of Trade of Duduque, Iowa, remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 3853, it being a proposition, as they believe, to interfere with the freedom of immigration to this country. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The protion was agreed to

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of the officers of the Board of Trade of Dubuque, Iowa, praying for the repeal of the law imposing a tax on the deposits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented resolutions of the Board of Trade of the city of Philadelphia, protesting against the free importation of books from foreign countries; which were referred to the Committee on Finance

He also presented a petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, praying

He also presented a petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, praying that the pension laws may be so amended as to allow arrearages of pensions; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HAMLIN presented a letter from the general superintendent of the railway mail service, addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads of the Senate, in relation to the needs of the postal railway service; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. OGLESBY presented a memorial of the Chicago Board of Trade, in favor of the repeal of the law imposing a tax on the denosits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the posits, circulation, and capital of banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Solomon Morris, late sergeant of Company A, Thirty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, praying for company A, Intry-eighta Regiment Illinois Volunteers, praying for the passage of a law authorizing him to be mustered and paid as second lieutenant for the time he was held as a prisoner during the late war; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. He also presented the petition of D. Wilson, W. L. Halburt, and others, citizens of Illinois, praying for the prohibition of the manufacture, importation, and sale of all intoxicating beverages in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MERRIMON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1179) providing for the care and punishment of vagrants, drunkards, idlers, and for other purposes, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

REPORT OF DISTRICT BOARD OF HEALTH.

Mr. ANTHONY. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution of the House of Representatives to print 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health for the District of Columbia, to report it without amendment and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health of the District of Columbia for the year 1876 be printed for use and distribution by said board.

Mr. ANTHONY. A similar resolution was passed by the Senate and sent to the House. I move that a message be sent to the House recalling the Senate resolution.

The motion was agreed to.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE IN FLORIDA.

Mr. COOPER. The majority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, who were instructed by a resolution of the Senate of the 5th of December last to inquire into and report upon the extent of aloth of December last to inquire into and report upon the extent of alleged denial of or abridgment of rights of citizens in certain Southern States to vote for electors of President and Vice-President, members of Congress, and State officers, have submitted their report. I now desire to present the views of the minority and ask that they may be printed in connection with the report of the majority.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to printing the views of the minority in connection with the majority report? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

Mr. WINDOM. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropria tions, who were directed by a resolution of the Senate to report a bill making appropriation for the support of the Government Printing Office, to report a bill, and I ask for its present consideration.

The bill (S. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing and binding for the current fiscal year was read twice by its title.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask a moment to make an explanation before the question is put upon proceeding to the consideration of the bill. On Saturday, at the instance of the Senator from Rhode Island, [Mr. ANTHONY,] a resolution was referred to the Committee on Appropriations instructing them to report a bill supplying a deficiency for the public printing. The reason the committee instruct me to ask action to-day is that there is no money now provided for doing any of the congressional printing, except the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and, unless the money be appropriated to-day, the printing will probably cease to-morrow, as the law prohibits the Public Printer from incurring any obligations or making any expenditures beyond the appropriation; and hence it is of the utmost importance that action be taken to-day.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It appropriates the sum of $350,000 to supply deficiencies for congressional printing and binding (including the Congressional Record) and the necessary materials therefor for the current fiscal year, and of this amount $5,000 may be used for printing and binding for the Supreme Court.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT POLICE COMMISSIONERS-VETO.

Mr. INGALLS. The bill (H. R. No. 4350) to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia passed both Houses and was returned to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, with the objections of the President. Upon reaching the Senate the bill and the message were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia for considera-tion, and I am directed by that committee to report the bill back to the Senate, with the recommendation that it pass, notwithstanding the objections of the President. It is proper that I should say in this connection that the subject is one of very considerable importance and requires, in my judgment, careful consideration. It is a matter that should receive immediate attention, for reasons that are obvious and need not be stated by me to the Senate. I shall feel it my duty, whenever the Senate shall be sufficiently full to give the subject that consideration which I believe it merits, to ask the consideration of the Senate to the subject and submit to them whether the bill shall pass over the veto or not. There are so few Senators present this morning that I feel that it would be hardly just to the importance of the sub-There are so few Senators present this morning ject to ask immediate action.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BOGY (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1223) to amend title 57, section 4738, of the Revised Statutes relating to pensions; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1224) to provide for ascertaining and settling private land claims in certain States and Territories; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION-LOUISIANA AFFAIRS.

Mr. WEST. Mr. President, I avail myself of this opportunity to make an explanation in connection with proceedings in Louisiana in regard to the election of President that I was not permitted to make regard to the election of President that I was not permitted to make before a committee of the House of Representatives on Saturday.

Sometime during the course of last week I became cognizant, through the public press, that the investigations of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives had elicited the fact that a letter, addressed to myself, from the president of the returning board of Louisiana, dated back in November last, had been suppressed; and it appearing also from the developments that the committee were very anxious to obtain possession of that letter and become possessed of its contents, I could only await such further developments as might occur.

On Saturday last, when I was informed that the committee was in possession of that letter, without even waiting for a subprepa from

"On Saturday last, when I was informed that the committee was in possession of that letter, without even waiting for a subpœna from them or any request whatever, I attended at their session. Had I seen proper to do so I could have availed myself of my prerogative as a Senator and declined to obey any subpœna from that committee until so ordered by the Senate. Furthermore, I could have declined to disclose the contents of that letter until so ordered by the Senate. But desiring to further the ends of public justice and desiring also that whatever information I might have or might control in connection with the alectoral vote of Louisians should be placed before the tion with the electoral vote of Louisiana should be placed before the public, I attended at once, and at the solicitation of that committee I opened that letter and read it. I did so for the further reason that I do not hold, nor do I intend to hold, any clandestine correspondence on the subject of manipulating electoral votes. After going to that length to enable that committee to discharge their duty and to obtain information, the scant courtesy was denied me of making a statement which I desired should go to the public at the same time. I now avail myself of the privilege of a member of this body to make that statement.

About the time that letter should have been delivered to me-and About the time that letter should have been delivered to me—and I take no exception to its non-delivery I am sure—I was apprised by the Secretary of War that a man by the name of Maddox was here in this city professing to trade off the returning board of the State of Louisiana. I asked the Secretary of War what the man wanted and what he had disclosed. The Secretary replied that this man professed to have come here to be paid for the returning board of Louisiana a consideration for rendering the vote of that State. I said it was impossible, he expressing at the same time great surprise. I added "If such is the case I will telegraph to-day to New Orleans and ask for some explanation of it." So the moment I learned that anybody was professing to be here negotiating for such a purpose I took steps to ascertain his authority. Not having any cipher telegram with the president of that board, whom I had not had the pleasure of seeing for over six months preceding his action, I telegraphed to a friend ing for over six months preceding his action, I telegraphed to a friend in New Orleans in cipher to this effect—and the reason I cannot give the telegram is because to-day it is in the possession of the House of Representatives; but my memory is tolerably good, because the facts were very forcibly impressed upon my mind at the time. I telegraphed to this effect:

Tell Governor Wells that a man by the name of Maddox is here professing to be authorized to speak for him and for the returning board of Louisiana. What does this mean?

And the answer came immediately as quick as the wire could bring Governor Wells says Mr. Maddox has no such authority.

So, Mr. President, I desire now to make the statement that I was denied by a committee of the House of Representatives the privilege of making, that, as soon as I learned that any such peddler was here, I took the opportunity to sift his authority and his credentials to the bottom. I make that statement in justice to Governor Wells and in justice to myself, and I thank the Senate for allowing me the opportunity to do so.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to ask my friend from Louisiana if the committee were aware of the facts that are now disclosed as being within his knowledge?

Mr. WEST. I could not tell; but my language to the chairman of that committee was that I had done him and them the courtesy to come there and give them that information, and they had used me up to the point that suited their purposes, but they denied me the opportunity of giving a statement that did not suit their purposes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Did you communicate to any member of the committee the substance of what you have here stated?

Mr. WEST. I had no opportunity to do so; I was crowded down.
Mr. BOGY. I will ask the Senator if this man Maddox was unauthorized to make this negotiation, how does the Senator explain the letter from Governor Wells, which appears to be a genuine letter? I do not implicate the Senator in that thing, because it was never delivered to him; but how can that letter be explained? That does show there was some authority given to Mr. Maddox to do that very thing.

Mr. WEST. Then I understand the Senator to ask me for my construction of the language of that letter?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, give it.

Mr. WEST. I am glad of the opportunity, for, as I said, it spoke of Wells all the way through. The first part of that letter as I read it refers to my personal matters with Governor Wells. I presume that Senators know that I had some ambition to be my own successor in this leady and I think Governor Wells, who was my supporter and friend, body, and I think Governor Wells, who was my supporter and friend, had reference to what possibly my rivals were doing in connection with that position. But where he speaks of millions being sent there to be used in the interest of Tilden, or millions against the republican party—I beg pardon for using the expression—I think he uses it in a figurative sense, somewhat as Colonel Sellers did; but we will take the amount of millions out of this and I suppose it implies that there was a "barrel of money" there, that the intelligence, and the wealth, and the influence of the democratic party of Louisiana and of the nation is there centered to sustain their cause, and that the returning board are comparatively alone and helpless; that they need aid; that they need counsel. In other words, it is an intimation that where money is spent honestly on one side it may be spent honestly on the other. If any other construction was intended by Governor Wells, if any other intimation was intended by him, I cannot see that it can be inferred from that language. That is all I know about it. I never saw the letter before.

Furthermore, I will say that about Christmas I saw Governor Wells, and evidently the letter must have been of very little consequence in his mind, for he never alluded to it at all; he never asked me if I got it or what I did about it. Of course I was anxious that the pubhe should see the contents of that letter, because I would not rest for a moment under any suspicion of trafficking or peddling in the elect-

Mr. DAVIS. Will the Senator be kind enough to allow me to ask him whether he knows that Maddox, who was the bearer of the letter, was a Government officer and if he was sent down to New Orleans for any special purpose as a Government officer? I ask whether the has any knowledge upon that subject?

Mr. WEST. At the time in question, November last, it was represented to me that this man Maddox was a Government agent, but, on inquiry, I could not substantiate that fact. I inquired at the Treasury Department, but it appears I did not go to the proper bureau; there being so many of them there, I went to the wrong one. I heard that he was an agent of the Government and I went to the Department to inquire if such was the fact, and I could not ascer-

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator did not think of answering a part of my question, which was whether he knew of this man's mission to New Orleans and his subsequent return to Washington

Mr. WEST. Mr. President, I never heard of Maddox until January 1, except just in the way I mentioned, that he was here trying to peddle off the vote of Louisiana. At the same time I heard he was a Treasury agent, and I made inquiry, but could not substantiate that fact. That is all I know about it and that is quite enough.

RECUSANT WITNESS-J. F. LITTLEFIELD.

Mr. HOWE. I wish to occupy the attention of the Senate for a moment on a question of privilege. On Saturday last the subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which was instructed to make inquiry touching the recent election in Louisiana, had before it, under subpœna, a witness by the name of J. F. Littlefield. At some time between four and five o'clock-I do not remember the exact time—the witness was dismissed from the stand and the committee adjourned to meet at ten o'clock this morning, saying to the witness that they would probably want to ask some more questions of him at that time. The witness complained of fatigue at the time of the adjournment. This morning the committee met. The witness of the adjournment. This morning the committee met. The witness did not appear. We waited for his appearance sometime. I think between eleven and twelve the assistant sergeant-at-arms of the Senate met him on his way to some committee-room of the House of Representatives and reminded him that the committee was waiting for him here. He replied that he did not know that we were expecting him; that the committee said only that they might want to put to him some more questions. He was told that the committee wanted to put more questions and were waiting for him. He did not come. Some one, I believe, acting for the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, was in company with him and said that he was expected to be before a committee of the House of Representatives. Another witness was then on the stand, as we were informed by our assistant sergeant-atarms, and therefore there did not seem to be any occasion for his delaying to appear before our committee. Upon being notified of this interview by our assistant sergeant-at-arms, we directed him to go for Mr. Littlefield, and if he were not on the stand to request again that he would appear and conclude his testimony before our commit-tee. The assistant sergeant-at-arms of the Senate went for him, he says searched for him, went to the committee-room, and went through the other rooms of the House of Representatives, and was not able to find him. It seems to me pretty clearly that he is evading or attempting to evade the committee, and I send to the Chair a resolution which I should like to have adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. ANTHONY in the chair.) The Senator from Wisconsin offers a resolution, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the Senate issue his warrant directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate commanding him forthwith to arrest and bring to the bar of the Senate the body of J. F. Littlefield, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, and in the mean time to keep the said Littlefield in his custody to await the further order of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator ask for the present onsideration of the resolution?

Mr. HOWE. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears no objection, and the resolution is before the Senate.

I do not know that I have any objection to the reso-Mr. DAVIS. lution; I do not know that I ought to have any objection; but I would suggest to the Senator who offers it whether it would not be better to delay action just now. It may be that the man was taken sick, especially if he had been complaining of not being well; and he may be detained by some other cause. Therefore I suggest, before probe detained by some other cause. Therefore I suggest, before proceeding to some summary means, whether it would not be better to know the fact a little more definitely that his intention was to evade an appearance before the committee.

Mr. CLAYTON. It is usual to be prompt in such cases.

Mr. DAVIS. I understand that it is very usual to hurry up such a matter, but I, however, submit to the Senate whether this action may not be too summary. I do not want to be understood as objecting to the passage of the resolution. I rise for the purpose of asking the Senator who submitted the resolution to know whether he is satisfied in his own mind that the witness had actually attempted to evade the summons to appear before the committee of the Senate, and to suggest whether or not in his own mind he thought it actually necessary to pass this resolution now. I make no objection, however; but I submit to the Senator himself that it is rather a summary proceeding. I believe it is something that has not occurred probably since I have been in the Senate that a witness for not attending a particular session of a committee has been arrested and brought to the bar of the Senate.

Mr. HOWE. The Senator probably did not attend to the statement I made, that we were informed by the assistant sergeant-atarms of the Senate that he had notified Littlefield himself, then bearms of the Senate that he had nothed Littleheld himself, then being in the Capitol, that our committee was waiting for his appearance, and the excuse urged for his not coming was that he was wanted before a committee of the House. We then sent back to see if he was being used by the committee of the House and to ask him again, if he was not required there or being used there, to appear before our committee; and when we sent back for him we could not find him. So it seemed very evident that if we sent this same officer for him again, having so much difficulty in finding him this time, he should be prepared with papers which would secure his attendance when he did find him again. I think there was no difference of opinion among the members of the subcommittee as to the propriety opinion among the memoers of the succommittee as to the propriety of asking for this process.

Mr. DAVIS. I understood the Senator in the beginning of his remarks to say that on Saturday when the witness was before the committee he complained of being unwell.

Mr. WADLEIGH. Fatigued.

Mr. HOWE. Yes, sir.
Mr. DAVIS. As I said, I do not mean to object to the passage of the resolution; but unless it is positively ascertained and known to the committee that there was an attempt on the part of the witness to evade the committee, I think the resolution is probably too sum-

Mr. HOWE. We supposed that we were quite safe in the conclusion that his attendance was not prevented by ill health from the fact that he was in the Capitol this morning.

Mr. MERRIMON. I do not rise to object to bringing this witness before the committee or subcommittee, nor to any proper proceeding to that end. I think there ought to be a proceeding, but it ought to be in proper order. It is no light matter to arrest a man by a capias. The statement of the Senator from Wisconsin shows that what is laid as the groundwork for this order did not come under the personal observation of the committee at all. The assistant sergeant-at-arms goes out about his office. He sees a witness and makes a statement of facts to him. He does not take him before the commit-tee at that time. He is sent back again and does not find him. He goes and makes a report to the committee, but it does not appear that the report was under oath or that he made any official report. There-upon the committee comes into the Senate and reports that fact and asks that a capias issue against the witness. I submit to the honorable Senator from Wisconsin whether it is according to the practice of the Senate, for he has very large experience here, to order a capias to issue upon a simple representation of that sort unsustained affidavit. If a witness were misbehaving before a committee, if he refused to answer, and the committee had official notice of the facts and should report those facts, I think then the order might issue. Where the committee has not official notice, where the act did not take place before the committee but is a mere report of a subordinate, the informal report of a subordinate, I think that a capias ought not to issue unless there is some affidavit to sustain a resolution such as

Mr. HOWE. The honorable Senator from North Carolina I think did not attend to the statement that this witness was actually before the committee on Saturday last, left our presence only when the committee committee on Saturday last, left our presence only when the committee adjourned, and neglects to appear to-day. In addition to that fact is the special notice which a sworn officer of the Senate says he gave the witness within the Capitol this morning. It was his duty I apprehend to appear before the committee this morning, if he had

I appear to appear before the committee this morning, it he had no other notice in the world.

Mr. MERRIMON. There is no doubt of that; but suppose he is sick? Suppose some accident has interposed which makes it absolutely impossible for him to get before the committee? It is true we have a statement that there is reason to believe that he is evading the committee, but I submit whether upon that mere naked statement the Senate has power to issue a capias to arrest the witness. In an ordinary court of justice, where it is desired to put a witness in contempt under such circumstances as this, I think there can be no doubt that an affidavit would be required. I merely meant to suggest to the honorable Senator from Wisconsin that it is no light matter to arrest a man under a capias, and that there ought to be either the solemn report of a committee having personal cognizance of the facts upon which the motion for a capias is asked, or if the facts are not within the knowledge of the committee they ought to appear by affi-

Mr. HOWE. Certain facts are within the knowledge of the committee; and they are, that the witness was before the committee on Saturday last, was not discharged, and does not appear to-day. The other facts we only know through the statement of a sworn officer of the Senate. The Senator suggests again that he may have failed to appear through sickness. That is possible, in spite of the information to the contrary which comes to us; but if he had been so sick that he could not discharge his duty, it is very likely he could have communicated that fact to the committee, which he has not done. I believe that the practice which I have followed here is the practice of the Senate, and was practiced here but a few weeks since on a motion made by the chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The resolution was agreed to.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

I am requested to ask leave to have an order Mr. MERRIMON. made to withdraw the papers in the case of William J. Anderson which are on file. The bill (S. No. 393) for the relief of William J. Anderson is on the Calendar with an adverse report of the committee. The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WRIGHT in the chair.) That order will be made if there be no objection, of course upon leaving copies under the rule.

FORT DALLES MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. KELLY. When the morning hour expired on Saturday, the Senate had under consideration Senate bill 1001. I ask that the consideration of it may be resumed, as I know it can be disposed of in a very few minutes. I move that the Senate proceed to its considera-

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of Fort Dalles military reservation, the question being on the motion of Mr. INGALLS to refer the bill to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. INGALLS. With the consent of the Senate, after examination of this matter, I do not care to press the motion further; and, if there is no objection, I will withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. Anthony in the Chair.) The motion is within the power of the Senator. It is withdrawn. The question recurs on the amendment reported by the committee, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the substitute which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I move to add at the end of the second section of the substitute which has been agreed to the following proviso:

Provided, That any bona fide settlers on any part of said reservation shall have the prior right to purchase so much of said land as is occupied by him or them, at the appraised value thereof.

Mr. KELLY. I have no objection to the amendment; but I think the quantity should be limited that any one may have a right to purchase. I will say here that when the military forces abandoned the reservation there was a sergeant placed in possession of the buildings, Mr. Jacob Fritz. He has been living there a number of years, and has had a little portion of that reservation in his occupancy, which he has always been desirous of purchasing. He refers, in several letters that he has written to me, to his military service; and I know he is an estimable gentleman and has served the Government well. He has been living there in that capacity, as I have stated—a mere custodian of the buildings. He is the only settler on the reservation proper. I think that it would be right that he should have the privilege of purchasing a small quantity of this land at the appraisement that may be made, and I shall make no objection to the amendment although I think it ought to be limited to twenty acres. Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. President—

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Oregon whether there are any bona fide settlers on this reservation now? chase. I will say here that when the military forces abandoned the

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Oregon whether there are any bona fide settlers on this reservation now † Mr. CLAYTON. That is the question I was going to ask. Mr. KELLY. As I stated a moment ago, there is only one settler on it, and he is Jacob Fritz, a sergeant left by the military forces there in custody of the buildings when the troops were moved away. He is there looking after this property and seeing that the buildings are cared for. Mr. CLAYTON.

Mr. CLAYTON. What is he now, a sergeant still?

Mr. KELLY. No, I think not. I think he is not in the military service. I think he has been discharged; but he is still the custodian of the buildings.

Mr. CLAYTON. Is he paid by the Government?

Mr. KELLY. I think so. I do not know whether he is paid any

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose it is true that he is either in actual occu

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose it is true that he is either in actual occupancy of these premises or he is not. He is the only actual bona fide settler there on the reservation, I understand.

Mr. KELLY. He is the only one on it.

Mr. WRIGHT. Therefore, if he is the only bona fide settler on that land, if any one is entitled to entry at all, he is the only man.

Mr. KELLY. He is the only one.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suggest to my friend that either this man can take the whole land or else there are no settlers that can take the land after this bill is passed, and we do not want to hold out an invitation for persons to go on the land.

Mr. KELLY. That is the reason I suggest that the quantity should be limited to a certain number of acres. How much he has cultibe limited to a certain number of acres. How much he has cultivated, I do not know. He has a garden spot there. He asks in a letter that I have before me for forty acres of the land.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I should like to ask the Senator a question. understood, in the discussion of this bill on Saturday, that a portion of this reservation was occupied in town lots; and that is the reason why I proposed the amendment. If there are persons occupying any portion of this land in town lots on which lots they have buildings, it occurred to me that they ought to have a prior right to purchase the property at the appraised value. If there are no town lots on it I shall withdraw my amendment.

Mr. KELLY. The honorable Senator from Colorado is laboring under a slight mistake. That portion which is laid off in town lots was included in the former reservation established by Major Rains in 1855. In 1859 the reservation was curtailed and limited by order of Brigadier General Harney, who was then in command of that military district. The portion that lies between the old reservation and the new was laid off into town lots; indeed, it was thrown off at the request of the citizens there, for the purpose of establishing a town. of the citizens there, for the purpose of establishing a town. They wished it, and their request was so reasonable and just that it was done. That portion has, as I stated on Saturday, been laid off in town lots, and it was appropriated as such immediately after the boundaries of the reservation were curtailed. As I said on Saturday, it is the desire of the people there to have that portion lying between the old and the new reservation disposed of under section 4; that is, by the town-site law of the United States, which was established in 1864. I refer the Senate to the Revised Statutes, section 2382, in which it is provided that these lots shall be disposed of in a manner similar to the disposition of the public lands under the pre-emption laws; and there is this proviso at the end of the section:

Provided. That any actual settler upon any one lot, as aforesaid, and upon any additional lot in which he may have substantial improvements, shall be entitled to prove up and purchase the same as a pre-emption, at said minimum, at any day before the day fixed for the public sale.

The minimum under the town-site law is $10 for a lot, that is, a lot containing a certain number of feet stated in the law in another section, I believe. The property is limited for which the pre-emptor can acquire title by paying $10. So far as this portion lying between the old and the new reservation is concerned, it is not necessary that the amendment should be adopted. The amendment of the Senator from Colorado applies to settlers on the actual military reservation and it would embrace the claim made by this gentleman, Jacob Fritz, which I think ought to be allowed.

Would emback the chain man by the second of the second of Provided. That any bona fide settler on any part of said reservation shall have the prior right to purchase so much of said lands as is occupied by him or them, not exceeding twenty acres, at the appraised value thereof.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope that amendment will not be adopted. That matter was not passed upon by the Committee on Military Affairs. I do not think it would be right to give that privilege to persons who may have gone there in violation of law and squatted upon that land. It would be giving them a reward for their violation and sons who may have gone there in violation or law and squatted upon that land. It would be giving them a reward for their violation and infringement of the law.

Mr. CHAFFEE. It seems to me that, if a settler has gone on that land and built houses or made any other improvements, he ought to have a prior right to purchase the land at the appraised value, in preference to any outsider or any other bidder coming in to bid the land off, who would take the improvements for nothing.

Mr. COCKRELL. The point I make, the Senator will understand, is that no one has a right to go there and make improvements. They are trespassers upon that land. The Senator from Oregon says there is only one man there upon the reservation. As to that portion of a former reservation which was left out in the Harney reservation and which is proposed to be divided into town lots and sold in that way, I have no objection to that provision applying if they have settled there; but in regard to the Harney reservation, which has been held by the Government and to keep possession of which in the name of the Government they have placed this solitary individual there in possession of the building, I do not think it is right to let squatters have any rights there at all. It is simply encouraging a man to go on a military reservation and make his home there without any lawful right, in the loope, in the event that the military reservation shall be turned over as public land and sold, that he shall have a prior right to any one else. If the amendment were made applicable to the other portion of the land. I should have no objection to I. If that right to any one else. If the amendment were made applicable to the other portion of the land, I should have no objection to it. If that is not done, as the member of the committee reporting the bill I must insist that the bill as reported shall be agreed to or else I shall move its recommittal.

Mr. CHAFFEE. The principle of my amendment applies to the whole reservation.

Mr. CLAYTON. The town-site law applies to the other portion of the reservation, and the town-site law does give that privilege to the settlers.

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.
Mr. CLAYTON. So that it is unnecessary to make the amendment apply to the whole reservation.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Sena-

Mr. COCKRELL. I say that if this amendment is adopted I shall move that the bill be recommitted? Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is an amendment to the amendment of the committee. The amendment of the committee has been adopted. The amendment, therefore, is not in order without reconsidering the vote by which the amendment was adopted.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then I hope the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted will not be agreed to.

Mr. KELLY. I think the Senator from Missouri is laboring under a slight mistake. The amendment of the committee was adopted and now it is proposed to amend that amendment by the Senator from Colorado so as to allow settlers upon the reservation to purchase the land at the appraised value. I will state, if the Senator from Missouri will give me his attention for a moment, that there is but one Missouri will give me his attention for a moment, that there is but one settler, as I said, upon the reservation, if you may call a person a settler who was placed there as the custodian of the buildings by the military authorities when they left. This gentleman, Mr. Fritz, is the only person on the reservation, and if the amendment should be adopted it would apply only to him.

Mr. CLAYTON. And to nobody else?

Mr. KELLY. And to nobody else. As I said before, I rather think he has some equitable right and I shall vote for the amendment, simply because I think a man who has staid there many years looking after the buildings of the Government ought to have the right to purchase the small portion which he has cultivated as a garden. That is all there is of it. I would have even that limited to twenty acres, and that is, as I understand, what is proposed by the Senator from Colorado. If his amendment should be adopted by the Senate, it would apply only to one solitary individual who went there by permission of the Government or by permission of the military authorities, and who has had these buildings in custody.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, that question was not investigated by the Committee on Military Affairs. The Senator from Oregon says that this man was a soldier and placed there by the military authorities, and has continued since. If he has been performing services for the Government he has been pead for those services doubtless, and doubtless, he has been receiving annual compensation. Now, if the

for the Government he has been paid for those services doubtless, and doubtless he has been receiving annual compensation. Now, if the Senator from Oregon desires this amendment to the bill I must insist Senator from Oregon desires this amendment to the bill I must insist that the whole bill be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs. As the bill now stands it has been submitted to the Secretary of War, submitted to the Secretary of the Interior, and it has their sanction; and I cannot consent that amendments be put upon the bill which may change the whole theory of it. I admit that there was but one man upon the tract at the time the Senator received the letter from this individual; there may be fifty squatters upon it before the bill will take effect, and every one of them will claim to be a bona fide settler. It would not be just then to make this provision. If you desire to make provision for this man who has had charge of the improvements there, let a special bill be introduced for his benefit, and let his claims be considered and acted upon by the appropriate committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of one o'clock having arrived, it becomes the duty of the Chair to call up the special order, which is the unfinished business of yesterday, Senate bill No. 984, the Pacific Railroad bill.

[A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. U. S. Grant, jr., his Secretary.]

Mr. CHAFFEE. If the Senate does not care to protect the rights of the settlers, I will withdraw my amendment and let the bill pass. I do not want to jeopardize the bill, and I withdraw the amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Colorado is withdrawn.

Mr. KELLY. I ask that the bill be put on its passage. As the amendment has been withdrawn I suppose there will be no objection

Mr. WRIGHT. I have no objection if the vote can be taken at once; but if it is to take any time I insist on the regular order.

Mr. KELLY. It will take no time.
Mr. INGALLS. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Oregon to a verbal correction that should be made in lines 8 and 9 of the third section of the bill. The words "and so forth" occur

Mr. COCKRELL. These words can be stricken out. It is a mistake in the print.

Mr. INGALLS. It is very slouchy and slipshod.

Mr. COCKRELL. Every bill that is presented has some mistake

Mr. INGALLS. It could not be a mistake of the Military Commit-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment will be made. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 984) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1834, in amendment of said first-named act.

Mr. WRIGHT. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. Gordon] is desirous of addressing the Senate upon this bill. He was in the Senate Chamber this morning, but was so indisposed that he preferred to wait until to-morrow. I believe there are other Senators who propose to discuss the bill. The understanding is on the part of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. West] and myself that there shall be no vote pressed to-day, but that the bill being before the Senate if any Senator desires to proceed in the discussion of it he can do so, and the discussion will continue to-day, but no vote shall be taken until to-

Mr. WEST. Do I understand my friend from Iowa that if nobody

Mr. WEST. Do I understand my friend from Iowa that if nobody is prepared to address the Senate to-day then the bill goes over?

Mr. WRIGHT. As I think, that was the understanding.

Mr. PADDOCK. Do I understand the Senator from Iowa to give notice that the bill will be pressed to a vote to-morrow?

Mr. WRIGHT. Not at all. I do not wish to be understood that way; but no vote will be taken until to-morrow. Whether a vote will be pressed to-morrow will depend upon circumstances.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Mr. President, I do not propose to go into the argument upon all the various questions presented by these bills, but argument upon all the various questions presented by these bills, but shall confine myself chiefly to the main legal or constitutional objec-tions made against the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee, and call attention to some imperfections in that reported by the Railroad Committee.

The main argument thus far presented to the bill from the Judiciary Committee is that it proposes to amend the contract made with the companies by the act of 1864. It is asserted with great earnestness and apparent confidence that that act, together with the act of 1862, constituting a contract between the Government and the railroad companies, are not, under the general and unqualified reservation of power in the act of 1864, so far amendable by Congress as to affect or modify any of the terms of that contract. If this be so, in what particular, let me ask, is the act amendable or repealable under the express power given without any express restrictions to amend or repeal? If the act constitutes a contract, every part of it constitutes a part of that contract, and does not the argument urged against the power to amend or repeal any part of the contract, if it be sound, take away all power to amend or repeal any part of the act and render the provision giving the power of amendment and repeal wholly nugatory, ineffectual, and absurd?

If it be claimed that some effect may still be given to the provision granting this power, by allowing such amendments as may release or lessen an obligation of the companies to the Government, but not such as would increase such obligation or impose a new one, then I The main argument thus far presented to the bill from the Judisuch as would increase such obligation or impose a new one, then I would suggest whether so much at least could not have been done without the express reservation of this power, as well as with it; and whether, in either view, this argument does not completely nullify the power expressly given.

I am aware of no judicial decision which goes to the extent of holding this power of amendment and repeal so absolutely nugatory. On the contrary, there will be found a long list of cases in the several States and in the Federal courts which hold that this reservation of power, when general, as in the present case under the act of 1864 is good and effectual. I have not the time here to enter into an examination or citation of them, but they go to the full extent of holding that under this power amendments may be made which materially affect the contract, and not only so, but that the charter of a corpora-tion may under such a power be repealed as to the future, but of course not as to the past, so as to affect property obtained or vested or the rights of third parties already accrued. The decisions cited by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Thurman] sufficiently show this, es-pecially that of Tomlinson rs. Jessup, 15 Wallace, (see Judiciary report, page 5.)

It is true that several dicta and one or two State decisions may be found tending to show that this power of amendment does not extend to the alteration of an express provision of a charter and to the prejudice of the corporation; but no such arbitrary limitation of the general power, when expressly given, can be sustained upon principle; and the general current of authority sustains the princi-principle; and the general current of authority sustains the principle for which I contend.

Much is said of vested rights. The first pertinent question is what species of right it is which is vested here. Whether it is absolute or conditional. Now, whatever privileges or powers these companies obtained under the act of 1864, at least, were subject to the exercise by Congress of this right to make such amendments in the contract itself as, in their opinion, the public interest may require.

And it seems to me this right extends to both the acts of 1862 and 1864. To many intents undoubtedly both are to be construed together as one act. But the power of repeal, &c., in the two acts being different, that in the act of 1862 of no consequence, renders the qualified power given in the act of 1862 of no consequence.

renders the qualified power given in the act of 1862 of no consequence, and that of 1864 applies now to all. This is sufficiently shown by the history of this legislation.

The history of these acts I understand to be this: The act of 1862 contained only a qualified right of repeal or amendment. But that contained only a qualified right of repeal or amendment. But that act, as claimed by the company, was not liberal enough to induce them to go on with the enterprise. They appealed to Congress for more liberal provisions; and Congress, with an unprecedented liberality which astonished the nation, granted all the privileges asked. This was done by amending the act of 1862 by the act of 1864, in which, while granting those extraordinary privileges, they undertook to give at the same time additional safeguards to the Government by reserving this unqualified power of amendment and repeal contained in the amendatory act. Doubtless the companies might then have rejected this amendatory law, by refusing to accept or act or claim any rights under it. But they could not take the benefits conferred by the latter act without accepting the burdens or conditions in consid-eration of which they were given. They could accept no benefit under the act otherwise than subject to this power of amendment and re-They did accept the benefits conferred by this amendatory act, and they must therefore be held to accept this reservation of power to be exercised by Congres

But the Senator from Louisiana, while virtually admitting that such power of amendment might be exercised in the case of an ordinary corporation charter, where the power is expressly reserved; because in the case of such ordinary corporations their charters were granted as a favor or benefit to them, and not for the benefit of the public, nor for the common benefit of the corporators and the public; yet insists that no such power can be exercised in reference to these railroad acts, because they were passed and the privileges granted for the public benefit; he does not venture to say for the public benefit alone, but that the public interest being strong and clear for the construction of these roads, these acts were passed quite as much for the promotion of the public interest as for the interests of the companies.

Now, Mr. President, I contend that such is, in theory and principle at least, the case with all great corporation charters granting exclusive and corporate powers to the corporators not possessed by the citizens at large; and that it is the public interest alone which justifies the granting of such corporate powers; and that such has been the well-settled and recognized principle from the foundation of our Government. It is this benefit the public is expected to reap from the granting of such corporate powers which operates as the induce-ment and consideration for such corporate powers. For the purpose of showing what is the general principle applicable to such cases, I refer to the thirteenth section of Angell and Ames on Corporations, where the principle is stated; and I call the attention of the Senator from Louisiana to the fact that the principle is identical with that of the present bill. It is always the public interest. This authority

The public benefit is deemed a sufficient consideration of a grant of corporate privileges; and hence, when a grant of such privileges is made, (being in the nature of an executed contract,) it cannot, in case of a private corporation, which involves private rights, be revoked.

The writer is speaking of cases where the power has not been reserved to revoke :

The object in creating a corporation is, in fact, to gain the union, contribution, and assistance of several persons for the successful promotion of some design of general utility, though the corporation may, at the same time, be established for the advantage of those who are members of it. The principle is, and has been so laid down by Domat, that the design of a corporation is to provide for some good that is useful to the public. "With respect to acts of incorporation," says one of the judges of the court of appeals of Virginia, "they ought never to be passed but in consideration of services to be rendered to the public."—Angell and Ames on Corporation, page 7.

And the extent and liberality of the powers granted are always supposed to be in proportion to and only justified by the extent of public benefit expected to be received by the public from the grant.

The case, therefore, of these railway acts is in no way exceptional, nor out of the general principle applicable to corporations and corporation charters in other cases. It is true in this case very great public benefits were expected to be realized by the construction of these roads; but it is equally true, at the same time, that most extraordinary powers, privileges, and grants of lands and public credit were given to the companies.

It is therefore, as it seems to me, wholly idle to contend that the great public benefits expected to be realized from the enterprise take this case out of the ordinary rules applicable to corporation charters in general, when such unqualified power of amendment and repeal are reserved. If it be objected that this power, if it exists, has no defined limits, this may be true as to the power of amendment, so far as it does not divest property already vested or the rights of third parties; but it is equally true of many other acknowledged legisla-tive powers which find their limits only in the discretion, the common sense, and common honesty of Congress.

mon sense, and common honesty of Congress.

When the companies, therefore, sought the liberal powers granted by the act of 1864, Congress, in passing that act, said to them in effect, we will grant you the powers and privileges you ask upon one condition—and the extraordinary extent of the powers and privileges demand of us the condition as a security to the public—that you must hold those powers and privileges subject to the power of Congress to modify or control them to such extent as in the future they may deem essential to the public interest and safety, and hold them subject to the discretion and sense of justice of the legislative power. And by accepting the grants the companies assented in advance to such amendments as Congress might thus make.

The Senator from Louisiana, however, asserts that the companies did not petition for this act of 1864. The Senator may be technically and literally correct in this assertion.

Mr. WEST. If I do not interrupt the Senator, before he leaves that subject I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. If it relates to this point I will yield.

Mr. WEST. It does not relate to that point, but to the point which the Senator has just left. Does the Senator contend that the power to alter, amend, or repeal without qualification, of the act of 1864 would have empowered and does empower Congress to alter entirely at its discretion the terms of that contract without limitation?

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I have confined it to the limitation proposed by the bill reported from the Judiciary Committee, and I am arguing the question upon that basis. It is unnecessary for me to claim futrher power. I say the Senator from Louisiana has taken the ground that the company did not petition for this act of 1864. The Senator may be technically and literally right in this assertion; but he will be more successful than he or any other Senator has ever been if he succeeds in satisfying the American people that the companies did not apply for and urge the passage of this amendatory act of 1864 in a much more effectual though by no means more creditable way than by an open and formal petition to Congress; and I am greatly mistaken if the history of the past already written and the more effectual verdict of the history yet to be written do not stamp some of the means used by those companies as disgraceful to the age and destructive of all principles of honest legislation. Had the Senator taken the ground that, on account of the large sums paid out by the companies to procure the act of 1864, it would be unjust to them to amend the act, his argument would I fear have been equally well founded in truth, and would have been quite as sound as the argument he has attempted to make based upon the difference between But the Senator admonishes us to take heed lest by the passage of this act we lose the entire claim of the Government against these companies, and asserts that such would be the effect of a decision of the Supreme Court against the constitutional validity of the act proposed by the Judiciary Committee. I am at a loss, Mr. President, to see how this consequence can flow from such a decision against the constitutionality of the act.

If the act be decided unconstitutional and void, I had certainly If the act be decided unconstitutional and void, I had certainly supposed it would be on the ground that, in legal effect, it is not a law but void and ineffectual. And if this be so would not the old law, sought to be changed by it, stand as it was before? There is no clause repealing the acts sought to be amended. There could be no possible ground for holding the present bill to be partly void and partly valid on constitutional grounds. If held void it must be on the ground that it attempts to change the contract without consent of the companies, and this will apply to every provision of the bill; so that the bill will either be valid as a whole or void as a whole. If valid as a whole it will effect its purpose and protect the Governvalid as a whole, it will effect its purpose and protect the Government; if void, nothing is lost, as the present law will remain in force. I see, therefore, none of the dangers which the Senator from Louisiana appears to apprehend.

But the Senator from Louisiana cites the case of the Union Pacific Railroad decided by the Supreme Court at the October term, 1875, and reported in 1 Otto, as tending to show that such an amendment as that proposed by the Judiciary Committee would be unconstitutional. No such question was involved in that case, and no such question could have been decided in it; if attempted, the decision, or argument rather, would have had no more authority than that of any private rather, would have had no more authority than that of any private citizen. It could be nothing more than a mere dictum if attempted, but it was not attempted. The only question in that case was, what is the law as enacted in 1862 and 1864, not whether Congress has the power to alter or amend that law? And all that was said in the opinion bore legitimately upon the question of what the law was, as it now stands, and what was the intention of Congress in the constant. stands, and what was the intention of Congress in its passage, not at

A few words now as to the bill reported by the Railroad Committee.

As was clearly demonstrated by the Senator from Ohio, the provisions of this bill, section 1, and the $750,000 required to be paid by the first part of section 2, would never extinguish the interest, much less the principal of the debt to the United States on account of its bonds.

Yet section 3 makes the payments required by the first and second sections operate as payment in full of all obligations of the company on account of the bonds issued to it. The only provision, therefore, which saves the bill from the charge of making a payment of less than the interest operate as payment of both principal and interest is that provision in the second section, that if the foregoing provisions shall prove insufficient to extinguish the Government bonds and interest by October 1, 1912, the semi-annual payments shall be increased to such sum as will be sufficient for that purpose.

Now the pertinent question arises, when and how and by whom is it to be ascertained that the sums required by the "foregoing provis-ions shall prove insufficient" to extinguish the entire debt to the Govions shall prove insulate to extinguish the child the total course of the bonds issued in its behalf? Are we to wait till 1912 to ascertain this, and is the obligation of the companies to make up the necessary deficiencies in the semi-annual payments by increasing them to commence then or at some earlier period, and if at an earlier period, then at what period must the increase in these semi-annual payments commence

It seems to me the bill is very blind in this particular, especially as it is apparent from the face of the bill that the provisions in the first section and the first part of the second section will not pay off the principal and interest of the bonds by the time mentioned in the latter portion of section 2, namely, 1912. This is very material and a very pertinent inquiry, when the first part of the third section makes the payments previously mentioned a full satisfaction of all the obligations of the companies to resimbles as the Company of the companies. I do not doubt the good faith of the committee, but it seems to me here is a dangerous trap set which the Government will do well to

Again, the provisions of the fourth section in reference to the mortgage of the Government and its effect is made to depend upon the same uncertainty, the same equivocal provision of section 2.

I need not repeat the very cogent objection of the Senator from Ohio to the provisions of the third section, releasing the companies from all obligation to keep up the road and telegraph line after the Government has been paid for its bonds and interest, for which release I can discover no possible reason. There are other provisions in the bill of the Railroad Committee which will require amendment if it is likely to the provisions of the result of the results of the res if it is likely to pass, but which at present I refrain from noticing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WRIGHT in the chair.) The bill is still in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. WEST. I move that it be passed over for to-day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Louisiana to suggest that the bill be passed over inform-

Mr. WEST. That it be passed over informally, subject to be called for as the regular order at any time during the proceedings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill will be passed over informally.

HEIRS OF WILLIAM K. SEBASTIAN.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the Senate now take up and proceed to consider the resolution reported the 2d of August last from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, annulling the resolution of July 11, 1861, for the expulsion of William K. Sebastian, late Senator from the State of Arkansas.

Mr. INGALLS. Does the Senator from Wisconsin call this matter up for the purpose of submitting some remarks upon it or of taking a vote on the passage of the resolution now?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I call it up for the purpose of asking a vote of the Senate upon it at this time.

Mr. INGALLS. Does the Senator think it would be wise in the present condition of the Senate to ask a vote on a matter so impor-

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I was rather of the opinion that on Senator would object to the passage of the resolution.

Mr. INGALLS. It certainly is a matter of very considerable importance and involves several questions of novelty, if not of very considerable magnitude. I should think the matter ought to be explained erable magnitude. I should think the matter ought to be explained fully and that no Senator can desire to vote upon the resolution unless there had been some definite explanation of it.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. The resolution is accompanied by a written report which, I think, if read would explain very fully to the Senator from Kansas the whole matter embraced in the resolution. I can explain it very briefly if the Senator desires.

Mr. COCKRELL. This matter ultimately involves several thousand dollars. It is not worth while to disguise the fact that the object of the resolution is to open the door of the Treasury and give the heirs of Mr. Sebastian an opportunity of coming in and presenting their claim. I think it is a matter of considerable importance, and I would dislike very much to see it acted upon when there is only and I would district very much to see it acted upon when there is only a minority of the Senate here. If there were a quorum of the Senate present I should have no objection to the resolution being acted upon. I do not make objection for the purpose of interposing mere delay. If we can get by a call of the Senate a quorum here, I should be perfectly willing to act upon the resolution.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. The Senator from Missouri is correct in stating that one object of the resolution is that the heirs of Sebastian may be paid whatever amount was found due to him at the time of his death, if any. The resolution provides for that in express terms. As the Senate is thin this morning, and as the Senator from Missouri and also the Senator from Kansas rather object to the consideration of the resolution at this time, I will content myself by giving notice that, say, on Thursday next of this week, immediately at the conclusion of the morning business, I will, if I can obtain the floor, (and I hope that no Senator will object to my obtaining the floor for this purpose,) call this matter up. The resolution was re-ported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 2d of August last.

CAPTAIN JOHN A. DARLING.

Mr. SPENCER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1202) for the relief of John A. Darling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on proceeding to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. HAMILTON. I ask the Senator from Alabama if there is any public necessity for this act or whether it is for the accommodation of the officer alone?

Mr. SPENCER. I will answer the Senator from Texas by stating that Major Darling was a captain in the Second Artillery and was a most valuable officer. He was placed on the supernumerary list and unjustly mustered out of the service. The bill enables the President to do an act of justice and to re-appoint him to the first vacancy that occurs. It is a very just and meritorious bill and received the unanmous indorsement of the Committee on Military Affairs. It is a perfectly just case and costs the Government nothing, but only enables the President to account him the first party that the provider to account him the first party that the provider to the provider to the first party that the the President to re-appoint him on the first vacancy that occurs.

Mr. KELLY. Why cannot the President appoint him now?

Mr. SPENCER. As the law stands now, the President cannot appoint an officer above the grade of second lieutenant except the person next in rank

Mr. HAMILTON. Has not the President the power to appoint him

Mr. SPENCER. The President has not the power now. There is no more just case that the committee have investigated.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not like to see an act of special legislation passed in favor of Army officers; not that I am much skilled in Army and Navy matters, but I have sometimes learned that by that kind of legislation injustice has been done to other officers. It seems very strange that this gentleman should be mustered out if there were no charges against him. I do not know anything about this case at all; but I should like to have some information in regard to it.

Mr. SPENCER. There is a very minute and exhaustive report on the subject which can be read; but it would take a long time to read it, and I do not think it is hardly necessary. The Senator from Maine

[Mr. Hamin] is fully conversant with the circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion to take up the bill.

Mr. HAMLIN. I hope it will be taken up and receive the favorable consideration of the Senate, as it did receive the unanimous vote of the Military Committee. The committee gave it careful consideration, and they gave it a unanimous approval. If any Senators will hear the reading of the report which was submitted, my own judgment is that there is not a Senator in this body who will not vote to whom it is the President to restore this man when there is a vacancy. authorize the President to restore this man when there is a vacancy. It was a most unjust dismissal, as the report shows. I hope the bill will be taken up and receive the favorable consideration of the Sen-

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1202) for the relief of John A. Darlipg. By it the President of the United States is authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint John A. Darling, late captain Second Artillery, a captain of artillery in the Army of the United States, with the rank and date of commission from December 9, 1873, and he is to be assigned to the first vacancy of his grade occurring in the artillery arm of the

Mr. COCKRELL. I am not disposed to make any captions objection to this bill; but I am opposed to the whole system of legislation embodied in it. I do not and cannot give my consent to Congress constituting itself a mere board of recommendation to recommend to the President whom he shall appoint in the Army. Under the law regulating promotions or appointments in the Army, the President cannot appoint any one above the rank of second lieutenant, except it be the person next highest in rank. This bill regulates and prescribes the manner in which the President shall make this appointment. Officers who are not in the Army come in and ask to be restored to the Army, and some of them obtain the ear of Congress to direct the President to appoint them. The President cannot, under the law as it is, appoint above the rank of second lieutenant except as I stated Whenever the President desires to make the appointment of a man who has been in the Army or a civilian to a position in the Army above that to which he can appoint him under the law, if I would be willing to vote for the promotion of that man, I would be willing to vote for an act giving the President the consent of Congress to do that; but simply to be passing bills continually here stating that the President is authorized or can do so and so, without any desire expressed by the President, I think is vicious legislation. I simply desire to give this expression of my views in regard to this and all similar cases.

Mr. SPENCER. In answer to what the Senator from Missouri says, I will state that the President is anxious to do an act of justice to Major Darling. I know personally, and other Senators know, that the President is anxious to do this, but he cannot do it without the passage of this bill. This officer was unjustly mustered out of the service of the United States. He was mustered out through fraud and misrepresentation and this bill is to allow the President to re-inand misrepresentation and this bill is to allow the President to re-instate him whenever the first vacancy occurs. It will be doing an act of justice to a brave and gallant soldier who was several times brevetted during the last war for bravery in the face of the enemy. I hope the bill will pass. If Senators desire it, the report can be read. Mr. COCKRELL. O, I have heard the report and know all about the case, and do not propose to consume the time of the Senate by calling for the reading of the report. If the President of the United State desires to which was interest as I said before bravity.

States desires to make this appointment, as I said before, knowing nothing which would induce me to vote against the confirmation of this officer, I make no objection to the passage of the bill; but I was raising the point about Congress passing bills authorizing the President to appoint Tom, Dick, and Harry to positions when such bills have no more effect in law than simply a recommendation on the part of Congress that the President shall appoint. If the President cannot make the appointment and desires to make the appointment, I say then an act of Congress is necessary and is proper, and I am always perfectly willing to vote for such an act where I would be willing to vote for the confirmation of the officer. So far as I know, in this case, the officer was an honorable officer, and I should vote for his confirmation if he were appointed by the President; but I am only speaking upon the general question, and not from any objection to this case. I have uniformly supported the cases where there was any evidence before the Senate that the President desired to make an appointment, and as he desires it in this case, as the Senator from Alabama says, as a matter of course I have no objection to the bill in the world.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr SAULSBURY. I should be very glad if, before the bill passes, the Senator from Maine, who seems to be cognizant of the matter, would state the circumstances of this case. Some of us have not had the pleasure of examining these reports. I have been in the Senate but a very few days during this session. I do not wish to vote against a man whose promotion or admission to the Army is proper, when he is entitled to it; but I am not familiar with the case, and, as I have had no opportunity to examine the report on the subject, I wish the Senator from Maine would state the nature of the case a little more

Mr. HAMLIN. The papers in this case were submitted to me for my examination. I did examine them, and the facts are embodied in the report. They are not clear enough in my mind to state them as distinctly as I should like to the Senator from Delaware; and I will therefore ask that the report be read, as that will state the facts very clearly. I examined the facts, and I have no doubt that there was an absolute wrong, and an error both, in his dismissal.

Mr. SPENCER. He was not dismissed; he was mustered out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the reading of the report called

Mr. HAMLIN. If the Senator from Delaware wants the specific points, I think we must have the report read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Delaware ask for the reading of the report?

Mr. SAULSBURY. No, sir; I will not insist upon it. The bill was passed.

SCHOOL LANDS IN MISSOURI.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 280) to amend the act entitled "An act to appropriate lands for the support of schools in certain townships and fractional townships not before provided for," approved May 20, 1876.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for informa-

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. That bill seems to be rather too important to consider in our present condition. It involves a large amount of

Mr. COCKRELL. It cannot possibly involve more than three or or four thousand acres of land. That is the highest possible limit. It is only to provide for certain sixteenth sections in Missouri where they were covered by old Spanish claims, and where those Spanish claims were declared paramount to the title of the United States, claims were declared paramount to the title of the United States, claims which originated before the cession of the territory. The Senator from California [Mr. Booth] who reported the bill from the Committee on Public Lands can state its provisions fally.

Mr. BOOTH. My recollection of the bill is as stated by the Senator from Missouri that this school land had been lost by reason of the sixteenth sections falling within the Spanish or Mexican grants. The State was to receive it. I think it only applies to one county.

Mr. SHERMAN. But there must have been in Missouri a large amount of Spanish grants and French grants as well. There must be a very large amount of land in Missouri which would be covered by the terms of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Suppose it was a million acres, it would only af-

Mr. COCKRELL. Suppose it was a million acres, it would only affect one section in every township. Section sixteen was given by the act organizing Missouri as a State of the Union to the State for school purposes. There was a pledge by Congress that each township should purposes. There was a pledge by Congress that each township should have one section designated as the sixteenth section. Under former laws which have been passed, where that section had been previously entered or taken up, provision was made for selecting lands elsewhere or adjoining lands. Now, there remain a few townships in Saint Charles County where the sixteenth section has been in litigation and where the old titles have been declared superior to the other titles; and we desire simply to enable those townships to select other lands in Missouri to make up the deficiency which they have lost. The Spanish grants were confined almost exclusively to Saint Louis. There were only a few outside of that city; and, as a matter of course, where only a few outside of that city; and, as a matter of course, where they would strike the sixteenth section, it would be a mere accident, here and there, one mile out of every six. There are only a few cases of this kind, and it is simply to place these townships upon an equality with the other townships of the State, and to carry out the object and intention of Congress when Missouri was admitted into the Union, and guaranteed that these sixteenth sections should be for school purpo

The Senate has passed bills of this kind time and again. Only the day before yesterday Senate bill No. 805 passed the Senate, relating to indemnity school selections in the State of California which affected ten times as much land as is affected by this bill. The matter was brought up, and it was discussed here in the Senate and was passed. This is a very small matter. I am certainly astonished at some of my distinguished friends interposing objections to such a noble, laudable, and commendable object as the education of the masses of the people. and commendate object as the education of the masses of the people. This bill is for the purpose of furnishing these particular townships which have not had the benefit of a public-school fund that fund which the Government pledged itself when Missouri was admitted into the United States should be provided and appropriated for every township in the whole State. These townships are without it. In some of these townships many of my colored constituents live. Missouri is providing liberally for the education of that class of her citi-I desire that they shall all be placed on the same equality and that the benefits which have been derived to ninety-nine out of every one hundred of the townships shall be derived to and enjoyed by the one hundredth township, for that would scarcely be the proportion. I do hope that there will be no objection made to this bill. It passed the House, passed the Committee on Public Lands, and has been reported favorably to the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know if a bill similar in character to this had

Mr. SHERMAN. I know if a bill similar in character to this had passed in regard to Ohio it would give every school fund there an enormous amount of land; but it so happened that nearly one-third of the State was granted away by wholesale by act of Congress by State reservations. Nearly one-third of the State was granted away; and the people of Ohio did not get any subsidy or substitute for school lands in nearly one-third of the State. Where there are no public lands in the county I suppose this bill goes to every part of the State and gives other land.

Mr. COCKELL, It gives other land in the State of Missouri

Mr. COCKRELL. It gives other land in the State of Missouri. There is no objection to the bill. That matter has been submitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and I have his letter before me stating that he sees no objection to the passage of the bill Mr. COCKRELL. That is that they can make other selections, in-

Mr. COCKRELL. That is that they can make other selections, instead of being confined to the township.

Mr. SHERMAN. The words "unappropriated land within the State" might cover any land that the United States might have for military purposes or any other. I suggest, therefore, the bill ought to be amended so as to read "any other unappropriated public lands" subject to entry

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the way the Commissioner of the General Land Office interpreted it.

Mr. SHERMAN. But it does not read so.
Mr. COCKRELL. It was the intention, as a matter of course, simply to enable them to select other public lands in lieu of those of which they were deprived.
Mr. SHERMAN. The bill provides that they may "select the tracts this act and the act to which it is amendatory, out of any unappropriated land within the State," &c.

Mr. PADDOCK. The word "public" should be inserted before "land." of land to which each of said townships may be entitled by virtue of

Mr. SHERMAN. It should read, "public land subject to entry." Mr. PADDOCK. There can be no objection to that amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest that the bill is not yet before the Senate. The question is, Will the Senate proceed to its consideration?

Mr. SHERMAN. My friend from Missouri is usually very good humored, and I do not want to interfere with him, but if he will let the bill go over until to-morrow and call it up I shall not have the slightest objection to it. I think he had better do that. I should like to have a message from the President, which ought to be read, laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a message from the President of the United States upon the table. Is there objection to its being laid before the Senate?

Mr. COCKRELL. I object to anything being done until this bill is disposed of. If there are not Senators enough present to dispose of this bill there are not Senators enough present to do any other business, and I shall move a call of the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. Would it be in order to move a recess until tomorrow?

Mr. SPENCER. Let us have an executive session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas move that the Senate take a recess †

Mr. INGALLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will withdraw my objection, unless some other Senator entertains a similar one, against this bill being acted upon.

I withdraw my objection to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope that will be withdrawn until the Senator from Missouri may have an opportunity, now that the Senator from Ohio has withdrawn his objection, to secure a vote upon the bill. It is a very equitable bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas that the Senate take a recess until to-mor-

The PRESIDING OFFICER put the question, and declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask for a division.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Kansas will withdraw his motion for a moment in order to allow the passage of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is now dividing, ten

Senators have risen in the affirmative.

Mr. INGALLS. The negative has not been called for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not.

Mr. INGALLS. If it is desired that there shall be an executive session, I will yield for that purpose.

Mr. CHAFFEE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the con-The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were re-opened, and (at two o'clock and twelve minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Tuesday, February 6, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

[CALENDAR DAY, February 5.]

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House re-assembled at ten o'clock a. m., (Monday, February 5.)
Mr. BANNING. I ask unanimous consent to present three memorials. The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Banning] that it was the understanding that no business should be done to-day until ten minutes before twelve o'clock.

Mr. BANNING. If that be the case, and the Chair thinks I had better not present these memorials, then I move that the House take a recess until ten minutes before twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at ten o'clock and three minutes a. m.) the House took a recess until eleven o'clock and fifty minutes a. m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session at eleven o'clock and fifty minutes a. m.

TAXES ON BANKING INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. BANNING, by unanimous consent, presented the following petitions; which were referred to the Committee of Ways and Means:

The petition of twenty-eight banking institutions of Cincinnati, Ohio, asking that the law under which the taxes now levied by the General Government on the deposits, circulation, and capital of banks are collected be immediately repealed, and that the subject of bank taxation be remitted to the several States and Territories as before the war;

The petition of Thomas F. McGraw and 50 other citizens of Springfield, Ohio, asking the repeal of the war tax on banks and the subject of bank taxation be remanded to the several States and Territories;

The petition of P. W. Parkhurst and 74 other citizens of Clyde, Ohio, asking that all the taxes now levied by the General Government on the deposits, circulation, and capital of all banks be immediately repealed and the subject of bank taxation be remitted to the several States and Territories as before the war.

PUBLIC LANDS IN COLORADO.

Mr. BELFORD, by unanimous consent, presented a joint memorial and resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, praying Congress to graduate the price of public lands in the State of Colorado not susceptible of irrigation; which was referred to the Committee on Publie Lands.

GRANT OF PUBLIC LANDS TO COLORADO.

Mr. BELFORD also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the State of Colorado, praying for a grant of land to aid in the construction of the Golden, Georgetown and Central Railroad of Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

CENTENNIAL EXHIBITION.

Mr. HOPKINS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Centennial Celebration, to whom was referred so much of the President's message as related to the preservation of the Government exhibit at the centennial exhibition, submitted a report, accompanied by letters from Professor Henry and Professor Baird, and moved the same be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and ordered to be printed, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

The motion was agreed to

WILLIAM MAJORS.

Mr. WALLING, by unanimous consent, presented the petition of General George W. Morgan and 55 other officers and citizens of Knox and Franklin Counties, in the State of Ohio, praying that a pension may be granted to William Majors, a soldier in the war of 1812; which was referred to the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions.

AMENDMENT OF THE REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. PLATT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4571) to amend section 1556 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved June 20, 1874; which was read a first and second time, re ferred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

JAMES D. JOHNSTON.

Mr. HARTRIDGE. I ask unanimous consent to introduce and have passed at this time a bill to remove the political disabilities of James D. Johnston, of Savannah, Georgia. It is accompanied by the proper petition

Mr. HURLBUT. Let the petition be read; if it is in proper form will not object.

The petition was read, as follows:

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

The petition of James D. Johnston, of Savannah, Georgia, respectfully shows that he was an officer in the Navy of the United States; that on April 10, 1861, he resigned his commission as such officer and entered the naval service of the late Confederate States, whereby he fell under the disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States; which disabilities he prays your honorable bodies to remove.

JANUARY 30, 1877.

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. No. 4572) was received, read three several times, and passed; two-thirds voting in favor

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE.

Mr. STRAIT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4573) to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands in the several States and Territories afflicted with grasshoppers or their eggs, to be used in the payment of bounties, or otherwise, for the destruction of such grasshoppers or their eggs; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STRAIT also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, approved January 17, 1877, requesting the Senators and Representatives from Minnesota in the Congress of the United States to secure if possible such legislation as will appropriate the proceeds of the sales of public lands in the several States afflicted with grasshoppers to those States, to be used in the payment of bounties for the destruction of such grasshoppers; which was referred to the Com-mittee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STRAIT also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved January 23, 1877, requesting the United States Senators and Representatives from Minnesota to use their efforts to secure a bounty for the destruction of grasshoppers and their eggs; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

SETTLERS ON ODD-NUMBERED SECTIONS.

Mr. STRAIT also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved January 19, 1877, requesting the House of Representatives of the United States Congress to pass the bill (8. No. 547) for the relief of certain settlers on odd-numbered sections; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. BUCKNER, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4574) to provide for ascertaining and settling private land claims in certain States and Territories; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims, and ordered to be printed.

SOUTHERN TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. BUCKNER also presented a joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives of the twenty-ninth General Assembly of the State of Missouri, relating to the construction and the completion of the Southern Transcontinental Railway on the line of the thirty-second and thirty-fifth parallels of latitude; which was referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CLYMER. I move that the House take a recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at eleven o'clock and fifty-nine and a half minutes a. m.) the House took a recess until twelve o'clock m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session at twelve o'clock m.

The SPEAKER. The Chair asks unanimous consent that the Chaplain now offer prayer.

No objection was made, and prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. I. L. TOWNSEND.

WHALE'S BACK ISLAND, PORTSMOUTH, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4575) for the erection of a Dafoll trumpet signal on Whale's Back Island, in the harbor of Portsmouth, New Hampshire; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

REPEAL OF BANK TAX.

Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire, also presented, by unanimous consent, the petition of H. C. Abbott and other citizens of Conway, New Hampshire, praying that the law authorizing the assessment of a tax on capital, deposits, and circulation of banks be repealed; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

He also presented the petition of Frederick Smyth and other citizens of New Hampshire, praying that the law authorizing the assessment of a tax upon capital, deposits, and circulation of banks be repealed; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.

Mr. YOUNG, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4576) to provide for changing and fixing the boundaries of certain property ceded to the Government of the United States by the city of Memphis, Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

BATAVIA SHIP-CANAL COMPANY.

Mr. YOUNG, by unanimous consent, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4577) providing for the incorporation of the Batavia Ship-Canal Company; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PUNISHMENT OF CRIMES COMMITTED ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

Mr. KIDDER, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4578) to extend the jurisdiction of the district and circuit courts of the United States for the punishment of crimes over Indian reservations in the limits of any State or organized Territory; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, and ordered to be printed.

EDWARD T. RYAN.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H.R. No. 4579) for the relief of Edward T. Ryan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

TERRITORIAL TRANSPORTATION COMPANIES.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4580) authorizing the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota by general incorporation acts to permit persons to associate themselves together as bodies-corporate for the transportation of freight and passengers by land and water; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed.

CESSION OF BLACK HILLS.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, praying for the ratification of the agreement with the Sioux Indians for the cession of the Black Hills; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

TERRITORY OF PEMBINA.

Mr. KIDDER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, praying for the organization of a new territory out of the northern part thereof to be called Pembina; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed.

SOUTHERN CLAIMS COMMISSION.

On motion of Mr. EDEN, by unanimous consent, the bill (S. No. 1128) to extend for two years the act establishing the board of commissioners of claims, and the acts relating thereto, was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on War Claims, not to be brought back on a motion to recon-

CLAIMS IN THE DISTRICT-OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HARDENBERGH, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 187) for re-adjustment of claims in the District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee for the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

JAMES A. BATES.

Mr. WAIT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4581) for the relief of James A. Bates; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

HORACE A. STONE.

Mr. WILLIS, by unanimous consent, (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4582) authorizing the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent of Horace A. Stone for improvements in the manufacture of cheese; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WILLIS also, by unanimous consent, (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4583) to remove the political disabilities of Lillie Devereaux Blake; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH, by unanimous consent, introduced (by request) a bill (H. R. No. 4584) to relieve the political disabilities of Lillie Devereaux Blake; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MacDOUGALL. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to introduce a bill (H. R. No. 4581) to authorize the President to appoint Dr. Thomas Owens as assistant surgeon in the Navy, and to move that it may be put upon its passage at this time.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I object.

Mr. MACDOUGALL. Then I ask the bill be introduced merely for reference to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I have no objection to that.

The bill was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Matilda Joslyn Gage; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

HICKEY'S CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. MUTCHLER, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved. That the Clerk of the House is hereby authorized and directed to pro-cure from the proprietors fifty copies of Hickey's Constitution of the United States for the use of each member, provided the same can be obtained at the rate of $1.50

DEEDS, ETC., MADE IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Mr. O'NEILL, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 4585) to validate and confirm certain acknowledgments of deeds and other instruments of writing under seal, made in a foreign country, for lands lying in the District of Columbia, and the records thereof; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

SETTLEMENT OF THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

Mr. O'NEILL also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4586) to encourage emigration of citizens of the United States to such portions of the public domain as are open to pre-emption under the homestead laws; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

R. T. WILSON.

Mr. O'NEILL also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4587) to re-instate R. T. Wilson, late captain Fifth United States Cavalry, to his former rank in the service; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MRS. E. R. HUTTON.

Mr. O'NEILL also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4588) for the relief of Mrs. E. R. Hutton; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF LAND OFFICES.

Mr. HURLBUT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4589) to re-establish certain land offices therein named; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be pointed.

ABRAM V. MILLER.

Mr. MACKEY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4590) granting a pension to Abram V. Miller, late a lieutenant in Company E, One hundred and eighty-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

MILITARY ACADEMY BILL.

MILITARY ACADEMY BILL.

Mr. CLYMER. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4306) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, and to move that the amendments be non-concurred in, and the bill and amendments be ordered to be printed.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The SPEAKER. The bill and amendments go to the Speaker's table.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I ask the same course be taken with reference to the fortification bill; that the amendments of the Senate be non-concurred in, and the bill and amendments ordered to be printed.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

SETTLERS ON ODD-NUMBERED SECTIONS.

Mr. DUNNELL, by unanimous consent, introduced joint resolutions of the Legislature of Minnesota, asking for the passage of the bill (S. No. 547) for the relief of certain settlers on the public lands; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

ROUND VALLEY INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. LUTTRELL, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolutions; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to ascertain the extent and value of all lands claimed within the exterior boundaries of the Round Valley Indian reservation in California, under titles derived from said State, and to report upon the same to Congress at its next session.

Resolved, That the United States Attorney-General be, and he is hereby, requested to suspend all suits in the United States courts in the State of California relating to said lands until Congress shall have been informed thereon through the Secretary of the Interior and action had thereon by Congress.

DR. THOMAS OWENS.

Mr. MacDOUGALL. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to in-

FRANCIS A. PAGE.

Mr. HUMPHREYS, from the Committee of Accounts, reported the following resolution; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund to Francis A. Page, an employé of this House on the soldier's roll, the amount of his salary as a disabled soldier from July 15, 1876, the date when he was last paid, to September 1, 1876, amounting to $160.

Mr. HUMPHREYS moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM P. THOMAS.

Mr. HUMPHREYS also, from the same committee, reported the following resolution; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby instructed and authorized to pay to William P. Thomas $59.34 for service rendered in the Doorkeeper's department from April 1 to 15, 1876, inclusive.

Mr. HUMPHREYS moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. COX. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to present for reference to the Committee on Rules the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk to be read. I should like very much to get an expression of the House on the point involved.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the rules of the House be, and hereby are, so amended that, pending the counting of the electoral vote and when the House is not required to be engaged thereon, it shall, on assembling each calendar day after recess and every preceding day, proceed at and after twelve o'clock m. with its business as though the legislative day had expired by adjournment.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I object to that.

Mr. HALE. Is it offered for reference or action?

Mr. COX. For reference only. I should like to have an expression of intelligent members of the House as to the effect of that resolution. Mr. HALE. I do not think there should be any objection to the reference of the resolution.

Mr. COX. I do not propose to pass it now.
Mr. O'BRIEN. I object to the introduction of the resolution for a reason which I will state. I may then withdraw my objection for reference of the resolution to the committee.

Mr. COX. I would like to hear the gentleman's reason.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Maryland if he desires to make any statement, unless the House objects.

Mr. O'BRIEN. The question of order which I desire to raise at this time is the very question which is embraced in the resolution; and if my point of order is not sustained, then I will withdraw the objection.

Mr. COX. I would like to hear my friend from Maryland [Mr. O'BRIEN] give his opinion as to the effect of a resolution of this kind in connection with the compromise bill.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is exactly what I propose to do.

Mr. COX. And that is what the Committee on Rules proposes to do. It proposes to make a critical examination of this question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot entertain a question of order on the motion of reference. The gentleman from Maryland can, in his own right, object to the introduction of the resolution. That he his right. But there is no point of order which would lie against the his right. But there is no point of order which would lie against the resolution. A point of order might be raised against a report from the Committee on Rules.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I object to the introduction of the resolution; and now raise the question of order that we should proceed as ordinarily on Monday to the regular order namely, the call of States and Territories for bills on leave and joint resolutions. I desire to submit a remark or two in connection with that point of order and ask the indulgence of the Chair and the House while I do so.

Mr. COX. I will say to my friend from Maryland that the question of order which he raises is really involved in this resolution which I have introduced, and my object is not to pass the resolution at this time; but to have an investigation into the questions to which it re-

Mr. O'BRIEN. I understand that

Mr. COX. For, if we are to be occupied for a couple of weeks, as we may, with this electoral count it may be important for the business of the House that we should have some more convenient mode of dispatching business than appears to be provided by the compromise bill. I hope my friend from Maryland will allow the resolution to go to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Not yet. I will say to my friend from New York that the solution of the question of order which I now raise will solve the very difficulty which he apprehends to exist, and for the solution of which he thinks an amendment of the rules required. And if the gentleman will hear me for a few moments—if the Speaker and the House will hear me—I think I will be able to satisfy the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Cox.]

Mr. SAYLER. I think the Chair has already ruled upon that point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has ruled that the session of Thursday is continuing

Mr. SAYLER. And unquestionably the Chair is right under the present rules.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I desire to raise a question of order that it may be decided whether or not we are now in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1, or the legislative day of Monday, February 5.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland raises the point of order that to-day is the legislative day of Monday. Is that the point

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I ask the attention of the Chair a few moments that I may explain my reasons for raising the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair then withdraws his decision to allow the gentleman to be heard.

Mr. COX. I hope the gentleman from Maryland will at the same time withdraw his objection to my resolution; otherwise he cannot raise the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state on this point that he does not see how the House can do any act which they have forbidden themselves from performing. In other words, the Chair is unable to see, after the House has agreed with the Senate, for instance not to adjourn, how a motion can be carried, or even entertained, to adjourn. Nay, more, the Chair is unable to see when the House has by an enactment of law said that it would not adjourn, how the Chair can entertain a motion to adjourn, or how the House can adjourn.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is the very question involved in my point of

The SPEAKER. And the Chair has overruled the point of order, Mr. O'BRIEN. I desire respectfully to assign a reason why I raise

Mr. O'BRIEN. I desire respectivity to assign a reason way I take the point of order at this time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will withdraw his decision to enable the gentleman from Maryland to be heard.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is what I desire.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman withdraw his objection to the reference of my resolution?

Mr. O'BRIEN. Not yet.

Mr. COX. I am content. Go on.

Mr. COX. I am content. Go on.
Mr. O'BRIEN. The question whether we are in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1, or Monday, February 5, I understand has been provisionally determined by the Speaker, he at the same time reserving the right to change his decision.
The SPEAKER. Not provisionally. The Chair has withdrawn his decision absolutely to enable the gentleman from Maryland to address the House.

[Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!"

Mr. O'BRIEN. I hope I will have the respectful attention of the

[Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!"]
Mr. O'BRIEN. I hope I will have the respectful attention of the House, because in giving the opinion which I propose to submit I give that which I think will commend itself, as a greater and more enlightened mind than my own, one who is recognized upon this floor as one of the leading lawyers in the House, fully coincides with me in the view I desire to present. The question whether this is the legislative day of last Thursday, or Monday, is necessarily a question which is involved in the construction of the act known as the electoral bill. In the views that I will submit, I will consider the question as undecided by any previous action of the House.

Now, sir, if we are in the legislative day of last Thursday, February 1, because of the fact that in the electoral bill it is stated that either House may take a recess until the next day, it may be possible that we will remain in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1, until the coming of the next 4th of March; and I would inquire of the Speaker and of the House whether, when the hour of twelve o'clock meridian upon the 4th of March is reached, if the counting of the votes shall not then have been completed and if the joint convention shall not have been dissolved, whether or not then we shall not be in the legislative day of the 4th of March and compelled to adjourn under the Constitution, or whether we shall be in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1? It seems to me that that is conclusive of the question when we consider it in relation to what would be the extension of the argument upon which is based the theory that we are now in the first the second of the second of the heavy that we are now in the second of the argument upon which is based the theory that we are now in the second of day, February 17 It seems to me that that is conclusive of the question when we consider it in relation to what would be the extension of the argument upon which is based the theory that we are now in the legislative day of last Thursday, February 1. It reduces the argument to an absurdity and proves it to be fallacious from the beginning. Because if to-day we are in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1, and if the provisions of the bill by which we are placed in what I may call this unfortunate position have not been erroneously determined, we may remain in that position until twelve o'clock on the 4th of March, when we shall be compelled to recognize the fact that we are in the calendar day of the 4th of March and under the Constitution compelled to adjourn. Moreover, by the rules of the House, which are more imperative and more binding than any ordinary construction of the statutes by the Speaker, the House has certain rights.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman mean to state that the rules of the House are more binding than a law of Congress?

Mr. O'BRIEN. By no means. But I say that the construction of law by the Speaker of the House is not more binding than the rules of the House; because the construction of the law by the Speaker of the House may be overruled by the House, and I think no one will deny that proposition.

Now, I say that the construction of what is known as the electoral law, which it is alleged limits the power of the House to the taking of a recess, has been determined for the House only by the construction placed on that law by the decision of the Speaker, and I have the greatest respect for the decision of the Speaker although I think it was an error.

it was an error.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the rules of the House admit, not only upon Mondays but upon the last six days of the session, a right to call for a suspension of the rules upon any resolution or pending bill and have the same passed by a two-thirds vote of the House. If we are to remain in the legislative day of Thursday, February 1, until the 28th day of February, then the rules of the House will not permit any member upon this floor to rise and ask a suspension of the rules, and the difficulty may exist until the 4th of March shall have dawned upon us, the bour arrived the moment come when the Speaker's and the difficulty may exist until the 4th of March shall have dawned upon us, the hour arrived, the moment come when the Speaker's gavel must forever determine the ending of the Forty-fourth Congress. But, sir, on that legislative day it will become compulsory on the Speaker to recognize the fact that we are on the calendar day and legislative day of the 4th of March.

Now, I imagine that the difficulties which have supervened arise out of what I consider a misconstruction of the electoral bill. It is with of what I consider a misconstruction of the electoral bill. It is with great diffidence that I submit my views of the proper construction of this bill. Section 5 provides that the joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of the electoral votes shall be completed and the result determined. It does not say that neither House shall adjourn. It merely provides that the joint meeting shall not be dissolved. But in the very next provision of the law it gives power to either House to adjourn to the next calendar day, although in fact the law uses the words "take a recess." I am not here to be told, nor can this House be told, that the meaning of the word "recess" which may attach to it under ordinary construction may not be properly construed so that the word "recess" in this connection may mean adjourn. In other words, if instead of the word "recess" the law had used the word "adjourn" there would have been no difficulty, because the law provides that the recess shall be until the next culty, because the law provides that the recess shall be until the next day, meaning the next calendar day, and therefore if the word used had been "adjourn" instead of "recess," why of course we would have on Thursday last adjourned until the next calendar day; and have on Thursday last adjourned until the next calendar day; and therefore it strikes me that the whole difficulty arises entirely from the construction, or rather the misconstruction of the word "recess." I know that in ordinary parlance the word "recess" does not mean to adjourn, nor would it be so construed; but when you construe the whole text of section 5 of the bill you find, while the bill provides against a dissolution of the joint meeting, it also provides in effect that either House shall have all the powers which it previously excercised of adjourning excepting the power of adjourning beyond a single day; that is to say, the House has no power to adjourn for two or three days, as it has the privilege to do under the Constitution, but the law continues the power in either House of adjourning, or, in other words, taking a recess for a day.

Now, suppose the word "recess" is construed to mean adjournment, that is, adjournment in its ordinary acceptation. If that is done the that is, adjournment in its ordinary acceptation. If that is done the difficulty will not only be solved, but no difficulty whatever would be presented. I say not only that it is not a forced construction for the Speaker to say that the word "recess" in this law means adjournment, Speaker to say that the word "recess" in this law means adjournment, but that upon a proper reading of the law it can mean nothing else. It can never be presumed that a law of the United States, framed by the two Houses of Congress, could have in view the object of defeating all the rules of both Houses and preventing the two Houses from exercising their ordinary power of adjournment from day to day.

My attention is called to the last clause of section 5, which says:

And while any question is being considered by said commission, either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

How proceed? Proceed in the ordinary way. That is, either House may adjourn from day to day except, understand me, Mr. Speaker, except that the power to adjourn is limited by the words "not beyond the next day."

Am I to be told here in the angust presence of the two Houses of Congress and of the country that our business is not only to be thrown into confusion, but almost into chaos, because of the construction given to a single word, especially when that construction is totally unnecessary? On the other hand, I assert without hesitation that, if this question be considered by the Committee on Rules or by the lawyers on the Committee on the Judiciary, they would not hesitate to say that it is better for the interests of Congress and of the country, but because it is right and in accordance with the proper construction it is better to construct the word "recess" as meaning an adjournment from day to day than to pass another law to remove the difficulty. I submit this to the House as a correct view of this question.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker—
Mr. HUBBELL. I rise to a question of order.
Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK.]
Mr. HANCOCK. I would, with considerable diffidence, offer a few remarks upon the subject now before the House in regard to the proper interpretation to be given to the fifth section of the electoralcommission law passed a short time since.

I may not have a great reverence for rules as some other members, but I hope I have a proper appreciation of them, and I recognize the necessity of their observance. In the view I take of this law I do not conceive that it necessarily makes any infraction upon the ordinary rules governing the procedure of this House. It seems to me that the law was framed with reference to a contingency such as we now find ourselves in, and that it has made ample provision for the transaction of the ordinary business of legislation without interruption by the reason of the change of adjournments into recesses.

It seems to me that the language implied in the law is peculiarly fitted to accomplish that particular object:

Such joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of electoral votes shall be completed and the result declared; and no recess shall be taken unless a question shall have arisen in regard to counting any such votes—

That contingency has arisen. A question has occurred in relation to the counting of certain electoral votes. Hence the joint meeting was in a condition to take a recess. The law proceeds—in which case it shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next

That undoubtedly carries us out of one calendar day and into the next calendar day, and places the House in session on the next calendar day, precisely as if we had adjourned to the next calendar day.

If there could be any doubt as to this being the correct interpretation of the design of the law, it is made most manifest by the concluding clause of the same section:

And while any question is being considered by said commission—

That is, a question in regard to counting any electoral votes either House may proceed with its legislative or other business

It certainly could not have been intended by the broad terms here employed to restrict the House to the particular character of legisla-tion or other business that might have been in order on the day when tion or other business that might have been in order on the day when the joint meeting commenced—that is, the 1st day of February—and to hold that, notwithstanding the enlarged powers given to the respective Houses to proceed with their legislative or other business, it must be construed as but one legislative day, and the business to be transacted is to be only that which is legitimate and proper on that particular day. Having taken a recess from the one day to the next, the business of the House on that next day is to be governed by the rules applicable to the particular day to which the recess has been taken.

This view makes the law and the rules entirely consistent in so far as to give effect to the rules when they do not necessarily come in conflict with the law. Just so far as the rules come in conflict with the law, of course the rules must fall, be pretermitted, in order to give full force and effect to the law.

In that view we were in session on Friday for the purpose of taking up and considering such legislative business, or any other business. ing up and considering such legislative business, or any other business which devolved upon the House, in like manner as if we had adjourned from Thursday to Friday. The law seems to have been drawn with great care to enable us to take a recess from Saturday until Monday, for it says "in which case it shall be competent for either House acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next day, Sunday excepted." We are now in session on Monday by virtue of a recess taken from Saturday to Monday as if we had adjourned from Saturday to Monday. And to-day the business is to be taken up and acted upon under the rules applicable to Monday, without reference to the fact that we did not adjourn but took a recess from Saturday to Monday. With this interpretation I think there can be no trouble or difficulty, and without it we are certainly in most inextricable confusion with reference to the power of the House to legislate upon fusion with reference to the power of the House to legislate upon matters of grave importance.

Under the Speaker's interpretation that this is one elongated day, extending from the 1st of February until perhaps the middle or perchance the 20th, we may pass an act which upon its being carried to the President he sees proper to veto; but on inspection of the dates as journalized it is found that when he returns the bill, twenty days instead of ten days have elapsed, so that the veto does not avail. Thus this interpretation would break down the executive power of the Government, leaving legislation simply at the discretion of the the Government, leaving legislation simply at the discretion of the two House

On the other hand, under the interpretation by which we pass from On the other hand, under the interpretation by which we pass from one calendar day to the next calendar day, the business takes date with the day to which the recess is had; and the proceedings are as legitimate and regular from day to day as if there had been no such recess, but an actual adjournment. Suppose that in the first instance the law had required the sessions of Congress to be continuous, that throughout the session there should be no adjournment. In that case there would be no difficulty in conforming to the same character of rules we now have. So that during a session of three or six or nine months without an adjournment, a recess being taken from day to months, without an adjournment, a recess being taken from day to day, the rules of the respective Houses might provide that upon cer-tain days a certain character of business should be taken up, and that certain other business should not be allowed. For instance, although certain other business should not be allowed. For instance, although no adjournment should take place, it might be declared by the rules that on Monday a suspension of the rules should be in order, and in the same way any other legislative regulation of the proceedings might be adopted by either branch of Congress.

I feel very clear, Mr. Speaker, that the law admits of this interpretation; and I must conclude that it was drawn for the purpose of permitting the legitimate legislative business of the two Houses to go on in the same manner as if there had been an adjournment, and not to operate as a qualification upon the power of each House so as to confine it to the character of legislation that may have been in order upon the day on which the joint session commenced.

The SPEAKER. The Chair submits that the view of the question taken by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] would require a change of the rules.

Mr. HANCOCK. I say that the law changes the rules in this respect.

Mr. COX. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Iowa,

[Mr. WILSON.]
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased with the ability with which the wrong side of the question has been presented. I always recognize ability wherever I am capable of recognizing it. I have before me the proceedings had in this House in 1801 when the House met on the 11th of February to count the votes for President and Vice-President. Thirty-six ballots were had and the order of proceeding was this: whenever a ballot had been taken we find an order that the ballot be repeated at a certain hour, sometimes on the next calendar day, no legislative act being performed whatever, there being no adjournment nor recess.

there being no adjournment nor recess.

Now, under the interpretation put by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. O'BRIEN] upon the term "recess" you would be put, Mr. Speaker, in the disagreeable position of ruling that the convenience of this House should override the terms of an act of Congress. You have ruled, sir, that a joint rule of the two Houses until abrogated by both is still in force. Now a joint rule does not require the signature of the President; and you having so held—conscientiously no doubt—

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not given any decision at variance

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I say then with how much more force must

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I say then with how much more force must you hold that a law of the land to which we have agreed, suspending many of our rules, cannot be abrogated unless with the concurrence of both Houses? That remark which you made (to use an old phrase) touches the thing with a needle. It requires that this term "recess" be changed by law into the word "adjourn."

I have made a statement of what in my view we can and what we cannot do under the law as it now stands. We can consider appropriation bills in the Committee of the Whole. We can consider reports from committees privileged to report at any time. Not only can we consider bills in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, but we can consider bills in Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar by going into committee for that purpose by a ma-Union, but we can consider bills in Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar by going into committee for that purpose by a majority vote. We can consider all special orders made under a suspension of the rules. We can by unanimous consent do anything the House sees fit to do. The Committee on Appropriations can report at any time, and so can the Committee of Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. And also, the Chair would suggest, the Committee on Printing. All privileged reports and all questions of privilege can be entertained.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Certainly the reports of all committees

Now let us see what we are prohibited from doing. We cannot refer a bill without unanimous consent, but consent is never denied for that purpose. We cannot, except by unanimous consent, move to suspend the rules; and of course unanimous consent would obviate the necessity for such suspension.

Now, then, to speak plainly, here is where one of the difficulties comes in. I do not suppose unanimous consent will be denied to any gentleman who wants to direct the further action of the House relating to its legitimate business; but unanimous consent would be denied at once to anything of a political nature offered from either side of the House. That we cannot entertain a proposition is the greatest difficulty we meet. We cannot entertain reports from standing committees of the House of the House the committees which werelly report. mittees of the House, the committees which usually report Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Under the present condition of affairs I do not suppose leave would be denied to any gentleman in charge of a bill matured by a committee to bring it before the House. charge of a bill matured by a committee to bring it before the House. But we cannot go to the Speaker's table without unanimous consent; and I call the attention of gentlemen to the fact we never do go to the Speaker's table, or seldom go there, without unanimous consent; that is to say, we hardly ever proceed to the regular consideration of business upon the Speaker's table, every message from the President of the United States and every communication from the head of any one of the Departments being taken up usually by the Speaker and referred by unanimous consent

I believe we can act under the rule proposed if the House thinks it wise to pass it; I believe we can do it, but I am not clear how legal we would be in doing it. I know if we pass an amendatory act declaring while pursuing legislative duties the Houses may adjourn when the commission is absent—I know if we change the word "rewhen the commission is absent—I know if we change the word "recess" to "adjourn" and the Senate concurs in it and the President signs the bill then it would be legal. But the word "recess" is too well understood by members of the House to have it interpreted to mean "adjourn." That bill came to us and found the House with a code of rules. It suspended a certain portion of the rules. It said you may take a recess, and every legislator knows until there is an adjournment the legislative day continues.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Certainly. Mr. O'BRIEN. The House will observe what the gentleman from Mr. O'BRIEN. The House will observe what the gentleman from Iowa does not seem to apprehend now while he is at the moment arguing this particular question, that the word "recess" has no relation whatever to the word "adjourn." I will explain: The word "adjourn" means the act of the House; the word "recess" means that period of time between the ending of one session and the beginning of another. If the law had used the proper word it would have used some other word than the word "recess," to mean we could not adjourn. What the law does mean, and what it only means, is that we can provide for an interval of time between one legislative session and another. another.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, announced the passage of an act (S. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing for the current fiscal resolution of the Senate of January 22, 1877, to print 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health of the District of Columbia for the year 1876 be printed for the use and distribution of said board. It further requested the return of the resolution of the Senate of January 22, 1877, to print 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health of the District of Columbia for the resolution of the Senate of January 22, 1877, to print 1,000 extra copies of the report of the board of health of the District of Columbia for the year 1876 for the use and distribution of said board.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. O'BRIEN. The law only means that either House may provide for an interval of time between the beginning of one legislative sessionand another. That is to say, it shall not remain in continuous session. It does not mean it shall not adjourn; on the contrary, it means it shall have power to adjourn. That is to say, it shall have power to end one session and begin another session upon the next calendar day.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that is cor-

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that is correct; recess does not mean adjourn.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is in my judgment the meaning of it.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I do not think the gentleman is correct at ali. The other day when I brought in a bill to cure this difficulty, to change by force of law the word "recess" to enable us to adjourn, an objection was made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Whitthorne] it would infringe the Constitution where it says "the votes shall then be counted." In conformity with the idea that we shall sit in perpetual session until that act enjoined by the Constitution is performed, they employed a term perfectly familiar to all of us; clearly explained in Barclay's Digest; clearly explained by all the authors on parliamentary law as to what "recess" is and what our powers are under it.

powers are under it.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Let me ask the gentleman, suppose the law had said, which is an equivalent term, shall "suspend" legislative business from one day to the next calendar day, does the gentleman say we could not adjourn?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Then it would have said adjourn.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is the meaning of it, and it means nothing else.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Those gentlemen who prepared that law knew the force of terms. They knew what adjournment is and what

Mr. O'BRIEN. Abler law-makers than any of them have made laws which have been susceptible of more than one construction. Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It is difficult to find more able law-makers Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It is difficult to find more able law-makers than the gentlemen on that commission. But, Mr. Speaker, I believe in the few words in which you gave it your ruling is unanswerable. We undoubtedly can reach the Speaker's table and allow the standing committees to report and have motions to suspend the rules; we can do all that by a rule such as that proposed by the gentleman from New York. But I am not positive whether we will not thereby be infringing the law. If we amend that one word "recess" and call it "adjourn," then all the rules under which we operated before this act became law will be in force, and the House will proceed without hinderance. I am clear on that, but not clear that it would not be a violation of law to evade by a rule of the House the act creating the commission.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. The whole difficulty in this case is as to the construction of section 5 of this so-called compromise act. That section evidently refers entirely and exclusively to the original formation of the joint convention. The beginning of the section provides as to the assembling of the Houses, the positions of the presiding officer, the Speaker, the tellers, and the Clerk, &c. It then goes on to refer to the session of the joint convention; but there is, in my judgment, a great misapprehension as to the nature and character of this so called continual session. This portion of the act is not mandatory in its terms upon either House; but the language is:

In which case it shall be competent for either House-

It shall be competent-in which case it shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next day, Sunday excepted, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon.

It does not say that either House "shall" take a recess.

Now, sir, I submit, it being left entirely discretionary with either House, one or both, the law making it competent for either House to take a recess, that the proper construction of that is that we have a discretion to consider what we shall do; that we may or we may not take a recess and may adjourn. I think, therefore, we should have to-day the morning hour of Monday as usual.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I am satisfied that the true meaning of this act is not to interfere with ordinary legislation or to prevent the adjournment from day to day. In the first place, there is an extrajudicial or legislative body created out of the two Houses; and while acting in that capacity its functions are distinct and separate from those of ordinary legislation. those of ordinary legislation.

The bill provides, in the first place,-

That the Senate and House of Representatives shall meet in the Hall of the House of Representatives, at the hour of one o'clock post meridian, on the first Thursday in February, A. D. 1877; and the President of the Senate shall be their presiding

The third section provides:

That while the two Houses shall be in meeting, as provided in this act, no debate shall be allowed and no question shall be put by the presiding officer, except to either House on a motion to withdraw; and he shall have power to preserve order.

Now, if in the contemplation of the law we are still in joint session, and if to adjourn one House would be to dissolve the joint session then, under the law, you have no power to have debate at all. For it provides that while we are in joint session we cannot have debate. I draw the distinction between actual physical joint session and legal joint session; and the theory of those who contend that we have no right to adjourn is that we are in joint session all the time; and if that be true you cannot have debate or any proceeding at all. Then, in section 5 it is provided:

That at such joint meeting of the two Houses seats shall be provided as fol-

And the same section provides:

Such joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of the electoral votes shall be completed and the result declared—

I admit that this body, created by law as an extrajudicial or legislative body, cannot be dissolved until the count shall be completed and the result declared. But it says further—and I desire the attention of the Chair especially to this, because if we are going to stick in the bark and say there can be no adjournment of either House of Congress, then, according to the letter of the statute, you can have but one recess on each disagreement of the Houses—and no recess shall be taken unless a question shall have arisen in regard to counting any such votes, or otherwise under this act; in which case it shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next day, Sunday excepted, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Now, that only provides for one recess. And if this language means that the two bodies are in perpetual session, with the one exception stated in the statute of a recess not beyond the next day at ten o'clock, why, then, when we shall have met after the issue has been raised, why, then, when we shall have met after the issue has been raised, we are in perpetual session, under the language of the statute, and we have no authority to take a recess from day to day as we are doing; for the statute says that there shall be but one recess, and that not beyond the next day at ten o'clock in the forenoon. It does not say that the next day either House may take a recess again from day to day or from hour to hour.

The statute provides further:

And while any question is being considered by said commission, either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

may proceed with its legislative or other business.

Now what does that mean? It does not say "and may have power to adjourn from day to day." But it meant this: The makers of this law knew when they were framing it that under the law as it stood it was likely the joint convention would be occupied until the 4th of March counting the electoral vote. Therefore anticipating the period of counting, they changed it from the 14th of February to the 1st of February. And will the Speaker of the House believe that those gentlemen who framed this law meant that this House should sit in a perpetual business session for perhaps thirty days, one whole calendar month, with no power to adjourn—the whole to be treated as one day—when they said that we should go on with our legislative business as usual? Does not that imply the right to adjourn, or take a recess, or do any other legislative act which Congress has power to do? When the two Houses are in joint session they can do nothing but count the vote. When not in joint session they can do anything else but that. else but that.

Mr. PAGE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is the question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The question of the reference of the resolution of the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Cox.]

Mr. PAGE. Does it not require unanimous consent?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I understand the question is upon the point of order that I raise

The SPEAKER. The Chair considers that the subject is before the

Mr. PAGE. Can the reference of this resolution be made by a majority of the House on to-day?

The SPEAKER. The resolution was introduced by unanimous consent and has been discussed; and the question now is upon its reference to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I objected to the introduction of the resolution, and I apprehend that the question before the House is upon the question of order, whether this, as a legislative day, is Monday or Thursday

The SPEAKER. The present condition of the House of Represent-atives is not new. It has frequently occurred before that a legisla-tive day has extended beyond the actual twenty-four hours, and it has uniformly been held that until the House did adjourn it was the same legislative day. The Chair recollects one occasion when the legislative day extended for seventy hours nearly. The House is in a condition very much in fact similar to that in which the House of Representatives was in 1801 upon an employees case the declaring of Representatives was in 1801 upon an analogous case, the declaring of an election of a President of the United States. It seems that in that an election of a President of the United States. It seems that in that case the House neither adjourned nor took a recess, but passed a resolution that they would on the next day take another ballot in reference to the subject-matter. They recognized at that time that the legislative day extended beyond twenty-four hours. The Chair (and the House) is presented in this case with the actual words of the statutes, and he has in consequence of that statute ruled that he could not entertain a motion to adjourn, and without a motion to adjourn a new legislative day cannot be reached. The Chair, in view of the binding force of the law, states that the law which stops the House from adjourning prevents the bringing up of new business belonging to the opening of a new day, which may be provided for by the rules.

by the rules.

The Chair does not say now but what the resolution proposed by the gentleman from New York would remedy the difficulty the House is in, but the Chair is not willing now to determine whether the introduction and adoption of that rule by the House would not be in fact an evasion of the law or a negation of the law. When that time comes the Chair will decide that point as he is best enlightened on it. The Chair, however, sees no difficulty in the reference of this resolution, either to the Committee on Rules or to the Committee on the Judiciary, so that they may determine in either committee what is the effect of the law. But with the law before the Chair, that neither this House nor the Senate shall adjourn pending this count, the Chair is unable to make any other decision than the one which he has reached.

reached.

Mr. PAGE. Do I understand that the resolution of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] is now before the House?

The SPEAKER. It is, for reference.

Mr. PAGE. Is not objection to it now in order?

The SPEAKER. The resolution is not before the House for action. The Chair would like to say, and thinks it not unparliamentary to say, that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] introduced this resolution rather at the suggestion of the Committee on Rules, so that the judgment of members of the House may be reached and so the committee may come to an intelligent conclusion as far as possible.

Mr. PAGE. If it is not too late to object to the reference of the resolution, I do object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is too late.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry, and it is this: Inasmuch as the Speaker of the House, on Friday night last I believe it was, decided that he could not entertain a motion to adjourn beyond a given day, because of the existence of the electoral law, as I term it, and such having been the decision of the Speaker, has it not become the law of the House, and is it not too late to make objection now? objection now?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so decided, and was clearly right in that. The Chair decides that this House cannot do anything which that. The Chair decides that this House cannot do anything which they have bound themselves by law not to do.

Mr. BLAND. I desire to call attention to one or two points in this connection, which, it seems to me have been somewhat overlooked. Clearly the bill provides for two modes of proceeding; that cannot be disputed. The first section provides for a joint meeting and for objections that may be made to a State from which there are no double returns. That is the first section; and when an objection is made to counting the vote of a State from which there is no double return, there is nothing for the two Houses to do but to separate and vote, and during that time they cannot take a recess.

and during that time they cannot take a recess.

The second section provides for a different case entirely. It provides that where there are double returns the double returns shall be remitted to this commission, and pending the consideration of them by this commission the bill provides as I will read in a moment. We must take the whole bill together, and not particular parts of it. The bill provides that pending the consideration by the commission of the double returns this House, or either House, may proceed with its legislative business, and it uses this language in the fifth section:

And while any question is being considered by said commission either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

Now I ask you, Mr. Speaker, how can this House proceed with its legislative business unless it be under the rules of the House, and not under this bill? If this House is to proceed with its regular legislative business it must be under the rules of the House and not under the bill. But while a question is pending, where there is but one return, and which question does not go to this commission, then the bill provides that only a recess shall be taken and we cannot proceed to any other business but that pending before the joint convention.

So I say the law distinctly provides for two different cases. Where there is objection to the vote of a State and no double return, that objection must be considered by the two Houses, and the joint meeting cannot be dissolved, nor can an adjournment take place, but only a recess; nor can we proceed in that event to the consideration of legislative business. But when we have referred to this commission under the law the case of a double return, then the law provides that under the law the case of a double return, then the law provides that we may proceed to our ordinary regular legislative business, and that can be done only under the rules of the House. It is not under this bill at all that we proceed to legislative business pending the consideration of any question by the commission, but under the rules of the House. Whether you call it an adjournment or a recess, we are acting under the rules of this House, and any motion or business that can be entertained in the regular order of our business can be entertained and considered while any question is being considered by the commission. commission.

Section 4 of this bill provides that "when the two Houses sepa Section 4 of this bill provides that "when the two Houses separate to decide upon an objection that may have been made to the counting of any electoral vote or votes from any State, or upon an objection to a report of said commission." I call particular attention to this, because gentlemen refer to the provision that the joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of the electoral vote shall be completed and the result declared. That refers to the meeting of the two Houses after this commission has completed the consideration of and decided all questions referred to it, and when the House is proceeding under this law and this law alone. We cannot proceed with the regular legislative business of the House except under the rules of the House, not under this law.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to say a single word upon the resolution offered by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Cox.] I differ with reluctance from the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. WILSON,] who always exhibits great knowledge with reference to the rules of the House and expresses himself with great clearness and perspicuity in regard

It is very evident that this act, which transferred the counting of the electoral vote from the two Houses of Congress to the commission, proceeded upon the idea that the joint meeting of the two Houses, as proceeded upon the idea that the joint meeting of the two Houses, assembled under the Constitution to count the electoral vote, would meet with an obstacle in the performance of its duty which was new and strange in the history of the country. And the distinction drawn by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bland] strikes me with great force and pertinency, namely, that the first section of the bill refers to that class of cases which come before the two Houses when objection is made to the count of an electoral vote of a State from which but a single certificate has been received. The first section of the act was designed and intended to conform to the constitutional mandate that when the presiding officer of the Senate had opened the returns that when the presiding officer of the Senate had opened the returns he should hand them to the tellers; the tellers should count the vote and report the result to the Vice-President or President of the Senate, and he should announce it to the two Houses. And when any objection was made to the count of a vote, in the case of a single certificate, the two Houses should separate, come to a decision thereon, and meet immediately again in joint meeting without the transaction of any legislative business

It was well-known when this law was proposed that there were some four States from which there were dual electoral returns. This law provides for the creation of a commission for the consideration law provides for the creation of a commission for the consideration of those dual returns. It goes on to provide that while this commission—which is now sitting in the Supreme Court room and adjudicating upon one of the questions contemplated by the law, that is, the question of the vote of the State of Florida—while this commission is so considering that question, the two Houses sitting as legislative bodies, the Senate in its Chamber and the House in its Chamber, may proceed with its ordinary legislative business. That means not only the legislative business which was pending when the joint meeting took place, but that which might subsequently be introduced, showing that it was the purpose and object of the framers of this showing that it was the purpose and object of the framers of this law not only that the two Houses might proceed with the business before it but to receive and consider new business. How? Under the rules of the House as they stood before this electoral bill became a law.

The closing paragraph of the first section of the bill is as follows:

"When the two Houses have voted"—that is, shall have voted upon an electoral vote of a State from which there were not dual returns, but only a single return—"they shall immediately again meet," in conformity with the provision of the Constitution, "and the presiding officer shall then announce the decision of the question submitted." That shows that it was the purpose and object of the framers of this electoral law that where there was but a single return from a State the only business that could be transacted in either House should be the business of deciding upon any objection raised against such single return.

The second section goes on to provide for the commission now sitting, and which is considering the case of Florida, with not only its dual returns, but its triplicate returns. When the law came to provide for that case they used in the fifth section of the law this lan-

Such joint meeting shall not be dissolved until the count of electoral votes shall be completed and the result declared; and no recess shall be taken unless a question shall have arisen in regard to counting any such votes, or otherwise under this act; in which case it shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to direct a recess of such House.

Either House possesses the power to take a recess. I call the attention of the Speaker especially to the language of this section. It is not imperative upon either House to take a recess, but the power exists in either House to direct a recess. The simple question as to the time beyond which the recess should not be taken is the only limitation which is put upon the power of either House.

Thus it will be seen that my learned friend to whose views on par-Thus it will be seen that my learned friend to whose views on parliamentary law I always listen with so much attention and respect is mistaken in supposing that the electoral law arbitrarily requires the two Houses to take a recess. It does no such thing. It leaves each House to act for itself on this question, simply prescribing that the recess, if taken, shall not be for a longer period than till ten o'clock the next day. That recess may not be taken at all. The language is: language is:

It shall be competent for either House, acting separately, in the manner herein-before provided, to direct a recess of such House not beyond the next day, Sunday ex-cepted, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon. And while any question is be-ing considered by said commission, either House may proceed with its legislative or other business.

This language was obviously designed to leave the question of the recess to be determined by each House separately, the power being reserved to each House by positive enactment to proceed under its ordinary rules with ordinary legislative business. No man who gave his assent to that law—no man who joined in proposing or voting for it—contemplated that there could possibly be any determination of this question of the electoral count within less than ten days or perthis question of the electoral count within less than ten days or perhaps two weeks. This latter clause of the law, to which I call the attention of the Speaker, was not designed to limit the power of legislation, but to reserve in express terms the power of either House to proceed with its ordinary "legislative or other business." Under the construction adopted by my friend from Iowa the business to be entertained would be limited to the classes which he enumerated, unless unanimous consent to the contrary should be given.

I submit that the whole law must be taken together and construed, in view of all its terms, as we ordinarily construed attention.

in view of all its terms, as we ordinarily construe statutes. I do not think that in our interpretation exclusive reliance is to be placed upon the word "recess;" for the law does not say that we shall take a recess, but that either House may direct a recess if it chooses to do so, which recess, if taken, is not to be longer than till ten o'clock the so, which recess, if taken, is not to be longer than till ten o'clock the next day. It is expressly provided that each House during the pendency of these questions before the commission may proceed with its ordinary legislative business. This provision could only have been intended to preclude a possible construction of the Constitution that, so long as the count of the electoral vote had not been completed, no legislative business whatever could be done. Inasmuch as the act provides that, during the pendency of the count and while questions are under consideration by the electoral commission, the "legislative or other business" of each House may proceed, it must have been designed that this business should proceed in accordance with the rules of the respective Houses. In view of the fact that the taking of a recess is not imperative, but is left within the discretion of either House, it seems to me that the ruling on this subject must be, to that extent at least, qualified.

to that extent at least, qualified.

Mr. COX. Allow me to say only one word further. The object of bringing this resolution to the attention of the House has been accomplished in the expressions of opinion given by the various gentlemen who have spoken. One of the two opinions advanced is that held by my friend from Tennessee, [Mr. WHITTHORNE,] who believes that the great business of declaring who is the President-elect of the United States is paramount to everything else, and that any recess, any adjournment might lead to such trouble and complication that any adjournment might lead to such trouble and complication that the power of the House over the members for the time being would be gone, and thus we might fail to declare the result of the electoral votes. The other opinion, advanced by gentlemen who have strength-ened their view by citations from the law, is that this act by its terms makes it "competent" (using the language of the act) for either House to take a recess, and only a recess. Now in view of this contrariety of opinion, and inasmuch as the Committee on Rules has already referred to it the joint resolution of the gentleman from Iowa, I think it is wise to refer this resolution and give the committee au-

I think it is wise to refer this resolution and give the committee authority to examine this question heedfully.

Mr. BLAND. Do I understand the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] to concur in the idea that the framers of the Constitution expected Congress to count the electoral vote in one day; that there should be no adjournment until it was counted? Did they not expect us to take time to count the vote properly, even if it took six months? Does an adjournment necessarily dissolve a joint meeting any more than a recess?

Mr. COX. I was not giving my opinion. I was stating the differences of opinion in the House. These expressions of opinion are important for the instruction of the Committee on Rules, and I am glad to hear the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bland] and all other members express their views on this point. I think, however, that the question should receive careful consideration, or we may have five or ten days hence a difficulty which we cannot solve so well as we can at present.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. My colleague [Mr. Cox] will pardon me a moment. I desire to submit that this question resolves itself simply into one of judicial construction of an existing statute. That is all there is of it; and it does appear to me that upon the construction of a statute the Committee on Rules is not the proper authority for the consideration of the question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain as an amendment a mo-ion to refer the subject to any other committee.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I desire to move that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I wish to offer an amendment or substitute for the pending resolution.

The SPEAKER. The question now is simply on the reference of this resolution; it is not amendable.

Mr. COX. I am very willing to have the interpretation of the Committee on the Judiciary upon this subject.
Mr. WOOD, of New York. Lawyers, I suppose, are the only competent authority to construe an act of Congress.
Mr. O'BRIEN. I hope my amendment may be read for information.
Mr. COX. There is no objection to hearing it read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the true construction of section 5 of the electoral bill known as No. 17, and as to the right of the House under said bill to adjourn from day to day, with power to report

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is a proper resolution.
Mr. COX. That is not before the House. I now yield to my friend from Tennessee, who desires to discuss this question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to know of the gentleman from New York whether he makes the motion to refer to the Com-from New York whether he makes the motion to refer to the Committee on Judiciary?

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I do.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. My friend from New York was mistaken in ascribing to me the position this House could not take a recess. I do hold under the law the House cannot take an adjournment. In that regard the ruling of the Speaker has been correct. It is stated in the law, to which reference is made, and positively enjoined that the joint meeting of the two Houses shall not be dissolved. If either House can adjourn, we can take from the Speaker and the officers of this House the control of the members of the House and in that way prevent the joint meeting of the two Houses. That is the objection I have. I may be mistaken.

I may be mistaken.

Again, I started out with my scruples upon this proposition upon the other side of the question. I admit and recognize the inconvenience which would result to the business of the House; but my examination of the Constitution, my examination of the precedent ience which would result to the business of the House; but my examination of the Constitution, my examination of the precedents governing this question, my examination of the law, every law looking to the electoral count, deepens my conviction that no body of men ever believed it was possible to adjourn this act of sovereignty of counting the electoral votes from one week or day to another. It is one continuous act under the Constitution; and, Mr. Speaker, I beg my friends on this floor to beware how they part with the sovereignty now belonging to the people of the United States in the joint meeting of the two Houses. Adjourn and you take away from this House immediately the power to proceed to the election of a President. That legal question may be thrown upon you with all its consequences. We had better "bear the ills we have than fly to others that we know not of." Therefore I made objection to the consideration of the proposition originally submitted by the gentleman from Iowa. This proceeding should be taken, in my judgment, with the utmost care, caution, and prudence.

Mr. PAGE. I understood when the gentleman from New York presented his resolution it was objected to by the gentleman from Maryland. That objection was not withdrawn, and therefore this resolution is not before the House.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Maryland had persisted in his objection he could not have addressed the House.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I appeal to the record (and I have looked at it within the last three minutes) that I not only did not withdraw it, but proceeded with the leave of the Speaker, as the reporters' notes show, and addressed the House without withdrawing that objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will remind the gentlemen from Mary-

The SPEAKER. The Chair will remind the gentlemen from Maryland that he could not entertain an objection and at the same time allow the gentleman to make a point of order.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I appeal to the record, and ask that it be read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair entertained the point of order, and we have been discussing it under the point of order, and of course the have been discussing it under the point of order, and of course the gentleman's objection fell.

Mr. SAYLER. The objection of the gentleman from Maryland was not pending or this dicussion could not have proceeded. It is now too late to make objection.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I did not withdraw it. I was, however, under pledge to the gentleman from New York to withdraw it, and as it is not now too late, I do withdraw it.

Mr. PAGE. I renew it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules, the question having been discussed an hour and a half, the objection does not hold. Where a question has been stated and discussion commenced it is too late to question has been stated and discussion commenced it is too late to raise the question of consideration.

Mr. PAGE. The gentleman from Maryland objected when the resolution was offered, and has withdrawn his objection and I now renew it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided no objection was pending, as the discussion had proceeded, which could not have happened if any objection had been entertained or insisted upon.

Mr. HALE. Does this give the Committee on the Rules any more power than they now have under the resolution of the gentleman from ing report this resolution if they saw best under the reference of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HALE. No additional power then is given to the committee? The SPEAKER. None in the world.

Mr. COX. The resolution was introduced by me this morning only for the purpose of securing an expression of the members of the Honse on the point involved.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York ask that the Committee on the Judiciary shall have the right to report at any

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I do.
Mr. PAGE. If that requires unanimous consent, I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to vote against a reference to the Committee on the Judiciary.
Mr. O'BRIEN. I ask unanimous consent to offer the resolution which is in the hands of the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. That is not in order. This is a question of the reference of a resolution. It is not amendable.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I am not proposing to amend it; that is already passed. I ask unanimous consent to offer this resolution.

The question being taken, the motion of Mr. Wood, of New York, was agreed to; and Mr. Cox's resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HALE. That cannot be brought back on a motion to reconsider?

The SPEAKER. It cannot, having been introduced by unanimous consent. The Clerk will report the resolution offered by the gentleman from Maryland, [Mr. O'BRIEN.]

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the true construction of section 5 of the electoral bill, known as No. 17, and as to the right of the House under said bill to adjourn from day to day, with power to report at any time.

Mr. HALE. I must object. The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the resolution is not before the House.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALDRON, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriation to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes; and moved that it be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I reserve all points of order on the bill.

Mr. WALDRON. I give notice that I shall on to-morrow ask for the consideration of this bill in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman gives notice in that form he perhaps will not be able to accomplish his object. The gentleman gives notice that he will some time hence [laughter] ask the House to proceed to the consideration of the bill in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WALDRON. I will do so as soon as the bill is printed.

Mr. WOOD, of New York. I must object to every proposition that requires unanimous consent until we determine whether we have the power to adjourn or not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not ask unanimous consent for the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Waldron] to report back this bill. He reported it in the right of the Committee on Appropriations to report at any time.

Mr. COX. I move that the House take a recess until ten o'clock Mr. COX. I move that the House take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning. I desire to say to the House that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] states that there is no appropriation bill ready to be taken up.

Mr. STONE. I desire to offer a bill for reference.

Mr. COX. I demand the regular order.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. Cox, there were—ayes 66, noes 56; no quorum voting.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Cox and Mr. PAGE were appointed.
The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 104, noes 49.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Pending the announcement of the vote, Mr. DUNNELL said: I ask that by unanimous consent James M. Lee be permitted to withdraw from the files his commission as captain in volunteer service. An adverse report has been made in the case, but the party simply desires to withdraw his captain's commission which was put in among the papers by error.

There was no objection, and leave was granted.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. TEESE, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence until Friday the 9th instant.

The result of the vote on Mr. Cox's motion was then announced; and accordingly (at one o'clock and forty-five minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until Tuesday morning at ten o'clock.

PETITIONS.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. JOHN H. BAGLEY: The petition of citizens of Brooklyn and New York, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax law, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. BALLOU: The petition of Thomas Coggshall, of the Aqueduct National Bank, of Newport, Rhode Island, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BANNING: The petition of W. W. Livingston, captain and brevet lieutenant-colonel United States Army, that his Army record be corrected so as to show that he is entitled to promotion to the rank of major of artillery before Captains McMullen and Scott of the artillery service, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BEEBE: The petition of citizens of Orange, New York, that pensioners receive pensions from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLISS: The petition of citizens of Brooklyn and Buffalo, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax law, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. BRADFORD: The petition of citizens of Mobile, Alabama, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BRADLEY: The petition of A. F. R. Brailey and 22 other citizens of Saginaw, Michigan, of similar import, to the same commit-

By Mr. BROWN, of Kansas: The petition of citizens of Kansas, for such legislation as will prevent the manufacture or importation in the United States of spirituous liquors, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Wisconsin: Two petitions, one from Daniel Heard and others, the other from Farnsworth & Smith, citizens of Wisconsin, for the repeal of the bank-tax law, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. CALDWELL, of Alabama: The petition of Thomas Henry and other bank officers of Mobile, Alabama, of similar import, to the same committee.

same committee.

By Mr. CASON: The petition of citizens of Miami, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CLYMER: The petition of citizens of Leechburgh, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CROUNSE: The petition of Samuel Peters and other citizens of Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. DAVIS: The petition of William E. Anderson and 75 other business men of Raleigh, North Carolina, of similar import, to the same committee. same committee

By Mr. DENISON: The petition of H. W. Albee and others, of Ludlow, Vermont, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of George D. Barton and others, of Vermont, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DUNNELL: Four petitions signed respectively by William Mitchell and 80 others, J. C. Easton and 58 others, David Anthony and 80 others, and L. L. Bennett and 15 others, citizens of Minnesota, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and

By Mr. DURAND: Two petitions, one from 24 citizens of Howell, Michigan, the other from 27 citizens of Brighton, Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. FRANKLIN: Two petitions, one from citizens of Weston, the other from citizens of West Waterville, Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee.

port, to the same committee.

By Mr. FULLER: Seven petitions, signed respectively by G. P. Gillette and 120 others, of Evansville; D. Rayner and others, of Lafayette; J. A. Pennill and 75 others, of Zionsville; John Gilbert and 75 others, of Evansville; A. Gist and others, of Covington, and officers of the Central Bank, of Indianapolis, and of the People's Bank at Portland, Indiana, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of A. J. Rutledge and 42 others, of Newburgh, Indiana, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GUNTER: The petition of citizens of Mount Comfort, Ar-kansas, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means

By Mr. HATHORN: Two petitions, one from Oswego, the other from citizens of Schuylersville, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. HENDERSON: Two petitions, one from John Buffum and 10 others of Andalusia, the other from W. L. Hay and 14 others of Bureau County, Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HENDEE: The petition of citizens of New Windsor, Maryland, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

land, for the repeat of the bank and the solution of 8,000 citizens of yermont, regardless of sect or party distinction, condemning the action of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Floration of the corrupt and partisan returning boards of Louisiana, Louisia ida, and South Carolina, which seek to subvert the will of the peo-ple, and approving the action of the House of Representatives in sending committees to those States to investigate the true condition of affairs therein, to the committee on the powers and duties of the House of Representatives in counting the vote for President and Vice-President of the United States.

By Mr. HUBBELL: Three petitions, signed respectively by Norman Larabe and 75 others, of Eastport; John Christie and 20 others, of Benzie County; and E. W. Trout, B. B. Chadwick, and 50 other citizens of Reed City, Michigan, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HURD: The petition of Charles Greely and others, of Milton Centre, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. JOYCE: The petition of citizens of Ripton, Vermont, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. KNOTT: The petition of citizens of Carlisle, Kentucky, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. MAGOON: The petition of J. W. Douglass and 52 other citizens of Shullsburgh, Wisconsin, of similar import, to the same com-

By Mr. McCRARY: The petition of citizens of Brighton, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Samuel Knauss, late a private in Company B, Thirty-seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteers, for a pension, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McFARLAND: The petition of R. C. G. Fry and 27 others, of Greene County, Tennessee, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. McFCALFE: The petition of citizens of Fort Ann New York

By Mr. METCALFE: The petition of citizens of Fort Ann, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to Committee of Ways and

By Mr. MILLER: Two petitions, one from 31 citizens of Riverhead,

By Mr. MILLER: Two petitions, one from 31 citizens of Riverhead, New York, the other from 7 citizens of Binghampton, New York, of similar import, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MORGAN: Six petitions, signed respectively by G. G. Easton & Co. and 17 others of Hannibal, R. L. McElhaney and 23 others of Springfield, Paul F. Thornton and 37 others of Vernon County, C. H. Brown & Co. and others of Lamar, C. W. Flower and 23 other citizens of Joplin, and O. D. Knox and 26 other citizens of Bolivar, Missouri, of similar import, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. OLIVER: The petition of A. W. Hubbard and others, of Sioux City, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of William H. Higgins and other citizens of Iowa, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-

By Mr. PAGE: The petition of citizens of California, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas: The petition of citizens of Kansas, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PLATT: The petition of citizens of Havana, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax law, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. POTTER: The petition of John J. Bush and 32 other citizens of Lansing, Michigan, of similar import, to the same commit-

By Mr. ROBBINS, of North Carolina: The petition of citizens of Mount Mourne, North Carolina, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SAMPSON: Two petitions, one from W. F. McCluny and 161 other citizens of Henry County, the other from L. F. Smith and 7 others, citizens of Winterset, Iowa, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. SAYLER: Two petitions, one from J. S. Perdue & Co. and other citizens of Minerva, the other from citizens of Washington Court House, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. STRAIT: Four petitions, signed respectively by A. J. Fowler and others of Lake City, Minnesota, by citizens of Red Wing, Albert Lea, and Lake City, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SWANN: Two petitions, one from Slingluff & Co. and 16 other firms of Baltimore, the other from S. Taylor & Co. and 17 other firms of the same city, of similar import, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. THORNBURGH: The petition of J. W. Lillard and 100 other citizens of Knoxville, Tennessee, of similar import, to the Committee of Ways and Means

By Mr. THROCKMORTON: The petition of R. W. Collins and others, of Texas, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WADDELL: The petition of citizens of North Carolina, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WALDRON: The petition of G. S. Bartholomew and 50 other citizens of Reading, Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Three petitions, signed respectively by John R. Bond and 60 others of Brownsville, J. M. Fowler and others of Columbia, and B. Richmond and others of Memphis, all citizens of Tennessee, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. WILLIS: The petition of Lillie Devereux Blake, for removal of her political disabilities, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WILSON, of Iowa: Two petitions, one from citizens of Bellefontaine, the other from citizens of Wapello, Iowa, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

IN SENATE.

TUESDAY, February 6, 1877-10 a. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. U. S. Grant, jr., his Secretary, announced that the President had, on the 31st day of January, approved and signed the act (S. No. 155) to amend sections 533, 556, 571, and 572 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to courts in Arkansas and other States.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Senate and House of Representatives :

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Fy the act of Congress approved January 14, 1875, "to provide for the resumption of specie payments," the lat of January, 1879, is fixed as the date when such resumption is to begin. It may not be desirable to fix an earlier date when it shall actually become obligatory upon the Government to redeem its outstanding legal-tender notes in coin on presentation, but it is certainly most desirable and will prove most beneficial to every pecuniary interest of the country to hasten the day when the paper circulation of the country and the gold coin shall have equal values.

At a later day if currency and coin should retain equal values it might become advisable to authorize or direct resumption. I believe the time has come when by a simple act of the legislative branch of the Government this most desirable result can be attained. I am strengthened in this view by the course trade has taken in the last two years, and by the strength of the eredit of the United States at home and abroad.

a simple act of the legislative branch of the Government this most desirable result can be attained. I am strengthened in this view by the course trade has taken in the last two years, and by the strength of the credit of the United States at home and abroad.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, the exports of the United States exceeded the imports by $120,213,102; but our exports include $40,569,621 of specie and bullion in excess of imports of the same commodities. For the six months of the present fiscal year, from July 1, 1876, to January 1, 1877, the excess of exports over imports amounted to $107,544,869, and the import of specie and bullion exceeded the export of the precious metals by $6,192,147 in the same time. The actual excess of exports over imports for the six months, exclusive of specie and bullion, amounted to $113,737,040, showing for the time being the accumulation of specie and bullion, amounted to $113,737,040, showing for the time being the accumulation of specie and bullion, amounted to $113,737,040, showing for the time being the accumulation of specie and bullion in the country amounting to more than $6,000,000 in addition to the national product of these metals for the same period, a total increase of gold and silver for the six months not far short of $60,000,000. It is very evident that unless this great increase of the precious metals can be utilized at home in such a way as to make it in some manner remunerative to the holders, it must seek a foreign market as surely as would any other product of the soil or the manufactory. Any legislation which will keep coin and bullion at home will, in my judgment, soon bring about practical resumption, and will add the coin of the country to the circulating medium, thus securing a healthy "inflation" of a sound currency to the great advantage of every legitimate business interest.

The act to provide for the resumption of specie payments authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds of either of the descriptions named in the act

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 3, 1877.

The message was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

RECESS.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move that the Senate take a further recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate accordingly took a recess until twelve o'clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D. The Journal of the proceedings of Monday, February 5, was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. CONKLING presented a petition signed by numerous citizens of Bethel, New York, praying the passage of the bill allowing arrears of pensions; which was ordered to lie on the table.

i Mr. CONKLING. I also present the petition of Elizabeth Schoonmaker, praying to be invested with the rights of self-government at the ballot-box. I inquire of the Chair to what committee this appropriately goes?

priately goes?
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Committee on Privileges and Elections

Mr. CONKLING. I move its reference to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONKLING. I present also the petition of Mrs. Mary Dove, and as I see my honorable friend, the chairman of the Committee on Claims [Mr. Wright] before me, I beg to make a remark. This is a petition praying compensation for two lots and buildings thereon in Nashville, Tennessee, occupied one as a warehouse for commissary stores, the other as a hospital for the Union forces during the late war of the rebellion. I know this petitioner. She lives in the town in which I live. I am quite sure of her loyalty. She does not belong to the race to which the Senator from Iowa and myself belong. Accompanying her petition are the affidavits of numerous citizens, surgeons in the war, lawyers, and others, stating her ownership of this property, stating its occupation, stating that it was taken by the authorized authorities of the United States, and stating why and how she was unable to obtain compensation at the time. If any assurance of mine can give the chairman of the committee a prejudice surance of mine can give the chairman of the committee a prejudice in favor of the loyalty and the merit of this claim, I beg to give that assurance. I believe the case a meritorious one, and I hope the honorable Senator may remember the few words I have said, and consider it kindly in committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petition will be referred to the Committee on Claims.

Committee on Claims.

Mr. CONKLING. I present also the memorial of many members of the bar of the State of New York, particularly of the city of New York, being in the southern district of that State, praying legislation to augment the judicial staff by increasing the circuit judges. With this petition is a letter from Mr. Wetmore, a highly respectable member of the bar; and I move that the letter with the petition be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONKLING. I present also a petition signed by Henry R. Selden, a well-known citizen of the State of New York, and signed in all by 216 men and 394 women, 610 citizens of the State of New York, asking for a sixteenth amendment of the Constitution. In presenting this petition I am requested to read the three lines which coming this petition I am requested to read the three lines which compose it:

The undersigned, citizens of the United States, residents of the State of New York, * * * earnestly pray your honorable body to adopt measures for so amending the Constitution as to prohibit the several States from disfranchising United States citizens on account of sex.

I move its reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

I move its reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONKLING. I present also a petition, indorsed upon the back by an appeal by Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others officers of the national Woman Suffrage Association, praying in like tenor and effect as the last petition. It is signed by a number of women citizens of the county of Herkimer in the State of New York. I move its reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I present a memorial of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, setting out the great interest taken by that body in geographical discoveries and polar explorations, and stating that in the interest of science, as well as in behalf of commerce and trade, mutually and inseparably linked together, they heartily approve and urge the passage of the bill providing for another expedition toward the North Pole for the purposes of exploration and the establishment of a colony at some point north of the eighty-first degree of north latitude. They approve of an appropriation of $50,000 by the General Government for this purpose. I move the reference of the memorial to the Committee on Appropriations.

erai Government for this purpose. I move the reference of the memorial to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS presented the petition of Rev. Thomas Scott Bacon, of Oakland, Maryland, praying to be allowed to give evidence before the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to affairs in the State of Louisiana; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections leges and Elections.

Mr. BOOTH presented a petition of citizens of California, praying the passage of a law allowing arrears of pension; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CRAGIN presented a petition of J. P. Jameson and 30 others, praying for the passage of a law that will provide for cheap telegraphing, &c.; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

Mr. JOHNSTON presented the petition of Catesby ap R. Jones, of Selma, Alabama, praying for the removal of his political disabilities; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WHYTE presented the petition of H. H. Lewis, of Baltimore City, Maryland, praying for the removal of his political disabilities; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

COMMITTEE SERVICE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed Mr. Hereford a member of the Committee on Claims in place of Mr. Price, whose term of service has expired.

FREEDMAN'S SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Finance to report back the bill (H. R. No. 4284) authorizing the commissioners of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to buy in certain real and other purposes. If there is no objection, I should like to have the bill acted on now. It is a very brief House bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The first section provides that the commissioners of the Freedman's

Savings and Trust Company, their survivors or survivor, and their or his successors, shall have the right and authority to buy in, for the benefit of the company, any real or other property which may be offered for sale at public auction to pay debts or liabilities due the company, if, in their or his judgment, the property will otherwise be sacrificed, and to dispose of the same at public or private sale, as, in their or his judgment, may be deemed most advantageous to the their or his judgment, may be deemed most advantageous to the creditors of the company, furnishing to the purchaser or purchasers of any property thus sold by them or him good and sufficient deeds of conveyance for their respective purchases.

The second section approves and ratifies the action of the commissioners in buying in each and every of the pieces of real and other property heretofore purchased by them to prevent their sacrifice, and in selling and conveying sundry parcels thereof, and authorizes the commissioners, their survivors or survivor, and their or his successors, to sell and convey any of the property not heretofore sold, to any purchaser or purchasers, upon the most favorable terms for the creditors of the company.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a report?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no report. It is a House

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to hear some explanation of it.
Mr. SHERMAN. I will say that the commissioners believed they had the power conferred by this act, and they proceeded to bid in the property sold on trust deeds from time to time, and again to sell that property. When they came to convey it a question was raised as to their power to convey their title. A question was raised by lawyers and conveyancers here that there was some doubt as to their title, their authority to sell the property under these circumstances, and to convey it. They have, however, in many cases sold the property, and this doubt being raised as to their title it is necessary to appeal to Congress to pass a law on the subject. The committee examined it very carefully, because anything relating to this Freedman's Bank has undergone very careful scrutiny in both Houses. The House passed the bill after full examination, and we came to the conclusion that it was absolutely necessary to pass it to enable the trustees to get full value for the property.

Mr. DAVIS. It refers to the Freedman's Bank of the District of Columbia ?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.
Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I desire to know whether the sale is to be made by public outcry or by individual offers. Let the Clerk read that section which authorizes the sale.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the section referred to.

referred to.

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I move to strike out the words "or private" before "sale." I do not desire to allow these commissioners to sell in private any property. There has been great mismanagement in the institution referred to. A few years ago I opposed the supplement to the charter which gave them the right to take real estate security. From the amendment then made to the charter has come all the trouble in that institution. The whole loss as I believe of the Freedman's Savings institution or bank or whatever it is called arose from the amendment to the charter which allowed them to take real estate as security. Their original charter, I think, gave them authority only to invest their funds in public securities, stocks of the United States, and other similar stocks. I could not consent to allow some, as I understand, of the same people who mismanaged the affair to have the right to dispose of this property as may suit themselves. Therefore I move that the words "or private"

Mr. SHERMAN. I was myself disposed in committee, after examining this matter very carefully, to allow these commissioners to sell property at private sale. If they are required to sell at public sale, it must be on the order of some tribunal, some court, in which case it must be on the order of some tribunal, some court, in which case it would be necessary to apply for an order of sale, involving a considerable amount of costs. We were informed to-day by the commissioners that much of this property was of a very cheap character. Loans were made on property in this city, in some cases small loans, on property of small value, and to require an order of court for a cold in the contract of the on property of small value, and to require an order of court for a sale in each case would involve very large expense, of course. A public sale would give no greater security for fidelity, I think, than a private sale. We have got to depend upon the fidelity and the honor and faithfulness of these commissioners for the proper execution of their duties. The names of the three commissioners are probably known to the Senate. They are men of responsibility, at least they have been so considered; and the committee thought, on the whole, it was better to trust them and hold them responsible rather than put the trust to the expense of making a public sale by adverwhole, it was better to trust them and hold them responsible rather than put the trust to the expense of making a public sale by advertisement and by order of the court in every case, which would involve a very large sum of money. It is, however, for the Senate to determine. I think myself it is better to trust to them and hold them rigidly responsible. They are required to make a report of their sales to Congress in every case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was rejected.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CONKLING. May I inquire of the Senator from Ohio who are the commissioners referred to in the bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Creswell is one; Mr. Leipold, formerly an officer of the Treasury Department, is one; and the other is from Pennsylvania, a Mr. Purvis I think.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Ohio if there is anything in the past management of that establishment that justifies such an extreme confidence being placed in this board as there seems to be by this bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. In the old management of the Freedman's Bank

Mr. SHEKMAN. In the old management of the Freedman's Bank I think there was not only gross abuse, but I have often expressed my opinion upon that subject. I have heard no allegation against the present commissioners who are managing the trust.

Mr. DAWES. I inquired simply to know whether the Senator was so entirely satisfied with the method in which this establishment, if I may call it so for want of a better name just at this moment, has been closed up to this time that he is willing beforehand to ratify everything they will do, as the bill proposes to do.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know nothing about the management of the present commissioners that is to their discredit; I have heard nothing of that kind. I know that the original management of the Freedman's Bank grossly and scandalously abused its trust; and all the powers conferred by Congress on that corporation were in my judgment abused. A given the mean general of these commissions.

powers conferred by Congress on that corporation were in my judgment abused. Against the management of these commissioners in closing up the business, I have heard nothing.

Mr. DAWES. I do not allude to the management of the institution originally; that is past all cure. I allude to the manner in which the closing up of it by these commissioners has been transacted, and I see by the bill that the Senator proposes beforehand, without the slightest knowledge of what it may be, to ratify everything that may be done by these commissioners under this bill. I do not know but that I may be mistaken about it, but there has been a great deal but that I may be mistaken about it, but there has been a great deal of discussion in one House and the other about the manner in which the closing up of this institution has been managed. I remember that in the other House quite an excited discussion took place during the last session of Congress over a bill giving these commissioners the last session of Congress over a bill giving these commissioners some new power.

I am not arraigning the commissioners; I am inquiring of the Senator who has charge of this bill if he is entirely satisfied with the management. The Senator will excuse me for saying that after having intimated that he does not know anything about the management of this concern by these commissioners, I should not want to declare beforehand that I would ratify everything they would do if I did not know what they had done.

Mr. SHERMAN. This bill does not ratify what these gentlemen have done except in the purchase of land on which they hold trust-deeds and in the sale of that land. That is all that is ratified. There is a doubt as to their power, although I believe the courts of the Dis-is a doubt as to their power, although I believe the courts of the District have decided that they had the power, but as that case was not taken to the Supreme Court there is still a doubt about it.

As to the Supreme Court there is still a doubt about it.

As to the management of these commissioners I never have heard any allegation against it. If my friend has and will make that known, of course I shall hesitate and pause; and they ought to be removed if well-founded allegations have been made against these men so that the commissioners who are now settling up the affairs of this bank have excited doubts of their fidelity and integrity. If that be so, this bill ought not to pass and their authority ought to be repealed; but I have not heard anything of that kind. Two of the commissioners came before the Committee on Finance this morning and stated the circumstances and facts which justify the passage of and stated the circumstances and facts which justify the passage of this bill. It has already passed the House of Representatives, and we examined it carefully and came to the conclusion unanimously that the bill ought to pass. If there were any doubt about the integrity of the commissioners, that would raise quite a different question. The bill as recommended on the supposition that they were men of integrity was recommended on the supposition that they were men of integrity who had not abused their trust.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator will not understand me as raising any doubt about the integrity of the commissioners. We are not in the habit with those in whom we have the utmost confidence of putting quite so much power in their hands; but I observed that the Senator voted to permit these parties to sell any of the real estate of this institution at private sale anywhere or at any time. If I understand the transactions of this institution, they are all over the country, especially the Southern States. There have been some of the most remarkable loans that were ever known, and the strangest sort of securities were taken of imaginative and of inflated stocks and all sorts of property. This property may be taken by these commissionsecurities were taken or imaginative and of inflated stocks and all sorts of property. This property may be taken by these commissioners under this law and sold at private sale anywhere and everywhere and under any circumstances, and to any party, and the language of this bill is, and we hereby ratify everything that they may do under this bill. I suggest to the Senator that that is rather strong language. I would not myself like to vote for such a sweeping measure.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I think we had better postpone this bill for the present.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I think we had better postpone this bill for the present. I should like to have a report from the commissioners who have this institution now in charge. I learn that they are three gentlemen doing the business which one man could do and that each gets $3,000 a year. The whole management of the affair hitherto has been, if not corrupt, most badly done. I am afraid to trust them with the power which they have now; I certainly would not give them any more. I should not be unwilling at all to authorize them to buy in property to save any debts they may have against it, and that is all the power they ought to have. If they can save their debts by making a purchase of the property it is right they should do so. An individual would do that, and these gentlemen, like business men, ought to do so. But there is a shifting of responsibility here as there is among a great portion of the officers in this town. There is a chief, and then there is a deputy, and then there is a deputy of a deputy, and so on. In this case, I think $2,000 a year salary to one man, with one clerk at $1,200 more, ought to manage the whole of this defunct institution. Why shall Mr. Somebody receive $3,000 a year because he has been a chief clerk in a Department, and somebody else get $3,000 hereause he is a friend of somebodyelse and so on? It is all get $3,000 because he is a friend of somebody else, and so on? wrong. No business man would so conduct his business. Here was money, scraped from the poor negroes all over the country, which has been wasted in giving salaries that men may live riotously and fare sumptuously every day, while these poor negroes are starving. It was

I move that we postpone the bill. Let us get a report from the commissioners having this matter in charge, and let us look into their stewardship before we give them any more authority. My motion is to postpone the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania moves to postpone the bill.

Mr. MORRILL. I hope the bill will not be postponed. Evidently a bill of this character ought to pass, for the reason that it is not sufficient authority that these men shall have power to foreclose mortgages and obtain property unless they shall have equal power to dispose of it. By withholding the power of sale, we lock up the assets of this unfortunate institution, so that there can be no distribution of the proceeds.

I have never heard that the present commissioners have been derelict in their duty. It has sometimes been charged that there are too many of them; that the management is too expensive; that the business might as well be done by one man; but certainly the power conveyed by the proposed bill is a necessary power; and it should pass in the interest of those who have made deposits in the institution. It will facilitate the closing up of the affairs of the bank, and that at as early a period as will be proper, considering the depressed state of business in this city.

I therefore hope that the bill will not be postponed, and if any action is to be taken in relation to diminishing the number has are employed in conducting this business it perhaps had better be considered in a separate bill. I trust that there will be a disposition on the part of the Senate to act upon the bill. I can see no peril in this bill. It is certainly well that somebody should be responsible for whatever is done by these men that have charge of winding up this institution, and if we distribute this among the courts and the commissioners polocy will be responsible.

institution, and if we distribute this among the courts and the commissioners nobody will be responsible.

Mr. CLAYTON. It is very evident this bill is going to occupy the morning hour with discussion. I move that it go over until we get through the morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to its temporary postponement for morning business?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over and the business of the morning hour continued.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CLAYTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1114) to authorize the President to restore John Jackson to his former rank in the Army, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1052) for the relief of A. W. Greely, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was post-port thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill
(S. No. 939) for the relief of John S. Bishop, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S.
No. 1110) for the relief of Captain Edwin R. Clarke, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be rejuded and the bill was verse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. CLAYTON. I am also directed by the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Daniel Spaulding, deceased, praying to be allowed compensation for services rendered by said Spaulding during the war of 1812, to ask to be discharged from its consideration. This compensation seems to be in the nature of a pension, and the Committee on Military Affairs thought it ought to go to the Committee on Pensions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The committee will be discharged from the further consideration of the petition and it will be referred

Mr. SPENCER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 407) to authorize the restoration of George A. Armes to the rank of captain, reported it with amend-

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1111) for the relief of Thomas E. Maley, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill

(S. No. 605) for the relief and re-appointment of Captain Thomas B. Hunt assistant quartermaster in the United States Army, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

bill was postponed indennitely.

Mr. WINDOM subsequently said: I ask leave to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee on Military Affairs on the bill for the relief of T. B. Hunt was agreed to, indefinitely postponing it, and I ask that it be now reconsidered. I think the Senator reporting it will not object.

The PRESIDENT are tempore. In their objection to the present

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the motion to reconsider?

There being no objection, the motion to reconsider was agreed to.
Mr. WINDOM. I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.
The motion was agreed to.
Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1141) to encourage and promote telegraphic communication between America and Europe, and promote telegraphic communication between America and Europe, reported it with amendments.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1162) for the relief of certain settlers on the public lands, reported it without amendment.

Mr. WINDOM. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the bill (H. R. No. 4540) to provide for the payment of James B. Eads for the construction of jettles and other auxiliary works to make a wide and deep channel between the South Pass of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico under contract with the United States, adversely with a written report. I give nowith the United States, adversely with a written report. I give notice that I shall ask the consideration of the subject to-morrow morn-

The report was ordered to be printed.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 30) to amend the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms, approved July 30, 1876, reported it without amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4452) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, have instructed me to report it back with sundry amendments. I give notice that at the earliest possible opportunity I will call the bill up for consideration.

I desire to say further that the committee have instructed me to report back an amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Bogy] to this bill without recommendation, and I ask that the amendment lie on the table in order that the Senator from Missouri may have an opportunity of calling it up if he desires to do so.

T. A. WALKER.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask that the papers in the claim of T. A. Walker, praying to be re-imbursed the amount of certain money paid by him for clerk hire while acting as register of the United States land office at Des Moines, Iowa, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands by mistake, be referred to the Committee on Claims. I move that the Committee on Public Lands be discharged from their further consideration, and that they be referred to the Committee on Claims.

The motion was agreed to.

DENVER AND RIO GRANDE BAILWAY.

Mr. WEST. The Committee on Railroads, to whom was referred the bill (8. No. 1083) to amend an act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Company," approved June 8, 1872, instruct me to report it back with an amendment; and as this is a mere extension of a grant to a local railroad, and the only prospect of its passage at all at this session of Congress is to put it on its passage in this body now, I ask that it be done.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee was to strike out the word "repealing" in line 6 and insert "making," and inserting after the word "act" in line 7 the word "read;" so as to make the bill read:

That an act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Company," approved June 8, 1872, be, and the same is hereby, amended by making the second proviso in said act read as folthe same is hereby, amended by maning the lows, to wit:

Provided, That said company shall complete its railway to a point on the Rio Grande as far south as Santa Fé within five years of the passage of this act, and shall complete fifty miles additional south of said point in each year thereafter; and in default thereof the rights and privileges herein granted shall be rendered null and void so far as respects the unfaished portions of said road.

Mr. MERRIMON. I ask the Senator from Louisiana whether the act of which this bill is amendatory grants any subsidy?

Mr. WEST. No, sir; the mere right of way.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. KELLY asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1225) to amend section 2291 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in relation to proof required in homestead entries; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WRIGHT asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1226) for the payment of the disbursing agent of the Joint Committee on the Library of Congress for his services; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. WRIGHT. With that bill I present a petition and some accompanying papers, which, with the bill, I move may be referred to the Committee on the Library.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BURNSIDE asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1227) for the protection of widows, orphans, and heirs at law of officers of the Army of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CRAGIN asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1228) for the erection of a Daball trumpet signal on Whale's Back Island, in the harbor of Portsmouth, New Hampshire; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1229) for the relief of Donald McKay; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Af-

Mr. CLAYTON asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1230) for the relief of Patrick Sullivan; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying petition, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

W. G. FORD.

On motion of Mr. CLAYTON, and by unanimous consent, it was Ordered. That the vote postponing indefinitely the bill (H. R. No. 492) for the relief of William G. Ford, of Tennessee, administrator of the estate of John G. Robinson, deceased, be reconsidered.

HALL'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

Mr. SARGENT submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved. That the Secretary of the Navy furnish, through the Superintendent of the Naval Observatory, a narrative of the second expedition to the Arctic regions made by the late Captain C. F. Hall during the years 1864 to 1869; said narrative to be compiled from the manuscripts purchased from the widow of said Hall by an act of Congress approved June 23, 1874.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 4572) to remove the political disabilities of James D. Johnston, of Savannah, Georgia; and ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

A bill (H. R. No. 4472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judical expenses of the Government for the fiscal year region. June 20, 1878, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads having reported that having met, after full and free conference they were unable to agree, it was Resolved. That the House further insist upon its disagreement to the six hundred and fourth and six hundred and fifth amendments of the Senate to the said bill, insisted upon by the Senate, and ask a further conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4306) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

POST-ROUTE BILL

Mr. HAMLIN. I present a report of the committee of conference on the bill just received from the House. The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads, having met, and after a full and free conference have been unable to agree.

H. HAMLIN,
A. S. PADDOCK,
S. B. MAXEY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

of the conference committee on the disagreeing votes and have suggested a new conference. They have sent us no names of conferees. I move that the bill be returned to the House for the purpose of having the committee of conference appointed in the House before having the committee or conference appointed in the House before we join in it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the bill be returned to the House for the purpose of having the conferees of the House named.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HAMLIN. And until it is so returned that there be no committee appointed on the part of this body.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the Senator withdraws his previous motion !

Mr. HAMLIN. I withdraw the motion to join in the conference until we are furnished with the committee on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator moves to reconsider the vote by which the further conference was ordered.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

LAND SURVEYS IN MICHIGAN.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I move to take up for present consideration the bill (H. R. No. 967) authorizing the survey of certain townships in Michigan and making an appropriation therefor.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which directs the Commissioner

Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which directs the Commissioner of the General Land Office to cause to be surveyed towns Nos. 18 and 19 north, of range 1 west, in the State of Michigan, these towns having never been properly surveyed; and it appropriates a sum sufficient to pay the expense thereof, not exceeding $2,500.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there any report in the case?

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. There is not. I will explain in a moment. If the Senator from Florida [Mr. Jones] who reported the bill were here he could explain it. It is a bill introduced in accordance with a recommendation of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. It refers to some land which had been returned as surveyed, but which recommendation of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. It refers to some land which had been returned as surveyed, but which in fact never had been surveyed except the running of the exterior lines. It has the approbation of the Committee on Public Lands, and I presume there will be no objection to its passage.

Mr. INGALLS. There is a good deal of the public domain that has been surveyed at a vast expense to the Government where the lines and corners and bounderies have become obliterated by reason of the work having been imperfectly done. If this land has been once surveyed and the surveys paid for and the work made ineffectual by reason of those imperfections, the Government ought not to be called upon again to pay the bills. The contractors or their sureties should be the persons to whom application should be made for the resurvey of this land.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. This is one of those cases where there has been

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. This is one of those cases where there has been no survey made at all except the exterior lines, as I understand. In the no survey made at all except the exterior lines, as I understand. In the mean time the lands cannot be disposed of, and no lines canbe established. The bill is asked for by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and I think it is entirely just. The sureties on any surveyor's bond can of course be reached at any time. In the mean time the public interests should not be allowed to suffer.

Mr. WRIGHT. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Michigan whether I understand him to say that this lend has never leave.

igan whether I understand him to say that this land has never been

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Neversurveyed, and I think none has been sold

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Neversurveyed, and I think none has been sold of any consequence.

Mr. WRIGHT. I should like to inquire whether any of these lands have ever been settled.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Not that I know of.

Mr. WRIGHT. I think that is a very material and important inquiry. We should know whether these lands have been sold. If they have been sold they have been sold by description of course, and the necessity for a resurvey does not appear to me now. Not only that, but I suggest another thing, that if these lands have been sold by congressional subdivision and description, then there must have been some plat showing the lines of the subdivisions of the sections; and now if you have a resurvey, unless the resurvey shall agree with the lines that appear on the lands. It occurs to me—though of course I leave the matter entirely with the Senate—that perhaps we shall produce more of discord and confusion by passing the bill than if we leave the matter as it is now.

the matter as it is now.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. There is a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office which I will ask the Clerk to read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be read. The Secretary read as follows:

Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOHN B. CLARK, JR.,
L. L. AINSWORTH,
S. F. MILLER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HAMLIN. I move that the Senate agree to the further conference asked by the House.

The motion was agreed to.
Mr. HAMLIN. I move that the bill which has just been received from the House (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads be returned to the House that the committee of conference may be thereby appointed. They have sent us notice that they have received the report

In view of these facts, the provisions of the bill are fully approved by this office, and its passage recommended.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,

Hon. CHARLES W. JONES,
Of Committee on Public Lands, United States Senate,

Mr. INGALLS. It appears by the statement of the Commissioner of the General Land Office that this is an attempt to make the of the General Land Office that this is an attempt to make the United States Government pay for imperfect surveys that have been made under contracts for that purpose heretofore with the Government. It establishes a very doubtful and a very dangerous precedent, and I merely desire to call the attention of the Senate to that fact in order that they may vote understandingly. If surveys are to be made by contractors and paid for at a vast expense to the Government, and then such operations as those detailed by this letter from the Commissioner are to be sanctioned, it is simply an invitation to those who may hereafter obtain contracts for the survey of the public lands to omit to set their corners, to omit to run the lines, to make fictitious and fraudulent field-notes and return them to the Department and get their pay. I should regret to see this precedent established.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I would ask the Senator from Kansas if there is anything in the bill which interferes with or undertakes to release the liability of the surveyor or his bondsmen? He and they will remain still liable as before. In the mean time if the lands cannot be brought into market and sold until that surveyor has been brought to his responsibility and the amount recovered from him to survey them, I think the public interest will not be protected. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 431) for the relief of the heirs of William A. Graham.

Mr. PADDOCK. I should be glad to have this bill lie over until to-morrow. I have received a letter in reference to it this morning, but I have not the letter with me. It seems there are some conflicting interests in respect to it. I desire to have that letter with me and present it to the Senate perhaps in connection with the bill. I dislike to object to taking up the bill, but still I should be compelled to do it under the circumstances. it under the circumstances

Mr. JOHNSTON. The bill is on the Calendar regularly reported from the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BOUTWELL. Is there a report with this bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is a report. The morning hour has expired.

Mr. WEST. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The unfinished business is the bill of the Senate No. 984, amendatory of the Pacific Railroad acts.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President—
Mr. PADDOCK. I should like to ask my colleague to give way a few moments until I can call up Senate bill No. 1163—a short bill of only a few lines, and very just and proper, and one that it is neces

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Very well.

Mr. STEVENSON. May I have the consent of the gentlemen claiming the floor to present a memorial?

Mr. HITCHCOCK and Mr. PADDOCK. Certainly.

BUILDING FOR CENTENNIAL EXHIBITS.

Mr. STEVENSON. I desire to present a memorial from the Regents of the Smithsonian Institute, which I desire to have read. It will be found to refer to a subject in which the entire country must, I am sure, feel a very deep interest.

It is known to the Senate that the Smithsonian Institution was represented at the late centennial exhibition at Philadelphia. At the close of that exposition a number of the foreign powers there represented, and who contributed to that grand national display at its close generously donated to the Smithsonian Institute most of their articles and products there exhibited. A list of the articles donated and the name of the donors accompany this memorial. Among these gifts will be found an exquisite pair of vases valued at some $17,000.

The motive which prompted these donations to the Smithsonian Institution was unquestionably one of amity and respect entertained by the foreign powers donating them for the Government of the United States. But unquestionably these donors expected that this Government would, through the agency of the Smithsonian Institute, keep these articles thus donated on public exhibition, and in this way the respective products of each country would become known to the people resented at the late centennial exhibition at Philadelphia. At the respective products of each country would become known to the people of our entire country.

The articles donated are valuable, rare, varied, and occupy much space. They are all I believe now stored in Philadelphia, for the reason that the Smithsonian Institution has no building in which they can be either exhibited or safely preserved. They must remain, therefore, in boxes, subject to injury and to decay, unless Congress shall take some immediate action toward the erection of a building in all respects suitable for their exhibition and preservation. The capacity of such a building is estimated by competent architects to be four times as large as the Smithsonian building. A plan of such a structure has been already drawn by General Meigs. Its estimated cost will not exceed $200,000.

The Regents of the institution by this memorial ask Congress to The Regents of the institution by this memorial ask Congress to make at once the necessary appropriation. If it be promptly done, a beautiful and capacious building can be put up and finished by the assembling of Congress in December next. Of course this memorial should go first to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The prompt erection of the proposed building is a public necessity, which, I hope, will commend itself to the judgment of that committee—and I trust they will at the earliest moment make a report. I submit that the honor and good faith of our country seems to demand and require prompt and liberal action by Congress. That is all I have now to suggest have now to suggest.

Mr. CONKLING. What is the worth of these articles?

Mr. STEVENSON. It is stated in the memorial that the estimated value is a million dollars. I ask that the memorial be now read. The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. CONKLING. What is the worth of these articles?

Mr. STEVENSON. It is stated in the memorial that the estimated value is a million dollars. I ask that the memorial be now read.

The Secretary read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, recents of the gress assembled:

The undersigned, recents of the States of the United States of America in Congress of the United States of America in Congress and the Congress of the United States of America in Congress of the Patent Office and other public buildings, devolved upon the regents of that institution the custody of "all objects of art and of foreign and curious research, and belonging or hereafter to belong to the United States, which may be in the city of Washington:

In accordance with this enactment the institution has received and carefully preserved all the specimens which have been brought together from more than lifty public exploring expeditions, and has added specimens collected by itself or oning of 1876 had become full to everflowing.

By an act bearing date July 31, 1876, additional duties were laid upon the Smithsonian Institution as custodian, and $4,500 were appropriated "for repairing and fitting up the so-called Armory building, on the mall between Sixth and Seventh streets, and to enable the Smithsonian Institution to store therein and to take care of specimens of the extrestive series of the ores of the precous metals, marbition in Philadelphia, including other objects of practical and economical value presented by avious foreign governments to the national museum."

As a fruit of this act of the General Government, the Smithsonian Institution and on closing of that exhibition had been presented to the centennial exhibition and on closing of that exhibition had been presented to the process of specimens of the extress of the ores of the preconstruction of the precon as a first installment, to be followed by others, but as sumcient entirely to complete the edifice.

Should this appropriation be made at an early day the building could be ready or the reception of articles before the next session of Congress.

M. R. WAITE,

M. R. WAITE,

T. W. FERRY,

H. HAMLIN,

J. W. STEVENSON,

A. A. SARGENT,

HIESTER CLYMER,

BENJ. H. HILL,

GEO. W. McCRARY,

PETER PARKER,

ASA GRAY,

PETER PARKER,

GEO. BANCROFT,

Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say to the Senate that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have already had the subject before them and would have made a report before this time, but we understood that the same subject was before a committee of the House, where it was being favorably considered. As I have stated in years past, it has seemed to be a necessity that we should provide for a national museum. It has been the opinion of the Committee on Public Public Policy of the Committee on Public Publ national museum. It has been the opinion of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds on the part of the Senate, I believe unanimously, for some years, that we ought to take all of the squares next east of the public grounds, throughout the length and breadth on the north and south range of one square, taking one square in depth and the whole length, for the purpose of a national museum and Congressional Library; and evidently this matter should be provided for at once. The national armory I understand is already filled from basement to top.

Mr. SARGENT. With boxes without any opportunity for displaying their contents; and there are at this time, as I am informed, at least fifty car-loads of articles that have been given to us by foreign governments. Thirty-two or thirty-three out of the forty nationalities abroad have given us their entire exhibits at the centennial exties abroad have given us their entire exhibits at the centennial exthes abroad have given us their entire exhibits at the centennial exhibition. Their money value is scarcely computable, but if it were to be computed it exceeds our own, as large as our exhibits were there and as creditable to the country. Our own, I believe, in money value have been computed at $400,000. These foreign exhibits are computed, at least in money value, at the sum of $600,000, but in historical and scientific interest they perhaps surpass anything that has been assembled in any national museum on the globe.

I shall, therefore, hope to receive favorable consideration of the report of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds at an early day if in the mean time we do not receive a bill from the House on the subject.

Mr. STEVENSON. I now move, Mr. President, that this memorial be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Allow me to add a single word. I hope that speedy action will be had by both the Senate and the committee. I hope this building will be put both the Senate and the committee. I hope this building will be put on the Smithsonian grounds. There is ample room on that square with the cost of additional ground. Professor Henry assures me that with the erection of the contemplated building on the plan of General Meigs, with the articles now on exhibition in the Smithsonian Institute, with those just donated, we shall have the nucleus of a national museum which in a few years will equal any in the world.

Mr. SARGENT. Accompanying this memorial is a list of the various articles contributed by different powers, by different exhibitors, and by States of the Union, and I think that if Senators will take the pains to examine that list they will find that articles, rare in their character, of great interest in a scientific point of view and of their character, of great interest in a scientific point of view and of intrinsic value, have been given to the Government of the United States. To properly display these objects will be to furnish education of the most valuable character to all of our people (and there are millions of them who come here) who visit this capital.

I wish to add my earnest desire that the committee will promptly report a measure that will enable us to open this great educational institution to the people of the United States, to utilize this vast and valuable collection which has been given to us, to show that we re-ceive them from these powers in good faith and are disposed to show that we properly appreciate the riches which they have placed within

I move that the list with the memorial be printed and that they both go to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

PROFESSOR JENNEY'S REPORTS.

Mr. ALLISON. I present a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, terior, addressed to the charman of the Committee of Indian Affairs, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in relation to the final report of Professor Walter P. Jenney, of explorations in the Black Hills, Dakota, 1875. I move that the letter of the Secretary and the accompanying papers be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. Professor Jenney asks that a certain number of his reports be printed. I make that motion, and move its reference to Committee on Printing.

The motion was agreed to.

PRE-EMPTORS BECOMING HOMESTEADERS.

Mr. PADDOCK. I now ask for the consideration of Senate bill No. 1163.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish it understood that that bill, if taken up, is subject to the regular order. If it provokes no debate and takes no time I shall not object, but if it does I shall insist on the regular

Mr. PADDOCK. I shall not insist on the bill being considered if there is objection. There will be no objection.

Mr. WEST. I should like to hear the title of the bill read, so that we may understand what it is.

Mr. PADDOCK. It is the bill (S. No. 1163) for the relief of settlers the public ledge under the pre-amortion laws.

on the public lands under the pre-emption laws.

Mr. WEST. The very title of that bill indicates debate.

Mr. PADDOCK. I can assure my friend there will be no objection to the bill. It is but six lines long, and it is simply to give to homestead settlers-

Mr. WEST. I join with the Senator from Iowa in stating that I shall call for the regular order if the bill provokes discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read for informa-

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. PADDOCK. This bill is reported favorably by the Committee on Public Lands by a unanimous vote. The object sought to be accomplished is simply this, that where settlers under the pre-emption laws have, from one misfortune or another, because grasshoppers have devastated their fields and destroyed their crops, been unable to secure their lands under the pre-emption law within the period in which they are required by law to prove up and pay for their claims in taking the benefit of the homestead law which they may now do if they so elect, they shall receive credit for the length of time which they shall have already consumed under the pre-emption law toward the perfection of their title under that plan upon their probational term of five years under the homestead law. To illustrate: Two years consumed in perfecting title and improving a claim of one hundred and sixty acres under the pre-emption laws would, if a party should change to secure title under the homestead law, leave but three years additional time to entitle him to his patent under the homestead law, whereas under the law as it now stands five years would be required.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that, when any person who has made a settlement on the public lands under the pre-emption laws shall change his filing to that for a homestead entry, the time required to perfect his title under the homestead laws shall be computed from the date of his original settlement made under the preemption laws.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

Mr. MAXEY. I beg to call up Senate joint resolution No. 30, to amend the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms, approved July 3, 1876.

Mr. WRIGHT. I must insist on the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order is now before the

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the considera-tion of the bill (S. No. 984) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, approved July 2, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, it is my fortune to reside upon the line of the Pacific Railroad. It was my fortune to see the first spadeful of earth ever thrown upon the grading of that road and to be somewhat familiar with the history of its construction, with its method of operation, and with the beneficent results which have come to the country and to the world from that construction and operation. This, therefore, is my excuse for claiming the attention of the Senate very briefly in the consideration of the bill now before us.

The construction of a railroad across the continent from ocean to ocean marked an era in the material prosperity and development not of this continent alone, but of the world. Existing for a quarter of a century or more only in the brain of enthusiastic dreamers, it remained for the statesmen who controlled the destinies of the country in the dark hour of her struggle with armed rebellion, to crystallize that dream into a practical legal enactment, and it remained for the daring enterprise of the capitalists and business men of that time to carry out that enactment to a glorious consummation.

Like everything human, no matter how excellent, it had its imperfections. It was marred and scarred by the connection with it in its early history of sordid men, who saw nothing in it better than a means of adding to their wealth and their gain; and, like everything human that is successful, it had no somer become a success than it became, and still is, the object of continued, bitter, and persistent attack.

During the process of its construction the country rang with plaudits of the magnificence of the enterprise and approval of the courage and energy with which it was prosecuted. No sooner was it completed than the country rang, as it still rings, with denunciations of it as a mighty fraud and swindle. I assert, Mr. President, and I do so without fear of successful contradiction, that, assuming that not one dollar of the principal or interest of the bonds which were advanced by this Government to this railroad had ever been or ever would be paid except by the transportation which this company afwould be paid except by the transportation which this company arfords to the Government, and saying nothing of the vast and almost measureless secondary and consequential advantages which this country has received and is receiving and is destined to receive, this country has received every year, in transportation alone, twice the amount of the interest which she has paid upon these bonds; that she has received a fund which so far exceeds the interest she has paid upon these bonds that it will, prior to the time when these bonds become due, amount to a much greater sum than the amount of the bonds.

In 1860 General Samuel R. Curtis, then chairman of the Pacific Rail-In 1860 General Samuel R. Curtis, then chairman of the Pacific Railroad Committee of the House of Representatives, reported that the aggregate amount which was paid by this Government in the transportation of mails and military and naval stores from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean reached more than $6,000,000. In 1862 Mr. Campbell, of Pennsylvania, then chairman of the House Committee on the Pacific Railroad, after having obtained from the War, Navy, Indian and Poetal Departments the property which these Departments on the Pacific Railroad, after having obtained from the War, Navy, Indian, and Postal Departments the amounts which these Departments were paying for their transportation across the continent, reported that that sum aggregated more than $7,300,000. Now, sir, admitting that the Government pays the whole interest on the entire aggregate of bonds issued to all these companies, which amount in the aggregate to about $65,000,000, the whole interest upon the bonds amounts annually to a sum something near $3,800,000. Subtract $3,800,000 from $7,500,000 and you have a remainder of $3,700,000 which goes to make up a sinking fund for the repayment to this country of the principal of these bonds, besides paying the annual interest on the bonds.

This you will understand is upon the basis of the amount of transportation which was then needed for the miserable conveniences then afforded in wagons, of the mails and munitions of war which then afforded in wagons, of the mails and munitions of war which were then transported across the continent. Think of the increase of those mails, of those munitions of war, between that time and the present, and see the result.

I have heard further that at the time the act of 1862 became a law at the time this contract was made between the Government and the railroad companies, neither the people nor Congress nor the companies expected that these bonds would be repaid except in transportation. To sustain that position, I propose to read from the debates which were current at the time the bill passed. On the 12th of May, 1862, on a motion to make the bill a special order, the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Pacific Railroad, among other statements of fact, made use of the following remarks:

When the road shall have been completed, assuming the bonds issued to be $62,880,000, the maximum estimate, and the entire interest will be but $3,773,800 per annum.

I understand, sir, that to some gentlemen these figures may seem large. But permit me to call the attention of these gentlemen to some facts—practical business facts.

ness facts.

In 1860 General Curtis, as chairman of the House committee, estimated the amount yearly paid by the Government for the transportation provided for by this bill at some $6,000,000. The present able chairman of the House committee took occasion to inquire directly of the Government the exact cost to the Government of this service, and found it to be $7,357.000, or about 100 per cent. more than the full charge of interest against the Government when the road shall have been completed.

On the 17th of June, 1862, the bill being again under discussion, Mr. Wilson, of Massachusetts, made the following remarks:

I have little confidence in the estimates made by Senators or members of the House of Representatives as to the great profits which are to be made and the immense business to be done by this road. I give no grudging vote in giving away either money or land. I would sink $100,000,000 to build the road, and do it most cheerfully, and think I had done a great thing for my country if I could bring it about. What are seventy-five or a hundred millions in opening a railroad across the central regions of this continent, that shall connect the people of the Pacific and the Atlantic and bind them together!

On the same day he used the following language:

On the same day he used the following language:

As to the security the United States takes on this road, I would not give the paper it is written on for the whole of it. I do not suppose it is ever to come back in any form except in doing on the road the business we need, carrying our mails and munitions of war. In my jud-gment we ought not to vote for the bill with the expectation or with the understanding that the money which we advance for this road is ever to come back into the Treasury of the United States. I vote for the bill with the expectation that all we get out of the road—and I think that is a great deal—will be the mail carrying and the carrying of munitions of war and such things as the Government need, and I vote for it cheerfully with that view. I do not expect any of our money back. I believe no man can examine the subject and believe that it will come back in any other way than is provided for in this bill, and that provision is for the carrying of the mails and doing certain other work for the Government.

On the same subject, Mr. Clark, of New Hampshire, said:

On the same subject, Mr. Clark, or New Hampshire, said:

The Senator from Massachusetts may be entirely right, that the Government may never receive back this money again, and it may be that we make the loan for the purpose of receiving the services; but it will be well to take a mortgage to secure the building of the road through, and then, to secure the performance of these services which we expect them to perform in the transmission of mails and munitions of war, after the road is built, I think we had better adopt the amendment of the committee. It will make it safer for the Government, and safer in this regard, that we shall get the road built and have the service performed.

Mr. Latham, of California, in the course of the same debate, used this language:

The loan of the public credit at 6 per cent. for thirty years for $65,000,000, with absolute security by lien with stipulations by sinking fund from profits for the liquidation of the principal, official reports and other authoritative data show that the average annual cost, even in times of peace, in transportation of troops, with munitions of war, subsistence, and quartermaster supplies, may be set down at $7,300,000. The interest upon the credit loan of $65,000,000 will be annually, $3,900,000, leaving a net excess of $3,400,000 over the present cost, appealing with great force to the economy of the measure, and showing, beyond cavil or controversy, that the Government will not have a dime to pay on account of its credit nor risk a dollar by authorizing the construction of this work.

Further on in the same debate Mr. Clark, of New Hampshire, used the following language:

Whether I am right or not, I do not build the road because I think it is to be a paying road. I build it as a political necessity, to bind the country together and hold it together, and I do not care whether it is to pay or not. Here is the money of the Government to build it with. I want to hold a portion of the money until we get it through, and then let them have it all.

Mr. Ten Eyck, of New Jersey, used the following language:

The great object of the Pacific Railroad bill is to have a national means of communication across the continent. That is the idea which the public have entertained for years past, and the only idea—a great national measure to cement the Union—to bind with a belt of iron the Atlantic and the Pacific. * * This is the inducement which the old States have in doing what they believe will be for the benefit of the common country, to the prejudice of the Treasury, so to speak, yet the general returns may be beneficial in the long run.

Mr. Collamer, of Vermont, used this language:

This bill carries the idea, and in this section provides for the repayment of the loan, as gentlemen call it. In a subsequent section it is provided that the payment shall be made in the carrying of the mails, supplies, and military stores for the Government, at fair prices; and also 5 per cent. of the net proceeds or sums to be set apart for the Government. That is all the provision there is in the bill for

Mr. McDougall, of California, used the following language:

At the time it was suggested I did not see the serious objection to it that I see now. I wish to say with regard to this obliquity the gentleman seems to perceive in the appearance of this bill, that it was not designed the Government should foreclose a mortgage on this road iff the road was completed in good faith and did the Government business. As I have had occasion before to remark, the Government is now paying over seven millions per annum for the service which this road is bound to perform. That is about 100 per cent, more than the maximum of interest upon the entire amount of bonds that will be issued by the United States when the road is completed. The Government is to-day, on the peace establishment, without any war necessity, paying for the same service 100 per. cent. more than the entire interest on the amount of bonds called for by the bill. Besides that it is provided that 5 per cent. of the net proceeds shall be paid over to the Federal Government every year. Now, let me say, if this road is to be built, it is to be built not merely by the money advanced by the Government, but by money out of the pockets of private individuals.

**It is proposed that the Government shall advance $60,000.000, or rather their

It is proposed that the Government shall advance $60,000,000, or rather their bonds at thirty years, as the road is completed in the course of a series of years; that the interest at no time can be equal to the service to be rendered by the road as it progresses; and that the Government really requires no service except a compliance on the part of the company with the contract made. It was not intended that there should be a judgment of foreclosure and a sale of this road on a failure to pay. I wish it to be distinctly understood that the bill was not framed with the intention to have a foreclosure. to pay. I wish it to be distinct

In case they failed to perform their contract. That is another thing; that is a stipulation; that is a forfeiture in terms of law; a very different thing from a fore-closure for the non-payment of bonds. The calculation can be simply made, that at the present amount of transportation over the road, supposing the Government did no more business, that that alone would pay the interest and the principal of the bonds in less than twenty years, making it a direct piece of economy if the Government had to pay for them all. However, I am not disposed to discuss this matter. I say it was not understood that the Government was to come in as a creditor and seize the road on the non-payment of the interest. It is the business of the Government to pay the interest, because we furnish the transportation.

The honorable Senator from California, [Mr. SARGENT,] then a member of the House, in the course of debate there on this question used the following language:

When the road is fully completed and we are experiencing all the security and commercial advantages which it will afford, the annual interest will be less than $4,000,000, and that sum will be but gradually reached year after year. The War Department has paid out, on an average, $5,000,000 per year for the past five years for transportation to the Pacific coast, and the mails cost $1,000,000 more at their present reduced rates. The saving of the Government would be two millions per year on these items alone.

So much, Mr. President, for the act as it was understood when it became a law; so much for the act as it was understood when it became a law; so much for the contract as it was understood to be by those who made that contract on the part of the Government; and now comes the Judiciary Committee with a new contract, with a new bill, with a new proposition which it proposes shall be adopted whether the other party to the contract is willing or not—a very different proposition from the one which this country offered to the capitalists when this country needed those capitalists to come forward and save it from the danger which there the different the capitalists when the danger which there there is the time of ward and save it from the danger which threatened it in the time of the civil war, the danger of losing our Pacific possessions.

Mr. President, I will not assume or undertake, I have no ambition

Mr. President, I will not assume or undertake, I have no ambition to undertake to argue the legal right of Congress to pass a measure like that which is offered to us by the Judiciary Committee. Admitting, if you please, that it is constitutional and legal, it seems to me there are other questions of grave importance which should be considered and thoughtfully considered by Congress before any such bill as this should be pressed to a vote.

I cannot see what right Congress has to step in, nor can I see what we have the contraction of the congress has to step in the first wentered.

excuse there is for Congress to step in between the first-mortgage creditors and the railroad companies and undertake to settle their affairs between them, undertake substantially to make a new contract affairs between them, undertake substantially to make a new contract for them and in their behalf. It does seem to me that that provision of the bill which is before us is certainly very strange. Here are the first-mortgage bondholders holding a first-mortgage bond on this road, supposed to be amply secured, supposed to be secured to their satisfaction; and what does this bill undertake to do? It proposes to say to the Pacific Railroad companies, "You shall not pay these bonds; you shall not pay the principal and interest of these bonds to the first-mortgage bondholders as you have undertaken to do;" and it proposes to say to these first-mortgage bondholders, "You shall not receive your money from these companies as they have promised to pay you. your money from these companies as they have promised to pay you; but we will set up this Government as a sort of general collection agency and the Pacific Railroads must pay their money into the Treasury of the United States, and we will dispense that fund hereafter when it suits our convenience as we see fit." It certainly seems to me that that proposition is an extraordinary one. There is another rather extraordinary provision in section 9, which reads as fol-

Sec. 9. That all sums due to the United States from any of said companies respectively, whether payable presently or not, and all sums required to be paid to the United States, or into the Treasury, or into said sinking fund under this act, or under the acts hereinbefore referred to, or otherwise, are hereby declared to be a lien upon all the property, estate, rights, and franchises of every description granted or conveyed by the United States to any of said companies respectively or jointly, and also upon all the estate and property, real, personal, and mixed, assets and income of the said several railroad companies respectively, from whatever source derived, subject to any lawfully prior and paramount mortgage, lien, or claim thereon.

What is the effect of that proposition, assuming it to be legal, assuming that Congress can do that? Take my own State, for instance. There is a vast tract of land in that State granted to one of these roads There is a vast tract of land in that State granted to one of these roads by the Government. It is held by the road to-day. The company is engaged in a gigantic system of bringing immigrants to that land, of selling and disposing of the land as fast as possible to immigrants. What will be the result of that section if it shall be enacted into a law? Can the road sell one acre of that land? Can it convey a title to a single acre of that land? Not a single foot. Enact that section into a law and you enact that that land shall remain an unoccupied desert for the next thirty years. It provides that the company shall have no right to convey the title to a single foot of that land, and I venture the assertion that an act of that kind would be one of the greatest calamities that could befall my State or the country along the line of this road from the Missouri to the Pacific.

Mr. President, I do not believe that the American nation desires a

Mr. President, I do not believe that the American nation desires a bill of this nature to be passed. I do not believe that an act of this kind would be justified, that a violation of a contract of this sort between one business man and another could be justified by any rightthinking man, and I do not believe that the American people require

mr. BOUTWELL. Mr. President, I am inclined, although I am not disposed to continue the debate at any length, to make some remarks upon the legal questions involved in this bill. If I could see that there was power in Congress to pass the bill, I should not be very much troubled about the provisions touching the duty of these rail-road companies; but, after listening to what has been said upon the legal right of Congress to pass this measure, I am still very far from being convinced of the existence of that right. I speak now of the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee.

I have examined also the authorities that have been quoted by several Senators and I cannot reach the conclusion that they cover or include within legislative powers the right to pass a bill containing provisions which are found in this bill. There is in the act of 1862, at the close of the eighteenth section, this provision:

And the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

If the powers of Congress remained to this time just as they were when the act of 1862 was approved, it is very clear that those words do not reserve to Congress the power to amend or alter this act in every particular. There are some things manifestly contemplated by every particular. There are some things manifestly contemplated by the language employed in this provision of reservation which Con-gress cannot do; and I have to say further in support not only of the doctrine which flows from the words employed here, but also from the general doctrine legally derived from the most comprehensive powers of reservation of legislative authority in reference to corporations, that the courts in every case have held that there were some things which the legislative power was not competent to do in reference to which the legislative power was not competent to do in reference to corporations even where the reservation was most complete. I think that in every opinion that has been rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States touching legislative powers in reference to corporations, where there was a reservation of legislative authority and the most complete language employed, the declaration has been made that there were some things which the legislative power was not competent

But we need not refer to the general doctrine. It is sufficient to say that in reference to the reserved powers of Congress under the act of 1862 Congress can do only those things by legislation without the consent of the corporation which are calculated "to promote the public interest and welfare" by the use of the "railroad and telegraph line and keeping the same in working order and to secure to the Government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes." Here are the reasons set forth for the exercise of this power, and the scope of these reasons measures the power of Congress. That is to say, under the act of 1862 Congress reserved to itself power over this corporation for the purpose of employing its faculties in the public service in certain respects, but not for other things. That, I think, would have been the construction of the act of 1862 if it had remained until this time.

Mr. LOGAN. The Senator regards that as a limitation on the power of Congress?

Mr. BOUTWELL. A limitation put by Congress itself on the exercise of its power of amendment and repeal; and the enumeration of the objects for which this power could be exercised works the exclusion of the exercise of the power for other purposes.

Mr. MITCHELL. Congress would have had more power in reference to amending or repealing that bill if that clause had not been in.
Mr. BOUTWELL. I think the doctrine is the other way, that if

Mr. BOUTWELL. I think the doctrine is the other way, that if there had been no reservation of power to Congress, then the power of Congress would have been very limited.

Mr. MITCHELL. The power in that reservation is a limited one.

Mr. BOUTWELL. It is a limited power undoubtedly.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is confined to specific purposes. Now if that had not been in, would not the power of Congress to alter, amend, or repeal have been more enlarged and greater than it is

Mr. BOUTWELL. I do not say that. I say the language here employed limits the exercise of the power to the particular subjects to which reference is made in the language of the reservation.

Now we come to the act of 1864. I am aware that the title of an act does not control the language of the text; but yet I think, in considering the question we are now called to consider the title of this sidering the question we are now called to consider, the title of this act may well be referred to for the purpose of measuring the language which is employed in the act itself:

An act to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862.

And the text of the act throughout, in every section, justifies the use of the language employed in the title. It was an act to amend the act of 1862, and therefore it is to be considered in connection with the act of 1862. It is not an independent measure of the Government. The Senator from Ohio, a member of the Judiciary Committee, [Mr. Thurman,] doubting, I think, whether the act of 1862 gave to Congress the power to pass the bill which the committee reported, relied finally upon the twenty-second section of the act of 1864:

That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this act.

If that language stood by itself and was not connected with the act of 1862, it would undoubtedly be a very broad declaration of the power of Congress; but it is not broader than the general statute of Massachusetts. That statute, giving to the Legislature the right to alter, amend, or repeal all acts of incorporation passed after the year 1831, is as broad as language can make it. In the case of the Holyoke Company vs. Lyman, which is reported in 15 Wallace, the question was this: Whether a grant having been made to the Holyoke Company to build a dam across the Connecticut River, and there being no provision in the charter that the company should maintain a fishway, the Legislature was competent to compel the company under way, the Legislature was competent to compel the company, under way, the Legislature was competent to compete the company, under the general reservation of power, to construct a fish-way through the dam at Holyoke. The court held that the power of the Legisla-ture was sufficient for that purpose; but the court did also say that if in the charter there had been a provision that the company should not be required to construct a fish-way through the dam the Legisla-ture would not have been competent to compel them to do it. And yet if the power were as broad as is now claimed, and the reservation yet if the power were as broad as is now claimed, and the reservation to the Legislature of the State was even more comprehensive than this reservation in the act of 1864, it would have been just as competent for the Legislature to say they should build a fish-way as to pass any other provision in regard to the duty of the corporation.

Manifestly the reason why the Legislature would not have been competent to compel the corporation to construct a fish-way if it had been provided in the charter that they need not construct a fish-way, was to be found in this, that there was a specific agreement and contract which was of such a nature that the Legislature could and contract which was of such a nature that the Legislature could and contract which was or such a nature that the Legislature could not avoid it or disregard it. The rule rests upon some principle. A corporation, especially a railroad corporation, is created for certain public purposes. It is endowed with authority, with faculties, with capacity for doing particular business in the public interest. It derives all that authority and power and faculty from the legislative grant. Where there is a reservation, I think the rule is that the power is to be so applied as to make the corporation work out these results for the public interest in that reason which in the discretization. results for the public interest in that manner which in the discretion results for the public interest in that manner which in the discretion of the Legislature seems best calculated to promote those interests, the original intent always being kept in mind.

These two acts considered together have two distinct qualities in them and which, perhaps, I can define by saying that one portion of these two acts, not divisible by distinct reference to sections, may be considered in the nature of what we call an executed contract; that is, the Legislature grants certain powers and the company take them to do the business for which the corporation is created. There are other portions of these two acts that are in the nature of an executory agreement; that is to say, Government declares to the corporation, "If you will do certain things the Government will do certain other things." The corporation may do those things that are specified or it may not do them. If it does those things, then the Government is just as much bound to do the particular thing that it has agreed to do as an individual would be bound to fulfill his agreement with another individual, if the thing to be done by him was ment with another individual, if the thing to be done by him was contingent upon the doing of something that the other party agreed to do; and no government can stand creditably upon any other doc-

What was the agreement? It was, first, that if this corporation would commence the construction of a railway and would build forty miles of it in a certain way with certain materials and bring it to a certain degree of perfection the Government of the United States would issue its own bonds to that corporation for a certain sum of money, and conditioned that at a certain time, and at a certain rate of interest, and in a certain way, and with certain security, the corporation should respond. It is not at all necessary to inquire whether that arrangement were a wise one or not; it was an agreement entered into by the Government. Two years afterward that agreement was modified by the Government, so that the company were to receive bonds when they built twenty miles of the road, and they were to receive patents for lands whenever twenty miles of the railroad were constructed.

Nor is it necessary to inquire whether the interest was to be paid semi-annually or annually or when the bonds matured. That was written in the agreement, and the courts have ascertained what the agreement was; and it is nothing to say to us now that it was a bad bargain, that it was an unwise thing. That does not help us in regard to the contract one way or the other.

If I put one question to those who advocate this bill, I think they will be obliged to so answer it as to show that it is not competent for Congress to pass this bill. That question is this: When one of these corporations had constructed forty miles and the commissioners apcorporations had constructed forty miles and the commissioners appointed by the Government had examined it, had approved it, had reported that in every particular it answered to the requirements of the act of Congress, would it then have been competent for Congress to say "We will not issue the bonds; we have the power to repeal this statute, to amend it, to alter it, and we will not issue these bonds, notwithstanding your part of the agreement has been performed to the very letter?" I think every person must answer that it would not be competent, legally competent—I do not mean to undertake here to measure the powers of Congress either to do or not it would not be competent, legally competent—I do not mean to undertake here to measure the powers of Congress either to do or not to do—for Congress at that moment to say "We will neither issue bonds nor grant patents for the lands." I do not know whether the corporation would have had a standing in any judicial tribunal, but I have the utmost confidence that being legally in a tribunal and having a day in court there could have been no doubt as to the judgment of any judicial tribunal that the Government of the United States was bound to issue these bonds and to issue the patents for the lands. That act of denial would have been marely the exercise of the power. That act of denial would have been merely the exercise of the power of alteration and amendment of the acts of 1862 and 1864. It would have been nothing else. Now, does any person who advocates the Judiciary Committee's bill maintain that it would have been competent for Congress to have so legislated—I mean legally competent in view of the power in a judicial tribunal to do that which was right view of the power in a judicial tribunal to do that which was right between the Government and the corporation? I think not. In what particular does that hypothetical exercise of power differ from this proposed exercise of power? As far as I can discover, in nothing that is essential to the adjudication of the questions that would arise. What is in contemplation by this bill? Certainly this, or else the bill is utterly valueless: that the terms of payment which were provided in the act of 1864 shall be changed by the legislative power of Congress; that is, that the agreement between the railroad companies and the Government, on one side the construction of the railroad, on the other side the issue of bonds payable at a certain time at a certain rate of interest in a certain way and with certain security, shall be different; that is the gist of the whole question. The stipulation to issue the bonds was a stipulation not only to issue the bonds, but to wait a certain period of time for the payment of those bonds; and if this bill means anything it means that by the provisions set forth in it the corporation shall be required to provide for the payment of those bonds in another and different manner from that stipulated in the acts of Congress, and therefore this agreement between lated in the acts of Congress, and therefore this agreement between the Government and the railroad companies, which at the time the the Government and the railroad companies, which at the time the acts passed was in the nature of an executory contract, performance in the future to be rendered on each side, must stand altogether or it must fall altogether. All that is now claimed is, and ever has been from the day the acts were passed, within the legislative power of Congress, or it never has been in the legislative power of Congress, and, if it never has been, it never can be. Time does not work any change in the relations between the Government and the corporation in this particular.

in this particular.

The point that I make—and I believe all the authorities that have been cited furnish some support to the point I make—is that in those particulars in which the Government agreed that if the corporation would do certain things the Government of the United States would do certain other things, and both were in the future and did not re-late to the administration of the road, the Government of the United late to the administration of the road, the Government of the United States has no rightful legal power, more than a party to a contract of the same nature would have, to dissolve or rescind or annul the contract by the mere force of his own will.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, it is to be regretted, that many of those likely to vote upon a measure as grave as this is, have been absent during its discussion. It would, I think, have been fortunate had every Senator heard the observations which have just fallen from the Senator from Massachusetts, [Mr. BOUTWELL.] Unless I quite mistake, there were in those observations, suggestions, inquiries, and doubts, not easy to resolve favorably to one at least of the pending measures.

indemnity for the past and security for the future. Second, the managers of these large railway enterprises should be allowed to address themselves to the thorough management of their trust, and to that end they should be dismissed from attendance in Washington to defend themselves in never-ceasing congressional controversies. Third, it is fit and wholesome that Congress should be relieved from a subject which for years has cousumed much time, and interfered hurtfully with the business of legislation. If the bill before the Senate reported from the Committee on the Judiciary fairly meets and disposes of the occasion, surely it ought to pass.

I shall not attempt to run the boundaries of the power of Congress to discipline corporations it has created, or corporations created by breed future controversies, is unwise and unjustifiable.

I shall not attempt to run the boundaries of the power of Congress to discipline corporations it has created, or corporations created by the Legislature of a State. I shall not try to measure the power which Congress of right has to withdraw the privileges or impair the franchises it has once conferred, or its power to deal in these respects with the creatures of State legislation. Whatever may be the limit in this regard, whatever measure of power might be asserted now, and ultimately maintained before judicial tribunals, it suffices me to know that any exertion of power, working injustice, and calculated to breed future controversies, is unwise and unjustifiable.

In respect of the transactions and affairs to which the pending bill relates, it may, I think, be affirmed, that the United States sustain a double relation, and appear in two characters. The nation is a sovereign, endowed with all the attributes and invested with all the powers and prerogatives of a sovereign. This is one character in which it appears here. It appears also in another character. It is a party to a transaction, as the Senator from Massachusetts so forcibly said. The rights of the Government as a government, must not be confounded with its rights as a party to a business transaction. These rights are distinct in nature and origin, and widely different in the present instance. They must not be mistaken for each other.

That I may relieve the Senate from observations of my own on this head, I take up a case reported by Wallace, junior, in the third volume, and read the language of Judge Grier. The case grew out of the alleged default of Swartwout, a collector. His property was sold; it was bid in by the United States. Under the United States parties took title. Between those who took from the United States and others controversies arose; and speaking of one of them, Judge Grier employed these words:

When the Government—

When the Government-The National Government-in the exercise of the rights and functions of a civil corporation, purchases lands to secure a debt, the accident of its sovereignty in other functions cannot be set up to destroy or affect the rights of persons claiming a title or lien on the same lands. Thus, when the Government of the United States became a partner in a trading corporation, such as the United States Bank, it divested itself, so far as concerned the transactions of that company, of its sovereign character, and took that of a citizen; consequently, its property and interests were subject to the decrees and judgments of courts, equally with that of its copartners.—Elliot vs. Voorst et al., pages 302, 303, 3 Wallace, jr.

The Supreme Court has recognized the same distinction and maintained it. Common sense, and common right, will always maintain it. The passage read sufficiently illustrates the dual character of the Government touching the subject-matter before us. The Government of the United States is the sovereign which endowed some of these corporations with certain franchises. It is also one of the parties to a transaction, and in its character of party, like any other party, it has rights to assert, and these rights may be challenged and disputed by the other party; and the issue, when an issue thus arises, is to be fairly considered and justly determined. This distinction, clearly seen, and honestly respected, dispenses with the need of exploring the possibilities of power in Congress to alter grants after they have been made and accepted, or to revoke chartered rights.

Let us apply the distinction to the matter in hand.

For convenience, I select of the several corporations on which the The Supreme Court has recognized the same distinction and main-

Let us apply the distinction to the matter in hand.

For convenience, I select of the several corporations on which the bill is to operate, a single one—the Central Pacific Railroad Company. This corporation is the creature of the State of California. Congress did not create it. Congress found it an existing person—a corporation is a person, although an artificial person—and speaking to it as one person speaking to another person, concluded with it a certain understanding. That understanding in the preamble of this bill is thus recited:

Whereas, under the authority of the said two acts, the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of California,—

Now I ask the Senate to observeundertook-

This corporation thus existing undertook-to construct a railway after the passage of said acts over some part of the line mentioned in said acts.

Thus, according to the preamble, here was a legally and actually existing party, and that party undertook with the United States the performance of certain acts. The United States on its part gave the company bonds to be sold for money with which help build a railroad, and from the company was withheld one-half the compensation to be company by the transportation of freight for the Green doubts, not easy to resolve favorably to one at least of the pending measures.

It is certainly desirable that some act of legislation shall make adequate and final disposition of this subject. There are at least three reasons for such an act. First, the United States should have chiefly to say that it was not to loan money for interest, or as the scriptures say "usury;" the action of Congress was not designed as a speculation, or the investment of money for the income the money would bring in. The purpose was very different; it was much higher and broader. A transcontinental railway was regarded as a paramount national need. Both political parties of the country had pronounced in national convention in favor of the undertaking. In Congress the enterprise was denominated "a national necessity." The purpose was to hold out adequate inducements to tempt capitalists to undertake the construction of a great artery of commerce—a channel of travel, trade, and traffic, through which might flow from sea to sea the values and exchanges of the present and the future. The purpose and motive was even greater still; the unity, the existence of the country was endangered, and it was deemed wise and patriotic to bind together with bands of iron, and by the subtile forces of commingling interests, the distant States of the far west-forces of commingling interests, the distant States of the far western slope, and the middle and eastern regions of the country.

Such was the end sought—the terms agreed to, were only means to that end. Of the fruits obtained, it is not my purpose now to speak. Much might be said, indeed hardly too much could be said of the advantages, not to be expressed in pecuniary profit alone, reaped by the nation from the construction across deserts and over mountains and rivers, of a railway to the Pacific. Much might be said of the saving rivers, of a railway to the Pacific. Much might be said of the saving to the public, or rather the governmental, service, weighed in golden scales, and stated in the tables of annual expenditure for transportation of mails, munitions of war, and Army and Indian supplies.

Here is a report from the Pacific Railway Committee of the Senate on the 24th of February, 1871. It would be hazardous, unsupported by authority, to venture such estimates and items as here appear of cost saved in the operations of the Government by the cheap and rapid facilities the Pacific Railroad supplied. After referring to the rates and totals paid by the Government for fraight and mails before the and totals paid by the Government for freight and mails before the railroad was built, the report says:

The amount which the transportation—for which $4,178,967.90 was paid—would have cost, at the rate of $1.30 per one hundred pounds per one hundred miles, is therefore a matter of mathematical calculation. That sum would have been $21, 730,633.80, showing a saving of $17,551,666, which would pay all arrears of interest now due upon the bonds issued to the Pacific Railroad companies more than three times over.

have cost, at the rate of $1.30 per one hundred pounds per one hundred mines, its therefore a matter of mathematical calculation. That sum would have been $21,730,633.80, showing a saving of $17,551,666, which would pay all arrears of interest mow due upon the bonds issued to the Pacific Railroad companies more than three times over.

The Secretary of War on the 15th of February, 1571, in answer to a resolution of the Senate, estimates the cost of the military service, through the War Department of the control of the Senate, estimates the cost of the military service, through the War Department of the control of t

Auditor of the Treasury shows that none of these accounts for 1869-'70 have yet been returned.

The committee, however, do not think it necessary to recommend any further legislation, at the present time, on the subject. The employment of these roads for Government purposes, in all proper cases, is so manifestly for the interest of the United States that it is believed that the several Departments of the Government will, under existing laws, extend to them all the patronage in their power consistent with the public interest.

Again the report asserts:

The cost since the completion of the road is the annual interest—$3,877,129, to which must be added one-half the charges for services performed by the company, about $1,63,138 per annum, making a total annual expenditure of about $5,000,000, and showing a saving of at least $3,000,000 per annum.

The purpose then being not to invest money for profitable interest, or to speculate with money, but to insure the undertaking and completion of a colossal enterprise of questioned feasibility, certain undertakings were entered into by the Government on the one side, and by these several corporations on the other. The question now is not whether the terms were or were not the best which might have been made; the only honest inquiry about the terms is, what were they, and what by those terms are the just rights of each party. The road has been completed. The date of the completion is one of the points on which the pending bill largely depends. The road has been completed, and despite blemishes in its history, it is a great achievement. For years, however, and especially during this debate, sweeping allegations have been made that flagrant default has occurred on the part of the corporations whereby the Government has been the part of the corporations whereby the Government has been the part of the corporations whereby the Government has been wronged and injured. A statement in the Senate the other day must have roused some indignation—it should have done so. It was stated that these corporations had not paid as they were bound to pay, that they had never paid to the Government a penny of the large sums due, and long past due, that they had come short in all their obligations; and the inference was, at least such was my inference, that whatever could be done, without actual bad faith, should be done at once, to visit on willful delinquents the penalties and forfeitures due to derelict and dishonest debtors. Since then, I have looked into the history and facts somewhat, and I confess they do not seem to warrant such broad assertions.

I will refer to some of these alleged defaults. they exist, as stated, they go far to provoke and excuse, if not to justify the exertion of extreme power. If they do not exist, as far as I have gathered the sense of those who support the pending bill, it has scanty footing, if any footing at all. The first default heretofore alleged, was a ing, if any footing at all. The first default heretofore alleged, was a failure to pay current interest on bonds. It was insisted on one side that the true intent and meaning of the acts of Congress required these companies to pay, as it accrued, interest on the subsidy bonds year by year semi-annually. They, on the other hand, alleged that the law required them on, and not until the maturity of the bonds, to be answerable for principal and interest, but that in the mean time the credit of the Government was one of the stipulated benefits given to them, one of the means whereby they were to conduct, complete, and carry on the enterprise. The Senate Chamber often resounded, and so did the House, with animated debates over this issue. At last by an act which would be called a compromise now, it was enacted by so did the House, with animated debates over this issue. At last by an act which would be called a compromise now, it was enacted by the two Houses that the question who was to pay interest during the life-time of the bonds should be submitted to the tribunals of the country, and especially to the highest judicial tribunal. It was submitted; and, instead of these companies, being adjudged in default in that regard, the unanimous judgment of the Supreme Court, no judge dissenting, was that there had never been a right on the part of the United States to exact interest as it accurach, but that on the maturity of the bonds and not till then, would inner the claim of the United. of the bonds, and not till then, would inure the claim of the United States for interest. This final decision might be supposed the end of this one alleged default. But the statement already made does not dispose of it, because the truth requires me to add that having before the decision, withheld on account of this claim of interest, the moneys earned by these railroads for carrying the supplies, stores, munitions, agents, and mails of the United States, after the court decided that there was no such claim, the Government continued still to hold, and as I am told holds, and withholds to this day, the whole of these earnings. The chairman of the Railroad Committee now remarks that one of the companies has become bankrupt in consequence of this action; and he adds that it is a weak company.

Mr. President, to Mr. Jefferson, I believe, is attributed the saying that corporations have no bodies to kick and no souls to damn. It is that corporations have no bodies to kick and no souls to damn. It is not unfashionable or unpopular anywhere, at any time, so far as I know, to assail corporations; but I venture to take to myself the caution—perhaps it need not be given to other Senators, that a legislative body is in the greatest danger of doing a wrong, and overpassing the bounds of equity and right when he against whom the act is to be done is unpopular, unfashionable, or odious. It is not a tendency of human nature to run riotously against approved and commended people or things. The tendency is rather to do injustice to those against whom feeling, prejudice, and opposition prevail.

What is the next alleged default to which attention has been called? The act requires that after the completion of the road 5 per cent. of the net earnings shall be paid to the United States. Here is a matter which deserves the attention of every Senator. In 1874 by an act, now in my hand, Congress sent to the courts the question, "What are the net earnings of these companies," whereof 5 per cent. belongs to the net earnings of these companies," whereof 5 per cent. belongs to the United States. The act directed the Attorney-General to institute the necessary suits and proceedings,

To collect and otherwise obtain redress in respect of the same in the proper circuit courts of the United States and to prosecute the same with all convenient dispatch to a final determination.

With all convenient dispatch suits were commenced. One was tried in the court of the circuit in which Nebraska is, I think. Two judges sat. They deemed the question sufficiently grave and doubtful to go to the Supreme Court. They entered pro forma a judgment for the companies and against the United States and the case is on its way to the Supreme Court, if it has not reached it already. Other suits have been commenced. Some of them have been tried. In some the proofs have been taken. In one or two, I believe, the final argument has been heard, or the day for it fixed, and the courts have the cases now under advisement, an early decision being expected. I shall in a moment ask the attention of the Senate to the fact that the question involved in pending lawsuits instituted by Congress itself, committed involved in pending lawsuits instituted by Congress itself, committed to the judicial tribunals, there heard, and awaiting decision, the question which underlies these cases, is to be adjudged by an act of Congress in one of the sections of this bill.

What is this question of net earnings? The obligation is to render 5 per cent. of net earnings after the completion of the road. What is that completion? Has it occurred? When did it occur? I heard it argued the other day that as often as a section of twenty miles, or forty miles, was finished and the bonds received for that section, that was a completion, pro tanto, of the road, and that at that moment, if I understood the argument, commenced the time when 5 per cent. of net earnings was to be paid.

mr. President, there is a doctrine long known to the law, denominated estoppel. It is sometimes a tyrannous doctrine, and sometimes equitable. The controversy about this 5 per cent. of net earnings reminds me of it; I think the Senate will be reminded of it. In 1869, the minds me of it; Ithink the Senate will be reminded of it. In 1869, the last section of road from the Missouri River to Sacramento had been finished in that sense, which enabled the companies to receive the bonds for many of the sections. The allegation now is that ever since 1869 5 per cent. of net earnings has been constantly inuring to the benefit of the United States, that this due has been constantly withheld, and remains now as of all that time an accumulated default. That is the allegation. Let us turn to the history. In 1869 and 1870, and 1871 and 1872 and 1873 and 1874, these corporations for the plainest reasons of self-interest were any ions to assume that the the plainest reasons of self-interest were anxious to assume that the road was completed. This is obvious from several considerations. First, because, if it was completed they could not be required to expend because, if it was completed they could not be required to expend additional millions in consummating that completion; second, because they would be allowed to receive all the bonds, patents for lands, and all else which was to come to them from the United States. Their interest was to assert the completion of their roads, to insist upon it as soon as possible.

as soon as possible.

What was the interest of the United States? It was to erect a standard of perfection as high as in justice might be erected, to try the road by that standard, and to deny its completion until it had been brought up to that standard of perfection. Accordingly, commissions were appointed. I will not stop to give them in detail. The language creating them, the language of their reports, the proceedings attending each one of them seriatim, is instructive. I speak of them together, subject to correction if I fall into error. A board of engineers was appointed. That board established what they termed a standard. Another commission was appointed and another. One neers was appointed. That board established what they termed a standard. Another commission was appointed and another. One of them reported the number of millions in money which must still be expended to complete the road. Finally in 1874, all, in consequence, let me say of an opinion written in September 1868 by the Attorney-General affirming the right of the Government thus to require additional expenditure before completion should be deemed to have taken place the last commission was created—on the 21st of September 1874 I think. Their report was made, in October 1874, the Senator from Louisiana says the on 7th of October. An order to which I wish more especially to call attention was made on the 18th of November 1874.

Before referring to that order let me remind the Senate of the attitude of these parties then. They were entitled by the act, to which reference has been made, to alternate odd sections of land. If their road was completed, beyond all peradventure they were entitled to patents for all these sections. The patents were withheld—patents for alternate odd sections. The Secretary of the Interior, acting under the advice of the law-officer of the Government, refused to deliver or issue patents for one-half the land for which patents were to go, upon the ground that the condition-precedent had not been performed. What was the condition-precedent? The completion of the road. Thus the matter stood on the 17th of November, 1874.

On the 18th of November, if I have the date precisely, the Secretary of the Interior received from the President of the United States an acceptance and approval of the report of the last commission, which had been created to ascertain whether the road had been completed or not. The President transmitted the report to the Secretary of the Interior, and thereupon he revoked his prior order and released the patents, and thus for the first time affirmed, on the part of the Gov-Before referring to that order let me remind the Senate of the atti-patents, and thus for the first time affirmed, on the part of the Government, that the road was completed. Despite these acts, it is now alleged that the road was completed five years anterior, and that during all these years in which these companies were required to expend millions to bring the road up to the point of completion; in reality completion had already taken place and the 5 per cent. was running.

reality completion had already taken place and the 5 per cent. was running.

It is not my duty to decide, the measure before us does not call upon the Senate to decide, which side of this question is the true and right side. I do not mean to express an opinion as to the side entitled to prevail. My purpose is to submit to the Senate whether a question of that sort already by the action of Congress submitted to judicial tribunals is to be decided in pending cases by a legislative act. To see the force of this question of legislative propriety and discretion, it is not necessary to see to the end the merits of the controversy or the ultimate decision which ought to be made.

Again, 5 per cent. of net earnings. What are net earnings consist of all that the railroad corporation receives, deducting only actual running or operating expenses. On the other side it is maintained that net profits or net earnings or net result from any business, is that which remains after paying not only running or operating expenses in the case of a railway, but taxes, interest, expenditures. I do not mean to argue this question: I only state it. If I should borrow from my friend from Iowa [Mr. WRIGHT] $100,000, and embark it in business, and from that business should receive in gross in a year $14,000, the question would be, whether the $7,000, which for that year I should owe and must pay as the interest of the money with which the business was done, must be deducted before I could speak of the net profits or the net earnings of the business. The question would arise whether I could take my $14,000 and say to myself with truth and with sense, "I have paid but $4,000 for wages to other persons and for current expenses for managing this business, and therefore the net profits, the net earnings of this venture are $10,000 for this year." The Senator from Iowa, and second all the rest of the $4,000 save only that which I have already paid out to the clerks who assisted me in the business—whether such gratification would be aself-delusion of law and men of sense, is a question which I state without deciding.

The issue in part between these parties contestant is whether "net earnings" is that which is left after paying interest, taxes, and actual expenses of all sorts; or whether it is all that remains if nothing be deducted save only actual operating expenses. That question is in the courts. It is, I am told, involved in pending cases. Is it right for one party by an act of legislation to attempt to settle it for both parties 1

But again, speaking of the single company to which I more especially referred in the beginning, its road is thirteen hundred miles in length. Eight hundred and sixty miles have been aided by the United States, and four hundred and forty miles have received no such aid whatever. One of its roads runs up the Sacramento Valley; another runs down the San Joaquin Valley; and you Mr. President [Mr. Booth in the chair] know whether I am right in supposing that these two valleys are among the most fertile and productive portions these two valleys are among the most fertile and productive portions of your prolific State. A statement was made a year or two ago—I did not treasure it accurately and will not venture to repeat it—of the proportion of wheat grown in these valleys and passing over these roads,—the proportion of the whole crop and the quantity. It amazed me at the time. Each of these branches is one hundred and fifty miles in length, I understand, and other branches belong to the company. They are not sources of poverty but sources of wealth. I am told they are great contributors to the volume of traffic which passes over the residue of the road, and that they swell the total earnings. Now it is insisted that the United States is entitled not only to 5 per cent.

it is insisted that the United States is entitled not only to 5 per cent. of the net earnings of the eight hundred and sixty miles which the United States helped to build, but is entitled also to 5 per cent. of the net earnings upon the four hundred and forty miles with which the United States never had anything to do.

Again, I forbear to express any opinion upon this question. I remind the Senate that Congress by law has sent the question to the judicial tribunals of the country. These corporations have been summoned there to answer. They have answered. They have submitted the controversy. Decisions are forthcoming; and pendente lite it is proposed by an act of Congress to decide the question.

There, Mr. President, in the claim of 5 per cent. net earnings, are three, if not four serious and awkward elements. There are three questions in every one of which the United States must triumph in order to maintain the full claim asserted. Yet, refusal to admit the full 5 per cent. claim, is one of the alleged defaults, justified by which we are invited to legislate in these words:

invited to legislate in these words:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That the net earnings mentioned in said act of 1862, of said railroad companies respectively, shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of their earnings respectively the necessary and actual expenses of operating the same and keeping the same in a state of repair, and not otherwise, and excluding from consideration all sums owing or paid by said companies respectively for interest upon any portion of their indebtedness; and the foregoing provision shall be deemed and taken as an amendment of said act of 1864, as well as of said act of 1862.

The bill with its preamble as I understand it subjects to this provision every mile of rail owned by the corporations to which it applies.

I speak in the presence of instructed lawyers, and if one of them knows an instance in which any court ever held that to be the rule by which net earnings or net profits are to be ascertained, I beg him to mention the case—net earnings to be ascertained by making no deduction for any interest paid or owing upon any indebtedness whatever. Various authorities might be cited on this subject; I will not stop to cite them; but I submit that the advocates of such a section should be able to produce one instance in which a court has section should be able to produce one instance in which a court has maintained such a doctrine.

Another default has been suggested to pave the way for this legislation. I think it was suggested by the honorable Senator from Ohio not now in his seat, [Mr. Thurman.] An act of Congress to which he referred required an annual report to be made to the Secretary of the Treasury. These reports were made for a time, and then they ceased; and, if I remember aright, the Senator from Ohio said there was a default which worked a forfeiture. That seemed very plain at the time; but, on examination, it turned out that the statute which he relied upon was long ago repealed, and a later statute directed and required the reports to be made to the Secretary of the Interior; and in the Interior Department I am assured the reports may all be and in the Interior Department I am assured the reports may all be and in the Interior Department I am assured the reports may all be found, regularly made in conformity with the law.

Other defaults may have been spoken of. I confess when the debate began I had a strong suspicion that derelictions and short-comings had occurred which would be potent in enabling Congress to assert rigorous powers. Statements of one or two of them impressed me, accepting the statements as I did at first; but hearing their correctness challenged, I have looked at the evidence, and I must in candor confess my surprise at the instances in which these allegations turn out to be unsurported. out to be unsupported.

One fact bearing upon the question of the 5 per cent., perhaps I omitted to refer to—it occurs to me now. Ever since 1869, the entire compensation earned for carrying the mails and for carrying every thing else for the Government has been withheld by the United States. I said before it was so withheld after the Supreme Court decided the interest question. It may now be added, as I am told, that these earnings have been retained to this day, and are now retained, not, I take it, on account of the interest claim which the court has overruled, but retained now as indemnity in respect of the court has overruled, but retained now as indemnity in respect of the 5 per cent. alleged to be due; and the chairman of the Railroad Committee tells me that these parties do not object, that they have stipulated that these moneys may be so retained. I am told also that the sum is more than large enough to pay 5 per cent. of the earnings since the road was completed in 1874, even assuming that the 5 per cent. is to be taken of the earnings of the whole road, that part which the Government aided to build and also the part to which the Government gave no aid.

Mr. President, in the face of such facts I cannot approve a bill which proceeds on the idea that those at whom it is aimed have refused utterly and dishonestly to pay a farthing of their just and honest debts. That not a farthing had been paid, was one of the statements made the other day. On the contrary I feel bound to treat these directors as trustees, the trustees of stockholders behind them; their own interas trustees, the trustees of stockholders behind them; their own interest may be large; but there are many people whose individual interest is not large who stand as other shareholders stand in business corporations. In their representative right as trustees, besides their own rations. In their representative right as trustees, besides their own right of self-interest, these directors resist certain demands. They say it is not true or right that 5 per cent. shall be taken from the whole of all the roads, because they say that hundreds of miles of road the Government did not help to build. They say that 5 per cent. is not to be taken during five years when the road was not completed and not accepted. They say that 5 per cent. is not to be taken from the gross earnings deducting only running expenses, but it is to be taken from the net earnings after deducting the tax account, the interest account, and the expenditure account. My honorable friend from Rhode Island [Mr.Burnside] knows of what such accounts are made up better than I, and could state more clearly; but I think it would be news to him if he were to learn that it is quite clear, so clear that there is no question about it, that the net earnings of a railroad consist not of what would be divided among the stockholders, but consist of the gross earnings, deducting nothing except running or operating expenses.

the gross earnings, deducting nothing except running or operating expenses.

These parties say there is question in each of these particulars. They say we have sent them to the courts. They say they have a right there to litigate. This bill declares by one stroke, in one section, the whole thing shall be ended, as we say. I say that such an exertion of power, whether technically competent or not, is penny-wise and pound-foolish. Gold may be bought too dear. A great government may seize advantage at too much cost. A government is never so great as when it is just. An upright government should never, in such a matter, put itself in an attitude which an individual would not be allowed to assume—it should never attempt that which a citizen would be chastised by a court of instice for atthat which a citizen would be chastised by a court of justice for attempting. An act of questionable fairness, is a greater blunder in a government, than in an individual; and it was of a transaction less than this, that a great master of the philosophy of human affairs remarked that a blunder is worse than a crime.

Mr. President, I have said much more than I intended. I repeat that I shall be very glad to see a judicious, just, and adequate measure adopted. I have not been able, for want of time and interruptions, to make such examination of all the pending amendments and substitutes as I hope to do. I will not venture now to express an opinion between them; but speaking of the bill which lies at the foundation of our proceedings now, the bill reported from the Judiciary Committee, for reasons some of which I have assigned, it seems to me the discretion and wisdom of Congress can devise something more justifiable, something requiring less explanation and defense, and more certain to give a quietus to a disturbing and troublesome contention.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. President—
Mr. WEST. I ask the Senator from Georgia if it will not be more agreeable to him to be assigned the floor to-day to proceed with the debate on this subject to-morrow, and enable the Senate to have an executive session at the present time? If that will be agreeable to him, I will make the motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive busines

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. BOOTH.) Does the Senator from

Mr. GORDON. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. WEST. On the condition that the Senator has the floor.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to give notice that to-morrow I shall call up the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. WEST. If the Senator can get the floor, I presume.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall make the effort.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall make the effort.

Mr. WEST. That will depend on the pleasure of the Senate. The Indian appropriation bill has no preference over any other business. Mr. WRIGHT. I desire to say, before the question is put on the motion of the Senator from Louisiana, that the Senator from Texas, whom I do not see in his seat at present, [Mr. Maxey,] desired to have the attention of the Senate to a bill that he seemed to be exceedingly solicitous to have considered to-day. When he called it up this morning I made an objection to having it interposed so as to displace even informally this bill. If the Senator were present now I should be very glad if the Senate would proceed to the consideration of that bill, for I had made an objection to it once before and did not know bill, for I had made an objection to it once before and did not know at the time he suggested it that it was the same bill.

Mr. WEST. Call it up yourself. There will be no debate.

Mr. BURNSIDE. That bill has been reported on favorably, and I should like to see it passed.

Mr. WRIGHT. The Senator from Texas is in his place now. I trust there will be no objection to taking up the bill to which he referred this morning.

Mr. WEST. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. WRIGHT. It being understood of course that it does not displace the railroad bill, the Senator from Texas will call attention to his bill.

his bill.

ARMS TO THE FRONTIER STATES.

Mr. MAXEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. No. 30) to amend the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms, approved July 3, 1876. It relates to the disposition of arms to the Territories and States 1876. It relates to the disposition of arms to the Territories and States bordering thereon, and the purpose of the joint resolution is to give effect to the act of July 3, 1876. It was reported favorably from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It amends the joint resolution approved July 3, 1876, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms to the Territories and the States bordering thereon, by inserting, after the words "each of said Territories," the words "and ammunition for the same, not to exceed fifty ball-cartifieds for each arm" ridges for each arm."

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amend-ment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT POLICE COMMISSIONERS-VETO MESSAGE.

Mr. INGALLS. The bill abolishing the Metropolitan police commissioners of the District of Columbia, with the veto message of the President, is lying upon the table with the recommendation of the Committee on the District of Columbia that the bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the President. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of that bill and message.

Mr. WRIGHT. I trust that that will not be done at this time. There is a pending order which was laid aside merely informally.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not wish to interfere with the pending order at all.

Mr. WRIGHT. I suggest to my friend from Kansas that perhaps it would be better to call that measure up to-morrow morning when the Senate will be fuller than it is at this time. The Senator from Louisiana has already suggested an executive session, and he gave way for the purpose of having the joint resolution moved by the Senator from Texas considered.

Mr. INGALLS. There is a quorum of the Senate present and the Mr. INGALLS. There is a quorum of the Senate present and the afternoon is not sufficiently far spent to prevent a vote on this question. The only question before the Senate is, shall the bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the President? I have no desire to detain the Senate by any remarks upon the subject. I presume that every Senator is familiar with the merits of the case and ready to vote upon it. It is exceedingly important that the matter should determined one way or the other, either that the board should be abolished or that it should be continued in force, as at the present time the police force is demoralized and practically without a head. There are many reasons why it is exceedingly important that this matter should be acted upon now, and without any desire to interfere with the pending order I ask the Senate to vote upon that bill.

Mr. WEST. Has the joint resolution moved by the Senator from Texas been passed?

Several SENATORS. It has passed.

Mr. WEST. Then I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask the Senator to let me have a vote on this

Mr. BURNSIDE. I hope the Senator from Louisiana will allow this bill to be voted upon. I think it is very important.

Mr. WEST. I beg pardon. I did not know there was anything before the Senate. I was called out a moment.

Mr WRIGHT. I suggest to the Senator from Kansas that he allow this patter to pass for the present with the understanding that we this matter to pass for the present with the understanding that we take the vote to-morrow at one o'clock at the expiration of the morning hour, and if it can be understood that we can have a vote at that time, Senators will have the opportunity at least to be present who are not now here.

Mr. INGALLS. The morning hour to-morrow will be consumed probably by general business on the Calendar. At one o'clock, I understand, the pending order will come up for consideration; and in the mean time this matter will be indefinitely procrastinated and deferred. There are two hundred members of the police force, and it is of ferred. There are two hundred members of the police force, and it is of the very greatest importance to the lives and property and peace and good order of this community that this matter should be acted upon, and acted upon now. I therefore shall submit the matter to the Senate whether the vote shall be taken now or whether it shall be postponed. I feel it to be my duty as a member of the committee having this subject in charge to call the attention of the Senate to the im-ate whether the vote shall be taken now or whether it shall be postponed. I feel it to be my duty as a member of the committee having this subject in charge to call the attention of the Senate to the importance of this subject, and having done so, of course if the Senate see fit to pass it by, my duty will have been discharged.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I am satisfied that on a call of the yeas and nays at this moment there would appear a larger vote than to-morrow at one o'clock. I agree with the Senator from Kansas that this is a proper time to have a vote. There are more Senators now in their seats than I have seen here in three or four days, and a call of the yeas and nays would bring more into the Chamber who are in the building. I think we ought to have as large a vote as possible on this subject. It is a very important matter, as the Senator from Kansas has already said, and it is one upon which all Senators would like to cast their votes. I see no reason under the sun why it should be postponed until to-morrow at one o'clock, and I see grave reasons why we should vote on the subject now. Every Senator has made up his mind as to how he will vote upon it, and there is no reason, in my mind, for delay. With all due respect to the Senator from Iowa I see no reason why the vote cannot be taken now.

Mr. WHYTE. During my absence from the Senate last summer, the President of the Senate did me the honor to put me on a commission created by an act of Congress passed toward the close of the session, that committee being charged with the preparation of a form of government for the District of Columbia. We spent a considerable period of time in examining into the affairs of this District. In the bill which was finally prepared, and which has been submitted to Congress through the branch of the commissioners which we provided as the permanent governing body within the territory of the District of Columbia. An examination of the affairs relating to the police department in this District satisfied us that that power ought to be be made, and that the power over the police force in this city should be lodged with the District commissioners. I hope the Senate will not let this day pass without taking up this bill.

Mr. WRIGHT. In my suggestion that this matter pass over till to-morrow I was influenced by several considerations. In the first place, there was no notice at all that we should be expected to vote on this bill this afternoon. I know the Senator from Kansas said he would call it up at the earliest moment practicable, but there are Senators absent this afternoon with no expectation that anything of this kind would come up; and it was supposed that the debate would continue on the railroad bill until the adjournment of this day's session. It is known that five members of the Senate are engaged in other duties at this time, and I know some of them take a deep interest in this bill. If it can be understood that we shall vote tomorrow, those Senators can be present at least at that time, while it would be difficult and even impossible to obtain them at to-day's session. I therefore, have thought, and I yet think, that it would be better to have this bill taken up to-morrow. I do not see how a post-ponement of the measure for one day can make any difference. I understand that the police matters in this District are still going on; that this bill has not at all disturbed them in any way, and it will not be until this bill shall have passed, if it is to pass, that the duties will be transferred to another tribunal. At present the duties are being discharged by the old tribunal, as I understand; and I do not see how the postponement of this measure for twenty-four hours or such a matter can make any difference. I have no disposition at all to antagonize a vote if it is deemed advisable and thought better to take it at this time; but in view of the fact I have suggested, I think it is not expedient that we should take a vote on this bill at this time. There are Senators absent who take a deep interest in it, and who would like to be present at the time the vote is taken. I think it best, therefore, to postpone the measure in order that Senators may know that to-morrow the vote shall be taken, and that those Senators who are now absent may have the opportunity at least of being present.

Mr. INGALLS. If we are to wait until the five absent members of the Senate who are on the electoral commission return to the discharge of their legislative duties on this floor, the probability is that the opportunities for the transaction of business will be comparatively limited for want of time. The Senate is as full to-day as it ordinarily is, and is as full, I believe, as it will be at any time in the immediate future. This bill has already been postponed from day to day for a fuller Senate, to have the presence of Senators who are otherwise employed, and in the mean time-great peril impends the peace and property of this District. If it is postponed until to-morrow at one o'clock, again this same difficulty will arise. The Senator from Iowa or the Senator from Louisiana will rise in his place and say that the Pacific Railroad bill is the pending order; that this matter will give rise to debate, and that therefore it must go over until a more convenient season. The facts are that while the police functions of this District are at the present time exercised by the Metropolitan board of police, yet in consequence of the doubt and un-Metropolitan board of police, yet in consequence of the doubt and uncertainty that attends the policy that is to be pursued with regard to the administration of this arm of the service, there is a total want of efficiency and of responsibility. No one can tell what a day may bring forth. The police force is inefficient and disorganized, and we ought to vote this bill up or vote it down. If the board is to be abolished, then let everybody understand that, and let the District commissioners have charge of this matter; if it is not to be abolished, then let us determine that and put the commissioners who have lately been appointed in the full and efficient exercise of their powers.

Every Senator knows that within a very short time there will be an Every Senator knows that within a very short time there will be an immense influx of strangers here to witness the inauguration of Governor Hayes. There are a great many reasons why this police force should be made more effective.

Mr. WITHERS. Is that the only reason why the Senator wants this measure acted upon?

Mr. INGALLS. That is one very important reason. There is a special reason, therefore, that this force should be made effective for the cial reason, therefore, that this force should be made ellective for the preservation of the property, the life, and the good order of this community that may not exist hereafter, and that has not existed herefore. It is especially important at this particular juncture; and as a quorum of the Senate is present, and it is immaterial to me whether this bill is voted up or down, I must insist that now is the appointed time, and that now is the day of grace. I hope the Senate will not postpone this matter until one o'clock to-morrow, but will vote upon

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill and message indicated by the Senator from Kansas.

Senator from Kansas.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not think it is necessory to take up the bill by a motion. Whenever a bill is returned to either House with the veto of the President, the Constitution provides that the question shall then be taken, whether the bill shall pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding; so that it does not require a vote of the Senate to take this bill up. It is before the Senate; and the only question is, shall the bill pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding; to the contrary notwithstanding?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that there a pending measure before the Senate, the Pacific Railroad bill.

Mr. INGALLS. That has been informally laid aside, by unanimous consent, to enable the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] to take the floor to-morrow morning. Therefore the business of the Senate is not in a condition that requires any motion. There is no business before the Senate to interfere with this, as that bill which was under consideration has been informally laid aside by unanimous consent. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that a motion is necessary to take it up.

Mr. INGALLS. Then I make that motion.

Mr. WRIGHT. Do I understand the Senator from Kansas to move to postpone the present and all prior orders in order to take up this measure?

Mr. INGALLS. All prior orders have been informally laid aside.
Mr. HAMLIN. The motion is to proceed to the consideration of this bill and the message of the President.

I move that the Senate proceed to the consid-

Mr. INGALLS. Yes. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the House bill No. 4350, and the accompanying message of Mr. WRIGHT. I do not want any motion which shall be carried by a majority to have the effect of displacing the pending order. If the temper of the Senate is to proceed to consider and vote upon the message of the President at this time, I do not want to be under-the temper of the Senate is to proceed to consider and vote upon the message of the President at this time, I do not want to be understood as standing in the way.

Mr. WEST. I presume that a decision of the Senate to take up this question at the present time, and then debate it, without coming to any conclusion this evening, would leave it the unfinished business for to-morrow. I should like to ask the Chair if that is the case.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not understand the Senator.

Mr. WEST. I say that the action of the Senate in taking up this measure at the present time and proceeding to its consideration without coming to any conclusion to-night, and adjourning or taking a recess thereon, would leave this bill the unfinished business to-morrow at the expiration of the morning hour.

Mr. INGALLS. If this bill is taken up and not finished at the adjournment this afternoon, I shall ask unanimous consent that it may not displace the pending order. I certainly shall give my consent as one, and shall ask the rest of the Senate to give their consent to it, that if this bill is not concluded this afternoon it may not displace the pending order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to postponing the present and all prior orders for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the bill and message?

Mr. WRIGHT. With the understanding that if this bill is not concluded to-day the railroad bill shall come up as the unfinished business to-morrow, I shall not object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be understood to be subject to a call for the regular order.

Mr. WRIGHT. The unanimous understanding now is that the railroad bill is to be the pending order if we do not get through with

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the District police bill shall be displaced and the pending order shall resume its place if that bill shall not be concluded before the time expires for a recess. If that be the understanding, the bill is before the Senate. The action of the House of Representatives and the message of the President will

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 30, 1877.

January 30, 1877.

The President of the United States having returned to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, the bill entitled "An act to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia," with his objections thereto, the House of Representatives proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the same, and it was *Resolved*, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

GEORGE M. ADAMS, Olerk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read. The CHIEF CLERK. The bill is in the following words:

An act to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

trict of Columbia.

Be it enacted, &c., That the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia is hereby abolished, and that the powers and duties now exercised by it, and the members thereof, are hereby transferred to the commissioners of the District of Columbia and their successors, who shall have authority to employ such officers and agents, and to adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry into execution the powers and duties imposed upon said board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia by avisting laws.

Mr. WRIGHT. I should like to have the message of the President

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To the House of Representatives :

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith House bill No. 4350, to abolish the board of commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia, without my approval.

It is my judgment that the police commissioners, while appointed by the Executive, should report to and receive instructions from the District commissioners. Under other circumstances than those existing at present I would have no objection to the entire abolition of the board and seeing the duties devolved directly upon the District commissioners. The latter should, in my opinion, have supervision and control over the acts of the police commissioners under any circumstances. But as recent events have shown that gross violations of law have existed in this District for years directly under the eyes of the police, it is highly desirable that the board of police commissioners should be continued, in some form, until the evil complained of is eradicated and until the police force is put on a footing to prevent, if possible, a recurrence of the evil. The board of police commissioners have recently been charged with the direct object of accomplishing this end.

Executive Mansion, January 23, 1877.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 23, 1877.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding? which question must be taken by yeas and nays. Mr. ALLISON. I should be glad to have the Senator from Kansas who has charge of this bill state some reason why this particular action should be had at this time. As I understand, the personnel of the police board has been entirely changed within the last few weeks, and it does seem to me that unless there is some special reason this police board should be independent of the action of the commissioners of the District of Columbia. I had occasion some years ago, in connection with other gentlemen of the Senate, to make an examconnection with other gentlemen of the Senate, to make an examination into this subject, and as a result of that examination we made a report establishing the present commissioners of the District of Columbia. We however did not disturb the then existing board of Metropolitan police. We found that this police board was originally organized by act of Congress and was made absolutely and entirely independent of the District government under its old organization. For nearly ten years this police service was maintained by the Government of the United States, and the police force was under the control of the United States and absolutely independent of the control of the District of Columbia. It was only by a device to increase the compensation of the police force that the District of Columbia was ever permitted or allowed to pay any portion of the crease the compensation of the police force that the District of Columbia was ever permitted or allowed to pay any portion of the expenses of the police force. Now, unless there is some reason that I have not yet heard, it seems to me that the police of this District should be under the absolute control of Congress and the President of the United States. There may be reasons that I do not know.

The Senator from Maryland says that in the new organization proposed the police service is absorbed within the new commission proposed by a bill which is recommended by a joint committee; but it seems to me as at present organized the police board ought to be an independent board. If we have not competent and careful men managing the police of this District I think it is the duty of the President and of the Senate to secure good men. I understand the men who have recently been appointed have been confirmed by this body. Therefore I should be glad to hear some reason why this board should Therefore I should be glad to hear some reason why this board should be abolished.

be abolished.

Mr. INGALLS. I have no reasons to give why the board should be abolished, or why it should not be abolished. It is immaterial to me whether it is abolished or not. The Senator does not seem to understand the attitude of this question. The bill abolishing the board of Metropolitan police has passed both Houses and was vetoed by the President. It has been sent to the Senate with the message of the President, the House having passed the bill by a two-thirds majority over the objections of the Executive. It has been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia to the Senate with the recommendation that it pass notwithstanding the objections of the President. If the Senator from Iowa does not agree to that he can vote against it. Those who do agree with it can vote in the affirmative. against it. Those who do agree with it can vote in the affirmative. I am not advocating either position; I am only saying that the matter ought to be determined one way or the other, and by each Senator upon his own individual judgment.

Mr. SARGENT. Is it the report of the committee that the bill should pass notwithstanding the objections of the President?

Mr. INGALLS. Notwithstanding the objections of the President.

Mr. SARGENT. Is that the report of the committee?

Mr. INGALLS. That is the recommendation of the committee.

Mr. INGALLS. That is the recommendation of the committee, Mr. SARGENT. Does the Senator speak for the committee? Mr. INGALLS. I do not.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I propose to sustain this veto because I believe the President of the United States has possession at this time of more information and more knowledge on this subject than I have, and probably more than any Senator in this body has. We can abolish the board at any time, if that step becomes necessary. I think it would be eminently wise on the part of this body to sustain the veto of the President and fail to pass this bill over his veto. One reason why I think the vote ought to be taken now is because there is a full Senate here, as I said before, a fuller Senate than we have had for several days past. I think it will be the sense of the members of the Senate present that the President's veto should be sustained, and that Senate present that the President's veto should be sustained, and that Senate present that the President's veto should be sustained, and that for the present generation we should not attempt to interfere with the police force of the District.

Mr. DAWES. I do not know that I understand the Senator from Iowa correctly, but I thought I understood him to say that the members of this police board had been confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know, on reflection, that it is necessary under the law to have them confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. DAWES. I wish to state to the Senator that the original board was appointed under a law which required a confirmation by the

Mr. DAWES. I wish to state to the Senator that the original board was appointed under a law which required a confirmation by the Senate. In the revision of the statutes accidentally the phrase "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate" was left out. When the trouble arose a few weeks since with the board, this accidental omission was discovered. The present board received their appointment without the confirmation of the Senate. The bill which we have passed correcting errors in the Revised Statutes restores that provision of the law, so that when that bill becomes a law—and I do not know whether it has yet been approved or not—these commissioners will not hold their offices in conformity with law. It will be necessary for them to be renominated and confirmed by the Senate the moment that bill becomes a law.

Mr. CONKLING. The moment the bill before us becomes a law?

Mr. CONKLING. The moment the bill before us becomes a law?

Mr. CONKLING. The moment the bill before us becomes a law?
Mr. DAWES. No; I refer to the bill correcting errors in the Revised Statutes. The exact stage that bill is in I am not able to say.
I do not myself desire to criticise the message of the President. My own opinion is that the whole government here should be under one head. I believe that, and I believe that the President's veto was simply at the time to accomplish what I understand has been accomplished in the way of an investigation and the correction of errors. This veto came in some weeks ago, and I understand all that has been accomplished; and I understand from the message itself that the opinion of the President is that if that was done it would be wise that there should be one head in the government of this District, which should be responsible for the peace and good order of the District. I shall vote, without having the slightest disposition to criticise the message of the President, for the bill, notwithstanding this veto, because I understand the veto merely to be that that board should not be abolished pending an investigation which is now concluded. After that investigation was over, as I infer from the message, everybody would be of the opinion that there should be one head. I know in some cities the experiment of a separate board has been tried. It is the case perhaps in the city of New York. If it is, then it is no example that commends itself specially to me; but I know it has been tried and failed in a good many other cities that have one governtried and failed in a good many other cities that have one government of the city for one purpose and another government for another. The more important of all is that the head, the executive, should command the police forces of the city. Responsible as that head is for the character of the city government, for the security and peace of the people and life and property, it seems to me that it should have control of the police. That consideration leads me to vote for

Mr. MERRIMON. I feel it my duty to say that it was the deliberate judgment of a majority of the Committee on the District of Columbia, that it is positively important that this bill should pass. Under the District government as it exists now, there are three or four heads; and very much of the confusion in the city and the police grows out of that fact. We have police commissioners, fire department commissioners, and a health board, I believe it is called. There are three or four heads to the government in the District of Columbia, and very much of the confusion that exists here grows out of that fact. As the Senator from Massachusetts has well remarked, it is all-As the Senator from Massachusetts has well remarked, it is allimportant that there should be a oneness about this government; and the sooner we can arrive at it the better. The police force are largely instrumental in executing the orders and ordinances of the city of Washington; and they ought to be under the direction, control, and command of the commissioners, through proper ordinances framed for that purpose.

In addition to all that, as a measure of economy this bill ought to pass. It would be a saving of several thousand dollars annually to the city and the Government, if the bill should pass.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will ask the Senator how much these commissions.

sioners get per annum.

Mr. WHYTE. Three thousand five hundred dollars.

Mr. MERRIMON. It is a saving to the Government of several thousand dollars.

Mr. SHERMAN. I refer to the police commissioners. Do they get

Mr. MERRIMON. They are paid.
Mr. ALLISON. They get a per diem.
Mr. MERRIMON. It is a saving of three or four thousand dollars a year. Again, the Senator from Massachusetts has said truly that the principal ground on which the President vetoed the bill is out of the way. The investigation which he desired to take place has taken place, and I doubt exceedingly if the matter were before him now that he would veto the bill.

Mr. LOGAN. When we start out wrong the only way to do is to correct the error as soon as possible. A few years ago the question came up as to the organization of the city government, providing a governor with an immense staff and all the paraphernalia of a great man, and "the pride, pomp, and circumstance" of war. I opposed it on the ground that it was unconstitutional, but some of the great lights of this parion concluded that I was too small a way to talk lights of this nation concluded that I was too small a man to talk about constitutionality. There was the error in the start of this thing. We started out wrong, and we are like a man who starts out to swear a lie and has to tell a thousand to keep himself straight on to swear a lie and has to tell a thousand to keep himself straight on the record. That is the difficulty on this question now. Two or three years ago Congress started to do that which the Constitution did not authorize them to do, and they have been in trouble ever since. There has been investigation after investigation; there have been charges of fraud and everything else, because you did not let the city government remain as it was. It was in good shape, in good condition, and went along all right, and there was no trouble. It had a mayor and a council, and got along as other cities did; but from that day to this, day after day, experience has shown the want of wisdom in the legislation which changed the organization of the political system here in this city.

I am in favor of the President's veto. I am in favor of it for two or three reasons: First, because I think his examination of this question probably is greater than our own. I think that he understands tion probably is greater than our own. I think that he understands it better, perhaps, than we do. Second, I desire this city government to remain as it is until Congress shall come back to the original proposition, that they have no right to make a Territory out of this District or to govern it in any way except according to the provisions of the Constitution. Until Congress agrees to do that and puts it back to its original position, where it ought to be and where it was for years upon years without trouble, I am in favor of keeping the condition just as it is precisely.

Another reason is this: What benefit are you to derive from changing one board of police commissioners and transferring the power to another board? What advantage is that to be to the city or the community of people composing it or surrounding it? Is it any advantage? Are the District commissioners any better than the men who may be appointed by the President? Have they not enough to take charge of now? The power of these commissioners is to regulate and organize the police of the city. I think a police commission is necessary in this city. I think it absolutely necessary to organize and arrange and have an organization of policemen here and a board to regulate the affairs of this city. I do not know whether this commission is the right one or whether another commission would be better. It does not make any difference to me. The party who are mission is the right one or whether another commission would be better. It does not make any difference to me. The party who appoints them is responsible for it, and the President appointing this board is responsible for the board himself, whether it be the old board or the new board. I believe in holding somebody responsible for the regulation of the police of the city of Washington, and I think the President had as well be held responsible as anybody else. In vetoing this bill the President says to us that he is in favor of retaining the commission, not the individuals, but the commission as a body. The law authorizes him to appoint whom he pleases, and he is responsible for it. He is to be responsible to Congress for the appointment of the men who hold the office.

The question of economy is suggested by my friend from North

The question of economy is suggested by my friend from North Carolina. He certainly has a right to suggest it, for if there is any man in this Chamber in favor of economy, he is one, and he is entitled to great credit for it. The only thing that he is not economical in is in his use of words in this Chamber. In every other respect he is economical. But I differ with him in reference to this particular question. I think that we ought to sustain the President on this bill. I will say that I have not examined the bill; I know very little about it; but on general principles I think the President is right. On general principles, I think there ought to be a board such as is established eral principles, I think there ought to be a board such as is established here in the city, and that that board ought not to be abolished until the Congress of the United States agrees to abolish all of these boards and re-organize this city according to the Constitution of the United States. Until that is done, I am opposed to any change whatever in reference to the machinery of the city government. We should agree to change it and wipe out all this machinery and put it back to where it was when we had a city government that was respected by somebody at least. Since that time we have had one respected by nobody. I am in favor of keeping; it in the present condition for the present body at least. Since that time we have had one respected by nobody. I am in favor of keeping it in the present condition for the present, and therefore I shall vote to sustain the President's veto.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to say just one word in reference to this bill. I shall vote to sustain the veto. I should have liked very much if my friend from Kansas, who reported the bill from the committee, had stated to us fully the grounds upon which the committee made the report and also advised us as to his own views and opinions as to the propriety of the President vetoing this message at this time; but I shall vote to sustain the veto for the reasons I stated.

In the first place I wish to suggest to my friend from Massachu.

In the first place, I wish to suggest to my friend from Massachuatt I think he labors under a very great mistake in assuming that I think he labors under a very great mistake in assuming that this investigation has closed. I understand that the investigation has in fact just commenced; that the charges are preferred, and that they are now about entering upon the investigation. Sofar from the investigation being concluded, they are just about entering upon it; and for that reason the ground which he states is entirely without foundation. out foundation.

I have conversed and conferred with many of the very best citizens in this city, and, as far as I learn, there is but one opinion among them, and that is, in order to hold the bad men in this city by the throat and to do what is best for the interests of this city and its morals, this police board ought to be continued. I shall therefore vote for doing that, because of this investigation now in progress just commenced.

vote for doing that, because of this investigation now in progress just commenced.

I shall vote for sustaining the President's veto also for another reason. The Senator from Maryland stated that the matter of the city government had been under consideration by a committee. Whether they have or have not reported I do not know, nor is it material. It is sufficient that there has been no action on that report. I think we ought to leave matters in statu quo, at least until we act on that report, and not interfere by piecemeal with the different organizations of this city. I think it is better to leave things as they are until we take the whole thing up and give the city either a new city government or determine that we shall not. I believe with the Senator from Illinois, that we ought to have this board or some such board in this city. I believe it is better that we should leave it with the citizens here who have been appointed by the President, who are residents, who are identified with the interests of the city, who know what is wanted, who know what is best for the police force of the city, rather than transfer the power to an organization a majority of whom are taken from persons outside of the city, as is proposed by this repealing bill. I do not understand that there is any objection to these police commissioners, but that they are among the very best and most responsible and worthy citizens in this city; they are identified with its interests and have been for years, and they will take hold of this matter with an earnest determination, with a purpose and with an ability in their hands to discharge their duties well, and that they will investigate this matter and give to this city such a police as it ought to have if it has not got it now. So far from the President's veto being construed as the Senator from Massachusetts construes it, that the necessity for this board has ceased because the investigation has ceased, I do not understand the message in such a way, nor do I understand that the facts warrant it.

Mr. MERRIMON. I stated that the principal ground upon which the committee proceeded in recommending the passage of this bill over the veto of the President was the impossibility of concentrating the power exercised in administering the government of the District of Columbia. We know that it has numerous heads. There are three or four different departments of the government, each independent of the other, and each coming constantly in conflict with the other. If we know anything we know that those who make the ordinances and who chiefly rule the city ought to have control of the police. The police execute the ordinances of the city; they execute in some measure the orders issued by the District commissioners, and they ought to be directly responsible to the commissioners. As it is, they are in a large measure independent of them. They obey the police commissioners' orders rather than the commissioners who rule the city. The police are independent of the commissioners who rule the city. The police are independent of the commissioners who rule the city. They are independent of those who make ordinance to protect the peace, liberty, and property of the people. They are not responsible to obey their orders, but do it when they will, and there is a constant conflict of authority that ought to be suppressed and at the earliest possible moment. The President himself recognizes the investment of this year thing for he says: importance of this very thing, for he says:

It is my judgment that the police commissioners, while appointed by the Executive, should report to and receive instructions from the District commissioners. Under other circumstances than those existing at present I would have no objection to the entire abolition of the board and seeing the duties devolved directly upon the District commissioners. The latter should, in my opinion, have supervision and control over the acts of the police commissioners under any circumstance. But, as recent events have shown that gross violations of law have existed in this District for years directly under the eyes of the police, it is highly desirable that the beard of police commissioners should be continued in some form until the evil complained of is eradicated, and until the police force is put on a footing to prevent, if possible, a recurrence of the evil.

The President himself recognizes the importance of a change of the laws regulating this District in this very particular, and he says that when the present emergency shall have passed it will be wise to abolish this board. At all events he suggests that he would have no objection to it then. Therefore I may venture to say to the Senator from Massachusetts that the reasons which moved him to desire the delay of passing a bill of this character do not exist at this moment. The examination which he desired should take place has taken place and there is no longer any reason existing in the view that he presented to Congress why the board of police commissioners should continue

Mr. LOGAN. Before the gentleman takes his seat I should like to ask him one question. I know I exhibit my ignorance of this matter in talking about it, for I have not examined it very closely. I should like to ask the Senator whether in the organization of govenough like to ask the Senator whether in the organization of government, a city government, State government, or county government, of any character whatever, it is not well generally to organize it from the citizens who reside within the jurisdiction?

Mr. MERRIMON. I am very frank to say to the Senator that I think so. I think it would be very wise and well. I do not concur in much of the legislation that has been had in reference to the District of Columbic.

trict of Columbia.

Mr. LOGAN. I should like to ask the Senator a further question. Are not this board of police commissioners the only officers of the District of Columbia connected with the city government who have a location, a residence, a citizenship in this city?

Mr. MERRIMON. I am not able to answer that question.

Mr. LOGAN. I merely ask if that is not the fact?
Mr. MERRIMON. I do not know what the fact is.
Mr. LOGAN. One of the District commissioners, I think, lives in Ohio; one of them lives in New York, and the other one lives I do

Mr. MERRIMON. The wisdom of Congress, however, led it to pass the law providing for those very commissioners. I am not sure that I as a member of the Senate approved of that course; but it is the law. The point here is to concentrate the power by which the government of the District of Columbia is administered. The commissioners of the District make the ordinances in great part which control the people of the city and protect their lives and their property, and the policemen are essential to execute their orders. The police are not under the direction and control of the District commissioners, but are more or less independent of them; and hence the disorders which we have witnessed.

Mr. LOGAN .. I will ask the Senator this further question, whether he does not think the control of the police force would be as likely to be calculated to protect persons and property where it was under the control of the citizens of the District as where it was under the control of foreign residents?

Mr. MERRIMON. I am willing to concede that; but that does not go to the merits of the objection which I make. Perhaps I would be more than willing to see the commissioners who now compose the board of police commissioners administering the government of the city; I do not know how that would be; but if they did administer the government of the city they ought to have control of the police, the power by which the city is regulated, in order that it may be done

Mr. LOGAN. I ask the Senator whether it would not be better to hold this thing in statu quo until a law shall be passed by which the partment in this city.

citizens of this District may have something to do with their own

Mr. MERRIMON. The prospect is that any such law will not be assed soon. We have had considerable experience on that subject, passed soon. and have found great difficulty in agreeing upon any law. It has been stated, not only by myself but by others, that the police force of this city is in a state of disorder. There is a condition of affairs in the administration of the city government that is lamentable.

Mr. LOGAN. I will say to the Senator, then, that if the organization of this city government is not in a symple way it is the fault of

Mr. LOGAN. I will say to the Senator, then, that if the organization of this city government is not in a proper way it is the fault of Congress, and certainly is not the fault of the citizens.

Mr. MERRIMON. That may be. I do not reflect on the citizens of the District. It is to be deplored that there is no efficient local government here. We ought to remedy existing evils as fast as we can; and if there be the presence of a grave evil here, which the President himself recognizes in his message, it seems to me Congress ought not to hesitate one moment to apply that remedy as far as it will go.

will go.

Mr. DAWES. I want to be understood as finding no fault with the board of police commissioners. As at present constituted as far as I know they are honorable men. There is no more security, howas I know they are nonorable men. There is no more security, however, that the police commissioners will be residents of this District than there is that the District commissioners will be residents of it. They can be appointed by the President, and until we change the law they can be taken, even without the consent of the Senate concurring in their appointment, from any part of the United States. All that is required is that they shall be citizens of the United States. But it so becomes that they are a received to force I have But it so happens that they are an excellent board so far as I know.

I want to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the remark of the President, to see what it does mean. I believe the Senator is mistaken when he thinks I have drawn a wrong inference from The President says:

It is my judgment that the police commissioners, while appointed by the Executive, should report to and receive instructions from the District commissioners. Under other circumstances than those existing at present—

And he tells what those are clearly, this investigation-Under other circumstances than those existing at present, I would have no objection to the entire abolition of the board and seeing the duties devolved directly upon the District commissioners.

I infer from that language, subject however to correction by the Senator from I was, if I am mistaken, that the President was in favor of the measure except that pending an investigation he thought it not wise to break it up. My information does not exactly concur with that of the Senator from I was about the state of the investigawith that of the Senator from Iowa about the state of the investigation. I do not know except what the papers inform me, and the papers inform me that the chief of police has been restored to his duty, and two detectives who were charged with some offense have been restored to their duty, and that the police commissioners have gone about their duty, and so far as there is any outward appearance the investigation has stopped. There is nothing at all left of the investigation that I know of. The men who were accused by that member of the board who disappeared from the board have been restored by this commission to their duty, and so far as I have observed nothing further is concerned. I am in favor of having one government, and not two. I am not in favor of dual governments anywhere, least of all in the matter of police. I have no choice myself and care nothing all in the matter of police. I have no choice myself and care nothing about it, but the idea of keeping up a dual government here is as absurd as it is in Louisiana.

Mr. ALLISON. I entirely differ from my friend from Massachu-Mr. ALLISON. I entirely differ from my friend from Massachusetts with reference to this police board. It in no sense constitutes a dual government. The duties enjoined on this board are duties fixed by statute and fixed by statute long before the present commissioners of the District of Columbia were provided for. The police board has always been independent of the city government, and my distinguished friend participated in the making of the law which originally established the police board and when it was made independent of the District or city government; and for ten years, I think—perhaps not quite so long—the Government of the United States paid the entire expense of this police board and the police establishment when all the other expenses of the District were paid by taxation upon the District, thus showing that in its organization and inception it was intended that the Government should exercise absoinception it was intended that the Government should exercise absolute control over it for the purpose of protecting its own property and public buildings and grounds in this District.

So far from its being economical to abolish this board, I want to ask my friend from North Carolina if the District commissioners will not be obliged to substantially establish a board of District police. Are these District commissioners, with their manifold duties, to go about this city seeing that order is preserved here and there, and that vices are suppressed here and there? The board of District commissioners to-day have supreme authority in this District, save and except authority over the police and over the health of the District. They exercise full and plenary powers with that exception. The other organizations in this District are subordinate organizations to the commissioners of the District; yet they exist and they have expensive machinery as the Senator from North Carolina will find if he examines into that machinery. The fire department is a department subordinate to the District commissioners. It is not an independent deordinate to the District commissioners. It is not an independent de-

Therefore we do not reduce the number of officers in any sense. This police board was intended to be composed of the best citizens of Their compensation is limited by law to $250 per annum.

Mr. MERRIMON. May I ask my friend a question?
Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.
Mr. MERRIMON. Is it not manifest, taking what he says to be true so far as the principle goes, that the police ought to be under the direction and control of the power that makes the ordinances for and rules the city?

Mr. ALLISON. Congress thought very differently when they es tablished the board of police, because they expressly provided that it should be independent of the control of the city authorities of the District, and I can see no reason why this board, under the authority given by statute, cannot enforce the ordinances of the city. They have authority to do so.

I care nothing about this matter, but it seems to me that if we are ever to have a government here different from the one we now have we had better revise it all at the same time. The District commiswe had better revise it all at the same time. The District commissioners when they were established by law were intended to be temporary. In the very terms of the law creating that organization it was provided that it should be temporary; but that law still stands, and the Senator from Maryland and other Senators have been engaged in providing a permanent form of government for this District. Now let us permit these different boards to exist until some established form of government is provided for by law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill notwithstanding the objections of the President of the United States on which the year and navs will be called.

States, on which the yeas and nays will be called.

The vote being taken by yeas and nays, resulted-yeas 33, nays 22; as follows:

AS IOHOWS:

YEAS—Messrs. Alcorn, Barnum, Blaine, Bogy, Booth, Chaffee, Cockrell, Cooper, Davis, Dawes, Dennis, Eaton, Goldthwaite, Hamilton, Hamlin, Hereford, Johnston, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kelly, Kernan, McCreery, McDonald, Maxey, Merrimon, Norwood, Robertson, Stevenson, Teller, Wadleigh, Wallace, Whyte, and Withers—33.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Bruce, Burnside, Christiancy, Clayton, Conkling, Conover, Cragin, Ferry, Hitchcock, Ingalls, Logan, McMillan, Mitchell, Paddock, Patterson, Sargent, Sherman, Spencer, West, Windom, and Wright—22.

ABSENT—Messrs. Anthony, Bailey, Bayard, Boutwell, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Cameron of Wisconsin, Dorsey, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Harvey, Howe, Morrill, Morton, Oglesby, Randolph, Ransom, Saulsbury, Sharon, and Thurman—20.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the passage of this bill the yeas are 33 and the nays are 22. Two-thirds of the Senators not voting for the same, the bill is not passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

Mr. WRIGHT. I ask that the Senate resume the consideration of the railroad bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order is Senate bill No.

Mr. CONKLING. I move that Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session, the doors were re-opened, and (at four o'clock and fortyfive minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess till ten o'clock a. m., Wednesday, February 7.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

* THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

[CALENDAR DAY, February 6.]

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the Honse re-assembled at ten o'clock a. m., (Tuesday, February 6.)

Mr. WADDELL. I move that the House take a further recess until five minutes to twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at ten o'clock and one minute a. m.) the House took a recess until eleven o'clock and fiftyfive minutes a. m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House re-assembled at eleven o'clock and fifty-five minutes a. m.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

On motion of Mr. BLOUNT, by unanimous consent, the bill (S. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing and binding for the current fiscal year was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, with leave to report at any time.

SAND-BAR AT NEWTOWN CREEK.

Mr. BLISS, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4592) to provide for the removal of the sand-bar at Newtown Creek, between Brooklyn and Long Island City, in the State of New York, where it empties into the East River, so that vessels of greater tonnage may navigate said stream for the greater facility of commerce; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PRESBYTERIAN CONGREGATION, SAINT AUGUSTINE, FLORIDA.

Mr. FINLEY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4593) granting to the trustees of the Presbyterian congregation in Saint Augustine, Florida, a lot of land on which to erect a church building and parsonage; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME, INDIANA.

Mr. HAYMOND, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4594) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to exempt from customs duty a tabernacle and accompanying articles imported for the use of the University of Notre Dame, Indiana; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed. ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. KNOTT. I rise to submit a privileged report from the Committee on the Judiciary. We report back, with a recommendation that it do pass, the resolution referred to us yesterday, and which I ask the Clerk to read, and upon it I ask the previous question.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved. That the rules of the House be, and hereby are, so amended that, pending the counting of the electoral vote and when the House is not required to be engaged thereon, it shall, on assembling each calendar day after recess and every preceding day, proceed at and after twelve o'clock m. with its business as though the legislative day had expired by adjournment.

Mr. COX. I do not object to the consideration of the resolution, but I desire to make a point of order upon it.

Mr. KNOTT. I would state that the resolution now reported is substantially similar to the one which was discussed yesterday.

Mr. COX. I rise to a point of order. I do not antagonize the resolution, but I would like to state my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX. It is perhaps rather in the nature of a parliamentary suggestion.

suggestion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would state to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] that if he desires to address the House upon the subject of this matter, the gentleman from Kentucky should yield temporarily for that purpose.

Mr. KNOTT. I made the report with the impression that the House desired the earliest possible action on the resolution. If it does not, let the report be withdrawn.

PRAYER.

The SPEAKER. The hour of twelve o'clock having arrived, the Chair desires that business be suspended for a moment, and asks unanimous consent that the Chaplain be allowed to offer prayer. No objection was made, and prayer was offered by Rev. I. L. Town-SEND, Chaplain of the House.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. HALE. Before any debate ensues upon the resolution reported

Mr. HALE. Before any debate ensues upon the resolution reported by the gentleman from Kentucky I wish to reserve points of order.
Mr. KNOTT. I withdraw the report.
Mr. COX. I object to the withdrawal.
Mr. HALE. It can be withdrawn, of course.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky has that right.
Mr. COX. Not when the resolution is already before the House.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] rose to a point of order to object to the reception of the report.
Mr. HALE. The gentleman from Kentucky has withdrawn it, and

Mr. HALE. The gentleman from Kentucky has withdrawn it, and it is not now before the House.

Mr. O'BRIEN. It was read from the Clerk's desk, and therefore it cannot be withdrawn.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I understand that the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary reported back the resolution offered yesterday; I thought at first that it was a different resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair from following the resolution understands that it is exactly the same resolution that was yesterday referred.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. But it was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary for their opinion upon it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state to the gentleman from Iowa that the report has been withdrawn.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Whatever report comes from the Committee on the Judiciary on this question should go to the Committee on

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky has withdrawn the report and it is not now before the House.

Mr. COX. I object to the withdrawal of it, and make the point of order that the report cannot be withdrawn after being brought before the House and read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes the point. of order that the gentleman from Kentucky has no right to withdraw the report, and the Chair overrules the point of order, and refers the gentleman to the Manuel, page 32, under the heading of "Withdrawal of Motions."

Mr. COX. - I was about to make a parliamentary inquiry, whether or not an amendment of the rules does not require the consideration of the Committee on Rules. I do not want to oppose the resolution. The SPEAKER. The understanding yesterday was that this resolution should be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire touching the effect it might have upon the law. The Chair therefore thinks that the resolution is properly before the Committee on the Judiciary now.

Mr. CLYMER. It was withdrawn, was it not?
The SPEAKER. It was withdrawn.
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. All right.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALDRON. I move that the rules be suspended and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the deficiency appropriation bill; and pending that motion I move that all general debate upon the bill be closed in five minutes.

Mr. MONROE. I understand that the bill is not yet printed.

The SPEAKER. The bill is printed.

Mr. CAULFIELD. I ask the gentleman from Michigan to withdraw his untiperfore a propent so that I may make a privileged redraw his motion for a moment, so that I may make a privileged report which is very brief.

Mr. WALDRON. I must insist upon my motion.
The question was taken on the motion to close debate in five min-

The question was taken on the motion to close debate in five minutes; and it was agreed to.

The question was then taken on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union; and it was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. EDEN in the chair,) and proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. All general debate upon this bill is closed in five minutes by order of the House.

Mr. WALDRON. I desire to state briefly that this bill appropriates the sum of $1,417,216.46, and that the two items which form the bulk of this appropriation are an appropriation of $500,000 for deficiency in the Navy and an appropriation of $217,000 which it becomes necessary to appropriate under the law of August last granting compensation to soldiers who have lost their limbs. That law provides that every soldier who has lost a limb in the service shall be entitled once in five years to a new limb, or commution therefor, and entitled once in five years to a new limb, or commution therefor, and it becomes necessary this year to expend under the provisions of the law the sum of $264,000. The appropriation for this purpose is $52,000, making a deficiency of $112,000. If any information be desired in regard to other items of the bill, I will endeavor to give it. I now ask that the first and formal reading of the bill be dispensed

' Mr. WHITTHORNE. Before that motion is put, will the gentle-man from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] allow me to ask him to explain how and in what manner this deficiency in the pay of the Navy oc-

The CHAIRMAN. General debate is limited to five minutes.

Mr. BLOUNT. You can get that information in the debate under

Mr. BLOUNT. You can get that information in the debate under the five-minute rule.

Mr. WALDRON. I will say that the estimate of the Secretary of the Navy for the expenses of his Department was for $7,300,000, and the amount appropriated was $5,750,000, being less by $1,550,000 than the amount asked by the Secretary. In lieu of that the Committee on Appropriations have been willing to allow a deficiency of but $500,000, which in their opinion is the largest amount which should be given be given.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I did not hear fully the explanation made by the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. WALDRON,] and I do not suppose that any one near me heard it, on account of the confusion in the

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan will suspend until order is obtained. [After a pause.] The gentleman from Michigan order is obtained. [After a pause.] The gentleman from Michigan will now proceed.

Mr. WALDRON. In reply to the inquiry of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WHITTHORNE] I stated that the estimate of the Secretary of the Navy for the expenses of the current fiscal year, submitted at the last session of Congress, was $7,300,000, and the amount appropriated at the last session was $5,750,000. In other words Congress at its last session appropriated $1,550,000 less than the amount asked for by the Secretary of the Navy. The Secretary of the Navy now asks to have incorporated in this deficiency an appropriation of $1.550,000, and the Committee on Appropriations have inserted an now asks to have incorporated in this deficiency an appropriation of $1,550,000, and the Committee on Appropriations have inserted an appropriation of $500,000, which in their judgment is the proper amount to be appropriated.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I think the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] did not fully understand my question. I want to know for what particular account or what particular deficiency this $500,000 is to be used.

Mr. WALDRON. The deficiency is in the item of pay for the Navy.

Mr. HALE. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HALE. As we are proceeding under the five-minute rule, the

Mr. HALE. As we are proceeding under the five-minute rule, the time for general debate having been exhausted, I would inquire if there is any amendment pending before the committee?

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment is pending.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WHITTHORNE] vas making an inquiry of the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. Wal-

Mr. HALE. That is why I wish to have the business conducted in a proper manner. Of course any gentleman can discuss this bill for a proper manner. Of course any gentleman can discuss this bill for five minutes upon an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question really before the committee is the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] that the first and formal reading of the bill in Committee of the Whole be dispensed with, and that it be read by paragraphs for amendment. If there be no objection that will be the order.

There was no objection.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill by paragraphs for amendment, and read the following:

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

For pay of officers and men of the Navy, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $500,000.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I move to substitute for the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the following:

That the accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the accounts of the officers of the Navy on the active list whose pay has been affected by the general order of the Secretary of the Navy No. 216, since the 1st day of September, 1876, on the basis of waiting-orders pay; and such sum as may be necessary to make up the difference between the furlough and waiting-orders pay of such officers is hereby appropriated for that purpose out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

That section 1442 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby reposed.

is hereby, repealed.

That no officer of the Navy shall be placed on furlough, except at his own request or by sentence of court-martial; and all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raise the point of order upon that amendment that it proposes to change existing law and is not in the interest of

I hope the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. HOLMAN] will not insist upon that point of order. amendment is evidently in the right direction, and has been fully considered by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HOLMAN. I must insist upon my point of order.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I think if I had time to argue with my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] I could show him that his point of order is not well taken

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the point

Mr. WHITTHORNE. If I understand it, the point of order made Mr. WHITTHORNE. If I understand it, the point of order made by the gentleman is that this proposed amendment changes existing law. In the opinion of the Committee on Naval Affairs the amendment which I have submitted is in harmony with the existing law of the land, and the Secretary of the Navy, when he issued his order No. 216, transcended the existing law of the land. The object of this amendment is to put the pay of the Navy back in harmony with its usages, in harmony with the customs prevailing therein, and in harmony with the law of the land as it existed at the time of the passage of the appropriation bill of the last session.

mony with the law of the land as it existed at the time of the passage of the appropriation bill of the last session.

To be sure there is upon the face of the amendment apparently a change or repeal of section 1542 of the Revised Statutes. But in my opinion at least, and also in the opinion of other members of the Committee on Naval Affairs, that section of the Revised Statutes was in violation of the then law of the land, and ought never to have been included in the Revised Statutes; it was not a part of the law. been included in the Revised Statutes; it was not a part of the law of the land at the time.

Mr. CLYMER. I would suggest to the gentleman that the point of order is not only that the amendment changes existing law, but that it is not in the interest of economy. I would like to hear the gentleman on that point.

Mr. BLOUNT. By the permission of the gentleman from Tennessee
[Mr. Whitthorne] I would say that I hope my friend from Penn-

Mr. CLYMER. I wish to hear the opinion of the gentleman from Tennessee upon the point of economy.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Upon that point I have to say that if, as a matter of right, as a matter of justice, as a matter of equity, this pay is due the servants of the Republic, the servants of the Government, then it resolves itself simply into a question of postponing that justice and that equity. I cannot now go into the argument whether this is justly due or not to these servants of the Republic. But whether we pass it to-day or not, the time will come when this Government will be just to its officers and to its agents who, by a strange construction of the law, by a revival of what was obsolete, have been subjected to of the law, by a revival of what was obsolete, have been subjected to what amounts to a disgrace to those officers of the Navy who are affected by the General Orders No. 216 of the Secretary of the Navy. It is not a question of economy; it is at this moment a question of duty. The question of economy does not enter into consideration at all. I trust the Chair will overrule the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is that the amendment proposes a change of existing law and is not in the interest of economy. The rule, as the Chair understands, which has been observed heretofore is that, unless the Chair can see from the provisions of the proposed change of law that it is in the interest of economy, the point of order must be sustained. This amendment proposes to repeal a section of the Revised Statutes, and it also provides that no furlough shall be granted to a naval officer except at his own request. Now, as these provisions certainly change the existing law and as it is impossible for the Chair to see that the proposed amendment is in the interest of economy, the Chair holds that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Very well, then; by permission of the Chair, I will withdraw so much of the amendment as is embraced in sections 2 and 3; and the remainder of the proposition I submit as an amendment.

Mr. HALE. The gentleman clearly has the right to modify his amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be reported as now proposed.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the accounts of the officers of the Navy on the active list whose pay has been affected by the general order of the Secretary of the Navy, No. 216, since the 1st day of September, 1876, on the basis of waiting-orders pay; and such sum as may be necessary to make up the difference between the furlough and waiting-orders pay of such officers is hereby appropriated for that purpose out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. HARRIS.]

Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman—
Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to insist on the point of order against this amendment.

amendment.

Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts. I address myself to the point of order. It is claimed that this is a change of existing law. Now, Mr. Chairman, by order No. 216, issued last year in consequence of the deficiency of the appropriation, the Secretary of the Navy was obliged to put upon furlough many officers of the Navy on the lowest possible pay. Those officers are now entitled to waiting-orders pay. In the appropriation of last year there is a deficiency of the amount necessary to give these officers waiting-orders pay; and the amendment sary to give these officers waiting-orders pay; and the amendment which is now offered is designed to supply that deficiency. That is its scope; nothing more. These officers are entitled by law to the pay provided for in this amendment; and I think it cannot be properly said to be a change of existing law.

Mr. BLOUNT. It will be observed that in this bill we propose to appropriate $500,000 as a deficiency for the Navy Department, and with the amount already appropriated for the current year, I think gentlemen ought to be satisfied that this will be enough to cover the whole deficiency, furlough pay and all; so that it does not make any difference whether the point of order is sustained or not.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. The point of order comes too late anyhow. The Chair had recognized me.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have pressed the point of order from the beginning against this proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. After the point of order of the gentleman from Indiana had been sustained the amendment was modified by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. HOLMAN. I then renewed my point of order.
Mr. WHITTHORNE. I was upon the floor, had been recognized by you, Mr. Chairman, and it was too late to raise the point of order.
The CHAIRMAN. What is the point of order of the gentleman from Indiana upon the amendment as modified?
Mr. HOLMAN. That this is in fact a change of existing law and is not a measure of retrenglment.

is not a measure of retrenchment.

Mr. SPRINGER. I would like to speak to the point of order.
Mr. WHITTHORNE. The point of order comes too late, I insist.
Mr. SPRINGER. Is the point of order entertained as being in time?
Mr. HOLMAN. I made it, Mr. Chairman, at the very instant that this modification was read.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I was upon the floor and the gentleman from Indiana could not obtain the floor to make the point of order.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] rise?

Mr. MILLS. I rise for the purpose of discussing the question before the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the point of order raised by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MILLS. I trust that the gentleman from Indiana will withdraw his point of order and permit this amendment to be voted upon. At the last session it was charged upon the party which the gentleman from Indiana had the honor to lead in this House that they were cutting down the appropriations to such an extent that the officers of the Government could not be supported. He repelled that charge then made against his party. The law which was then reported and passed by the party which he led, and of which I am an humble member, has in its execution been so administered by the head of the Navy Department that officers of the Navy have been deprived of the enjoyment of the salaries intended to be awarded to them under the law. It is our duty as a party to see that these officers do not suffer, whether this arises from a misconstruction of the law or otherwise. That question it is not in our mouths to discuss. It is our duty to see that an appropriation is made to pay the officers of the Navy.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is still willing to hear gentlemen on the point of order.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I insist the point of order was not made in me—that it came too late.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds the point of order made by the gentleman from Indiana was made in time, as the amendment had just been read and no debate had taken place.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to say a word in regard to the point of order. I do not understand, Mr. Chairman, this is a change of existing law. It is a change of an order issued by one of the Departments of the Government, a change in the construction that officer put upon an act of Congress and not any change of what was intended when the law was passed by the two Houses of Congress. The amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee simply proposes to construe the act of Congress in accordance with what was the intention of this House when the law was passed at the last session. It is this and nothing

Mr. HALE. I wish the gentleman from Illinois would tell the committee where the head of the Navy Department made this misapplication of the law. I understand the gentleman to state that the head of the Navy Department made a misapplication of the law or rather perverted the meaning of Congress in the official order to which reference is made. I wish he would tell the House in what that misapplication consists application consists.

The only question before the committee is the The CHAIRMAN.

The CHAIRMAN. The only question before the committee is the point of order.

Mr. HALE. I refer to a statement made by the gentleman from Illinois in discussing the point of order as to the perversion of the intention of Congress in the order issued by the Secretary of the Navy. If my question is not answered now, I hope it will be before this debate is ended. I want the gentleman to state where the misapplication of law is tion of law is

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Tennessee is much more familiar with this whole subject than I am, and I have no doubt he will make a full statement of the case when the amendment comes up for argument.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not in order now to discuss that point, as the only question before the House is the point of order raised by the gentleman from Indiana. In the judgment of the Chair, the amendment moved by the gentleman from Tennessee does not propose to repeal any law but merely to supply a deficiency of appropriation under the law as it now exists, and he therefore holds the amendment to be in order.

amendment to be in order.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Have I the floor?
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is entitled to the floor for five minutes in favor of his amendment.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Mr. Chairman, at the proper time I will most likely, unless another gentleman should do so, move to reduce the amount named here, but for the present—

Mr. BLOUNT. What does the gentleman propose?

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I propose to reduce this sum, but I do not say how much.

say how much.

But for the present I will consider the merits of the proposition submitted by myself, and have to remark to gentleman on this floor that it has the unanimous approval of the Committee on Naval Affairs.

But I do not propose now to enter into the discussion of the propriety of this amendment in any partisan point of view. I have simply to state, Mr. Chairman, that I believe the House of Representatives at its last session was misled in passing the appropriation bill by the term made use of "waiting-orders pay." In the uneducated mind probably of the House or of the country, the belief was that furlough pay and leave pay were one and the same thing.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman does not mean to say we did not know better than that.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. If the gentleman pushes me to the wall I will state that I believe the gentleman from Georgia himself did not know better, because I so apprehended from the remarks he made at the time, and the table which he submitted to the House. Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection of course to the gentleman's estimate of my remarks, but we did know at that time what we intended to do.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. By reference to the gentleman's remarks at that time and the table he submitted, it will be seen by the House, as it is seen by the country, that table did not include furlough pay; as it is seen by the country, that table did not inclide furlough pay; and according to the common accepation of the term, furlough pay and leave pay would be regarded as the same. But what is furlough pay? Furlough pay in the Navy has been regarded as a badge of disgrace and a punishment. The House of Representatives at its last session did not mean, therefore, to put into the hands of the Secretary of the Navy the power to degrade and punish at his will the entire Navy, for so he could do if his construction of the section of the law 1542 was correct. He could put every officer of the Navy poon furlough pay. upon furlough pay.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Certainly.

Mr. WHITTHOENE. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. What does he suppose the Secretary of the Navy would be obliged to do, if Congress should so vote to give him only $1,000,000 for the pay of the Navy? What does he suppose the Secretary of the Navy would be obliged to do but put the officers upon the smallest pay duty he could find?

Mr. WHITTHORNE. The Secretary of the Navy ought to make in that case the distribution of his pay just and equal among the officers of the Navy. Mr. HALE.

Would not it result in nine-tenths of them going on the lowest pay?

Mr. WHITTHORNE. If the Secretary of the Navy had intended to be just in that regard he would have been to all the officers of the Navy and pay them as far as the pay authorized by Congress would go, and would then have come and made a clear statement to Con-

Mr. HALE. Presented a deficiency.
Mr. WHITTHORNE. But, sir, look at this question—that of furlough pay—for one moment, how unjust it is. I have in my mind's eye now a warrant officer of the Navy whose leave pay would be $700 a year and whose furlough pay is $350. I take another officer, a commissioned officer of the Navy, whose furlough pay is but $1,000. That is insufficient to pay either one of them, and I protest for and on behalf of Congress that they did not mean this injustice to the officers of the Navy of the Navy.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HALE. I am very glad that this question has come up just as as it has right here. The gentleman from Tennessee has got a garment or a coverlet which if he pulls it up over his shoulders will be short at his feet and if he pulls it down over his feet will be short at his shoulders. And that is all there is about this pay for the Navy.

Last year this House insisted, against the protest of the Secretary of the Navy and against a motion made on this floor by myself, on curtailing the pay of the Navy much below what the Secretary wanted. The result of that was that the Secretary had to put many officers on the very lowest or furlough pay: and it was announced beofficers on the very lowest or furlough pay; and it was announced beforehand that if the small appropriation passed such would be the result. Now, at the end of the year or nearly at its end, gentlemen, finding that the result of this was to pinch meritorious officers and refinding that the result of this was to pinch meritorious officers and reduce them to a pay that was a grievous hardship to them, come in and, instead of boldly taking the responsibility, as this House ought to do, put it on the head of the Department. And the gentleman from Tennessee, the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, says that the Secretary ought to have gone on and paid these officers what they were entitled to under the higher rates, and when the money was exhausted to have come to Congress with a bold front; that is to say, that he should have spent in nine months the money we gave him for a year, and come here for a deficiency. He has been obliged to come here as it is with a deficiency bill. And what is the reception it gets? He asks for seventeen hundred and odd thousand dollars to meet the deas it is with a deficiency bill. And what is the reception it gets? He asks for seventeen hundred and odd thousand dollars to meet the deficiency of last year, making a bold front of it, as the gentleman from Tennessee says, and the committee has cut him down here in this bill to $500,000; not giving him what he asks. And still gentlemen com-plain of him because naval officers, with families, are reduced to a plain of him because naval officers, with families, are reduced to a mere sustenance, and hardly that.

Why, sir, there is but one remedy in this matter, and that is to give fair, liberal appropriations. I tell the gentleman from Tennessee that not only the present Secretary of the Navy, but any future Secretary, if he attempts to conform to the bill as reported in this House last year or if he attempts to conform to any such bill as that reported this year, must take this scale of graduated pay of naval officers which I hold in my hand, and must bring scores of men from shoreduty, and leave, and waiting-orders to furlough pay.

When the gentleman from Tennessee says that anybody did not understand the distinction between shore or leave and waiting-orders and furlough pay. he makes a proposition as absurd as if he had said and furlough pay, he makes a proposition as absurd as if he had said that members of this House do not know the difference between pay and mileage. Why, sir, this is a thing running all through the life of naval officers, and everybody who has an interest in a naval officer knows that his pay may be cut down to a third or a quarter of his knows that his pay may be cut down to a third or a quarter of his sea pay, by assigning him to special duty; and you oblige the Secretary of the Navy to assign him to that duty when you curtail his funds. He cannot make the garment if you do not give him the cloth. There is not an ounce, an iota of blame resting upon the Secretary of the Navy. The blame is right here, and will be still greater if we cut down the appropriations after the fashion we have been doing.

doing.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment is exhausted.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to strike out the last word.

"It's a number of matters that have been brought up There are quite a number of matters that have been brought up here, and I regret very much that I cannot go over them in the short time that is allotted to me under the five-minute rule.

Mr. DANFORD. I rise to an inquiry. Has the point of order been disposed of that was raised against the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It has. The point of order has been overruled.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, the honorable gentleman from Maine who has just taken his seat has referred to the fact that the Secretary who has just taken his seat has referred to the fact that the Secretary of the Navy has asked for a deficiency of $1,500,000 for the fiscal year 1877, and that it is made up by taking the amount appropriated from the amount of his estimate. But let me say here that in the Book of Estimates he makes for the pay of the Navy the large estimate of $7,300,000, while the amount we had appropriated was $5,750,000. Now, sir, I am becoming impatient with this lack of candor on the part of an officer standing at the head of a Department. I hold in my hand a table, which I now present, showing the actual expenditure for the pay of the Navy, made up at the Treasury Department by the Register of that Department. It is as follows:

Statement of the pay of the Navy from June 30, 1868, to June 30, 1876, in-cutsive.

June	30, 1	1868,	to July 1,	1869	$8, 529,	568	37
				1870
June	30, 1	870,	to July 1,	1871	7, 061,	410	44
				, 1872	7, 674,	359	14
June	30, 1	872,	to July 1,	1873	6, 031,	038	09
June	30, 1	1873,	to July 1	. 1874	7, 499,	628	06
				1875	6, 445,	001	91
June	30, 1	875.	to July 1.	1876	6. 233	365	73

A true abstract from the records in the office of the Register of the Treasury.

JOHN ALLISON,

During the whole of these last eight years, up to the end of the During the whole of these last eight years, up to the end of the last fiscal year, making an average, the total amount has never reached $7,000,000, and this officer makes this statement in face of the fact that the appropriation which he had in his hands when he came to the head of that Department was based on a law allowing the enlistment of 15,000 men in the Navy, and when 13,000 men were enlisted and sent off upon cruises and therefore their pay was postponed for two or three years; he makes it also in face of the fact that during our troubles with Spain fifteen hundred additional men were enlisted in the Navy but there was not an average in the pay of the enlisted in the Navy, but there was not an average in the pay of the enlisted in the Navy, but there was not an average in the pay of the Navy during all these years of $7,000,000.

There are now only sixty-three hundred enlisted men.

What can this mean? I think I understand it, and will state it directly. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] says that we were forewarned by the Secretary of the Navy that there would be this deficiency if we did not appropriate the money that he called for in his estimate. Now, I am here to deny that absolutely. I cannot of course state what may have occurred privately between the gentleman from Maine and the Secretary of the Navy, but I do know that he did state without qualification that $6,250,000 was ample for the pay of the Navy. And here I have a statement made by the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and made from the Navy Register, showing the actual expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1876, for the pay of the Navy, and that amount is $6,300,000. I submit that table:

	Submit that table.
	Line officers, active list, (776). Staff officers, active list, (592). Line officers, retired list, (109). Staff officers, retired list, (135).	1, 562, 600 333, 825
I	Total pay of commissioned officers
	Warrant officers, active list, (212). Warrant officers, retired list, (28). Cadet midshipmen and engineers, (317). Mates, (50).	270, 600 28, 650 158, 500 18, 000
۱	Total	475, 750
	Estimated for officers volunteer navy.  Estimated for petty officers and seamen, (7,500,) at an average of $20 per man	40, 000 1, 800, 000
I	Total pay	6, 339, 105

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. CLYMER obtained the floor and yielded his time to Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. BLOUNT. The estimates of the Secretary of the Navy do not harmonize with each other, and when the Secretary of the Navy said to the committee that $6,250,000 was ample for the pay of the Navy he said it bearing in mind and in face of the fact that the number of men in the Navy has been reduced one thousand in number.

Now, furthermore, in reference to this pay law. Some men have been put on "waiting orders" and some on "furlough pay." He stated distinctly to the committee when he was asked whether put-ting an officer on "furlough pay" was regarded as punishment, that it was not. I then asked if it was not true that this amount of the pay of the Navy could not be further reduced, and was informed with earnestness, yes, $1,000,000.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. That, I understand, was the statement of the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. BLOUNT. That was his attitude then, and I have been aston-Mr. BLOUNT. That was his attitude then, and I have been astonished in the face of these facts to find that as soon as Congress adjourned the Secretary of the Navy should issue an order placing these men on furlough pay and throwing scorn and contempt on the democratic party in that they had caused that necessity. I hurl the charge back upon him with scorn and contempt for his lack of candor toward the House of Representatives of the United States. This proceeding on his part took place just before the election and it came heavily upon the officers of the Navy. The Admiral and some of the best officers of the Navy were placed on furlough pay.

Furthermore, sir. I think we are correct in another item. On ref-

Furthermore, sir, I think we are correct in another item. On reference to the pay of several officers of the naval service, there has been a very great abuse, probably which any administration might be liable to make. Why, sir, think of it. Notwithstanding our corps of professors at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, there are sixty-two other officers of the Navy employed at the Academy, now on shore pay, professedly to teach the boys; and when the Naval Academy bill comes here you will find that you provide them with few professors and here you will find that you provide them with few professors and make a beautiful show of economy, but when you pull the curtain you will find that there are sixty-two officers at the Naval Academy asyou will find that there are sixty-two officers at the Naval Academy assigned to duty there as professors. And so it is in reference to various other points. I believe that if the Navy was honestly administered we could get along, without paying any officer furlough pay, at an expense of $5,750,000, and I would never have consented to this deficiency bill being reported from the committee of which I have the honor to be a member but for the fact that I could not find the Administration in harmony with us in record to it. The number of ministration in harmony with us in regard to it. The number of vessels in the Navy has been increased, while they promised that there should be a decrease of the number of vessels in commission.

[Here the hammer fell.] Mr. SPRINGER. I renewed the amendment. I stated when speaking to the point of order that the Secretary of the Navy had misconstrued the act of Congress. If members will refer to the bill of last session making appropriation for the naval service, which is found on page 65 of the session laws of last session, they will find that the words of the statute making appropriations for the pay of the naval officers are as follows:

For pay of commissioned and warrant officers at sea, on shore, on special service, and of those on the retired list and unemployed, and for the actual expenses of officers traveling under orders, and for pay of the petty officers, seamen, ordinary seamen, landsmen, and boys, including men of the engineers' force, and for the Coast Survey service, seven thousand five hundred men, $5,750,000.

Now, here is an appropriation for the pay of the salaries of the naval officers according to the then existing law. A specific sum is appropriated for that purpose. It is plain to every one, that if the salaries appropriated by law should require a greater sum than is appropriated in the statute, all the Secretary of the Navy had to do would be to continue to pay the salaries provided by the general law until the appropriation was exhausted; and especially as there was another session of Congress to intervene before the expiration of the fixed year. It was therefore his duty to do that and report to the iscal year. It was therefore his duty to do that and report to the House that the amount appropriated for the pay of the officers of the Navy was not sufficient to pay them what the law required them to have; just as in the case of members of Congress who are entitled by law to a specific sum. If the aggregate sum appropriated is not sufficient to pay that amount, the duty of the officers of the Government is to pay them monthly the amount to which they are entitled under the general law as long as the appropriation lasts, and to let the deficiency take care of itself.

But it was evidently supposed by the Secretary of the Navy, previous to the last presidential election, that he might use this reduced appropriation for the purpose of making a little political capital. Therefore he put a great number of naval officers on the retired list

Therefore he put a great number of naval officers on the retired list at half pay, and sent them over the country to tell the people that the economy proposed by this House was a sham and a delusion.

I shall support this amendment because I believe it is in accordance with the spirit of the law. These officers should receive the pay to which they are entitled under the general law. It was not intended by the House of Representatives to reduce in the least the pay of naval officers by the appropriation bills of last session.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DANFORD. I rise to oppose the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] a question. Mr. SPRINGER. Certa

Certainly. I will answer it, with pleasure, if

Mr. FOSTER. I understood the gentleman to criticise the action of the Secretary of the Navy because he failed to pay these officers

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; but because he failed to pay them the amount to which they were entitled under the general law as long as the appropriation lasted.

Mr. FOSTER. I misunderstood the gentleman.
Mr. DANFORD. I think it will be remembered, at least by the Mr. DANFORD. I think it will be remembered, at least by the members of the Committee on Appropriations and of the Committee on Naval Affairs and possibly by many other gentlemen upon this floor, that while the naval appropriation bill was under discussion in the House at the last session this matter of the pay of the Navy was the subject of discussion. It was then shown to be a matter of actual calculation, of mere dollars and cents, as to the amount of money that must necessarily be appropriated to pay the officers and enlisted men of the Navy; that it required so much; that the number of officers in the active service requiring sea pay, the number on shore duty and waiting orders was known, and the amount required was a mere matter of calculation. We were informed by the Department that unless the appropriation was larger than that contemplated by that unless the appropriation was larger than that contemplated by the Committee on Appropriations there would not be a sufficient amount to pay these officers duty pay.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman inform the House where that communication is?

Mr. DANFORD. That statement was made upon the floor of the House, and it undoubtedly shows a very considerable ignorance on the part of the members of the Committee on Appropriations, when the number of officers in the Navy are known, when the number of enlisted men are known, when the amount of pay to which they are entitled upon active service or upon waiting orders is a mere matter of calculation. It is rather a strange spectacle to see the Committee on Appropriations or the Committee on Naval Affairs come into the House this session and claim that they are not responsible for the deficiency that is asked for at this time, that they are not responsible for the fact that the Secretary of the Navy was compelled to place a portion of the officers of the Navy upon furlough.

I believe that he did, with the means at his command, the very best that he could have done. I believe that he used the money appropriated for the pay of the officers and men of the Navy to the full extent that he could use it. And it does not come with good grace from the committee that refused the appropriation asked for, refused the amount called for in the estimate, to come into the House now and complain of the conduct of the Secretary.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I hope the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DAN-FORD] will withdraw his amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment to the amendment, which is to strike out the last word, was offered by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Springer.]

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Then I hope the amendment will be voted down.

The amendment to the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I move to amend by striking out the last wo words. I am very much gratified this morning by the statement two words. I am very much gratified this morning by the statement made by the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. Blount,] a member of the Committee on Appropriations. I have long suspected, if I did not indeed know the fact, that this suggestion for putting officers upon furlough pay originated not with gentlemen in this House, not with the Committee on Appropriations, not with the Committee on Naval Affairs, but with the Secretary of the Navy himself. We have that statement made here to-day by the gentleman from Georgia.

I have no partisan purpose at all; and I now intend to disclaim any partisan reference. My present object and motive is to do justice to the officers of the Navy. I pass no reflection that might be justified by this statement upon the Secretary of the Navy; I reserve that for some other time. It is now simply a question of justice to the officers of the Navy, a question over and above party.

These officers of the Navy, a question over and above party.

These officers have been made to suffer in public estimation; they have been made to suffer in their purses; they have suffered innocently, and I would do justice to them. No man who looks over the question of and I would do justice to them. No man who looks over the question of furlough pay according to the customs of the Navy in its administration can fail to see that it has been esteemed a badge of disgrace and a punishment. No man after seeing the amount of furlough pay can fail to understand that it is inadequate for the support of these officers. While we keep up a Navy, let us be just. Here is the law; turn to the law-book; it provides the amount of pay that these officers shall receive

Consider for a moment the position of an officer placed upon fur-lough or waiting orders. He cannot leave his home; he does not know the moment that he may be ordered into service; he does not know the period of his punishment; he is not relieved from active duty for any fixed time; the term dwells alone in the mind of the Secretary of the Navy. Gentlemen, this is too much power to be exercised by any one individual. The injustice to those who suffer under it is too great.

At the last session of Congress I stated my belief that $6,250,000 was demanded as an appropriation for this Department; I so believe now. In that belief I asked at the last session, on behalf of the Comnow. In that belief I asked at the last session, of belief in mittee on Naval Affairs, that the number of officers be reduced; I asked a reduction in several regards, which the House refused. So long as you continue the present order of things, so long you ought in justice to make an appropriation adequate for the decent support and maintenance of the officers in the service. I hope the amendment I have submitted will be adopted.

Mr. HALE. I rise to oppose pro forma the pending amendment. I am glad that the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs [Mr. WHITTHORNE] has presented this matter in the proper spirit. He has found out that the only way to run any Department of the Government fairly and justly is to make fair and just appropriations; and I am glad that the gentleman has had the courage in the face of the action of the last Congress to make that statement, which after all in the long run must be our rule of action.

But, Mr. Chairman, what a lowering of the standard there has been on this question of appropriations since the last year! Then we were told that there should be no deficiencies; that there was no need of deficiency appropriations; that the sums given were sufficient and would run all the Departments of the Government. To-day the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Springer,] who led the van last year in cutting and carving and reducing and pinching every appropriation, tells us that the duty of the head of a Department was to go on and spend the money, to use it up, and when a portion of the year had expired, come to Congress with an estimate for a deficiency. That is the result, that is the outcome of the ground taken last year in regard to appropriations for carrying on the Government. Truly there is no road to economy so easy as to give but little money, count it as the whole expenses of the Government, let it be spent in six or nine months, and then turn over the unpaid officers of the Government to the mercies of the next session of Congress.

Plenty of gentlemen on this side predicted last year what would be the result; but I did not look for this confession from the gentleman who has made it. I did not suppose that he would be the first to come forward and declare that rather than there should be pinching under an appropriation act, the money should be expended so far as it would go and a deficiency should be thrust before Congress. But so it is, and so it will be.

it is, and so it will be.

The next year, Mr. Chairman, will tell the same story. If you cut down this appropriation for the pay of naval officers your Secretary of the Navy must either put men and officers upon the lowest scale as to pay or he must spend during a part of the year all the money appropriated and come in here for a deficiency appropriation. The remedy is just what my friend from Tennessee has stated, that is, to make a fair appropriation; but the responsibility shall not with my consent be shirked by this House and thrown upon any executive

[Here the hammer fell.]
The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment is exhausted.
Mr. WHITTHORNE. I withdraw the amendment to the amend-

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I renew the pro forma amendment. I desire the country to see where this deficiency really comes from, and where the intelligence upon this question lies. Gentlemen on the other side of the House who have had so much experience and the other side of the House who have had so much experience and know how much it has taken to run the Navy Department through the whole administration have found it about as follows: In 1873 the estimate was about $6,500,000 and the appropriation $6,315,000; in 1874 the appropriation was the same; and in 1875, $6,285,000. Gentlemen on the other side have never made an appropriation upon the idea they are now advancing.

Mr. HALE. Does not the gentleman know that at the time he mentions there were balances which the Secretary of the Navy was drawing upon and paying out from time to time?

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman asks me a question. Let me ask him why the Department did not consume those balances the first year why the Department did not consume those balances the first year and thus square the account with the country.

Mr. HALE. They were consumed from year to year.

Mr. BLOUNT. I know they were; but they might have been consumed at once; and the trouble now, in my judgment, is that the money we have appropriated to pay the men and officers of the Navy, instead of being held until they returned from their cruises the second and the third year, has been taken to pay the expenses of previous years. That is the ground of the trouble; and gentlemen are trying to put the deficiency where it does not below.

ous years. That is the ground of the trouble; and gentlemen are trying to put the deficiency where it does not belong.

The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] says (and he says rightly) that, if we do not do what the Department calls for, there will be deficiencies again. Yes, they intend to have money if they have to extort it from the gallant officers of the Navy. They will keep every ship in the service that they possibly can, although we were promised during the last winter that the number of vessels in the Navy should be reduced. Notwithstanding the reduction of the appropriations the vessels are to be kent in service fifty or sixty officers are ations the vessels are to be kept in service, fifty or sixty officers are to be kept at the Naval Academy and at various other places throughout the country.

These officers will be put on furlough and money extorted from them; and whenever, Mr. Chairman, they are put in that attitude, anxious as I am to reduce the expenditures of the Government, whenever the question comes in that shape, I will vote to supply the deficiency for that purpose, but not until then.

While I am not authorized by the committee to say so, yet, so far as one member is concerned, I believe there is no danger in putting into this bill the provision suggested by the gentleman from Tennesinto this bill the provision suggested by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Whitthorne] that a certain portion of this money should be used to make up the difference to these officers between furlough pay and waiting-orders pay.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Danford] commenced by very modestly telling the House how little we did know. The Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Naval Affairs had the Navy Register before them. Well, sir, I suppose if the Secretary of the Navy has made the same mistake, being at the head of the Department, the gentleman certainly ought not to make complaint about our conduct. The estimate I had was that of the Navy Department and it was corroborated by the estimate of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, as well as by several officers whose distinguished service had elevated them to an eminent position in the country. I have regarded them rather than estimates made by the country. I have regarded them rather than estimates made by the Department, which seem calculated to mislead.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the formal amendment. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. Hall] stated he predicted the very condition of things we have now upon us, namely, that the reduced appropriations at last session were to be made up by future deficiency bills; thus leaving the impression there was nothing saved at the last session of Congress, and that we are now simply making up for a false and sham economy then palmed off upon the country.

Mr. HALE. I did not say there was nothing saved, but that in this matter nothing was saved.

mr. FALE. In the say there was nothing saved, but that in this matter nothing was saved.

Mr. SPRINGER. In this matter? There was at least an inference that the gentleman's remarks applied to all other subjects.

Mr. HALE. Not by any means.

Mr. SPRINGER. Not by any means? Then the gentleman does admit something was saved at the last session of Congress.

Mr. HALE. Certainly I do.
Mr. SPRINGER. I am glad the gentleman admits it now, although he did not admit it, so far as I know, previous to the last presidential election. I am glad it is admitted on the other side of the House something was saved at the last session of Congress. I believe the amount saved over the last session of Congress. I believe the amount saved over the previous year was $30,000,000 in round numbers. I am informed by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that at this session there will be a further reduction in appropriations below the sums appropriated at the last session of Congress of below the sums appropriated at the last session of Congress of $10,000,000, making an aggregate reduction in the two years in which the House of Representatives of the Forty-fourth Congress have appropriated the people's money of $40,000,000 below what the appropriations for previous years of the Government were.

Mr. HALE. What was the figure of saving stated by the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. SPRINCER Listed that in the appropriation bills this year.

Mr. SPRINGER. I stated that in the appropriation bills this year ten millions would be saved in addition to what was saved last year, which will make the saving by this Congress for two years $40,000,000 in round numbers.

in round numbers.

Mr. HALE. I understood the gentleman to say that $20,000,000 would be saved over the appropriations of last year.

Mr. SPRINGER. Not twenty millions, but ten millions this year below the appropriations of last year. That will also include the deficiency we are compelled to make by reason of this mistake in the construction of the statute in reference to naval officers.

There was a specific sum appropriated for naval officers' salaries last session, and I did not then understand, nor did any one on this side of the House sectors I know understand there was any observed.

side of the House, so far as I know, understand there was any change contemplated or provided concerning the pay of certain naval officers. Certainly nothing on the face of the statute indicated a change. It was only by a forced construction of the statute that the Secretary was only by a forced construction of the statute that the Secretary of the Navy could have supposed any such change to have been intended. It was simply an arithmetical calculation to determine from the general law, where the pay of officers is fixed, the amount needed for the purpose, and if the sum of money appropriated at the last session of Congress under that general law fixing the pay of naval officers was not sufficient. If in that amount those who made the calculation simply fell into a mistake in the amount precessary (and it culation simply fell into a mistake in the amount necessary (and it was understood at that time these officers were to receive the same was understood at that time these officers were to receive the same pay for this fiscal year they did for the last fiscal year) the duty of the Secretary of the Navy was plain. If Congress had not appropriated a sufficient amount to meet what the law required, it was his duty to pay so long as the money lasted and then let Congress take the responsibility for the deficiency at the end of the year if the appropriation should be exhausted and a deficiency bill should be rendered received. dered necessary

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. CLYMER. I desire to say a word.
The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted on the pending amend-

Mr. WALDRON. I wish to move the committee rise for the purpose of closing debate on the pending paragraph.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope the gentleman will not make that motion at

Mr. WALDRON. If gentlemen desire further debate, I will waive it for the present.

Mr. CLYMER. I ask the gentleman from Georgia to withdraw his amendment.

amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. I withdraw it.

Mr. CLYMER. I renew it.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Hale] who is on the Appropriation Committee taunts the majority on this floor with making low appropriations last year, as I understood him, for the purpose of affecting the political sentiment of the country at that time, and now come here with deficiency bills in order to make good their dereliction at that time. That I understand in brief to be his their dereliction at that time. That I understand in brief to be his position. Now, sir, I assert the large amount of money proposed to be appropriated in this bill is to supply deficiencies created prior to the present fiscal year, and the other side of the House which was then in power is justly responsible for such deficiencies, and not the party represented by the majority of the Committee on Appropriations. I assert, furthermore, that even last year the deficiency bill as it passed, including re-appropriations, was $2,908,000; being an excess of more than a million dollars over what is proposed to be appropriated this year. ated this year.

I say, sir, that in the face of these facts the taunt of the gentleman from Maine against the majority on this floor comes with a poor grace. I assert furthermore that if the majority on this floor had had the Departments of this Government in accord with it, acting honestly and fairly, determined to co-operate with it in its just endeavors to reduce the expenditures of this Government, the appropriations made last year for the present fiscal year were amply sufficient, and we would not have needed to have asked any deficiency whatever. But, sir, when we are constantly met as we are met to-day by demands unheard of, unauthorized, unwarranted by the condition of affairs for more money, we shall resist them; and we do not intend to stand here and endure, if we can prevent it, these unjust charges against the majority on this floor. We have endeavored to do our duty faithfully and manfully—radically, if you please—and we intend to proceed in the same direction. We are responsible to the country and will abide by its judgment whether we have impeded the Government or not. I claim that the service of the Government has been as well performed and as amply provided for as its needs required; and I say that to appropriate more would be merely wasteful extrava-

We are not here for any such purposes as these. We are here to ask for deficiencies, the larger portions of which were made when our friends on the opposite side were in power. When we ask for deficiencies to cover up our own delinquencies in the matter of appropriations, then will be the time to blame us for doing so.

Mr. RANDALL. I renew the proforma amendment.

I take part in this debate with a good deal of hesitation; but when gentlemen make an attack upon the policy of the last session of Congress as to the reduction of the appropriations, I think I may be pardoned if I say a word or two in reply. I say to-day that all the predictions of the minority of this House which they indulged in during the last session about the confusion that was to be made in the adthe last session about the confusion that was to be made in the administration of the Government by reason of the reductions have in no instance and in no material degree been realized. We reduced the expenditures of this Government about thirty millions of dollars; and I would like gentlemen to-day to point out to me throughout the length and breadth of this land any place wherein we have hampered the due and honest administration of the Government.

the due and honest administration of the Government.

Mr. HALE. Here is one place.

Mr. RANDALL. I am going to come to this. The general deficiency bill—and I say it in no spirit of partisanship, but only as stating a fact—is of republican growth. Now, sir, as to this Navy matter to which the gentleman from Maine directs my attention, I remember very well having gone with the gentleman from Maine and the gentleman from Georgia, and after full consultation with the Secretary of the Navy that matter of the amount was fixed, as I understood, without much dissent from him.

Mr. HALE. What amount?

Mr. RANDALL. I will not say, as some have been unkind enough to say, that he was prompted by political considerations; nor will I to say, that he was prompted by political considerations; nor will I say that he sought by a reduction of the appropriation to reduce the pay of certain naval officers against whom he had had complaint to Mr. DANFORD. What amount was fixed ?

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania— Mr. RANDALL. In a moment. But I will say that he did not, as an officer of this Administration, resist as he ought to have resisted if an officer of this Administration, resist as he ought to have resisted if the amount was not sufficient.

Mr. HALE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. RANDALL. In a moment. Now it happened that heretofore the Secretary of the Navy had the right to expend unexpended balances; and the gentleman from Maine will realize the fact that those unexpended balances do not come under the provisions of law which provided that the unexpended balances of the Navy shall go into the Treasury at the end of two years.

Now, sir, with this exception—and the exception proves the propriety of our action in these reductions—we are to-day without a legitimate complaint in any part of the country as to the reductions legitimate complaint in any part of the country as to the reductions made. Nay more, where would your Treasury have been to-day but for these reductions? Where would your deficiencies have been? Instead of the expenditures being five millions behind the receipts at stead of the expenditures being live limitions behind the receipts at this time, they would have been twenty millions behind; and at the rate you are going now, if the receipts are not increased you would have had at the end of this fiscal year forty millions of deficiency with but one resort to meet it, and that resort, additional taxation. That we have at least protected the people from.

Mr. HALE. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the pro forma amendment.

ment.

I luckily have the Record before me, not only to show, upon this matter, that the appropriation fixed last year for pay was not agreed to by the Secretary, nor by the minority, as stated by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but also to show that this matter of furlough pay, which is now shirked by the other side of the House, was brought up here as a reason why we could reduce appropriations. I ask the Clerk to read the remarks and motion of the gentleman from Georgia, who had charge of the naval bill last year, so that this House may see whether furlough pay has just come up as an abuse not thought of before, and also whether the amount we appropriated was agreed upon beforehand. Let the Clerk read.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HALE. The Clerk must read this now or there will not be time to read it in my time. I call attention to the fact that this is a citato read it in my time. I call attention to the fact that this is a citation from the debate upon the naval appropriation bill of last session, of which the gentleman from Georgia had charge.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Blourt. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$6,200,-000" and inserting the following:

"Five million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars. And so much of the act of June 16, 1874, making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, and for other purposes, as provides that only actual traveling expenses shall be allowed to any person holding employment or appointment under the United States while engaged in public business as is applicable to officers of the Navy so engaged, is hereby repealed; and the sum of eight cents per mile shall be allowed such officers while so engaged, in lieu of their actual expenses."

Mr. HALE. And now I ask the Clerk to read the remarks of the gentleman from Georgia following that.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Chairman, the first proposition relates to the pay of the Navy. I yesterday called the attention of the House to the fact that the note in reference to the amount of money required for the pay of the Navy, as estimated by the Fourth Anditor, was clearly an error. There has been no satisfactory explanation given, and I cannot conceive that there is any. For this reason the committee have thought that there might be a considerable reduction, amounting to nearly $600,000.

Furthermore, a table on page 15 of to-day's Record, furnished to me by the Secretary of the Navy, discloses the fact that a very large proportion of the officers of the Navy who are not on sea service are on what is termed other-duty pay, instead of being, as the committee think they might be, either on waiting orders or on furlough. We have thought that the abuse in this particular grew largely out of the fact of the influence of these officers and their importunities for higher pay, and we have felt that there was but one remedy: the reduction of the appropriation itself.

There, Mr. Chairman, is the declaration of the gentle-Mr. HALE. man who had charge of the naval appropriation bill last year, and who came into the House and moved a reduction of the pay of the who came into the House and moved a reduction of the pay of the Navy $45,000 below what the estimate had fixed it and below what was called for by the Secretary of the Navy before the committee, and as a reason he wished it to be done he stated that the committee believed that many officers of the Navy might be put on "leave pay" or on "furlough pay," and to-day we are told that "furlough pay" is a punishment to officers of the Navy, and that the position of officers is a matter in the mind of the Secretary, and that any fixing of the status of these officers has been done for political effect or to punish some one against whom he had a grudge. Luckily I had or to punish some one against whom he had a grudge. Luckily I had the record before me-

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. WALDRON. Unless I can have an understanding that the committee will close debate upon this question, I move that the com-

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will allow me to reply to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. WALDRON. I must insist on my motion that the committee

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman will not gain any time by doing that

Mr. WALDRON. If the motion to rise prevails, I shall move that all debate upon this amendment be limited to ten minutes, which will give the gentleman from Georgia an opportunity to reply to the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE.]

The question was taken on Mr. WALDRON's motion; and on a divison there were ayes 15, noes not counted.

So the committee refused to rise.

Mr. RANDALL. I withdraw my formal amendment.

Mr. FOSTER. I renew it.

The CHAIRMAN. That amendment is not in order, because it has once been voted on.

Mr. FOSTER. Then I move to strike out the last three lines of the amendment. I did not intend, sir, to participate in this debate at all, and I would not do so now but for the reckless and extravagant statements made by the former chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, now Speaker of the House. That gentleman, in face of the facts, stands up before the American Congress and the American people and says that but for the action of this democratic House the people and says that but for the action of this democratic House the deficiency for this year in the revenues and receipts of the Government would have been $40,000,000 or over.

I would like to know, Mr. Chairman, upon what basis the gentleman makes a statement like this. I am not here to lecture him, but I want to remind him that he is the Speaker of the House and that his words goto the country with more weight than the words of an humble mayber of the House like myself ble member of the House like myself.

Mr. RANDALL. Do you want an answer? In the first place, we saved $30,000,000 because we did not allow you this sum of money to

Mr. FOSTER. In the first place, that is untrue. You did not reduce the expenses of the Government $22,000,000 or $30,000,000, but official data at the Treasury Department shows that the reduction is but $23,000,000, as I showed satisfactorily to the House that it would omena data at the reasury Department shows that the reduction is but $23,000,000, as I showed satisfactorily to the House that it would be at the close of the last session.

Now, I am willing to give the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] and this democratic House credit for what they did, but a man occupying the position of Speaker of this House ought to be very careful as to how he makes statements of this kind.

Mr. RANDALL. I agree to that.

Mr. FOSTER. Now, you got through with a decrease in expenditures of $23,000,000 and I told you that there would be a deficiency at the close of the session. I do not believe that when the fiscal year ends it will show as much reduction as the previous year of a republican Congress. You talk about this deficiency bill being less than it was last year. Do not gentlemen know that this is but a small part of the deficiency which has to be provided for? Why it does not include $200,000 for printing when the Public Printer says it will take $350,000 to complete the work now on hand, and he is to-day without an appropriation to carry on operations, having already been compelled to discharge a large number of employés, and unless an appropriation is made to-day the Government printing must stop.

I will give gentlemen opposite credit that the reductions they made were made with as little harm as such reductions could be made with, but harm has been done in several instances; but as to the case of but harm has been done in several instances; but as to the case of officers of the Navy, I say here and now that the committee willingly, knowingly, and with malice aforethought, realized what exactly the effect would be. This committee went to the Secretary of the Navy and asked him in God's name can we reduce these officers' pay, and the answer was: It will save a half million of dollars; and this democratic committee said then we will disgrace them and save a half democratic committee said then we will disgrace them and save a half million of dollars. That is the controversy to-day.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is there anything in the act of the last session different from the act of the preceding year?

Mr. FOSTER. Nothing; you were deceived; you did not know the inside working in the committee. You did not know that they were degrading these officers for the sake of reducing the appropriation.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I understand that the committee of which the gentleman was a member willfully deceived the House and the

Mr. FOSTER. They did, against my voice.
Mr. SPRINGER. We did not hear your voice at that time.
Mr. FOSTER. Yes, you did.
Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from Ohio who has just taken his seat is possessed of information from the Secretary of the Navy which never came before the Committee on Appropriations.

never came before the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. FOSTER. I got it from you.

Mr. BLOUNT. No, you did not; you are mistaken. The gentleman got no such information from me. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. Hale] who has just taken his seat has had read a part of my speech on the naval appropriation bill of last session, to show that it was the design of the committee to put a portion of the officers of the Navy on furlough pay. I tell him that I am ready to take my share of responsibility; but the trouble is that his side of the House, and the Secretary of the Navy, are not ready to do so.

There was an agreement to the appropriation of $6,250,000; the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] agreed to it, and the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Hale] agreed to it. The only reduction made was of $500,000, upon my own motion. As to a part of that appropriation the Record puts me in favor of putting a portion of these officers upon furlough pay. I have given my reason for that. It was that I was informed by the Secretary of the Navy that it could be done; instances were given where it had been done, and reasons were assigned why it should be done again. I therefore did make that motion. signed why it should be done again. I thereforedid make that motion. He further said that the appropriation could be reduced a million of dollars. In view of what occurred I did say to this House that that was the purpose. And I now say that with a proper use of that fund it is susceptible of proof that it could have been expended and every officer paid, and not a single officer put on furlough pay. Instead of doing that the number of vessels were increased, the number of officers put on sea duty was increased, no attempt was made to reduce the number on shore service, and although paymasters and other offi-the number on shore service, and although paymasters and other officers could have been dispensed with, they were kept in the service. I now come to the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. Danford.] He says there was published at that time a statement from the Navy Department as to the number of officers on sea pay, the number on shore pay, &c. If the gentleman will compare that statement with the Navy Register he will find that it is nothing but an estimate; that it does not pretend to be a copy of the record in the Navy Register.

Mr. DANFORD. The gentleman referred to that in his remarks.

Mr. BLOUNT. "The gentleman" did refer to it because he expected candor.

pected candor.

Mr. DANFORD. The gentleman referred to it, and based his re-

Mr. DANFORD. The gentleman referred to it, and based his remarks upon that estimate.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will not take up my time. I did refer to it, and I expected candor. I asked for an estimate, and that was handed to me, and a million of dollars more than was required, according to the estimate of the Committee on Naval Affairs, for the expenditures of that very period. And this in the face of the fact that we proposed to reduce expenditures.

Mr. DANFORD. But will the gentleman—

Mr. BLOUNT. I cannot give up my time in this way.

Mr. DANFORD. But I do not understand that the gentleman has answered my question.

Answered my question.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have answered it in my own way. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. Hale] has endeavored to explain this matter shown that they did not proceed upon honest principles.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired, and debate upon the amendment to the amendment is exhausted.

Mr. FOSTER. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. KELLEY. I renew it. This debate has made me very happy in one respect. I find both sides of the House are ready, so far as they can, to do reparation to the officers they have degraded in the estimation of the service and of their associates.

It has been said that this is the only place where our economy has produced such effects. Sir, naval officers are scattered through the country, they are gentlemen of influence, and they have been able to make themselves felt. But it is not so with the poor printers, six hundred of whom were furloughed last Saturday without any pay. It is not so with the messengers, laborers, and poor women who in this time of depression, when private employment cannot be had, have been turned out of employment. They are obscure people; they shrink into their humble homes.

As the year advances it will be found that in every quarter the public service has been interfered with. Thirty-odd thousand pensions are awaiting examination, and the number is continually increasing and the office getting behindhand with its work. The Patent Office is embarrassed for want of sufficient clerical force. The whole economy of last session comes up again, as I showed the other day, as a omy of last session comes up again, as I showed the other day, as a fraud and an imposture.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Springer] said that the committee and members of the House understood so and so. Why, sir, they ought to understand the language they were using when they enacted a clause that required the Secretary of the Navy to furlough these men in order to make the appropriation run through the year; they ought to have understood it. They ought to have understood it as well as the gentleman did the amendment he drew up and offered to appropriation bill and which cut the Government out of one and an appropriation bill, and which cut the Government out of one and a half millions of dollars unless it should come from unexpected profits.

profits.

Mr. BLOUNT. A half a million of dollars was my amendment.

Mr. KELLEY. I refer to the centennial amendment. [Laughter.]

It is not for the republican party to furnish brains or understanding to gentlemen on the other side.

Mr. SPRINGER. It would be a fruitless task to undertake to furnish brains to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. KELLEY.]

Mr. KELLEY. I profess to understand the ordinary import of the English language. We did warn the gentlemen. I am no economist; I confess I am rather too extravagant. But all wise governments, when there comes a depression in private trade, try to sustain the people and at the same time accomplish economy by brying chean people and at the same time accomplish economy by buying cheap labor and cheap material. Over and over again during the last session did I protest against these nominal economies as extravagant inhumanities toward the people. Wait till we get through the session and we shall find appeals coming to us from people who do not wear gold lace, from people less prominent in the community than naval officers, people who, had they been permitted to live by honest industry, would have been relieved from embarrassment and suffer-

Mr. RANDALL. My colleague, [Mr. Kelley,] it seems to me, is quite unfortunate in his allusion to the two instances in which he alleges distress has come by reason of the action of this House at the last He first alludes to the Public Printer. An investigation by a committee of this House showed that the amount which had been appropriated was sufficient and the same committee declared that in the management of the public printing there had been gross irregularities. I am not surprised therefore that there is a deficiency. Nay, more, the Congress of the United States, in confirmation of that judgmore, the Congress of the United States, in confirmation of that judgment, passed a law by which the two Houses were given control, in a measure, of this printing establishment. In other words, Congress declared that in its judgment the right man was not at the head of the public printing. How did your Executive act upon that case? In my judgment—I say it with all proper respect—he acted with no possible regard to the legislative branch of the Government. Immediately after the action of our committee and the action of Congress, he re-appointed this same man whom our committee had declared guilty of reckless conduct in the administration of that establishment; and thus we have been compelled to submit longer to the mismanage-ment of this officer. It is no wonder, then, that there is a deficiency in this respect.

The gentleman alludes to the discharge of women from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. I say that the Committee on Appropriations sought to protect these women in that bureau, to the injury it is true of certain bank-note companies of my own city and of the city of New York; but if the Secretary of the Treasury had followed the letter of the law and permitted that bureau to print the revenue stamps, which we provided for, not a woman would have been removed from the Department at the other end of the Avenue.

moved from the Department at the other end of the Avenue.

Now I will tell the gentleman in a word what we want. We want the drooping revenues of the Government to revive. We want this crusade against the South to cease. We in the North desire that the South shall again become, as she formerly was, a purchaser of our manufactured goods, and that she may again by prosperity have the money wherewith to pay for them.

Mr. KELLEY. Amen.

Mr. RANDALL. Until you cease this crusade against the South you can never have a prosperous North. As I said at the close of the last session, you might as well expect a man paralyzed on one side to walk with agility and vigor as to hope that a country can prosper to walk with agility and vigor as to hope that a country can prosper when one-half of it is crushed and prostrate. [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KELLEY. I withdraw my proforma amendment.

The question then recurred on the amendment of Mr. WHITTHORNE, which read as follows:

That the accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the accounts of the officers of the Navy on the active list whose pay has been affected by the general order of the Secretary of the Navy No. 216, since the 1st day of September, 1876, on the basis of waiting-orders pay; and such sum as may be necessary to make up the difference between the furlough and waiting-orders pay of such officers is hereby appropriated for that purpose out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that this is offered as an addition to the pending paragraph.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Yes, sir. The amendment was adopted. The Clerk read as follows:

For defraying expenses incurred in the prosecution of whisky and cotton cases and the Credit Mobilier case, for payment of special counsel for the United States, and other expenses incident to the trial of said causes, $67,255.55.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I move to amend by adding to the paragraph just read the following:

<sup>5</sup> To pay W. H. Bliss, of Saint Louis, $1,500, for extra services as assistant United States attorney in the whisky cases.

I I have here a letter from the Attorney-General recommending this appropriation. Mr. Bliss, while employed in the capacity of assistant district attorney, performed these extra services in connection with the whisky trials. I have here the law authorizing the Attorney-General to employ special counsel and assistant attorneys. I ask the Clerk to read section 363 of the Revised Statutes. The Clerk read as follows:

The Attorney-General shall, whenever in his opinion the public interest requires it, employ and retain, in the name of the United States, such attorneys and counselors at law as he may think necessary to assist the district attorneys in the discharge of their duties, and shall stipulate with such assistant attorneys and counsel the amount of compensation, and shall have supervision of their conduct and

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I hold the Attorney-General was justified in recommending this payment under the section read by the Clerk. A number of these special attorneys appointed in various sections of the country have been paid for their service. Mr. Bliss, assistant district attorney at Saint Louis, was included in the number recommended to be paid by the Attorney-General. The committee, however, thought proper to strike out that item. I know some of the services rendered by this gentleman and I believe he is fairly entitled to this money, and therefore hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I dislike very much to antagonize anything my friend from Missouri offers as an amendment to this bill, but I think the proposition now pending is wrong in principle. It is to pay $1,500 to a gentleman who was assistant district attorney, who has been already paid by the Government $2,500 a year for his services. The principle sought to be established by the amendment is one I believe to be radically wrong, and therefore oppose it. I care nothing about the additional sum which might be given to the gentleman by the adoption of this amendment, but I think the principle is a vicious one and should not be recognized by us in the slightest degree. I do not think when the Government employs an officer and navs him a stated salary we should pass any such propo-Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I dislike very much to antagonize slightest degree. I do not think when the Government employs an officer and pays him a stated salary we should pass any such proposition as this giving him additional pay for the same services.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose, and a message was received from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, announcing the passage of the following bills; in which concurrence was requested:

An act (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of the Fort Dal-

An act (S. No. 1001) to provide for the disposition of the Fort Dalles military reservation;
An act (S. No. 1003) to amend an act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Company," approved June 8, 1872;
An act (S. No. 1163) for the relief of settlers on the public lands under the pre-emption laws;
An act (S. No. 1202) for the relief of John A. Darling; and An act (S. No. 1203) to remove the political disabilities of M. L. Bonham of South Carolina.

Bonham, of South Carolina.

It further announced that the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads, with the amendments of the Senate thereto, upon which the House of Representatives had asked a further conference, was returned to the House with the request that the appointment of conferees on the part of the House accompany the request for further conference.

DEFICIENCY BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is entitled to

Mr. ATKINS. I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri. On the same principle, Mr. Chairman, we might bring in a deficiency bill to pay salaries of nearly every officer of the Govin a deficiency bill to pay salaries of nearly every omcer of the Government. Twenty-five hundred dollars a year is a handsome salary for a young man. I think the matter has been acted on in the Committee on Appropriations, duly weighed and considered, and the committee came to the conclusion to reject it. I think it would be well enough for us to consider the propriety of adopting such a precedent in legislation.

Mr. FOSTER rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted on the pending amendment.

ment.
Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the last word.
The case, Mr. Chairman, covered by the amendment of my friend on the Committee on Appropriations is just this: This gentleman was acting district attorney at Saint Louis at the time of the appointment of Mr. Dyer district attorney, and he desired to withdraw from the service, alleging he could not afford to give his services for the regular pay. They were considered by Mr. Dyer and the Attorney-General so valuable as to induce them to offer additional salary if he would remain in office. On that condition he remained. He has no regular claim on the Government, but he has an equitable or moral one. To refuse to make this allowance is to act in bad faith toward this officer who accepted this service on the sole condition he was to this officer who accepted this service on the sole condition he was to have the compensation allowed by the Attorney-General. The Attorney-General reports the amount of his allowance. We have paid every other officer the full amount allowed by the Attorney-General save this one alone. I think it is the duty, Mr. Chairman, of this House to act in good faith toward him, ratifying the bargain made by the officer of the Government who continued him in service.

Mr. ATKINS. Did not the officer get a stated salary?

Mr. FOSTER. I have stated the case.

Mr. ATKINS. Did not be get a stated salary?

Mr. FOSTER. I have stated the case.

Mr. ATKINS. Did not he get a stated salary?

Mr. FOSTER. He got his salary as assistant district attorney.

Mr. DURHAM. I am sorry to state, Mr. Chairman, that I believe there is a great abuse of power on the part of district attorneys of the United States in employing counsel. The Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice last session introduced a bill limiting the power of the Attorney-General to employ assistant counsel. I am surprised therefore at the report of the Committee on Appropriations in this case in asking for an additional sum for this assistant counsel. Why, sir, I hold in my hand the report of the Attorney-General for the last year in regard to matters of this sort, and in running up, the fees which have been paid to assistant attorneys, in round numbers, amount to $240,000. The bare statement of the sum will show that there is a want of discretion on the part of the Attorneyshow that there is a want of discretion on the part of the Attorney General of the United States in employing these counsel. I resist it, and I am very glad that one of the members of the committee sees proper to resist the amendment of my friend from Saint Louis giving this additional pay to Mr. Bliss. I do not believe that he is entitled to a dellar

Mr. ATKINS. If the gentleman will allow me I will state that the majority of the committee is opposed to it.

Mr. DURHAM. I am glad to hear it. Mr. Chairman, I have looked into this business, and I am in favor of paying all the employés of the Government a fair and liberal compensation for service rendered; but when I know the fact that a certain distinguished gentleman of but when I know the fact that a certain distinguished gentleman of the city of Saint Louis sent in a bill to the Attorney-General for $26,000 for three months' service I undertake to say that it was an outrage.

Mr. FOSTER. Was it allowed?

Mr. DURHAM. No, sir; and it ought not to have been allowed. But it shows the length to which these attorneys who are employed at random by the Attorney-General are disposed to go.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the outrage?

Mr. DURHAM. The outrage was in undertaking to ask such a sum; and the amount allowed was too much.

Mr. FOSTER. Who was the man?
Mr. DURHAM. Perhaps you had better not ask the name.
Mr. FOSTER. You say it was an outrage. I would like to know the name

Mr. DURHAM. Well, if you ask me the name I will say it was Mr.

Mr. DURHAM. Well, if you ask me the name I will say it was Mr. Henderson. I was informed by the former Attorney-General that that was the sum asked and that $5,000 was allowed, when the Attorney-General who serves the whole year only gets $8,000 and h s to live here in the city of Washington.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. FOSTER. I withdraw the proforma amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. I renew it. I desire to say that the Committee on Appropriations refused to allow the appropriation recommended by the Attorney-General for the payment of Mr. Bliss. A section of the Revised Statutes has been read which authorizes the Attorney-General to employ counsel for the purpose of assisting district attorneys. But Mr. Bliss is one of the assistant district attorneys, and therefore this law has no application. But the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] states to the House that there is a question of faith involved. And what is it? Why, that the Attorney-General, assuming to himself the power to nominate and confirm these officers, is entitled to fix what shall be paid to them besides what the law declares. There is, sir, no authority on the part of the Attorney-General to make any conno authority on the part of the Attorney-General to make any contract for this additional sum. And therefore the committee determined that they would not allow it, on the ground that when Congress fixes salaries by law the law ought to be carried out.

fixes salaries by law the law ought to be carried out.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Durham] says he is surprised at the action of the Committee on Appropriations in allowing these large sums of money at Chicago, Saint Louis, and other places to assist in the prosecution of whisky cases. Sir, we were as much opposed to these appropriations as he could have been. But we found authority in the law for the Attorney-General to make contracts with these attorneys. We found the contracts had been made, and we did not feel that we had a right to violate the good faith of the United States toward them. That is our justification for allowing these appropriations to be placed in the bill. At the same time we have felt that there has been a good deal of extravagance here in the matter. that there has been a good deal of extravagance here in the matter of these prosecutions, and that the pardoning of these various crimitakes posecutions, and the sense of propriety of a large portion of the people of this country. This has made the Committee on Appropriations inclined if possible to curtail these amounts. It is the fact that large sums were squandered on attorneys, and that as soon as their work was completed it was undone by the Executive.

Mr. CLYMER. It is an ungracious thing to oppose an appropriation of this kind, and I certainly would be much more willing to sit here and allow it to be adopted in silence, if I did not feel there was a principle involved, of which I beg the committee to take notice.

This gentleman had been appointed assistant district attorney in Saint Louis with a fixed yearly salary of $2,500. The law provides that the Attorney-General, in certain cases where he deems it necessary to have counsel to assist a district attorney, may employ special counsel and may fix the fee. But the law nowhere gives him the right to increase the salary or add to the fees of officers regularly appointed and with a regular salary attached to the office. I think this is the first case—at least the first case within my knowledge—that this Government has been called upon to make an appropriation that this Government has been called upon to make an appropriation for additional salary, as it were, to an officer whose salary has been fixed by law, in this way. I conceive that the principle is a vicious one; that allowing this would lead to extravagance, and that it should not be agreed to.

Mr. DURHAM. I ask the gentleman if it is not true that there was

Mr. DUKHAM. I ask the gentleman if it is not true that there was no such communication received from the Department as was stated by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. FOSTER.]

Mr. CLYMER. I have no knowledge of any such communication being received. I will say, moreover, that this practice of employing special counsel has grown in the judgment of the House to be such an abuse that in the last session of Congress a law was passed limiting the amount that might be paid to special counsel to $2,500 in any one the amount that might be paid to special counsel to $2,500 in any one case. Hitherto we have been paying special counsel at the rate of $10,000 under agreements made by the Attorney-General, and to pay which agreements the Committee on Appropriations felt themselves bound in honor to recommend appropriations. They do not recommend this appropriation. They consider it wrong. They consider it vicious; and if the committee attach any weight to the judgment of the large majority of the Committee on Appropriations, they will vote down the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DURHAM. Have not the Committee on Appropriations upon investigation found that the Attorney-General has exceeded his power.

investigation found that the Attorney-General has exceeded his power by paying extra fees to these regular attorneys?

Mr. CLYMER. I do not know that any one instance has come to the knowledge of the committee where the Attorney-General has made such payment to regularly appointed assistant district attorneys throughout the United States; but that he employed special counsel without number and at prices beyond conscience almost, we well know; and there has been a law passed to put an end to the

Mr. DURHAM. Under the resolution of Mr. Parsons at the last session, the matter was submitted to me as a subcommittee; and I hold in my hand a statement showing that $53,000 were in one year and six months paid to these attorneys.

Mr. CLYMER. That has now been stopped.
Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I move to strike out the last line.
I regret very much that some of the members of the Committee on Appropriations have seen proper to bring before the House the action of that committee. It may be proper, therefore, for me to state that the question in regard to this amendment in the committee was decided by a very close vote. It was rejected by one vote.

I do not offer this amendment as a member of the committee, but as a member of this House, and I claim that right as a member of the House. It was stated by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] who last addressed the committee that there had been no recommendation from the Attorney-General in regard to this item. I beg now to read the communication from that gentleman. I find this item in the communication of the Attorney-General addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations:

To William H. Bliss, extra services as assistant United States attorney in whisky

That is the item. It must be remembered by gentlemen of this House that these whisky cases in Saint Louis required a great deal of labor. Over one hundred and forty indictments were drawn up and came on for trial in Saint Louis. This gentleman was an excellent officer. His duties were very arduous in connection with these ases; and during their preparation and trial it was impossible for him to do any business whatever of a private character outside the Attorney-General's office. Consequently his time was all occupied, and he informs me, and stated so to the Committee on Appropriations, that he communicated these facts to the Attorney-General and the Attorney-General proposed to pay him extra for his services during that time. It is a matter simply of $1,500, and I have felt it my duty, knowing the character of the services rendered by this gentleman in my own city, to move this amendment; and I trust that the House as a matter of simple justice will adopt it.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. Wells, of Missouri there were agos 50 new 50 new course vectors.

souri, there were—ayes 59, noes 52; no quorum voting.

Mr. ATKINS. I call for a further count. This is a bad precedent.

The CHAIRMAN. A quorum not having voted, the Chair will order tellers, and appoints the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. Wells, and the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. ATKINS.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported-ayes 81, noes 72. So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. ATKINS. I give notice that I will call for a vote upon that in the House.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I offer the following amendment which becomes necessary in consequence of the last amendment having been adopted:

Strike out in line 153 "$67,255.55" and insert "$69,755.55."

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. LYNDE. I offer the following amendment:

Amend after line 156 by inserting: To pay to S. S. Dixon, special counsel for United States at Milwaukee, $10,000.

I offer that amendment for the reason that Mr. Dixon was employed as special counsel to assist the United States in the whisky cases in Milwaukee. He is one of the ablest counsel in the city. He was occupied during the entire year in the prosecution of the whisky cases in Milwaukee and succeeded with the assistance of the United States district attorneys in recovering the sum of $150,000 to be paid into the United States Treasury. The time of Mr. Dixon was occupied during the whole year. He presented his bill to the Attorney-General and the Attorney-General put down the amount to be allowed him at $10,000. $10,000.

Mr. WALDRON. I desire to interrupt the gentleman and to say that that is provided for in the pending section.

Mr. LYNDE. I understood that only $5,000 is provided for in this section.

Mr. WALDRON. The gentleman is mistaken.
Mr. LYNDE. If I am mistaken I will withdraw my amendment.
Mr. BLOUNT. I will state to the gentleman that that is provided

Mr. LYNDE. Then I withdraw my amendment. Mr. WALDRON. I offer the following amendment:

After line 154 insert the following:
To pay James St. C. Boal, two months' special services as special counsel for United States, assisting the district attorney for the northern district of Illinois, from January 20 to March 20, 1876, $400.

This account of Mr. Boal's came in a letter from the Attorney-General, but at so late an hour that the claim was not acted on by the Committee on Appropriations. I offer the amendment on my own responsibility. The letter of the Attorney-General shows that Mr.

responsibility. The letter of the Attorney-General shows that Mr. Boal was appointed an assistant district attorney for the northern district of Illinois on the 20th day of January.

He commenced his services then, but he was not sworn in until the 20th day of March. The Attorney-General states that these services were rendered and that the charge is reasonable; but under the law he has no authority to pay him for the two months during which he served before he took the oath under his commission.

Mr. BLOUNT. Was he paid a salary or by fee?

Mr. WALDRON. The letter of the Attorney-General does not state that, but I suppose he was paid at the rate of $3,500 a year.

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was agreed to.

The question was taken on the amendment, and it was agreed to. The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

To pay W. A. Britton, late United States marshal for the western district of Arkansas, amount found due him by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873, $8,912.07, which is hereby reappropriated from the unexpended balance of the appropriation for expenses of courts for the said fiscal year and made available for said purpose.

Mr. DURHAM. I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose Mr. DURHAM. I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of making an inquiry. I desire to inquire of the gentleman having charge of this bill whether this account has really been allowed by the Department of the Treasury? I will state that I have some knowledge of this matter, as a member of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, and during the last Congress there was a large unascertained balance, according to his account, due to Mr. Brit ton, and upon the investigation of that committee a large portion of the accounts were determined to be false and fraudulent, and the committee referred the whole matter back to the Department of Justice. mittee referred the whole matter back to the Department of Justice. mittee referred the whole matter back to the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice, as I understand it, reported the matter to the Treasury Department. Now, if the officers of the Treasury Department have investigated this matter and come to the conclusion that this allowance is correct, I have not a word to say against it. But unless it has passed through the various channels which investigate these matters, I shall oppose the appropriation.

Mr. WALDRON. I send up a letter from the First Comptroller of the Treasury, which will fully answer the question of the gentleman from Kentucky.

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. U., February 5, 1877.

SIE: In compliance with your request of this morning I have to state that in the judicial investigation of the accounts of late Marshal W. A. Britton, of the western district of Afkansas, made pursuant to a resolution of the House of Representatives adopted June 9, 1874, the jury found that there was "due and owing to the defendant, W. A. Britton, from the United States the sum of $8,772.57."

From said amount there will be retained in the Treasury on account of money received by the late marshal, the sum of $500.50, leaving due him from the United States a balance of $8,412.07.

In addition to said balance there is due the late marshal the sum of $500 for advances made to the physician of the United States jail at Fort Smith, said amount having been deducted from the physician's account, adjusted at the Treasury.

The amount of both balances has been included in an estimate submitted to Congress of money required to close accounts for expenses of courts for the year ending June 30, 1873; said estimate amounts to $30,000.

Very respectfully,

R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

R. A. Burton, esq., Attorney for W. A. Britton.

Mr. DURHAM. I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For payment of the necessary expenses incurred in defending suits against the Secretary of the Treasury or his agents for the seizure of captured or abandoned property, and for the examination of witnesses in claims against the United States pending in any Department, and for the defense of the United States in the Court of Claims, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $15,000.

Mr. BELFORD. I move to insert at the close of that clause the following amendment:

For payment of salaries of the justices of the supreme court of the late Territory of Colorado, from the 1st day of August, 1876, to the 1st day of December, 1876, $3,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

I desire to state, in relation to that amendment, that on the 3d of March, 1875, Congress passed a bill enabling the people of Colorado to form a State government, and the sixth section of that act provided that the judges holding commissions should continue to act until their successors should be qualified. The President issued his proclamation admitting the State of Colorado into the Union on the 1st day of August last. These judges served until the 1st day of December, 1876, their successors not having qualified until that time. For that time they have received no salary from the Treasury. It seems to me that having performed these services as United States judges for six months, the Government should pay them for the services rendered in that behalf. And this amendment simply provides that they shall be paid for the time they actually served.

Mr. WALDRON. The legislative, &c., appropriation bill of the last session of Congress provided for the payment of the judges of Colorado so long as Colorado remained a Territory, and consequently they were paid up to the 1st of August, when the proclamation of the President of the United States admitted Colorado into the Union as a State under the law of Congress. It strikes me that any liability March, 1875, Congress passed a bill enabling the people of Colorado a State under the law of Congress. It strikes me that any liability for the payment of their salaries does not rest upon the United States.

Mr. BELFORD. I desire to say a word in reply to the gentleman from Michigan.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted on the pending amend-

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division there were ayes 26, noes not counted.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For printing and binding for the Patent Office by the Public Printer, $25,000; and so much of sections 490, 491, and 492 of the Revised Statutes as authorizes and provides for the printing for gratuitous distribution of specifications and drawings of patents is hereby repealed.

Mr. CONGER. I move, in line 179, to strike out "$25,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$41,000;" so that it will read:

For printing and binding for the Patent Office by the Public Printer, $41,000; and so much of sections 490,491, and 492 of the Revised Statutes as authorizes and provides for the printing for gratuitous distribution of specifications and drawings of patents is hereby repealed.

I call the attention of the committee to the fact that the printing of the Patent Office is increasing year by year. For the last fiscal year Congress appropriated $115,000 for the printing of the Patent Office, and the appropriation now for the deficiency is $25,000. I refer to the year before the current fiscal year. In the current fiscal year the appropriation was $96,000, and a little more was actually year the appropriation was $96,000, and a little more was actually expended on the necessary printing of the Official Gazette and the specifications and drawings required by law. For this fiscal year Congress appropriated $55,937.73, leaving a difference between the actual expenditures of former years and the appropriation for this year of over $41,000. The Committee on Appropriations have proposed to make up this deficiency to the extent of $25,000, leaving about $16,000 of necessary expenses unprovided for.

Now I desire to say that under the existing law the Official Gazette of the Patent Office is made the organ of the United States by law, and there are published in it all the specifications of patents, and this appropriation covers the printing of all the forms and blanks of the entire proceedings of the office. There would need to be, even if there were no increase in the business of the office of last year, an increased appropriation of over $16,000 to carry on the business of the Patent Office. The revenues of the Patent Office for the last fiscal year paid by the inventors of the country were $103,000 larger than year paid by the inventors of the country were $103,000 larger than the expenditures of the office, and there is now in the Treasury of the United States to-day more than $1,000,000 paid by the inventors of the country as fees, which under the law were required to be paid into the Treasury, more than the Treasury has been charged with for the support of the office. It is a self-sustaining and more than self-sustaining institution of the Government. Now the object of this publication is solely for the benefit of the inventors who pay this publication is solely for the benefit of the inventors who pay this surplus into the Treasury of the United States. It is stated that the surplus for the current year over and above the expenditures of the office will be $127,600. Therefore it is right and it is necessary for carrying on the office that it should be appropriated out of the Treasury, which has within it a fund belonging to this Patent Office, and that they should be allowed all that is proper and necessary to lay before the inventors of the country all the information in regard to patents, all the specifications, &c., which may enable them to understand inventions which have been made and to make their specifications for new inventions. fications for new inventions.

Let me say that it has been suggested by my colleague who has charge of this bill [Mr. WALDRON] that the remaining part of this paragraph provides for less printing, and therefore a less amount is needed to be appropriated. My colleague upon the Committee on Patents, who sits near me, [Mr. SAMPSON,] will move to strike out that portion of the paragraph for the very reason that the gratuitous distribution spoken of in it, and which is to cease if the latter part of this clause be adopted, is the gratuitous distribution to the library of every State and to the public libraries in every congressional district throughout the States. That is the gratuitous distribution which brings to the inventors of the entire country the Patent Office Gazette containing full information of the specifications and of new inventions. inventions.

[Here the hammer fell.]
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. WALDRON. It is true, as my colleague [Mr. CONGER] states, that the Commissioner of Patents asked for a deficiency appropriathat the Commissioner of Patents asked for a deficiency appropria-tion of $41,000. And judging by the expenditure for this purpose in the past, with no change of existing law, that amount of money would probably benecessary. But the Committee on Appropriations recommend an appropriation of only $25,000 for this purpose, and they couple with that recommendation a provision that will relieve the Patent Office to a great extent of the expense now incurred for these publications. It prohibits the gratuitous distribution hereafter of drawings and specifications of patents. If the paragraph is taken as a whole, and that provision is left in it, the appropriation of $25,000 is amply sufficient for the purpose. is amply sufficient for the purpose.

Mr. SAMPSON. I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Michigan in charge of this bill [Mr. Waldbon] takes the position that the sum of $25,000 will be sufficient for this purpose, for the reason that the expense will be greatly reduced by providing that hereafter there shall be no further gratuitous distribution of these drawings and specifications.

I do not believe, Mr. Chairman, that this House is prepared to amend the patent law in that particular. I remember that but a day or two ago it seemed to be the object of the House to protect persons who had innocently interfered with patent rights and had been using patent property. It has been heretofore, and is now, the policy of the law to advise the public of what has been patented in order that the law to advise the public of what has been patented in order that persons may not be led into any infringement of the rights of these patentees and the owners of patent property.

The only means of knowledge which the public now has of what may be patented are the drawings and specifications that may be on file in this city in the Patent Office, and on file in the capitals of the different States and Territories and in the public libraries of the country. This law which this bill proposes to amend for the purpose of try. This law which this bill proposes to amend for the purpose of reducing expenditures provides that there shall be kept one copy of these drawings and specifications on file in the capital of each State and Territory, and also in the office of the clerk of the district court for each district. It further provides that libraries throughout the country may be supplied with these drawings and specifications by simply paying the cost of binding and transportation.

This enables the public to consult these libraries in the different States in the clerk's offices of the different district courts, in order to ascertain what has been patented. If you denrive them of that right

States in the clerk's offices of the different district courts, in order to ascertain what has been patented. If you deprive them of that right, if you take away from them that means of information, there is no other way to obtain it except to apply to an attorney in Washington City. Then they must come to Washington in order to determine whether there has been a patent issued or not.

It will be impossible for the public to determine what patent property they may use and what they may not use; and whenever there is an infringement they will be liable to damages.

Now I say it is but just and proper and right to the public that these

Now I say it is but just and proper and right to the public that these specifications and drawings should be on file in the capitol of every State and Territory of this Union, and also on file in the office of the clerk of the district court of each district. We know that the courts of the United States have exclusive jurisdiction of this class of cases. It is frequently necessary to produce evidence in those courts. As the law now is, application can be made to the clerk of the court to procure this evidence, which is already there and certified, ready for introduction as evidence in the court. If you repeal this law, then it may be necessary for them to send to the city of Washington and procure these drawings and specifications before they can be introduced as evidence in these cases. duced as evidence in these case

It is but just and right that this law should remain. When the vote shall have been taken upon the pending amendment, I propose to move an amendment striking out the latter part of this paragraph move an amendment striking out the latter part of this paragraph repealing the existing law.

Mr. BLOUNT. The honorable gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. Holman, ] not myself, had the principal charge of the appropriation of this bill. The reasons, however, upon which this paragraph is based are evident upon a reference to it. The sections of the Revised Statutes which it is proposed to repeal are the following:

SEC. 490. The Commissioner of Patents is authorized to have printed, from time to time, for gratuitous distribution, not to exceed one hundred and fifty copies of the complete specifications and drawings of each patent hereafter issued, together with suitable indexes, one copy to be placed for free public inspection in each capitol of every State and Territory, one for the like purpose in the clerk's office of the district court of each judicial district of the United States, except when such offices are located in State or territorial capitols, and one in the Library of Congress, which copies shall be certified under the hand of the Commissioner and seal of the Patent Office, and shall not be taken from the depositories for any other purpose than to be used as evidence.

SEC. 491. The Commissioner of Patents is authorized to have printed such additional numbers of copies of specifications and drawings, certified as provided in the preceding section, at a price not to exceed the contract price for such drawings, for sale, as may be warranted by the actual demand for the same; and he is also authorized to furnish a complete set of such specifications and drawings to any public library which will pay for binding the same into volumes to correspond with those in the Patent Office, and for the transportation of the same, and which shall also provide for proper custody for the same, with convenient access for the public thereto, under such regulations as the Commissioner shall deem reasonable.

SEC. 492. The lithographing and engraving required by the two preceding sections shall be awarded to the lowest and best bidders for the interests of the Government, due regard being paid to the execution of the work, after due advertisement by the Congressional Printer under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing; but the Joint Committee on Printing may empower the Congressional Printer to make immediate contracts for engraving, whenever, in their opinion, the exigencies of the public service will not justify waiting for advertisement and award; or if, in the judgment of the Joint Committee on Printing the work can be performed under the direction of the Commissioner of Patents more advantageously than in the manner above prescribed, it shall be so done, under such limitations and conditions as the Joint Committee on Printing may from time to time prescribe.

The Committee on Appropriations see no necessity for supplying every library in every congressional district with these drawings and specifications free of charge. A large number of them are scarcely ever referred to for any purpose. The committee have thought that this appropriation should be reduced because there was no necessity this appropriation should be reduced because there was no necessity for this gratuitous distribution. It is a charge upon the General Government, and parties if they want this information could resort to the Department in this city and obtain it. It is a matter of their own concern, and not belonging to the people at large, to put this information in every possible place that can be conceived of simply to increase the amount of expenditures here.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BLOUNT. Certainly.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. The gentleman says that the furnishing of these drawings and specifications is a charge upon the General Government. How does he make that out when the inventors of the country not only pay all the expenses of the Patent Office but a large surplus besides?

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman will take into account all the expenditures connected with the Patent Office he will find that all this colat in reference to that office paying its own expenses is utterly false.

éclat in reference to that office paying its own expenses is utterly false.

Mr. SAMPSON. I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. CONGER. I repew the amendment. Gentlemen of the committee place this question on fair grounds; I have no fault to find in that respect. Whether this is a change of law in the interest of economy or not I am willing to leave the question to the judgment of every gentleman in this House who, within his own district, has seen the benefits of this gratuitous distribution. The existing law on this subject was passed in compliance with the demand of inventors of every State in this Union, except one, and from every Territory; upon such applications it was recommended by the Committee on Patents and was made the law of the land. Under this law we have the right to have in the library at each State capitol and in the office of the

to have in the library at each State capitol and in the office of the clerk of each district court one copy of this report; and every public and collegiate library in the State is also entitled to one copy.

Mr. BLOUNT. Not every collegiate library.

Mr. CONGER. Well, every public library. Thus places are provided to which men can go and obtain information in regard to these patents. Every member of this House has the right to designate eight libraries in his district, (if there be so many,) each of which may receive gratuitously one copy of the Official Gazette containing the specifications and drawings.

the specifications and drawings.

Now, I am in the habit of receiving during every session hundreds of letters of constituents of my own or other gentlemen, asking in regard to matters contained in these Official Gazettes; and I say that no more definite and exact means has ever been provided by which farmers, mechanics, and business men throughout the country can meet successfully the attempted fraud of imposters in regard to in-ventions. When men offer for sale fraudulent patents these records ventions. When men offer for sale fraudulent patents these records in the libraries and courts can be turned to and will show whether such patents have been issued and whether they are properly described. I venture to say that hundreds and thousands of dollars which would have been obtained by fraudulent venders of patents have been saved to the public through having these volumes in the district courts and the public libraries for ready reference. To these sources we all refer our constituents. In this way there is furnished the greatest check ever yet provided upon itinerant venders of false or fraudulent or assigned patents in the agricultural and rural districts.

I hope that the amendment I have offered may be adopted, and that the amendment of my colleague providing against any altera-tion of the law in this respect may also be adopted. I believe that tion of the law in this respect may also be adopted. I believe that the continuance of this system, which thus far has proved so beneficial, is of great importance to the people.

One word more. Prior to the passage of this law the Government was compelled to pay largely for publishing in one newspaper of every State what is now published in the Official Gazette. Prior to the publication of the Official Gazette and the adoption of the photolithographing process, every copy of the drawings and the specifications, which now cost less than five cents a piece, cost from $1 to $5. Under a former law fifty copies of all these specifications were distributed to members to be sent to their constituents. Thus there is a great saving to the Government in the expenditures for the Patent Office.

to members to be sent to their constituents. Into there is a great saving to the Government in the expenditures for the Patent Office. [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CONGER. I withdraw my formal amendment.

Mr. WALDRON. I renew the amendment. There is nothing in this provision of the bill that interferes at all with the publication of these drawings and specifications for sale; there is nothing in the provision that interferes with their publication for the use of public libraries at the cost of binding and printing. The only effect of the provision is to prohibit their gratuitous distribution to libraries at State capitals and to the offices of the clerks of the different district courts. I think that experience has shown that litigants in patent cases have never availed themselves of these drawings and specifications deposited at State capitals and in the offices of the district courts, but have in all cases sent to the Patent Office here for certified copies. The publication of these drawings and specifications for gratuitous distribution is intended to be repealed by this section, and that I regard as a useless expenditure. I trust, therefore, that the Committee of the Whole will stand by the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations.

the Committee of the Whole will stand by the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CONGER. One word in reply to my colleague, [Mr. Waldron.]

Our laws declare that this Official Gazette shall be taken as evidence in all courts. In this respect it has the same rank as a certified copy from the Patent Office, and it is thus used to-day in all courts as the authentic copy of the transactions of that office. In this way thousands of dellars have been event to litigate.

sands of dollars have been saved to litigants.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan what is the cost of these additional copies which we propose to save by this provision?

Mr. CONGER. It is supposed to be $16,000.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. There are only one hundred Sixteen thousand dollars for whatever number of copies are furnished gratuitously.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Only one hundred and fifty copies are authorized to be thus issued; the expense cannot be $16,000. Mr. SAMPSON obtained the floor.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman what amount of money will be saved by making this change in the law?

in the law?

Mr. SAMPSON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Townsend] makes the inquiry what it will cost to supply the libraries at the different State capitals with one copy each of this Official Gazette, and also to file one copy in the office of the clerk of each district court. It will cost $375 annually. I think that is a fair estimate.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. The whole amount?

Mr. SAMPSON. Yes, sir; the whole amount to supply a library in each State capital and also one to the clerk's office of the district court.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. What would be the aggregate?

gate?

Mr. SAMPSON. Taking this and the other section, and eight copies to each member, the whole cost would be about $15,000.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. Members do not get copies.

Mr. SAMPSON. Eight copies of this Official Gazette are distributed to each member; that is to say, he names the libraries and they are distributed to such libraries. Including in the number those called for by other libraries the whole amount would be about $15,000.

As I understand it, the gentleman from Michigan in charge of the bill takes the position this will not interfere with the distribution to those libraries willing to pay for binding and transportation. Now, I find on examination it repeals that provision by which libraries can obtain copies of this Patent Office Gazette by paying for binding and transportation.

transportation.

[Here the hammer fell.] Mr. WALDRON, by unanimous consent, withdrew his formal amendment to the amendment.

The question then recurred on Mr. WALDRON'S amendment.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 38, noes 56; no quorum voting.

Mr. CONGER demanded tellers.
Mr. CLYMER moved the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Eden reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had under consideration a bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution theorem.

Mr. CLYMER. I move the House take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. Pending that the Chair desires to lay before the House certain communications.

CAPTAIN THOMAS II. BRADLEY.

TheS PEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report on the services of Captain Thomas H. Bradley; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The SPEAKER also, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report on the survey of the Union Pacific Railway; which was referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad.

ARMY ESTIMATES.

The SPEAKER also, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting estimates for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

FORT PECK INDIANS.

The SPEAKER also, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting estimates of appropriation for Fort Peck Indians; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

MEMORIAL OF POTTAWATOMIES.

The SPEAKER also, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a memorial of the Pottawatomies in regard to payments under treaty; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

POST-ROUTE BILL

The SPEAKER also announced that he had appointed Mr. Clark of Missouri, Mr. Holman, and Mr. Cannon of Illinois as conferees on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads.

JOHN C. REA AND OTHERS.

On motion of Mr. GUNTER, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of the papers in the case of John C. Rea and others, no adverse report having been

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. John REILLY, for one day.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. JENKS. I ask my colleague to yield to me.
Mr. CLYMER. I yield to my colleague to make a request.
Mr. HALE. I demand the regular order of business.
Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is it understood when the House takes a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow it is then to take another recess until five minutes before twelve?

The SPEA FEE. No understanding of that earthes before twelve?

it is then to take another recess until five minutes before twelve?

The SPEAKER. No understanding of that sort has been reached.
Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I ask then, by unanimous consent, some such arrangement be made, so committees may have opportunity to meet.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection that when the House meets to-morrow at ten o'clock there shall be no business transactions, but a recess shall be taken until five minutes before twelve?

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.
Mr. HALE. That being done, I withdraw the demand for the regular order.

LOUISIANA COMMITTEE.

Mr. JENKS. I am instructed by the special committee appointed to investigate the election of the presidential electors in the State of of Louisiana to report to the House the testimony taken by that committee, and to ask that all such testimony which has not been printed be printed.

Mr. HALE. Is that by agreement of all the members of the com-

The SPEAKER. The committee have the right to report at any time

Mr. HALE. The privilege to report at any time is to report generally on a subject. I have no objection, however, to this if the committee agree to it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would rule under the right to report at any time the committee has the right to report a resolution to print the testimony taken.

print the testimony taken.

Mr. HALE. Does this exhaust their right?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Maine that the committee having the right to report at any time, have the right to report in part.

Mr. HALE. Have they the right to report from time to time and keep on reporting?

The SPEAKER. Such has been the ruling.

Mr. HALE. Then we must be more careful in giving such authority bereafter.

The SPEAKER. If there be any complaint, it does not lie against the gentleman from Maine nor the Chair, as the power granted in this case was given under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I wish to say to the gentlemen of that committee that if this committee is now reporting generally I want them to give us some information about the outrage which I believe has been perpetrated upon the privileges of this House, relating to the printing of testimony taken, by a private printer and not by the Public Printer. Public Printer.

The SPEAKER. Is that inquiry propounded to the Chair?
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. No, but to the committee. I want to know if there is any truth in the reports which have appeared in the public press that they have printed a portion of the testimony without an order of the House.

Mr. DANFORD. Is this anything more than a request upon the part of the committee to print the testimony now received by them?

The SPEAKER. That is all.

Mr. JENKS. I demand the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. CONGER. I object, unless I can be heard for a moment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is desirous of hearing everybody who

The SPEAKER. The Chair is desirous of hearing everybody who desires the right to speak.

Mr. CONGER. Reserving the right to object to this resolution, I wish to say that it calls for the printing of such parts of the testimony as have not been already printed. I am informed that a portion of that testimony, mutilated and partially erased, has been printed, not by an order of the House, but by a private printer. It may be that this resolution is not in the regular form ordering the printing of testimony. I insist that it must be in the usual form.

Mr. JENKS. That state of facts does not exist in reference to the report of this committee.

Mr. CONGER. I am informed that the matter to which I refer re-lates to another committee, and if so, I do not wish to apply my objections to this case.

Mr. DANFORD. It does not apply to this case.

Mr. BANKS. I ask that the resolution be again read.

The resolution was again read.

Mr. JENKS. The resolution is before the House, and I move the previous question upon it.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered; and under the operation thereof the ressolution was agreed to.

Mr. JENKS moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SALARY OF A MEMBER OF CONGRESS.

Mr. CAULFIELD, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the salary of JAMES B. BELFORD, the member from the new State of Colorado, shall begin from the date of his election, to wit, the 3d day of October, 1876.

Mr. CAULFIELD moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE DOCUMENT NO. 1182.

Mr. BANNING, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back Executive Document No. 1182, and moved that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the same, and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

JAMES CULLIN.

Mr. STONE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4595) granting a pension to James Cullin, father of the late Timothy Cullin, private in Company E, Second Battalion Seventy-eighth Regiment of United States Infantry; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

JAMES MACKLIN.

Mr. WILLIS, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4596) for the relief of James Macklin, a lieutenant of the Eleventh Infantry United States Army; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Militay Affairs, and ordered to be

MARY SHERIDAN.

Mr. WILLIS also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4597) granting a pension to Mary Sheridan, mother of James Sheridan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WILLIS also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4598) granting a pension to Robert Butler; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM A. BRITTON.

On motion of Mr. McCRARY, by unanimous consent, the Committee on the Judiciary was discharged from the further consideration of the memorial of William A. Britton, of the western district of Arkansas, and the same was referred to the Committee on Appro-

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THROCKMORTON. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry. The bill regulating freights over the Omaha bridge upon the Union Pacific Railroad was made the special order for to-day, and I would like to inquire if it would not be the regular order?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas rises to inquire whether the Omaha bridge bill, which was assigned for Tuesday the 6th day of February, is not now in order. That day has not been reached and the gentleman asks unanimous consent that that bill may be considered when next we shall have a day after the morning hour. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

W. H. CUMMINS.

Mr. KASSON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4599) granting a pension to W. H. Cummins, late a private in Company H, Eighth Iowa Infantry Volunteers; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

AMERICAN REGISTRY TO A BRITISH BARK.

Mr. CRAPO, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4600) granting American registry to the British bark W. A. Farnsworth, and changing the name of said vessel to The Lapwing.

SARAH WHARTON.

Mr. FLYE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4601) granting a pension to Sarah Wharton; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

CAPITOL GROUNDS.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

Whereas it is a matter of great public interest that the beautiful but comparatively naked grounds about the Capitol should be adorned with trees and shrubbery at the earliest practicable day;

And whereas the persons now employed to accomplish this very desirable object seem to be profoundly ignorant of the first elements of the science of arboricultseem to be profoundly ignorant of the first elements of the science of arboriculture; this appears:

First, by their neglect to remove all superfluous branches;
Second, by omitting to form symmetrical heads to the trees; and Third, by neglect to cut in the branches which form the heads, in consequence of which neglect a very unusual and unnecessary proportion of said trees, amounting in some parts of the grounds to one-half, have died, and those which have survived have no beauty of form and little constitutional vigor: Therefore,

*Resolved*, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds be, and they are hereby, instructed to inquire into the necessity of causing some suitable person to be employed to perform this important work.

MARTHA E. BETTIS.

Mr. RIDDLE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4602) for the relief of Mrs. Martha E. Bettis, of Sumner County, Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

SYDNEY F. STILLEY.

Mr. HYMAN, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4603) for the relief of Sidney F. Stilley, late postmaster at Washington, North Carolina; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

E. R. AMES.

Mr. SPRINGER, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4604) to authorize the President to re-instate E. R. Ames, late captain Sixth Infantry, and assign him to a regiment; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MILO M. ADAMS.

Mr. SPRINGER also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4605) granting an honorable discharge to Milo M. Adams, of Company B, One hundred and eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

OWEN T. EDGAR AND OTHERS.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4606) for the relief of Owen T. Edgar, Charles G. Evans, William W. Graham, Charles B. Smith, and the heirs of Joseph J. P. Ouidan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION.

Mr. SAYLER. I ask unanimous consent to present at this time a memorial from the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, and as it is very brief I will ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CONGER. What is the subject of it? I want to know before we give consent.

Mr. SAYLER. It relates to a bill providing for another explora-

Mr. SATLER. It relates to a bill providing for another explora-tion to the north pole.
Mr. CONGER. I have no objection.
No objection being made, the memorial was received, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE

At a regular session of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, held this day, the following resolutions were adopted:

"To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

"Whereas the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, whose province relates specially to commerce and trade, is assured that the security and extension of the commerce of the world depend largely upon accurate information respecting the physics of the globe, and that most of such information already acquired has been facilitated by observations made within the arctic regions, and that the benefits accruing directly and indirectly to the commerce of the world from polar explorations are more than equal to the money expended in such explorations: Therefore, "Reit resolved, That we, in the interest of science as well as in behalf of commerce and trade—mutually and inseparably linked together—heartily approve and respectfully urge the passage of the bill providing for another and eminently practicable expedition toward the north pole for purposes of exploration and the establishment of a colony at some point north of the eighty-first degree of north latitude.

tablishment of a colony as some provided an appropriation of $50,000 by the General Government for this purpose.

"Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions be transmitted to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A true copy from the minutes of the chamber.

B. EGGLESTON, President.

B. EGGLESTON, President. BRENT ARNOLD, Secretary.

HELEN M. STANSBURY.

Mr. RAINEY, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 832) to increase the pension of Helen M. Stansbury; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar. Mr. RAINEY. The Committee on Invalid Pensions have adopted the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions upon this bill, and I ask that it be reprinted for the use of the House.

No objection being made, it was so ordered.

MARGARET A. GILLEM.

Mr. RAINEY also, by unanimous consent, reported from the same committee adversely upon the petition of Mrs. Margaret A. Gillem, praying for an increase of pension; which was laid on the table and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

UNCLAIMED PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4607) to provide for the disposition of unclaimed public lands; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

FORT HALL INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. FENN, by unanimous consent, presented the memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Idaho, for reducing the limits of the Fort Hall Indian reservation; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

W. S. M'COMB.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for consideration at this time Senate bill No. 286, for the relief of W. S. McComb, of the State of Georgia.

The bill, which was read, directs the proper accounting officer of the Treasury to audit and settle the claim of W. S. McComb, of the State of Georgia, for furnishing stable-room for Government animals after the suppression of hostilities in the late war, and for which a after the suppression of hostilities in the late war, and for which a voucher now on file in the Treasury Department was given, and to allow him the sum of $195, the amount named in the voucher.

Mr. CONGER. That should go to the Private Calendar.

Mr. RUSK. Let it be referred to some committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. If there is objection to its present consideration, I will ask that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. EDEN. It should go to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is a matter that came up since the war, and should go to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The bill says that there is a voucher on file for that amount of money, and it must be an exception to the general rule. general rule.

Mr. CONGER. Let it go to a committee.
Mr. BLOUNT. It was before a Senate committee and passed without objection.

Mr. CONGER. Let it go to a House committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

No objection being made, the bill was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. BAGBY, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the following bills; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (S. No. 813) granting a pension to Lawrence P. N. Landrum; A bill (S. No. 882) granting a pension to Stillman E. Diggs, of Hampton, Virginia; and A bill (S. No. 980) granting a pension to Irena Garrett.

SURVEY OF UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the survey of the Union Pacific Railway; which was referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, and ordered to be printed.

LUCY A. BARKER.

Mr. WATTERSON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4608) for the benefit of the heirs of Lucy A. Barker; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

6th day of February, is not now in order. That day has not been reached and the gentleman asks unanimous consent that that bill may be considered when next we shall have a day after the morning hour. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

W. H. CUMMINS.

Mr. KASSON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4599) granting a pension to W. H. Cummins, late a private in Company H, Eighth Iowa Infantry Volunteers; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

AMERICAN REGISTRY TO A BRITISH BARK.

Mr. CRAPO, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4600) granting American registry to the British bark W. A. Farnsworth, and changing the name of said vessel to The Lapwing.

SARAH WHARTON.

Mr. FLYE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4601) granting a pension to Sarah Wharton; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

CAPITOL GROUNDS.

Mr. LEAVENWORTH, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

Public Buildings and Grounds:

Whereas it is a matter of great public interest that the beantiful but comparatively maked grounds about the Capitol should be adorned with trees and shrubbery at the earliest practicable day;
And whereas the persons now employed to accomplish this very desirable object seem to be profoundly ignorant of the first elements of the science of arboriculture; this appears:

First, by their neglect to remove all superfluous branches;
Second, by omitting to form symmetrical heads to the trees; and Third, by neglect to cut in the branches which form the heads, in consequence of which neglect a very unusual and unnecessary proportion of said trees, amounting in some parts of the grounds to one-half, have died, and those which have survived have no beauty of form and little constitutional vigor: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds be, and they are hereby, instructed to inquire into the necessity of causing some suitable person to be employed to perform this important work.

MARTHA E. BETTIS.

Mr. RIDDLE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4602) for the relief of Mrs. Martha E. Bettis, of Sumner County, Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

SYDNEY F. STILLEY.

Mr. HYMAN, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4603) for the relief of Sidney F. Stilley, late postmaster at Washington, North Carolina; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

E. R. AMES.

Mr. SPRINGER, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4604) to authorize the President to re-instate E. R. Ames, late captain Sixth Infantry, and assign him to a regiment; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MILO M. ADAMS.

Mr. SPRINGER also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4605) granting an honorable discharge to Milo M. Adams, of Company B, One hundred and eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

OWEN T. EDGAR AND OTHERS.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4606) for the relief of Owen T. Edgar, Charles G. Evans, William W. Graham, Charles B. Smith, and the heirs of Joseph J. P. Ouidan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION.

Mr. SAYLER. I ask unanimous consent to present at this time a memorial from the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, and as it is very brief I will ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CONGER. What is the subject of it? I want to know before

Mr. SAYLER. It relates to a bill providing for another explora-

Mr. CONGER. I have no objection.

No objection being made, the memorial was received, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

It is as ionows:

Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange,

February 2, 1877.

At a regular session of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, held this day, the following resolutions were adopted:

"To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

"Whereas the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, whose province relates specially to commerce and trade, is assured that the security and extension of the commerce of the world depend largely upon accurate information respecting the physics of the globe, and that most of such information already acquired has been facilitated by observations made within the arctic regions, and that the benefits accruing directly and indirectly to the commerce of the world from polar explorations are more than equal to the money expended in such explorations: Therefore, "Be it resolved, That we, in the interest of science as well as in behalf of commerce and trade—mutually and inseparably linked together—heartily approve and respectfully urge the passage of the bill providing for another and eminently practicable expedition toward the north pole for purposes of exploration and the establishment of a colony at some point north of the eighty-first degree of north latitude.

tablishment of a colony assembly prove of an appropriation of $50,000 by the General Government for this purpose.

"Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions be transmitted to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A true copy from the minutes of the chamber.

B. EGGLESTON, President.

B. EGGLESTON, President. BRENT ARNOLD, Secretary.

HELEN M. STANSBURY.

Mr. RAINEY, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 832) to increase the pension of Helen M. Stansbury; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

Mr. RAINEY. The Committee on Invalid Pensions have adopted the report of the Senate Committee on Pensions upon this bill, and I ask that it be reprinted for the use of the House.

No objection being made, it was so ordered.

MARGARET A. GILLEM.

Mr. RAINEY also, by unanimous consent, reported from the same committee adversely upon the petition of Mrs. Margaret A. Gillem, praying for an increase of pension; which was laid on the table and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

UNCLAIMED PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4607) to provide for the disposition of unclaimed public lands; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

FORT HALL INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. FENN, by unanimous consent, presented the memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Idaho, for reducing the limits of the Fort Hall Indian reservation; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

W. S. M'COMB.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for consideration at this time Senate bill No. 286, for the relief of W. S. McComb, of the State of Georgia.

The bill, which was read, directs the proper accounting officer of the Treasury to audit and settle the claim of W. S. McComb, of the State of Georgia, for furnishing stable-room for Government animals after the suppression of hostilities in the late war, and for which a after the suppression of hostilities in the late war, and for which a voucher now on file in the Treasury Department was given, and to allow him the sum of $195, the amount named in the voucher.

Mr. CONGER. That should go to the Private Calendar.

Mr. RUSK. Let it be referred to some committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. If there is objection to its present consideration, I will ask that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. EDEN. It should go to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is a matter that came up since the war, and should go to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The bill says that there is a voucher on file for that amount of money, and it must be an exception to the general rule.

general rule.

Mr. CONGER. Let it go to a committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. It was before a Senate committee and passed without objection.
Mr. CONGER.
Mr. BLOUNT.

Let it go to a House committee. Then I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

No objection being made, the bill was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. BAGBY, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the following bills; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (S. No. 813) granting a pension to Lawrence P. N. Landrum;
A bill (S. No. 882) granting a pension to Stillman E. Diggs, of Hampton, Virginia; and A bill (S. No. 980) granting a pension to Irena Garrett.

SURVEY OF UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the survey of the Union Pacific Railway; which was referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, and ordered to be printed.

LUCY A. BARKER.

Mr. WATTERSON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4608) for the benefit of the heirs of Lucy A. Barker; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

INDIANS IN NEW YORK, NORTH CAROLINA, AND MICHIGAN.

Mr. SEELYE. I ask unanimous consent to report back from the Committee on Indian Affairs a bill to which I think there will be no objection, and to ask for its consideration at this time.

The title of the bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. No. 3593) to provide for the transfer to the States of Michigan, New York, and North Carolina of the care and custody of the Indians and their lands now found within those States.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Bettenacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized to negotiate with the governors of the States of Michigan, New York, and North Carolina, and with the Indian tribes occupying reservations within said States, for a transfer to these States respectively of the special guardianship now exercised by the United States over these Indians and their lands.

SEC. 2. That whenever it shall appear that either of the States aforesaid will accept the care and custody of the Indians and their lands within its borders, and the Indians shall give their assent to the same, the special guardianship now exercised by the United States over these Indians and their lands shall cease; and the annual interest upon all stocks and bonds now held in trust for such Indians by the United States shall thenceafter be paid to such officer of the said State as may be authorized to receive the same.

Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas. I object.
Mr. O'BRIEN. I call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] that the House take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.
Mr. CONGER. Will the Chair please state the understanding as to the order of business when we meet to-morrow?

The SPEAKER. The understanding is, that at ten o'clock to-morrow morning there shall be a further recess until five minutes before twelve o'clock.

The motion of Mr. Clymer was agreed to; and accordingly (at three o'clock and thirty minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. AINSWORTH: The petition of 103 citizens of Adel, Iowa, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. J. H. BAGLEY: Three petitions from citizens of Illinois,

By Mr. J. H. BAGLEY: Three petitions from citizens of Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BANKS: The petition of W. C. Thompson, of Lynn, Massachusetts, that greenbacks may be received in payment of customs duties and all other dues to the Government, to the same committee.

By Mr. BLACKBURN: The petition of citizens of Woodford County, Kentucky, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BOONE: The petition of J. M. Gill and others, of Kentucky, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois: The petition of citizens of Illinois, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee ou the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. CANNON of Illah: The petition of citizens of Rush Lake.

By Mr. CANNON, of Utah: The petition of citizens of Rush Lake,

By Mr. CANNON, of Utah: The petition of citizens of Rush Lake, Utah, for cheap telegraphy, to the same committee.

By Mr. CASWELL: The petition of G. Van Steinwick and 136 other citizens of La Crosse, Wisconsin, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. CATE: The petition of J. W. Bingham and others of New London, Wisconsin, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CAULFIELD: The petition of citizens of Charleston, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CRAPO: The petition of the National Bank of Redemption and 13 other banking institutions of Massachusetts, of similar import, to the same committee.

port, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of T. Hoffman and 26 others of Stockbridge,

Also, the petition of T. Holman and 26 others of Stockbridge, Massachusetts, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. CUTLER: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Morris Plains to Parsippany, via Littletown, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DAVIS: Three papers relating to the establishment of post-routes between Clayton and Wilson, between Nashville and Peachtree, and between Raleigh and Rogers's Store, North Carolina, to the same committee.

same committee.

By Mr. DAVY: The petition of citizens of Webster, New York, for

By Mr. DAVY: The petition of citizens of Webster, New York, for cheap telegraphy, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of citizens of Rochester, New York, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. DURAND: The petition of F. F. Hyatt and 42 other citizens of Flint, Michigan, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. DURHAM: The petition of citizens of Lexington, Kentucky, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. EGBERT: The petition of citizens of East Greene, Pennsylvania, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of citizens of Scranton, Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. FINLEY: The petition of citizens of Saint Augustine, Florida, for the donation of a certain lot of land in said city by the United States on which to erect a church building, to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. FORNEY: The petition of citizens of Mobile, Alabama, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means Means.

By Mr. FORT: Two petitions, one from James Rodgers and 170 other citizens of Illinois, the other from E. A. Bowen and 100 other citizens of Mendota, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. GLOVER: Two petitions, one from 57 citizens of Bates and Butler Counties, the other from 154 citizens of the twelfth congressional district of Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee. Also, the petition of J. F. Howard, M. D., Columbus Alexander, J. E. Morgan, M. D., and 26 other citizens of the District of Columbia, for an appropriation for the erection of the Washington Inebriate Asylum, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. GOODE: The petition of the Mexican Veteran Association of Norfolk and Portsmouth, Virginia, that pensions may be granted to them without reference to political disabilities, and that the same may date from the time of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. valid Pensions.

By Mr. GUNTER: The petition of John A. Purner, of Washington, District of Columbia, for compensation for damage to his property by reason of a change of the drainage of the grounds of the Soldiers' Home, to the Committee for the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HALE: The petition of Daniel Farnsworth and 37 other citizens of Jonesborough, Maine, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HARRISON: Three petitions from citizens of Manchester, Chicago, and Ford County, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of the Board of Trade of Chicago, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee. By Mr. GUNTER: The petition of John A. Purner, of Washington,

Also, the petition of the Board of Trade of Chicago, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. HAYMOND: The petition of 21 citizens of Monticello, Indiana, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. HENKLE: The petition of the mayor and city council of Baltimore, Maryland, for the removal of Fort Carroll from the Potapsco River, to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HILL: Memorial of Mary Ann Washington, that her title to certain Lands at Hot Springs, Arkansas, may not be destroyed, to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. HOPKINS: The petition of 151 bank officers and business men of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HUNTON: Two petitions, one from R. B. Holladay, cashier of the Union Bank of Winchester, the other from other citizens of Winchester, Virginia, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. KASSON: The petition of citizens of Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

port, to the same committee.

By Mr. KIDDER: The petition of 250 citizens of Northeast Dakota, for a new land district in Northern Dakota and location of local land office therefor at Pembina, Dakota Territory, to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. LANDERS, of Connecticut: The petition of Charles W.

Brown and 30 others of Stamford, Connecticut, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana: The petition of 55 citizens of Greens-By Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana: The petition of 55 citizens of Greensburgh, Indiana, that pensioners be granted pensions from the date of their discharge, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, the petition of 55 citizens of Cartersburgh, Indiana, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: Two petitions, one from citizens of Loudonville, the other from citizens of Pomeroy, Ohio, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEAVENWORTH: The petition of Lewis H. Redfield, William Brown Smith, and 38 other citizens of Canandaigua, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. LE MOYNE: Three petitions, from citizens of Chicago and Douglas County, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. LYNCH: Two petitions, one from David Furguson and 20 others, bankers of Milwaukee, the other from M. W. McDonnell and 32 others, bankers and citizens of Wisconsin, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. MACKEY: Three petitions, from citizens of Dauphin and Lebanon Counties, from citizens of Germantown, and from citizens of Freeport, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. MAGOON: The petition of L. D. Hopkins and 62 other citizens of Crawford County, Wisconsin, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MAISH: Three petitions from citizens of Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Means

By Mr. MORGAN: A paper relating to the establishment of a postroute from Dayton, via Shoalsburgh, to Murphysburgh, Missouri, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MUTCHLER: Two petitions from citizens of Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'NEILL: The petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of physicians and surgeons, for the printing by the Government of the subject catalogue of the National Medical Library, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. PAGE: Memorial of J. M. Hogan, for compensation on account of damages sustained by depredations of Indians, to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. PHILIPS, of Missouri: The petition of citizens of Missouri, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PHILIPS, of Kansas: The petition of citizens of Topeka, Kansas, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Ways and Means.

By Mr. PLAISTED: The petition of J. Dingley and 15 other citizens of Auburn, Maine, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. REA: The petition of citizens of the States of Missouri and Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. JOHN REILLY: Four petitions from 60 citizens of Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. ROBERTS: The petition of citizens of Baltimore, Maryland, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. ROSS, of New Jersey: Five petitions from citizens of Linden, Rahway, Woodbridge, New Brunswick, Randolph, Rochester, Jersey City, and Pitts Grove, New Jersey, of similar import, to the den, Ranway, Woodbridge, New Britiswick, Randship, Rockett, Jersey City, and Pitts Grove, New Jersey, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SCALES: A paper relating to a post-route from Centre to Greensborough, by way of Ryan Old Cross Roads, North Carolina, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SHEAKLEY: The petition of citizens of Allentown, Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means

By Mr. SPARKS: The petition of citizens of Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SPRINGER: Four petitions from citizens of Quincy, Illinois, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Aledo, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. STEVENSON: Three petitions from citizens of Rock Island,
Jacksonville, and Quincy, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. THOMAS: The petition of 21 citizens of Baltimore, Mary land, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania: The petition of W. H. Foster and 43 other citizens of Honesdale, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. TUFTS: The petition of citizens of Decorah, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. VAN VORHES: The petition of John G. Peebles and other officers of various banking institutions of Portsmouth, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WALLACE: The petition of Francis P. Steel and other bankers of Philadelphia, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WALSH: The petition of H. H. Haines and other citizens of Washington County, Maryland, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WARNER: The petition of John B. Robertson and 81 other citizens of Connecticut, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware: Three petitions from citizens of Wilmington, Milford, and Newark, Delaware, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. W. B. WILLIAMS: The petition of Charles McKillip and 31 other citizens of Muskegon, Michigan, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WOOD, of Pennsylvania: The petition of citizens of Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

IN SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 7, 1877-10 a.m.

The Senate resumes its session. On motion of Mr. SARGENT, the Senate took a recess until twelve o'clock.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Byron Sunderland, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, February 6, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the House had appointed Mr. John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Mr. William S. Holman of Indiana, and B. CLARK, Jr., of Missouri, Mr. WILLIAM S. HOLMAN of Indiana, and Mr. Alexander Camprell of Illinois, conferees on the part of the House at the further conference heretofore asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads.

The message also announced that the House had non-concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4188) making appropriations for fortifications and for other works of defense, and for the amendment thereof for the fixed war working Let 20, 1878.

for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes,

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. No. 4572) to remove the political disabilities of James D. Johnston, of Savannah, Georgia, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MILITARY ACADEMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate proceeded to consider its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill (H. R. No. 4306) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

On motion of Mr. WINDOM, it was Resolved. That the Senate insist upon its amendments to the said bill disagreed to by the House of Representatives and ask a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

By unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the President pro tempore.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed Messrs. Allison, Logan, and Wallace the conferees on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HOWE presented a petition of Charles J. L. Meyer and others, and a petition of Edward Pier and others, of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, praying the repeal of the law imposing a tax on the deposits, circulation, and capital of all banks; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BOGY presented a memorial of business men of Missouri, remonstrating against the passage of the House bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Glasgow in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CONKLING presented the petition of Captain Egbert Thompson, United States Navy, praying to be restored to the active list of the Navy; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HOWE, from the Committee on the Library, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. No. 1231) to provide additional accommodation for the Library of Congress; which was read twice

Mr. INGALLS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (8. No. 1212) to enable Indians to become citizens of the United States, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. WRIGHT, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (8. No. 1029) for the relief of persons having claims against the United States under the provisions of the captured and abandoned property act, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 432) to re-open, state, and settle the claims of the several States against the United States for advances made in the war of 1812, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2833) for the relief of Susan P. Vance, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

be printed.

Mr. CRAGIN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 497) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. No. 932) for the relief of David De Haven, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. DORSEY asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (8. No. 1232) to repeal an act entitled "An act to incorporate the National Capital Insurance Company," and to provide for winding up the affairs of said corporation; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Colum-

Mr. JONES, of Florida, asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (8. No. 1233) to authorize William A. Dorner and others to construct a ship-canal at the head of Lake George, Florida; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. LOGAN asked, and by universal consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (8. No. 1234) to repeal the joint resolution providing for the postponement of the publication of the Army regulations, approved Angust 15, 1876; which was read twice by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

POST-ROUTE BILL.

Mr. HAMLIN. I move that the Senate now concur with the House of Representatives in appointing a new conference on the bill (H. R. No. 3628) establishing post-roads.

The motion was agreed to.

The President pro tempore was authorized by unanimous consent to appoint the committee on the part of the Senate, and Messrs. Ham-LIN, DORSEY, and DAVIS were appointed.

THE LEGISLATIVE DAY.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I present a resolution for reference to the Committee on Rules in regard to the legislative day. I do not know that any trouble will arise from the present mode of proceeding, but I think it would be well to have the Committee on Rules consider whether difficulties may not result.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That during the sessions of the commission appointed under the act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4. A. D. 1877, each calendar day shall by each House, when in session, be considered a day for legislative purposes.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. DAVIS. I rise to what is in the nature of a personal explana-tion. I find in this morning's Union, published in this city, a letter purporting to have been addressed to myself, headed "Pension Bureau Frauds." It says:

The following copy of a letter addressed to Senator Davis by a former employe of the Pension Bureau has been furnished us for publication.

A letter similar to the one here published was handed me a week or so ago by the gentleman who signs this letter, T. P. Kane, formerly in the special service of the Pension Bureau. I know nothing of the publication. It in no way came through me.

I have also a letter this morning from the Commissioner of Pensions calling my attention to the letter in the Union, and asking certain questions. I know nothing of the truth of any of the charges made. They may or may not be true. If true, they ought to be looked into. The subject is one for others than myself to look into. The chairman of the Committee on Pensions probably will see the letter and see if there is anything in it worthy of notice.

I make this explanation, it being due as I believe to myself to state that the letter did not come from me for publication.

ACCOUNTS OF KASKASKIAS, PEORIAS, ETC.

Mr. CLAYTON. I move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1142) to authorize and empower the Secretary of the Interior to adjust and settle the account of the Kaskaskia, Peoria, Pianketo adjust and settle the account of the Kaskaskia, Peoria, Piankeshaw, and Wea Indians.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the motion?

Mr. WINDOM. I do not object if it does not give rise to debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will, if there be no objection, put the question on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

of the bill.

Mr. WINDOM. I object if it gives rise to debate.

Mr. CLAYTON. I think it will not. I should like to state though in a very few words what this bill proposes to do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be objection the motion cannot be entertained at this time.

Mr. INGALLS. Does one objection prevent its consideration?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One objection prevents a motion to proceed to the consideration of a particular bill within the morning hour.

Mr. INGALLS. I suppose that applies to all bills. It is rather a

Mr. INGALES. I suppose that applies to all blus. It is rather a cut-throat game.

Mr. CLAYTON. Yes, it is something we can all play at.

Mr. WINDOM. I have no objection to a brief statement from the Senator from Arkansas, provided it does not lead to debate; but there is other business that I think ought to be heard in the morning hour.

Mr. CLAYTON. I shall not press the matter. I merely reported the bill from the committee, and of course I consider it my duty to call it up. If any Senator sees proper to interpose his objection, of course he can do it.

Mr. WINDOM. I am entirely willing to reserve my objection until the Senator makes a brief statement; and then if it gives rise to dethe Senator makes a brief statement; and then if it gives rise to debate, I must object.

Mr. CLAYTON. There is a written report; but the report is rather lengthy and therefore I propose to make a brief statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there any objection to the Senator making a statement? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CLAYTON. This bill is reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs. The committee examined into the papers before them and the statements from the Department, and became satisfied that certain sums of money had been diverted from this trust fund. This fund was held in trust by the Government for the benefit of these Indians, and it was required to be invested in securities. The committee became satisfied that there was a claim on the Government for mittee became satisfied that there was a claim on the Government for the improper diversion of certain portions of the fund; but the committee did not feel disposed to enter into all the details of the statement, and therefore by an amendment to the bill the committee pro-pose to have the whole matter referred to the Secretary of the Interior who may re-open these accounts and examine them, and if he finds that any money has been misapplied or misappropriated or diverted from the funds, to report that fact to the next session of Congress. That is all the bill provides for as proposed to be amended; and it calls for no appropriation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to this motion?

The Chair hears none. The Chair will put the question on the mo-

The motion was agreed to; and the bill was considered as in Com-

The motion was agreed to; and the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Indian Affairs reported an amendment to the bill to strike out, commencing on line 11, the following words:

And to enable the Secretary of the Interior to indemnify the funds of said Indians for any diminutions which it may have sustained thereby, the sum of thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That in such readjustment and settlement members who became citizens under the treaty of 1867 shall be treated in all respects as if they were at present members of the tribe, and entitled to an equal share of the tribal property, less any amount heretofore received by them.

And in lian thereof to insert.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

And report the sum so found, if any, to Congress at its next session.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amend-ment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREEDMAN'S SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY.

Mr. SHERMAN. I now call up the bill which was pending yesterday morning. It is important to have it disposed of. It is the bill in regard to the Freedman's Bank. My friend from Massachusetts [Mr. BOUTWELL] has prepared an amendment which I think will remove the only objection made to the bill yesterday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to this motion? The Chair hears none. The Chair will put the question on the mo-

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4284) authorizing the commissioners of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to buy in certain real and other property, and to sell the same at public or private sale, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will now offer as an amendment, and I call the attention of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON] to it, this addition to the first section:

Provided, That no sale of real estate shall be made by said commissioners except at public auction, of which due notice shall be given, unless such sale and the terms thereof shall have been first approved by one of the justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

I ought to say that this will involve some expense, but on the whole, if there is any suspicion about the matter, it is better that it should be done than that the sales should be made without limit.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JAMES B. EADS.

Mr. WINDOM. I move to take from the table House bill No. 4540, known as the Eads bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H.R. No. 4540) to provide for the payment of James B. Eads for the construction of jetties and other auxiliary works to make a wide and deep channel between the South Pass of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico, under contract with the United States, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WINDOM. I moved to take this bill from the table for the purpose of moving its indefinite postponement under instruction of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Before the Senator makes his motion I wish he would give some reasons for it.

Mr. WINDOM. I submit a printed report from the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report submitted by Mr. WINDOM, from the Committee on Appropriations, on the 6th instant:

The Secretary read the Ioliowing report stimilited by Mr. Window, from the Committee on Appropriations, on the 6th instant:

The Committee on Appropriations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4540) appropriating $500,000 to pay the requisition of the Secretary of War, in favor of James B. Eads, on account of the improvement of the bar at the South Pass of the Mississippi River, respectfully report:

That the act approved March 3, 1875, under which said improvement is being made, provides that when certain conditions therein stated shall be fully complied with on the part of said Eads, and a specified width and depth of channel shall have been obtained, the United States shall pay to said Eads $500,000.

The act makes it the duty of the Secretary of War "to embody in his annual report the payments made from time to time under this act, and the probable times when other payments will become due," and it declares—

"Sec. 13. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to carry into effect the provisions of this act on behalf of the United States, and when the said Eads and his associates shall from time to time have fulfilled on their part the several foregoing conditions of this act, to draw his warrants upon the Treasurer of the United States in favor of said Eads, or his legal representatives, in payment of the aforesaid amounts as they respectively become due by the provisions of this act."

And

"Sec. 14. That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States, bearing 5 per cent, interest, of the character and description set out in the act entitled "An act to anthorize the refunding of the public debt," approved July 14, 1870, to said Eads or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid warrants of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of who say provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money."

The committee, having carefully examined the law and the facts, find—
First. That the said Eads, having fulfilled the required condition of the contract on his part, and secured the specified width and depth of channel, received the requisition or warrant of the Secretary of War for $500,000 on the 19th of January, 1877.

Second. That Congress had not "previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money."

Third. That no appropriation having been "previously provided," Mr. Eads, on the 20th of January, 1877, demanded payment of the said requisition in bonds.

The committee is clearly of the opinion that Mr. Eads is entitled, under the law to receive at once the bonds therein described, at par, in payment of the said requisition of the Secretary of War in his favor, Congress having failed to "previously provide for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money."

noney."

The committee believe that the act approved March 3, 1875, was intended to, and does, fully provide for the prompt payment of the sums of money therein stated as they shall respectively become due, and that the option of the Government to, pay the same in money or bonds must be exercised by Congress in time to meet the warrants drawn by the Sceretary of War. In the present case Congress had timely notice from the Secretary of War in his annual report, dated November 20, 1876, of the probable time when the payment would become due.

The committee therefore recommend that appropriations to meet the payments which will probably become due during the present assession of Congress, and that as the law fully entitles Mr. Eads to receive the payment now due in bonds, it is recommended that House bill No. 4540 be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, it is a little singular that all these conditions and options should operate against the Government of the Conditions and options should operate against the Government of the United States. I understand that these bonds are worth about 12½ per cent. premium, so that the proposition of this report is to give Mr. Eads about $60,000 bonus for the reason that the money was not ready in greenbacks on the 17th of January or whatever the day was. I do not know who is responsible for this delay, this omission to make the appropriation. I am sure that no appropriation has been asked for here in the Senate. Whether it has been asked for in the other House or not, I am not advised, but certainly this appears to me to be a legal question, and it strikes me it is far better that we should pass the bill as it came from the House, and then if Mr. Eads has a claim the bill as it came from the House, and then if Mr. Eads has a claim upon the Government for $60,000 more, let him pursue it in the courts. Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I agree very fully with what has been said by the Senator from Vermont, and I will add that it seems to me there is a sharp practice about this which to the natural mind cannot be explained. I have great desire that that improvement of the Mississippi should be completed, and I have had great faith in Mr. Eads from the beginning. I voted for the contract being made with him, as I have voted for every appropriation while I have been in the Senate which would add to the improvement of the navigation of that great river. Mr. Eads undertook an experiment, and we agreed to pay him a price which no nation in the world would have paid him if it had been certain that he could have succeeded. We paid him a venture upon his experiment, and we paid him a premium upon his great ability, for I believe he has great ability of that kind; and by the way his great ability is his courage, his good sense, and his good judgment. We agreed to give him $500,000 in money or bonds when he secured a certain depth of water, in the belief that the Government he secured a certain depth of water, in the belief that the Government might not have the money at the time when this sum would become might not have the money at the time when this sum would become due to him, and as is natural in all business the Government was entitled to the alternative. Suppose you make a bargain, Mr. President, with a man to make a great work for you, and you say to him, "If I cannot pay you the money at that day, I will give you my note." He generally believes that note is worth less than the cash will be, and he will charge you more because he is afraid he is not going to get the cash. But after the work is done you find you have got the money in your chest, and you say to him, "I will give you the money." One of your agents may not have been quick enough to have the money your chest, and you say to him, "I will give you the money." One of your agents may not have been quick enough to have the money to present to him, or there may have been some informality in the presenting of the accounts, and he comes and says, "Now I find, Mr. Ferry, that your note is worth 12 per cent. more than your cash, and therefore I demand your note." The injustice is this: Every month the Government of the United States is buying her own bonds. The people of the country and the Congress of the United States are anxious to reduce the public debt, and we say to the Secretary of the Treasury, "Every month whatever balance you have invest in our own securities." Now, when we have the money in bank, as it were, this gentleman comes here and says, "I can make a speculation of $60,000 by getting your bonds, and adding that much to the debt of the Government of the United States." Would any man in private life say that was right? Not one that I ever heard of. My pursuits all my life have been those of business and money; and I tell you that when I make a bargain to pay either in cash or in my note, the other party believes he is going to suffer if I give him the note in place of the money. If we pay Mr. Eads now his money, that is all he ought to ask for; and if he were as wise a man as I believe he is, he ought to resort to no trick, no sharp practice, because he has got to get a great deal from this nation before his contract is finished. I believe that that work, if it succeeds, and I think it will succeed, will do more than that work, if it succeeds, and I think it will succeed, will do more than any experiment that has ever been tried on the subject of the Mississippi River. But I believe also that if it does succeed, the sum that we agreed to pay him will be the largest sum of money for the amount of labor done that has ever been paid in the world for a similar amount

Mr. WINDOM. - The illustration employed by the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania strikes me as very appropriate to this case. except that he does not make the right application of it. If the Senator enters into a contract with me that upon the performance of senator enters into a contract with me that upon the performance or certain conditions on my part I may draw upon him for a given sum of money, and if he has not the money ready to meet that draft he will give me his note, I think he will agree with me that as an honorable business man, as I know he is, that his note must be given. It is well known that his note at 6 per cent. would be above par; and if he has agreed to give it to me and has failed to provide the money at the time, I am sure that if I should make the application to him he would not refuse to comply with his contract. And yet that is precisely what the honorable Senator insists the Government shall do, namely, place itself in a position which he himself would not occupy as an individual.

Now, what are the facts? I happen to know something of the contract made with Captain Eads, having been a member of the committee that reported the bill and of the subcommittee that drew the law which we are now interpreting, and I know so much of the intent and meaning of that contract that I cannot for one honorably report otherwise than has been reported from the Committee on Appropriations at this time. The facts were these—and I mention them to illustrate my construction of this law—Captain Eads proposed to to illustrate my construction of this law—Captain Eads proposed to open the mouth of the Mississippi River to a depth of twenty feet, for which he was to receive $500,000. He was then to add other improvements, increasing the depth to twenty-two, twenty-four, twenty-six, twenty-eight, and thirty feet, and his pay was to be graduated according to the depth reached. The committee having charge of that bill at the time did everything in their power to bind Captain Eads down to the strictest compliance with the law. He proposed to do what no other contractor, so far as I am aware, has ever proposed to do in this country, to perform a great work on his own account and do in this country, to perform a great work on his own account and at his own expense, to guarantee its success, or, in other words, upon the principle of "no cure no pay."

There were serious doubts whether Captain Eads could perform this condition, and the Committee on Transportation, which had charge of the bill, determined, as I said a moment ago, to require from him the strictest performance, and spent several days in studying this measure in order to tie him down as strictly as possible to compliance with his contract. When we had succeeded to our satisfaction in throwing around it every possible safeguard for the completion of the work, Captain Eads said to us, "Now I have agreed to your proposition, I have one to make to you, namely, when I have by the expenditure of my own money performed this work, complied fully with the conditions, I shall not be compelled to await the delays of Congress in making an appropriation for it;" and at his suggestion, in order to avoid that difficulty, we placed this provision in the law, to wit, that if when his conditions had been complied with and the warrant of the Secretary of War was drawn upon the Treasury, the money was not then provided to meet it, the bonds should be delivered to him without delay. What was the object of that provision? Without some such provision Captain Eads might have expended a million or two of money, secured the requisite depth at the mouth of the There were serious doubts whether Captain Eads could perform this ion or two of money, secured the requisite depth at the mouth of the Mississippi, received the draft of the Secretary of War upon the Treasury in the month of July, say, and he must wait six months probably until the meeting of Congress and then five or six months more upon until the meeting of Congress and then five or six months more upon the delays of Congress, thereby compelling him to invest his own money in this great national work and then await the indefinite delays which everybody knows take place here.

Captain Eads had some experience in this matter. He had built several gunboats for the United States during the war, and he insists that to-day the Government owe him $59,000 which it has never paid; and rather than come here and hang about Congress to collect it, he has concluded to lose it, deeming it worth more than the money to get it through Congress; and so he determined that he would not involve his friends in the expenditure of several millions of dollars and trust his friends in the expenditure of several millions of dollars and trust to anybody to make the appropriation. Hence when he had acceded to all the conditions required by the committee and by Congress he asked us to make his pay sure and that he might not be compelled to wait a day for it.

Now, I say that he is entitled to the terms of his contract. The Committee on Transportation endeavored to put in the bill a provision which would enable him to get his compensation without delay. They thought they had succeeded. They provided in that law:

SEC. 13. That the Secretary of War be and he is hereby, authorized and directed to carry into effect the provisions of this act on behalf of the United States, and when the said Eads and his associates shall from time to time have fulfilled on their part the several foregoing conditions of this act, to draw his warrants upon the Treasurer of the United States in favor of said Eads, or his legal representatives, in payment of the aforesaid amounts as they respectively become due by the provisions of this act.

There certainly can be no misconstruction of that part of the law. Whenever the conditions were complied with the Secretary of War was to draw his warrant on the Treasurer. But what is the other condition ?

SEC. 14. That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States, bearing 5 per cent. interest, of the character and description set out in the act entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the public debt," approved July 14, 1870, to said Eads or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid warrants of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

"Payment" of what? Of the warrants in bonds. If Congress has not "previously provided" for the payment of the warrant, then the bonds are to issue to Captain Eads. All these conditions were complied with. He has received the certificate of the officers we appointed to inspect his work, that it has been done in accordance with his contract; and on the 19th day of January the Secretary of War drew his warrant upon the Treasury. No money had been provided to meet it, and I submit that any fair construction of that law entitled Captain Eads to the bonds. To repudiate the contract because it would cost $60,000, as my friend from Pennsylvania says, is as naked an act of bad faith as to repudiate one of the bonds in my friend's bank—precisely the same.

Mr. President, this is not a loss to the Government of $60,000 or anything like it. My honorable friend from Pennsylvania says that we are calling in our bonds. The Government has six hundred and we are calling in our bonds. The Government has six hundred and sixty odd thousand of 6 per cent. bonds outstanding. They may be called in any day at par. If you do not appropriate the $500,000, the money that my friend says is in the Treasury, let the $500,000 be used to call in your 6 per cent. bonds and let us keep faith with Captain Eads, who has so strictly kept faith with us. But do you lose $60,000 in that way? All you do lose is the difference between gold and currency. You can call in your 6 per cent. bonds which are now due, and the only loss would be about $24,000, being the difference between gold and currency. If $500,000 of our 6 per cent. bonds are to remain out five years longer there will be no loss to the Government at all, because the 1 per cent. interest during that time would make the thing even. So I am utterly unable to see how the Government would lose the $60,000. But if it did lose the $60,000 here is in my judgment as plain a contract as can be drawn; and if here is in my judgment as plain a contract as can be drawn; and if Congress has failed to comply with it it ought now to comply with the other condition.

Mr. President, whose fault this is I do not know. We well know that the Senate is not permitted to originate appropriation bills. We know that the rules do not prohibit it, but we also know that those bills are invariably laid on the table when they go to the other House. This provision ought to have been made at the last session of Congress to meet the contingent draft upon the Treasury which it was expected would be made by the Secretary of War to pay Captain Eads. It was not made. The Government is in default. Captain Eads comwas not made. The Government is in default. Captain Eads completed this work in December last; he has been compelled to wait more than two months now for his pay since the work was completed, and about a month since the Treasury draft was drawn. Already we are in default some twenty or twenty-five days; and I think it does not become us to insist on repudiating our contract when this man, by the averagiture of his own money has accomplished this most mar-not become us to insist on repudiating our contract when this man, by the expenditure of his own money, has accomplished this most mar-velous engineering work of the century. Now, what are the facts in reference to that very briefly? For more than forty years the Government has been expending money in the futile attempt to open the mouth of the Mississippi River. It has never succeeded in obtaining more than from sixteen to seventeen feet of uncertain navigation; and that great river, which drains some feet of uncertain navigation; and that great river, which drains some twenty States, the richest on this continent or any other, has been virtually closed to the commerce of the world.

A private citizen, by his own genius and courage, by his skill as an engineer, came to you and told you how it could be done. The other House had already passed a bill appropriating eight or ten millions for a canal, which I believe would have been a failure. By the information given to Congress through Captain Eads we adopted the other system. We had faith in him; we believed in the man. The result has proved that our faith was not misplaced, and to-day I say that his courage, persistency, and engineering skill have given to the country one of the greatest improvements which have been made in the engineering history of this Government. And now, when we are in default and when this man comes to us and asks that we comply with our agreement, the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania asks Congress to do what as a private citizen he would not for a moment Congress to do what as a private citizen he would not for a moment think of doing. Honesty in private transactions is one thing and honesty in governmental transactions seems to be entirely a different

Mr. President, I insist that the Government shall be honest and comply as strictly with its contracts as it would require a private citizen ply as strictly with its contracts as it would require a private citizen to do with his.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I too believe that the Government ought to be honest, as individuals ought to be. No individual can be prosperous unless he is honest; and neither can the Government. But there is no honesty in this expectation of the friends of Captain Eads. Captain Eads agreed to do a certain amount of work for a certain number of dollars. The Government agreed to give him a fabulous price for the work he intended to do; and very few people helieved he ever could succeed in accomplishing. and very few people believed he ever could succeed in accomplishing it. I was one of the few who believed he would, for I looked at his wonderful bridge at Saint Louis, which I think is the greatest structure of its kind in the world, and I believe it is the result of his own genius. At the beginning of the war he was brought to my notice when he came and offered to build gunboats for the Government when nobody else would do it. The Senator from Minnesota says he was not paid the full amount due for that work. I verily believe that he was paid a very large profit upon that work, for at that time the highest prices were paid for everything which the Government had done for it.

Now, what are the facts in this case? Captain Eads has succeeded in getting twenty feet of water against the expectations of everybody else, and he comes for his first installment of pay upon that account. The Government says to him on her side, "We will give so much money and if we cannot pay you in cash we will give you bonds." What would the Senator say, and what would Mr. Eads say, if the Government credit was down, as I have seen it, to less than 40 cents on the dollar? Would he be willing to take the bonds then? No such thing. But now, accidentally, the Government is buying its own bonds and thus giving a value to them above their par, and Mr. Eads, a favorite contractor, with an immense price for his labor, comes here and insists that we shall pay him a premium on our own obligations. I am not in favor of that and I know of no commercial honesty that requires that.

Eads, a favorite contractor, with an immense price for his labor, comes here and insists that we shall pay him a premium on our own obligations. I am not in favor of that and I know of no commercial honesty that requires that.

The Government directed that the Secretary of War, when he was satisfied the work was done, should give an order on the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury had no power to pay, because he could not pay without an appropriation by Congress. Did not Mr. Eads know when he made his contract that no money could be paid without the authority and direction of Congress by an act of Congress passed by both Houses and signed by the President of the United States? Certainly he did. The Secretary of the Treasury had no money appropriated to this object; but he reports to Congress, and one House of Congress has made an appropriation on one side, and they are met by Mr. Eads, who says, "You have defaulted twenty-four days, and therefore you shall pay me $60,000 additional." The Senator from Minnesota says it is not $60,000; it is only $12,000. How does he calculate that? The 5 per cent. bonds now are 12 per cent. above par; we are buying them every day, or are supposed to buy them every day.

Mr. WEST. At what do we buy them?

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. At whatever is the market price.

Mr. WEST. I beg the Senator's pardon: we buy them at par.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if our bonds that are past due cannot be called in at any time—6 per cent. bonds?

Mr. CAMERON of Pennsylvania. Not the 5 per cents.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask the senator from Pennsylvania if our bonds that are past due cannot be called in at any time—6 per cent. bonds? Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Not the 5 per cents. Mr. WINDOM. There are over $600,000 of the amount. Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. The Senator calculates at the price of gold. The market price of gold is variable. It may be today 7 per cent., and day after to-morrow 15 per cent. No man in private life, no man in commercial situation in life would ever be asked to pay more than the cash he promised to pay; and why should asked to pay more than the cash he promised to pay; and why should he run himself in debt? Why should the Government increase its debt when it has the money in its own coffers to meet its obligation? Besides all this, Captain Eads's work is not done. It is only begun. Few men believe he will succeed. I believe he will; and if he does succeed he is entitled to all he gets, and I for one will be willing to vote to him a large premium besides, but I will not pay him a premium at the beginning of his job. I have seen too much of that sort of thing. As the Senator from Vermont said a little while ago, it is strange that all the alternatives in a bargain are always against the Government. We are governed here too much by our feelings. We Government. We are governed here too much by our feelings. We have no special interest; a man tells us a pleasant story; and our hearts are interested in his affairs and we agree to give him all he hearts are interested in his affairs and we agree to give him all he asks. We all do that; I do it very often; but on this occasion I want the Government to deal with Mr. Eads as we deal with everybody else. How many men have claims against this Government that the Government long ago promised to pay? Would you like every one of them to come here and ask you to give him your bond? You might have granted your bonds ten years ago when they were selling at 50 or 60 or 75 per cent., but you would not do it now. No, Mr. President, let us be just; let us be exact; let us do equal and exact justice to every one of our creditors.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning hour has expired.
Mr. WINDOM. I hope the Senate will continue the consideration of this bill. It certainly ought to be disposed of one way or the other. This gentleman ought not to wait longer for his money.
Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I hope the bill will not be continued now.

tinued nov

tinued now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will call up the unfinished business and it can be temporarily laid aside by common consent for the purpose of continuing this subject. The unfinished business is Senate bill No. 984, in relation to the Pacific Railroad acts. Shall it be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not understand that that is consented to. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] is entitled to the floor on the railroad bill.

Mr. WINDOM. Then with the consent of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. WINDOM. Then with the consent of the Senator from Georgia

I will move to lay it aside temporarily.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood it was to be laid aside by common consent. Does the Senator from Georgia ob-

Mr. GORDON. If it requires but a few minutes, I have no objec-

Let it be subject to a call for the regular order. Mr. WEST. Let it be subject to a carrier regular order.
Mr. WINDOM. Let it be continued subject to be laid aside on a call for the regular order.
Mr. GORDON. Very well.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia has the floor on the unfinished business, and it is subject to his call. House bill No 4540 remains before the Senate.

Mr. WALLACE. I rise to state the other side of the proposition as presented in the Committee on Appropriations. I cannot agree with the report of the majority of the committee on this subject, and it is my duty to give the reason why I believe this bill as it comes from the House should be passed and the recommendation of the Secretary the House should be passed and the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury be carried out.

Mr. SARGENT. Will the Senator allow me to remark that I concurred with him in not agreeing with the majority of the committee?

Mr. WALLACE. I believe the Senator did. The bill as it comes to us is proposed to be indefinitely postponed. That leaves the contract to stand as we find it in the statute. We are to find what the law is and what the contract is, not from what the understanding of the Senator from Minnesota was at the time or from the understand the Senator from Minnesota was at the time or from the understanding of other Senators who took part in the consideration of the committee on that occasion, but from the written contract itself. I cannot see in that contract that the Government is in default or that it

We find that Captain Eads has a contract by which he covenants to make twenty feet of water two hundred feet wide at the South Pass of the Mississippi; that when he has obtained that he is to have a certificate thereof from the Secretary of War in the form of warrants. He has obtained those warrants on the Treasurer of the University of the Treasurer of the Tre States, not on the Secretary of the Treasury but on the Treasurer of the United States. They were presented to the Treasurer on the 22d of January, eight days before this bill came to the Senate. Because they were not then paid, because there was no appropriation of money then in existence to authorize their payment, the demand is now made on the Government for bonds for $60,000 addition in value to Captain Eads, (whatever it may be to the Government,) more than the $500,000 of money

Let us look at the contract as found in the law:

Let us look at the contract as found in the law:

First, is the Government in default? It seems to me that the true interpretation of this contract is that the warrants drawn on the Treasurer of the United States are first to be submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury under the general provision of the law that the Treasurer of the United States shall pay no money until the Secretary of the Treasury shall have approved the warrants and seen that the contractor has executed his part of this agreement. The whole the contractor has executed his part of this agreement. The whole subject of payment is under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury.

But it is said that the contract provides that unless we have, previously to the issue of the warrants, provided the appropriation we are in default; in other words, that these warrants are commercial papers, that the Government of the United States is in default if it does not pay them on presentation. That is the proposition broad and and full. I do not concede any such proposition. If you read the terms of the contract itself, it is

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States, either in money or bonds, is expressly reserved.

Reserved to whom? Not to Captain Eads, but reserved to the Government of the United States.

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States, bearing 5 per cent. interest, of the character and description set out in the act entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the public debt," approved July 14, 1870, to said Eads, or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid warrants of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

Previous to what? The Senator from Minnesota says, previously to the issuing of the warrant. I say previously to the issuing of the warrant. I say previously to the issuing of the bonds, and that is what the Secretary of the Treasury says; that is, that, if previously to the issuing of the bonds the Congress of the United States shall have made an appropriation for the $500,000, then we are complying with the contract. The argument is conclusive when you go back and inquire when the warrants are to be issued? They are only to be issued after the Secretary of War shall have ascertained through his engineers that the water is there twenty feet deep and two hundred feet wide; the depth of water and issuing the warrants are conterminous, and we are put in the absurd position of making an appropriation for the payment of money which by the very terms of the law we do not know would have been needed at all. Such a construction surely will not be sustained.

The construction of the Senator from Minnesota, the construction

all. Such a construction surely will not be sustained.

The construction of the Senator from Minnesota, the construction contended for by Captain Eads, the construction that must prevail if this bill be indefinitely postponed is that Congress is required to appropriate money before Captain Eads has complied with his contract, and before there is any report made to the Secretary of War by the engineers. Congress could not know, it was impossible in the nature of things for us to know, until we had the report from the engineers, through the Secretary of War, whether the water was there; and after that report, and after the warrants are drawn and are presented at the Treasury, on the 22d of January within eight days the and after that report, and after the warrants are drawn and are presented at the Treasury, on the 22d of January, within eight days, the House of Representatives appropriates the money to pay Captain Eads. Yet we are said to be in default. Why, Mr. President, the very terms of the contract, it seems to me, not alone the intent to be gathered from the words, but the very terms of the contract show that we have done just as rapidly as possible all that the Government is required to do to carry out the contract, not alone in its spirit, but in its very letter, with Captain Eads. We could have appropriated the money within eight days after the notice came and before the date fixed by the Secretary of War, (February 1.)

The whole question turns upon what was the meaning of the words "previously provided" in this optional section. The committee say that these words "previously provided" mean that Congress must provide the money before the Government knows he is entitled to it. On the contrary, the Secretary of the Treasury, and as I think the statute itself plainly says, if before the bonds are actually issued we appropriate the money, the contract is complied with. It seems to me the whole matter is with the Secretary of the Treasury. I think that the bill ought not to be postponed. It ought to be put upon its passage.

mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President—
Mr. GORDON. I feel it incumbent upon me to call for the regular order. It is very evident that this bill will consume all day.
Mr. WINDOM. I desire to give notice that when the Senator from Georgia has completed his speech I shall move to lay aside the regular order for the purpose of continuing the consideration of this bill.
Mr. STEVENSON. Let us go on with the regular order. That is more important than this more important than this.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (8. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing and binding for the current fiscal year, and for other purposes, with an amendment; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PACIFIC RAILROAD ACTS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 984) to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

[Mr. GORDON addressed the Senate. His remarks will appear in gress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first-named act.

[Mr. GORDON addressed the Senate. His remarks will appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. COCKRELL. I have been very much interested in the remarks of my distinguished friend from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] and I am seeking light and information on this question. I understand that the object of the bill now offered as a substitute is the perfect protection of the Government and a repayment to the Government of all sums of money for which the Government is now liable. I find in the last statement of the public debt of the United States issued on the 31st of January, 1877, that the bonds granted to the three roads mentioned in the beginning of this bill are to the Central, $25,885,120; to the Union Pacific, $27,236,512; and to the Western Pacific, $1,970,560, making an aggregate of the principal indebtedness of these roads of $55,992,192, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum payable semi-annually. The interest now due upon those bonds, deducting the amount of transportation performed by the roads for the Government, amounts to $23,187,783.04, making the total aggregate indebtedness $78,279,876.04 now standing against the three companies, with an annual interest of $3,305,531.52.

I find that this bill which has been reported by the Railroad Committee provides for the raising of a fund of two and a half millions of dollars the first year and a million and a half each subsequent year. Now the proposition which I desire to put to my distinguished friend from Georgia and the committee reporting the railroad bill is, How long will it take this sinking fund of two and a half millions of dollars this year and a million and a half subsequently per annum to discharge a present obligation of $78,279,975.04, with an annual increased interest upon that to the amount of $3,305,531.52? I should like to have that proposition answered; and I was anxious that my friend from Georgia should not have left his seat until that question was explained; but as I see th resent, I should like to have that question answered. I put it to

Mr. WEST. The bill itself answers it. It says in 1912. If the Senator had read the bill a little further, he would have found the term mentioned there.

Mr. COCKRELL. I want to understand the Senator from Louisiana. I think I have read all the provisions of the bill. I want the provision of this bill pointed out which shows the process by which two and a half millions one year followed by one million and a half regularly per annum afterward can extinguish an indebtedness of seventy-eight millions of dollars with an annual increase of over three millions of dollars. The provision in the latter part of section

That if the foregoing provisions shall prove insufficient to extinguish the Government bonds and interest thereon as aforesaid by the 1st day of October, in the year 1912, the semi-annual payments shall be increased to such a sum as will be sufficient for that purpose.

Now he says that will answer. I want the Senator reporting this bill as chairman of the Railroad Committee to answer me how much will be due on the 1st day of October, in the year 1912, from these railroad companies upon the $78,000,000 now due and an annual increase of over $3,000,000 added to it, when you have only liquidated one milion and a half annually. I should like a calculation of that account to be made.

account to be made.

Mr. WEST. In reply to the latter part of the Senator's question, I will answer him emphatically that there will be nothing due from the companies because they will have paid the complete debt. If he asks me how an annual payment of two millions can overtake another annual payment of three millions, I tell him by precisely the same process that the sinking fund of the United States of I per cent. per annum will pay in thirty years the national debt of $2,000,000,000 with less than $500,000,000. That is the process.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then I understand the object of this bill—that is the point I want to get at definitely—is to place in the Treasury of the United States the amount of one million and a half of dollars an the United States the amount of one million and a half of dollars annually and make the United States Government pay 6 per cent. per annum upon that, compounded semi-annually, until the bonds mature, and allow the Government not one cent of interest upon the ture, and allow the Government not one cent of interest upon the amount which she pays out semi-annually.

Mr. WEST. Well, Mr. President, in reply to that, this bill does not make the United States pay anything. The Supreme Court makes the Government pay the money; and that is the difficulty. But before we get away from this issue let us understand it. We can go into the details of the proposition at a subsequent time. The proposition of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] simply submits to the Senate whether the Senate of the United States shall determine that it has the absolute power to covere these companies or whether that it has the absolute power to coerce these companies or whether we shall deal with them upon principles of accommodation. We can go into the details of the business afterward; but the proposition is virtually that we have got that power and that strength in the Government of the United States to do what the Supreme Court of the United States virtually decided we could not do. Then we can go onted States virtually decided we could not do. Then we can go into the details of the question afterward. Let us take a vote now and test the sense of the Senate as to whether we shall coerce or accommodate. Coercion, I say, loses the whole of the money; accommodation gets the whole of it.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the very point I am after. "Accommodation!" Accommodation of whom? The Government? The interest of the Government? Or is it the interest of the corporation?

terest of the Government? Or is it the interest of the corporation? I want to know how that accommodation can possibly benefit the Government and save the Government any of the amount that the Government is liable for. I want to call attention to another point. I do not propose to discuss the bill at all, but merely to call the attention of the friends of the bill to certain questions, that they may be able to give some information upon them which will guide me to a satisfactory conclusion. I desire to do what is exactly right here. At the end of the third section I find this provision:

And provided also, That all Government freight and transportation west-bound, destined for points between the Missouri River and the Pacific coast, and on the Pacific coast, and from said coast, or any point east thereof, east-bound, shall be sent by the said railroads until the aforesaid claims of the Government on account of bonds advanced to the companies are fully paid and satisfied.

The Senate will see distinctly that this provides that every particle of transportation from the Pacific coast or to the Pacific coast shall be borne upon this railroad. The Committee on Railroads proposes an amendment, and let us see if the amendment does not tie down this transportation closer to this road-bed than originally proposed. What is the amendment offered by the committee?

Whenever such freight can be so transported to its place of destination at rates not exceeding the cost at which such freight can be carried by any other means of transportation.

How? "By any other means of transportation."
Mr. WEST. Mules, for instance.
Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, sir, by mules. Then you cannot bring any other railroad into competition with this railroad. This freight must be carried by some "other means of transportation" than railroad transportation. You cannot make it mean anything else.

Mr. WEST. How does that appear? Show us that.

Mr. EATON. I desire to say to my friend from Missouri that that clause was added for the very purpose, that in case there should be chartered another railroad, that railroad would be competitive to this road, and this road could charge no higher rate of freight than that new railroad.

Mr. COCKRELL. That may have been the object of the amendment, but the language used in the amendment expresses no such idea. I will read it over again; and I ask the Senate to listen to it.

I read from line 22 on page 4:

Tread from line 22 on page 4:

That all Government freight and transportation west bound, destined for points between the Missouri Riverand the Pacific coast, and on the Pacific coast, and from said coast or any point east thereof, east bound, shall be sent by the said railroads until the aforesaid claims of the Government on account of bonds advanced to the companies are fully paid and satisfied, whenever such freight can be so transported to its place of destination at rates not exceeding the cost at which such freight can be carried by any other means of transportation.

Do not the words "any other means of transportation" necessarily exclude railroad transportation? As a matter of course they do.

There can be no question about it.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Missouri what this "means of transportation" is if it is not these particular railroads, and if "any other means" would not mean some other railroad? This means of transportation is these specific railroads. "Any other means" is any other railroad or any other method.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator from Massachusetts says this means is the railroad means. "Any other means," then, would not be railroad means

Mr. DAWES. No, Mr. President, I did not say so. It was necessary to the argument of the Senator from Missouri to misstate what I did say, or to mishear it. What I said was that this means is by these railroads; it is not any other means. This means is by these railroads. Any other means does not mean these railroads, but means any other means. [Laughter.]

Mr. COCKRELL. If "any other means" in the second part of the sentence means "any other means," are not these "other means" something besides railroads? [Laughter.]

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, all the means in the world that are not these means, according to my understanding of the English language, come within the terms "any other means." [Laughter.]

Mr. EATON. As a member of the Railroad Committee, I desire to say to my friend from Missouri that if he has any doubt in his mind in regard to the true meaning of that amendment, it is very easy to change it. I undertake to say here that the individual member of the committee who suggested that amendment did it for the very purpose I before indicated, so that if there should be another line of road constructed that road should be placed in competition with this road. That was the intention of the mover of that amendment and the intention of the Committee on Railroads, as I know.

Mr. WEST. If my friend from Connecticut will pardon me a moment, in order to relieve the great uneasiness of the Senator from Missouri, I will say that I hold in my hand an additional amendment to be attached, in these words:

Or such other railroads as the Government has heretofore aided or may hereafter aid to construct lines to the Pacific Ocean until such time as these obligations are unpaid.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why limit it to railroads the Government may help to build?

Mr. CONKLING. Why not say "or by any other railroad?"
Mr. DAWES. The reason we did not say "by any other railroad" is that it might go part way by a railroad and then it be necessary to be carried by other process. There is no trouble about the phraseology.

Mr. CONKLING. Let me suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Louisiana that, if there be, as I do not think there is, I must confess, any doubt about the meaning of this the wall to add at the end of the provision these language, it might be well to add at the end of the provision these words "or by any other railroad," so as to read:

Not exceeding the cost at which such freight can be carried by any other means of transportation or by any other railroad.

I know as well as the Senator from Massachusetts does that the af-I know as well as the Senator from Massachusetts does that the after-reader would look upon this as extremely industrious and exceedingly painstaking, as drawn by somebody who had conjured up extraordinary specters of possible interpretation; but I repeat, if any Senator really doubts what the words mean now and supposes that they exclude future railroads from competition, then I should think it would be well to allay that doubt by employing the term "railroad" as one of the alternatives so that everybody will see upon the face of it that it means any other means of conveyance, whether that means be on iron rails, or by balloons, or air-machines traversing the atmosphere, or any other means of locomotion, propulsion, or trans-

Mr. DAWES. I would agree with the Senator from New York entirely if I supposed that attempting to cure any such doubt as that would have the least effect.

[Mr. KELLY addressed the Senate. His remarks will appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President—
Mr. WEST. Will the Senator from Illinois allow me to correct some misapprehensions in regard to the action of the committee on this question?

Mr. LOGAN. Certainly, for a moment. I do not intend to occupy more than a few minutes.

more than a few minutes.

Mr. WEST. What I desired to say was that the Senator from Oregon in speaking of the manner in which this bill was presented to the Senate as receiving, as he said, almost the unanimous indorsement of the Committee on Railroads, was correct. When the Senator from Texas says that it received the sanction of less than a majority of that committee he misunderstands the presentation of the case. This matter has been in the hands of the Committee on Railroads during this entire Forty-fourth Congress. At the last session they made a recommendation without dissent, as I understood. I thought the Senator from Texas joined at that time in the recommendation that a bill should be passed taking as indemnity to the Government half lands and half money. That measure is now substituted by another one, and I will say to him that, as far as my knowledge of the committee goes, he is the only dissenting member on the committee.

mittee goes, he is the only dissenting member on the committee.

Mr. LOGAN. I did not, nor do I now intend to occupy the time of the Senate more than a very few minutes; but I desire to give the reasons to the Senate for the vote I shall cast on this question. I deem the question now to be considered one of very great importance to the country and one that ought to be well considered by the Senate; but there have been features in this discussion that I desire to direct the attention of the Senate to.

It is a very common thing in our country now to complain of nearly everything that is done. In fact great complaints are made against corporations in this country, and doubtless many of those complaints are just and very many of them are unjust. Corporations are a neces-are just and very many of them are unjust. Corporations are a necessity in any country; not all corporations but corporations of different kinds, and they will exist in any civilized country.

When Congress or any legislative department of a government shall authorize the organization of a company and make a contract with that company for certain purposes, it is due to that corporation that every agreement on the part of the Government shall be carried out literally or as near so as may be, and that on the part of the corporation they shall equally comply with the duties imposed on them by the charter.

the charter.

The bill of the Judiciary Committee requires certain things to be done by these railroad companies; and in order to enforce the provisions of their bill on the minds of the Senate many things have been suggested that at least attracted my attention. A complaint was made by one of the Senators from Ohio that one of these companies had not acted in good faith with the Government. It was said that after the Government had a right to a first mortgage on their lands and road it was changed, and now the Government has nothing except a second mortgage to rely upon. The answer is, that it is not to be laid at the door of the company that the Government holds a second mortgage, but it was a law passed by Congress which released the lien on the part of the Government and accepted a second mort-

the lien on the part of the Government and accepted a second mortgage before they undertook the work; and if Congress has, by its own enactment, released the lien that the Government had on the property of this corporation and accepted a second one by their own act, it does not lie in their mouth to complain that a wrong has been done the Government on the part of the corporation.

Again it was said that they had refused after the building of the road to pay the percentage into the Treasury of the United States that was contemplated by the charter that was passed by the Congress of the United States. True it is they did refuse. The Secretary of the Treasury withheld from them a part of the compensation, they denying that he had the power to do it and he asserting the authority as agent of the Government; but by the decision of the highest tribunal known to the laws of this land, the Supreme Court of the United States, the law has been decided in favor of the construction United States, the law has been decided in favor of the construction given by the corporation and against the construction given by the agent of the Government. The court has decided that by the charter the Government could not compel the payment of interest until the maturity of the bonds that the Government had issued to aid these corporations; and in that decision of the Supreme Court they make the word "maturity" the controlling word in the contract in the fifth section of the law of 1862, and on that they decide that the Government has no right to demand this payment from these companies from time to time.

Then it does not lie in our mouth, I say again, to complain of that act, because the highest tribunal known to the laws of this land has decided that it was not the fault of the company, but the fault of the legislation of Congress that gave that construction to the contract. Hence, I cannot see the cause of complaint that has been made here in the Senate Chamber in reference to the action of these men in conin the Senate Chamber in reference to the action of these men in construing the charter that was given them by the Congress of this country. I would hold them to as strict an accountability as any Senator or as any citizen of the United States, but that which the law does not require at their hands we have no right to demand, and that which the courts construe in their favor we have no right to find fault with. That which is their contract under the law, they demand shall be

That which is their contract under the law, they demand shall be given to them. When the tribunals of the country decide that they are right, we have no right to complain against them.

On the other side, I say that the Government should hold them to a strict accountability, should require them to comply with their charter and comply with every provision of the contract. But let us for a moment examine this bill reported by the Judiciary Committee. I am not favorable to that bill and I will try to give my reasons. First, I do not believe in the construction given to the charter by the learned Senator from Ohio. I do not believe that the Congress of the United Senator from Ohio. I do not believe that the Congress of the United States has the right to impair the obligations of a contract solemnly entered into by itself by legislation on the part of the Government; nor do I believe that on either side this contract can be abrogated, annulled, or amended except in certain particulars and where an injury will not result to either party.

In reference to the construction of the charter, I contend that we must construe the act of 1864 and the act of 1862 together in order to get at the intention by which we are to be guided in the under-standing of this contract between the Government and the parties standing of this contract between the Government and the parties entering into it. An argument is made by learned Senators in favor of the right of Congress to change this agreement or this charter because the act of 1864 authorizes Congress "at any time to alter, amend, or repeal this act." That broad language of itself, if it was found in the charter without any language restricting it or without anything by which we could gather the intention of Congress to restrict the power of altering, changing, or amending this act, would give the right, it would certainly give the power, to Congress to change it. But in the act of 1862 we find that Congress, where they use the same language precisely that is used in the act of 1864, pro-

And the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same—for postal, military, and other purposes.

For what?

"Other purposes" of what? Other purposes for the benefit of the Government. Congress shall have the right to do what?

Having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, to add to, alter, mend, or repeal this act.

Add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act in what particular I call the attention of Senators who have made this claim of the right of Congress to change this charter to this act. In what particular can Congress to change this charter to this act. In what particular can you change it? For the benefit of postal or military service, or for other purposes, where you do not interfere with the rights of the parties acting under this charter. Interfere how? Interfere with any part of the obligation that would become detrimental; but where it does, it cannot be done. The object for which alteration, or amendment, or repeal may be made must be for some of those purposes appropriated in this charter.

enumerated in this charter.

Now, I should like to put one question to any lawyer in the Senate Chamber. You provided in this bill that these parties shall be required to pay a certain per cent. into the Treasury, 25 per cent. for instance; it is immaterial as to the amount; but I should like my friend from Missouri, who showed some astuteness in calculation, or any other gentleman, to answer me this proposition: Has Congress any other gentleman, to answer me this proposition: has Congress the power to declare that the lands given to this company, without any forfeiture on their part under the charter, shall be subject to taxation; has Congress the right to change the ownership of the lands; has Congress the right to-morrow to say that those lands shall be held again by the Government, subject to its uses and purposes? If you have not the right to do that, which you certainly have not, have you the right to change the mode, the manner of payment to the Government except by consent of the corporation that was a party to this contract? Suppose you now require them to pay a million dollars a year, and they do not agree to that; have you not the same right to require them to pay $10,000,000 per annum without their consent as you have to require them to pay $1,000,000 without their consent? The change must be by their consent, if it is a radical change of the charter, unless it is done for the purposes enumerated in the charter, for which you may make an alteration or change.

Let me refer to the syllabus of the decision of the Supreme Court.

I do not think there is a lawyer here but knows it is true that these two acts, the act of 1864 merely being an amendment of the act of 1862, must be construed together; they must be taken as a whole; it is from the two acts that the rights are derived and the protection given to the Government, and they must be construed together in order to understand the rights of the parties and the power of Congress in reference to these questions. The Supreme Court, in decidgress in reference to these questions. The Supreme Court, in deciding this case as to the right of the Government to require this payment to the Secretary of the Treasury, held:

ment to the Secretary of the Treasury, held:

The solution of the question whether the Union Pacific Railroad Company is required to pay the interest before the maturity of the principal of the bonds issued by the United States to the company depends on the meaning of the fifth and sixth sections of the original act of 1862, to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, and of the fifth section of the amendatory act of 1864. Held, under consideration of said sections, of the scheme of said original act, and of the purposes contemplated by it, that it was not the intention of Congress to require the company to pay the interest before the maturity of the principal of the bonds."—1 Otto, 91 United States Reports Supreme Court, 72.

I will not take the time of the Senate by reading fully the sections referred to; but if you will read section 5 of the act of 1802, you will find "that the grants aforesaid are made on the condition that said find "that the grants aforesaid are made on the condition that said company shall pay said bonds at maturity;" not the body of the bonds and the interest, but "the bonds." You find in section 5 of the act of 1862 the provision is that the interest shall be payable semi-annually; but the language of section 6 of the act of 1862 provides that the bonds, and not the interest, shall be paid at maturity.

Now take these two sections together, and according to the construction that has been given to this contract by Senators here, interest must be paid semi-annually; but the courts say that the word "maturity" applies to the interest and the principal of the bonds, and that they are not payable until maturity. They construct hese two sections together so as to get at the intention of Congress, and in construing this contract they take the act of 1864 and of 1862 and construct them together for the purpose of ascertaining the intention construe them together for the purpose of ascertaining the intention construe them together for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the law-maker.

Without further elaboration on this point, and without detaining the Senate, for I certainly do not desire to do so, I will state in brief, generalizing, that the Judiciary Committee bill, in my judgment, from my reading of it, if I can understand it, means that Congress shall take upon itself the power to change the charter of these corporations without their consent in material parts where it would work injury to them. In other words, it means that Congress shall assert the right to change a charter, irrespective of the rights of the chartered parties, without their consent, without any act giving assent on their part in reference to payments of money and in reference to other material things in the charter. That Congress has the right to do this has been argued and will be argued. I do not, as I said, believe that Congress has the right to affect this charter except under the limitations prescribed in the act of 1862, construing that and the act of 1864 as one act and taking them as a whole.

Now, without saying anything in reference to the bill that was offered by the Senator from Georgia, I sum up what I have to say in this way: The bill of the Judiciary Committee is a preparation for a grand lawsuit between the Government of the United States and these corporations. It means nothing more; it means nothing less. It is a harsh bill in every respect. It is a bill calculated to meet the prejudices of the country that have been worked up against a corporation wherever a decision has been made on the side of the corporation. poration, when the Government is sought to be used for the purporation, when the Government is sought to be used for the purpose of meeting that prejudice and crushing out the corporation. That is the meaning of it, nothing more and nothing less, in my judgment. They could not accept that bill, at least I think not, although Inever conversed with one of these gentlemen on the subject. I know not what their feeling or desires may be; but I could not and would not if I were managing that corporation think for a moment of accepting a bill with that kind of a provision in it. Then, if they do not accept it, what is the result? The result is that the courts again must decide the question between the Government and the corporation. must decide the question between the Government and the corporation. The courts again must be called upon to decide as to the powers of Congress and as to the rights of these corporators under their charter. I do not believe in that kind of legislation. I do not believe in Congress legislating the Government into a lawsit or into court every six months. I believe in justice being done between the Government and these corporators as we may agree. If we cannot agree upon a proposition that is fair, let it stand as it is, and let the courts finally decide the rights under these charters and let it be settled as they have had to do in every movement that has been made by the Government or by these men by the Government or by these men.

I do not believe that it is the interest of the country to so legislate either for corporations or against corporations as to constantly keep either for corporations or against corporations as to constantly keep the Government in court in order to ascertain its powers and to find out the rights of parties. I do not believe it is right for a great Government like this to pass measures which will work hardship to its citizens. Whether it is a soulless corporation or an individual is immaterial; it is a person in law and we should legislate the same toward those who are known as persons in law as we should toward an individual citizen. The same justice should be dealt out toward all. The same rights should be protected, the same powers exercised, no more, and no less.

I know very well that it is not very popular nowadays to defend corporations. I have no defense to make for them outside of the rights that are guaranteed to them by their constitution, or charter as it is commonly called. The time was in this country when these charters were fixed, and we must appeal to the history of that time to aid us in construing these contracts. I am justified in saying that by the language enunciated in this decision of the Supreme Court we must appeal to the history of the time when congressional action was invoked in order to honestly and fairly interpret the intention of the law. Then, sir, if we go outside of the great sea of prejudice which has been rolled up in this land against these corporations, and which has been rolled up in this land against these corporations, and ascertain the facts by an examination of the history of the times when this legislation was invoked, we shall find this state of things existing: There was an appeal made from one end of the land to the other to Congress that this continent might be spanned by iron bands, that the commerce of worlds and of this nation might be united, and that this country might be bound together not only by patriotism, but by hooks of steel and bands of iron. The money in the Treasury of the United States was invoked for that purpose at that time. Nearly every member of Congress marched to the front, in order to Nearly every member of Congress marched to the front, in order to see who could be foremost in developing this great and mighty land of ours, and that too when this country was almost in the throes of death. But, sir, it is too common with us, as time glides along, that the history of the past is forgotten the great men and great enterprises, and the benefits to the country resulting therefrom, go out of sight; and that the present interest overrides all. These things should be remembered by us while we are legislating in this direction.

As I said, every right of the Government ought to be protected; but at the same time every right of these men ought to be protected. When I see the trade of China traveling across our continent, dropping itself in every city from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, when the country is being developed and enriched, I feel as though I am not appealed to either by my constituents or by any prejudice that may exist to vote for a measure that is harsh in all its terms, for the purpose of bearing down and crushing out enterprises in this land. There is no appeal that can be made to me that will allow my prejudice to go so far against individuals or corporations or interests in dice to go so far against individuals or corporations or interests in this land as to lead me to vote for a bill harsh in every section, in every line, in every term expressed, and that merely for the purpose of seeing how great a lawsuit the United States can maintain against a corporation, or that a corporation can maintain against the United

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. MERRIMON in the chair.) The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Gor-DON] to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the bill reported from the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. WALLACE. Mr. President, upon this proposition I have but a word to say. I find that the total bonds issued to the Pacific Railroad are about $64,000,000, these being the figures from the last report of the Secretary of the Treasury, and we have paid a total of about $34,000,000 of interest. We have been re-imbursed about $7,000,000 by Government transportation and otherwise, leaving the unpaid interest some $27,000,000, making a total of $91,000,000 at this date which the Government of the United States has advanced this date which the Government of the United States has advanced to these great corporations. The bill of the Judiciary Committee provides for re-imbursing to the United States, as the years progress, a million and a half upon two of these roads, with smaller amounts from each of the other three. The interest annually paid by the United States upon these roads aggregates $3,877,409, the interest provided to be re-imbursed by the bill of the Judiciary Committee is $3,525,000, leaving a difference of $352,409 to be paid by the Government, if the bill of the Judiciary Committee passes the Senate. The bill proposed to be substituted for that of the Judiciary Committee provides as regards the five railroads named in the Judiciary Committee provides, as regards the five railroads named in the Judiciary Committee bill, that we shall be re-imbursed $1,762,500 annually, thus making the Government advance annually $2,114,909 of interest upon these bonds more than she will receive from the means set apart by that bill.

The question, as it presents itself upon this bill, is simply whether we can, under the law, devise a means by which this large amount of money can be re-imbursed. I am met with a report from the Judiciary Committee of the Senate composed of leading lawyers, eminent men in their profession, who bring to us a bill which they say is in accordance with the law, which they say will stand the test of the courts, and which they recommend to us to pass. On the other hand, we have the report of the Railroad Committee. On the one side the we have the report of the Railroad Committee. On the one side the lawyers of this body, the legal tribunal of the body, provide as nearly as they can a plan to re-imburse the Government, in which they say the Constitution and law will sustain us. On the other side the Railroad Committee say that we cannot do this, and provide a bill under which there will be a deficiency of over $2,000,000 annually. To which of these committees are we to listen $1$ it seems to me that practical men will look to the lawyers of the body in regard to which course we ought to take in settling this question of legal doubt; for it is a question of legal doubt; for it is a question of legal doubt. It is to my mind a very narrow question.

Mr. WEST. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WALLACE. Certainly.
Mr. WEST. I ask the Senator whether he infers that the lawyers on the Judiciary Committee were unanimous on the bill which they reported or whether he knows what majority of the Judiciary Committee are in favor of it to-day?

Mr. WALLACE. I infer that the Judiciary Committee have reported this bill.

Mr. WEST. Yes.
Mr. WALLACE. Three members of that committee have sustained it on this floor.

WEST. Yes.

Mr. WEST. That is just it.

Mr. WEST. That is just it.

Mr. WALLACE. The members of that committee bring in a bill providing means which they say will re-imburse to this Government this money less about $300,000 annually, and we are asked to take their bill or to take the bill of the Railroad Committee which increases the debt to the Government annually over $2,000,000 more. As a practical man I must take the recommendation of the lawyers of this body on a question of law, and therefore I shall solve my doubts in favor of the Government and shall vote against the substitute and for the bill of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. ALLISON. I have waited for two or three hours hoping that there would be some end of this bill. I do not see any present pros-pect of it. I wish to make a motion for the Senate to decide if it pect of it. I wish to make a motion for the Senate to decide if it will take up the Indian appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa moves that the pending bill be laid aside informally, as the Chair understands, to take up the Indian appropriation bill. Is there objection?

Mr. CONKLING. Can we not get a vote now?

Mr. WRIGHT. I think I am justified in saying that, so far as my conversing the Senate has been concerned. I never have sought to any course in the Senate has been concerned, I never have sought to antagonize an appropriation bill when it was ready, and certainly not when it was proposed to proceed to the consideration of an appropriwhen it was proposed to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation bill at a stage of the session when it was important that it should have action. I am exceedingly anxious to proceed with this bill. The appropriation bills have to be passed. I shall not antagonize this bill for another reason at this time. I understand that the Senator from North Carolina, [Mr. MERRIMON,] now occupying the chair, desires to be heard on this bill, and that by reason of indisposition for a few days past he is not prepared to proceed to-day, but will be ready to do so to-morrow. I think, therefore, that it would accommodate him if we should at this time proceed to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill and take up the railroad bill to-morrow. I make this suggestion because the Senator from North Carolina, now occupying the chair, made the suggestion to me that he was desirous to be heard but was not in a condition to take the floor to-day.

Mr. WEST. I may have an erroneous conception of the condition of this matter before this body, but I will state my view of it and we can see whether I am right or not, and let the Senate decide upon it. The proposition now is not to vote upon this bill; the proposition is not now to discontinue a discussion of it; but it is that the Senate shall decide now whether they will sanction the coercive and harsh measures recommended by the Judiciary Committee. ation bill at a stage of the session when it was important that it should

Let me say in reply to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. WAL-LACE] that we have taken the law from the Judiciary Committee to our sorrow; that in three specific instances the Senate and the Congress of the United States have followed their recommendations to defeat; and if once more we are led into that situation there is no retreat for us. Heretofore where decisions have been made against us in following their lead and their judgment, those decisions have not been material or vital; but in the present case, if we adopt the meas-ure recommended by the Judiciary Committee and the decision of the courts shall be once more against us, we shall have no recourse and courts shall be once more against us, we shall have no recourse and this money will be lost.

But, Mr. President, coming back to the proposition as we now have it, it is not that we shall adopt the bill that is recommended by the Committee on Railroads, but the question is, which measure will you decide in favor of? Will you decide upon adopting such measures of coercion as have hitberto, and invariably, led you to defeat, or will you supply that measure of accommodation with these great corporations that will justify you in protecting the interests of the United States. Then when the bill, the compromise bill as I may call it, of the Committee on Railroads is before you, you can discuss its merits and discuss it in detail, and that will not preclude the Senator from North Carolina or any other Senator from continuing deliber. from North Carolina or any other Senator from continuing deliberation upon this subject. Let us have a vote now and test the sense of the Senate. Have we the power, with the information that we have before us and with the decision of the Supreme Court, to coerce these companies into payment? If we have, let us put it into effect; but I think we have not the power. I think it has been demonstrated here also in the debate that we have not that power, and let us decide upon another measure of protecting the interests of the United

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the motion of the Senator from Iowa, [Mr. ALLISON *]

Mr. MORRILL. I do not desire to occupy the time of the Senate; if it is the wish of Senators that the motion of the Senator from Iowa shall prevail, I do not mean to interpose any objection to taking up a regular appropriation bill; but I do desire to occupy perhaps ten minutes in discussing some points in the various bills that are before

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the motion of the Senator from Iowa to lay aside the pending bill in order to take up the Indian appropriation bill? The Chair hears none.

Mr. EATON. I should like to ask for information if the railroad bill goes over until to-morrow.

Mr. WEST. The Chair did not put the question. Let us take a

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair asked if there was objection and no objection was made.

Mr. MORRILL. Which makes it a vote.

Mr. EATON. Is the railroad bill laid aside informally, or does it

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the railroad bill goes over as the unfinished business for to-morrow.

Mr. SHERMAN. It cannot do that, because it is known that the Indian appropriation bill will take all day to-morrow. As a matter of course, the bill is subject to a motion to postpone it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Whatever bill the Senate adjourns upon will be the unfinished business for to-morrow, unless by an understanding it is agreed that another bill is taken up at the adjournment. No objection being made, the Indian appropriation bill is before the Senate.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

Mr. WINDOM. Before the Senator from Iowa proceeds with the Indian appropriation bill I wish to submit to him the propriety of taking from the table the deficiency bill for public printing. It ought to be acted upon at once.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to considering the bill providing for a deficiency in the appropriation for public printing? The Chair hears no objection.

By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the amendment of the House of Representatives upon the bill (S. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing and binding for the current fiscal year.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was to add to the bill the following proviso:

Provided further, That from and after the close of the present session of Congress the Public Printer shall pay no greater price for labor performed by printers, book-binders, and other employés in the Government Printing Office for each hour's work or piece-work than the average price paid for an hour's work or for piecework of the same description in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Balti-

Mr. WINDOM. I move that the Senate non-concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives and ask for a committee of ment of the House of Representatives and ask for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. I base the motion on two grounds. In the first place, the amendment itself ought to be non-concurred in upon its merits; and secondly, in the new rules of the Senate I find the following: motion on two grounds. In the first place, the amendment itself ought to be non-concurred in upon its merits; and secondly, in the new rules of the Senate I find the following:

No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill.

It is true this is not in one sense a general appropriation bill, but yet I hardly see why it might not be called a general deficiency bill for printing. Whether it directly comes within the rule or not, it certainly comes within the spirit of the rule; and if the Senate agreed to deny itself the privilege of legislation upon appropriation bills, I think the same principle should apply to others. I should like the expression of the Senate upon that subject, because it would be regarded as an instruction to some extent to the Committee on Appropriations as to whether when they find legislation in appropriation bills the merits of which they can approve they shall report it to the Senate or whether they shall regard the rule as requiring them to amend the bill to be brought before the Senate so that it shall contain no legislation. I therefore move to non-concur in the amendcontain no legislation. I therefore move to non-concur in the amendment of the House and to request the appointment of a committee of or conference on the disagreeing votes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I submit the ordinary motion, that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House, which, I believe, takes precedence of the motion for non-concurrence. As to the rule of the Senate which has been quoted, it certainly cannot apply to the House. We make rules for ourselves, not for the House, and we can scarcely expect to give to our rules the authority in the House that is given to them in this body.

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator did not understand my point. did not mean to insist that our rules should govern the House, but that as we had by our rule prohibited the Senate from legislation on appropriation bills, the spirit of that rule would require the committee of this body to strike out legislation in appropriation bills when found in House bills.

Mr. SHERMAN. Neither House has ever attempted to enforce even a good principle so far as that. Both Houses have often attached legislative amendments upon appropriation bills, but this is not a general appropriation bill, nor does it come within the spirit of a general appropriation bill. The objection to a legislative amendment upon a general appropriation bill, applying to one particular clause of a general bill, is that it compels one or the other of the two Houses to adopt a faulty principle of legislation perhaps, in their view, as an amendment to a single clause of the bill in order to get the whole bill through which is general in its character. This amendment I under amendment to a single clause of the bill in order to get the whole bill through, which is general in its character. This amendment, I understand, applies only to the money that is appropriated in this bill; that is, that we shall not pay for work on the public printing more than is paid for similar work in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. I hope the amendment of the House will be concurred in. That is all there is of it. It is an amendment to a particular clause to a particular appropriation; and therefore does not fall even within the spirit of the objection generally made to a legislative amendment to an appropriation bill. amendment to an appropriation bill.

But, Mr. President, the whole of the matter is this: For some years, I was about to say by a sort of demagogism which sprang up after the war, we adopted an eight-hour law, and by every indirect means we have sought to evade and avoid that law. There is doubt about that; and as I voted against it I feel at liberty to say that much. Now the question is whether we ought in the conduct of our public printing to pay a higher rate for services here than is paid in the great cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. It is well known that the expense of living in other large cities is as great as it is here. There expense of living in other large cities is as great as it is here. There is great complaint made about the cost of public printing, and it is a well-founded complaint. Our public printing is one of the largest single items of expenditure, amounting to perhaps two or three millions of dollars for a Congress; a very large amount. That is caused largely by the fact that we have adopted a rule for the payment of printers here that does not apply to any other city in the Union. We pay the same amount for eight hours' work here that is paid for ten hours' work in other great cities. The amendment proposed by the House of Revent other great cities. The amendment proposed by the House of Representatives reduces to some extent the cost of public printing. It gives to printers and to those who engage in this business the same compensation that is paid in the large cities. Whether we ought to do it, or whether we ought to pay more to the individual for work done for the Government than when it is done for others, is for the Senate to determine.

If the eight-hour law was defensible and ought to be applied in all cases to all departments of service and to all persons appointed by the Government, it becomes a bounty and a privilege to those employed by the Government; but the principle is not a correct one, and I, for one, am prepared to vote to give to those engaged in public printing just the same pay which is allowed in other large cities lie printing just the same pay which is allowed. That is the ques-where the expenses of living are about the same. That is the ques-where the expenses of Representatives. It is a question of tion presented by the House of Representatives. It is a question of fair and just economy, and I cannot answer it in any other way. There is no reason why we should pay higher wages here for the same character of service than is paid in other cities of the Union.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman] to concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SARGENT. If I understand the Senator from Ohio correctly, his impression is that this amendment is simply a limit upon the tinctly named in the bill that was passed by the Senate. It does not apply to the printing of the Departments, which ordinarily is set out with great particularity in the general appropriation bill. This bill simply provides for the congressional printing and the printing of the Supreme Court, and it is to supply a deficiency for the present fiscal year.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is an appropriation for the public printing.

Mr. SARGENT. The bill is to supply deficiencies for congressional printing and binding, a portion to be used in printing the debates, for the Congressional Record, and $5,000 is appropriated for the Supreme Court. That is the whole appropriation. Now, upon that appropriation, limited to this fiscal year, merely to supply deficiencies, there comes in a proposition to regulate printing for all time hereafter and all kinds of printing, not even applying to this year, not even applying to the appropropriation made in the bill which was sent from the Senate to the House. The language of the amendment of the House is: ment of the House is:

That from and after the close of the present session of Congress, the Public Printer shall pay no greater price for labor performed by printers, &c.

The bill applies to no portion of the appropriation for printing, except only such as may be expended for the work of Congress, and to a large portion of the congressional printing it would not apply at all, because we are now piling in upon the Public Printing Office a large amount of matter, and will continue to do so until the close of this Congress on account of the progress of investigations and the

this Congress on account of the progress of investigations and the necessity of the printing of testimony.

It is a very vicious form of legislation, a most vicious form of legislation, to place even upon a general appropriation bill, without the report of a committee, a provision relating to a plan which is to sweep out of existence the existing usage and apply a new rule for the future. The Senator himself does not know, and no one else upon this floor, probably, knows what the difference between the price of printing is in New York, Boston, or Philadelphia and the price that is paid here. We have none of the material upon which to make up an estihere. We have none of the material upon which to make up an estimate. We do not know how the prices here are ascertained, or I judge that the Senator does not know from his remarks on the subject, or whether the compensation has been fairly ascertained.

Mr. SHERMAN. I can give the rate of compensation. I can tell the Senator, if he will allow me.

Mr. SARGENT. If the Senator knows, he, perhaps, will concur with me in regard to the House amendment. The standing of printers throughout the United States and throughout the world is very high. There is no profession—doctors, lawyers, or preachers—more intelligent than printers as a class. The art of printing not only preserves all arts, but the men who are engaged in it have the general intelligence which comes from continually putting in type and readintelligence which comes from continually putting in type and reading information upon all subjects whatever. I have no doubt that there are printers in this city working by the day in the Government Printing Office and in the newspaper offices here who could give the Senator and myself information, and valuable information, upon a great many matters of which we might stand in need. They have joined intelligence in reference to this matter. They have formed in all the different cities of the Union particular associations regulating the prices of their labor, and there is a strong moral force brought to bear upon those being of their number who dissent from the regulations laid down by their associations. They have terms which they bear upon those being of their number who dissent from the regula-tions laid down by their associations. They have terms which they apply to them, which, in the judgment of men who are subjected to them, are exceedingly severe, and they are exceedingly effective. Those terms I need not reproduce here. They have means by a strong moral force, arising largely out of their intelligence, to execute their orders, and it is found as a general rule that where employers, no matter how powerful, set themselves up against the associations of printers, they fail in the strongle. Now it is proposed by a secondprinters, they fail in the struggle. Now it is proposed by a careless bill passed in this manner, without the examination or recommendation of any committee whatever, put upon a vehicle which ought not to contain it, to involve the Government in a quarrel with this pow-to contain it, to involve the Government in a quarrel with this powerful and intelligent body of men and probably by that very fact stop all the operations of your printing office.

I do not believe that the cost of public printing in this city arises from excessive wages paid to printers. It is not that at all. Their compensation here is very little more than in other cities. Private proprietors are subjected to it here. Every newspaper carried on here is paying these wages. The Government pays no more than the city newspaper offices pay. There is the same rule applied to the Government work that is applied in all the job offices and all the newspaper offices in the city. The cost of printing is not in consequence of the wages paid to printers who support their families by their exertions. It requires skilled labor, experience, and intelligence in order to conduct the business properly, and it ought to be paid as the wages of a duct the business properly, and it ought to be paid as the wages of a skilled clerk are paid, made exceptional and paid a little above the wages paid an ordinary mechanic at least. It is proposed, I say, to involve the Government in a quarrel with an association like this, founded upon these principles, sustained by its intelligence, and the effect will be that very likely you will stop the operations of your public printing.

I am opposed to the amendment because it comes in this form. all opposed to the amendment because it comes in this form. It it is a proper reform, if it is in the line of economy, then let our Committee on Printing make a report and show us that it is right. A rule established in this manner is not a proper one. As I said, it is not the amount of money that is paid to the printers which makes the expense of Government printing, but it is the enormous quantity of printing which we throw upon the Printing Office; it is the liberal demand which we make upon the resources of this office, printing enormous piles of documents, which are brought here daily and laid upon our tables so that Senators can scarcely get to their desks or away from them during the sessions on account of these enormous masses of stuff which we conceive that the necessities of the public service require us to print. If you want to go to the root of this matter you should do it by cutting off the amount of printing, limiting the Departments in allowing fancy surveys and other mat ters to be printed without authority of Congress, and we should not print everything that is suggested in the shape of a public document. A Senator rises in his place and says, "I hold a document in my hand; it is a document of fifty or sixty pages; it comes from my conhand; it is a document of fifty or sixty pages; it comes from my constituents; it is upon a very interesting question and I should like to have it printed. The Chair says, "Is there objection to the printing of this paper?" No objection is made and it is printed, and $50 or $100 are drawn out of the Treasury to pay for the printing. There is the bung-hole out of which the public treasury flows; and while you are attending to the spigot here you allow the bung-hole to be open to pour out the substance of the people. I am opposed to an economy which starts out by pinching the laboring man in his wages, and yet allows this great waste of public money in the way of luxurious printing. I trust that the amendment of the House will not be agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know Mr. President it is not a first many constants.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know, Mr. President, it is much more agreeable to advocate high wages, to be paid not only to managers but to employés and everybody else, than the ordinary, careful, prudent compensation which business men allow. To show how much more pleasure it would give me to vote with the Senator from California than are it would give me to vote with the Senator from California than to vote for this amendment, I have a paper in my hand signed by a number of persons whom I respect highly, who are of the character of persons described by the Senator, intelligent, industrious, prudent, careful people, who object to this amendment on the ground that it reduces their compensation 25 per cent. Therefore, the fact is that this amendment by giving the printers the compensation provided in large cities of the country does reduce their compensation something like from 20 to 25 per cent. I will read the law which authorizes the employment of public printers. Section 3763 of the Revised Statutes provides:

The Congressional Printer may employ, at such rates of wages as he may deem for the interest of the Government and just to the persons employed, such proof-readers, compositors, pressmen, binders, laborers, and other hands as may be necessary for the execution of the orders for public printing and binding authorized by law; but he shall not, at any time, employ in the office more hands than the absolute necessities of the public work may require.

Thus the whole of this vast service, the employment of hundreds and sometimes almost thousands of persons, is left to the absolute discretion of the Government Printer, and we find here adopted a rule allowing him to pay as much for eight hours' labor in Washington as is paid for him to pay as much for eight hours' labor in Washington as is paid for ten hours' labor in the other cities. That is the general result. Undoubtedly the effect of this amendment is to reduce the compensation paid for printing; but is it right, is it just that a single officer of the Government should have the power to fix the compensation of perhaps thousands of employés or five hundred employés, whatever the number may be, without limit or restriction except by what he regards to be best? Is it right that a rule should be applied to printers here and that a different rule should be applied to printers in other cities? If the compensation is reasonable in other cities, is not the same compensation reasonable here? same compensation reasonable here?

I know it is unpleasant to insist upon the rule of equity when the Government is concerned; but the very men who would vote against this proposition may denounce the Public Printer for the cost of the public printing. I have seen myself the strongest statements made by those who probably voted against this amendment elsewhere, arraigning the conduct of the Public Printer because he does not reduce the expenses of printing to the standard that prevails in the other cities of the Union.

I have said all I desire to say. I believe the amendment of the House is right, although it may not be pleasant to say so. It may be unpopular to vote for the amendment; yet I shall do so because I think it is right, and it is a right principle.

Mr. ANTHONY. When the new rule was under discussion which excluded legislation from appropriation bills, I suggested that it should be a joint rule and that we should not restrict ourselves from a privbe a joint rule and that we should not restrict ourselves from a privilege which was conceded to the other House; but my idea did not prevail, and the rule was adopted which restricts us from originating legislation upon appropriation bills, yet it leaves us to act upon that which comes from the House. I think, therefore, that this amendment does not come within the rule which we prescribed for our own action, especially as this is not a general appropriation bill, but a special bill

All that the Senator from California said about the intelligence of All that the Senator from California said about the intelligence of the men who are engaged in the printing business, I readily agree to; but the same intelligence prevails among the printers of New York, Baltimore, and Philadelphia as among the printers of Washington. Although I have the best feeling toward those who are engaged in the public printing, I do not see why all the other printers in the country should be taxed in order that the printers in Washington shall have higher wages for less hours of labor than are asked and paid in other cities. It makes the position of a printer here an office rather than a mechanical employment, and people are constantly coming to us to get places in the Government Printing Office, not because they are good printers, but because they are good politicians, and for other ons, rather than for particular proficiency in their art.

The amendment which the House placed upon the bill passed the Senate at a previous session, I think the session before the last, but Senate at a previous session, I think the session before the last, but was lost in the House. The trades union of printers in this city is the most powerful in the country. It consists of printers a majority of whom are employed in the Government office. They therefore fix the rate of wages. They fix the rate of wages without consulting the employers. The printers in the Government Printing Office fix the rate of wages for the whole city. I have just been informed that the printers' union allow their men to work in the city offices for less than they do in the Government office.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask the Senator from Rhode Island whether or not

I ask the Senator from Rhode Island whether or not it is a fact that the wages fixed here have more or less influence in fixing the wages in other cities, and if the fact of wages being higher here than elsewhere has not a tendency even in the other cities to keep up the general wages?

Mr. ANTHONY. I suppose it must to a certain degree, but the price of printers' wages is much higher here than in any cities except New Orleans and San Francisco, and I think it is higher than

Mr. DAVIS. I believe the trades union have a national organization or a general organization here, and I ask the Senator whether many of the members of that organization are not Government employés and if from that fact they do not govern somewhat the prices to be paid all over the country? Did I misunderstand the Senator in obtaining that impression from his remarks?

Mr. ANTHONY. The prices vary in different cities. Each city has its typographical association. There is no general rate of wages fixed for the whole country, but each city fixes the scale for itself, and in this city it is much higher than elsewhere. I have just been informed that the typographical association here allows its men to work for the newspaper and city offices in Washington for lower wages than it requires them to demand of the Government Printing

Mr. DAVIS. May I ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing what is the usual average compensation per hour for Government printing?

Mr. ANTHONY. Fifty cents an hour.

Mr. DAVIS. Four or five dollars a day f
Mr. ANTHONY. Four dollars a day for eight hours' work.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman] to concur in the amendment

Mr. INGALLS. Do I understand from the chairman of the Committee on Printing that the compensation which printers receive is fixed by the trades-union, as it is called, or by the Government?

Mr. ANTHONY. By the trades-union.

Mr. INCALLS. Is the trades-union of sufficient power or influence to carry out its arrangements and enforce its decrees as to what amount shall be received by the members who belong to it?

Mr. ANTHONY. It has been so.
Mr. INGALLS. Then, if this amendment is passed, as I understand it, Congress is brought immediately into collision with an organization that has sufficient power to enforce its views as against Congress. In other words, it will be an irresistible force meeting an immovable body. If we pass this amendment, then, unless the printers see fit to accept its terms, all operations of the Government Printing Office must cease. It seems to me that it is certainly an extraordinary condition of affairs and one that requires further detiberation. For my part I desire to be informed. I want to vote intelligently upon this proposition. If the Government, which is the contracting party, has the power to fix the compensation of printers to be paid in the Government Printing Office, then it is wise to pass this amendment proposed. But if the result of it will be that we shall be brought into conflict with a prescription that shall be brought into conflict with an organization that can prevent the further operations of the Government Printing Office, I think we

The Senator from Ohio asks whether I think there is any danger. I can only say that from the statements made by the Senator from Rhode Island, I should think there was very serious danger. Whether it exists or not, of course I am not fully informed; but if it does exist, it is certainly a matter of very grave doubt in my mind whether we should concur in this amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. The whole of this grows out of the passage of the eight-hour law. If the Government of the United States could the eight-hour law. If the Government of the United States could fix the number of hours of a day's labor all over the United States, in each State, it might be possible to carry out the idea sought to be advocated by the eight-hour men; but the United States can only pass a law so far as it is an employer that it will regard eight hours as a day's labor; and the printers' union, I do not know but properly, took the Government at its own word; and they have said that eight hours' labor for the United States is equivalent to ten hours' labor for others, and there is a difference of just about that proportion, 25 per cent. These printers have got a higher rate, say 25 per cent. over others. others.

The Senator from Kansas fears that if we should pass a law that at the close of this session of Congress we will only pay as much for printing as is paid in New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, suddenly the printers all over the United States will refuse to work for the United States. I do not think so. I think when we give as much as anybody else gives in any of these great cities or in this city we shall find printers to work for us. It will not be as heretofore a special prerogative or privilege, but it will be simply a fair day's labor for a fair day's wages. I do not think there will be any trouble about disbanding the Printing Office.

Mr. ANTHONY. I do not think there is any danger of a revolution in the art of printing because the Government refuses to pay any higher wages than are paid in other cities. I suppose that the reason in the art of printing because the Government refuses to pay any higher wages than are paid in other cities. I suppose that the reason why the typographical union has been able to enforce from the Government higher wages than are paid elsewhere is because there was no restriction on the power of the Public Printer to pay wages, and I presume that when there is this restriction placed on the Public Printer and he is required to pay only such wages as are paid elsewhere printers will be as willing to work for the Government as for other people, as willing to work in Washington as in New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore, where the expenses of living are as high Philadelphia, or Baltimore, where the expenses of living are as high as here as here.

Mr. LOGAN. I do not think the Senator from Rhode Island, although he is at the head of the Printing Committee, understands this question. It is not a revolution in the art of printing that is apprehended, but the question is whether there shall be a revolution on the part of the printers against Congress, and if that is the danger I think Congress had better back down. [Laughter.] Congress does not want any war. Therefore I am not in favor of agreeing to the amendment of the House, for fear we might get into a war between the Government and the printers, and if we cannot do it in any other the Government and the printers, and if we cannot do it in any other way I think we had better appoint a commission to settle the difficulty. [Laughter.]

Mr. SARGENT. If this is a needed reform, I am very sorry that the Committee on Printing has not the credit of having brought it forward. I am very well aware that the chairman of the committee has been amiably anxious for appropriations for the benefit of the institution, and the Committee on Appropriations have been extremely stitution, and the Committee on Appropriations have been extremely anxious for items in which retrenchment could be made; and if this would reduce the expenses of printing so much, if the better way and the proper way to begin the reduction was by pinching the men who do the work, I am very sorry that my friend has not the credit for himself and his committee of having brought it forward in a regular way, so that we could have passed upon it as we do on measures of that character generally, legislative in their nature.

If, however, the Senator from Ohio is correct, this is an indirect method of endeavoring to repeal the eight-hour law. I say that that is an unfair proceeding. If the eight-hour law is unwise, obnoxious, deleterious to public interests, gives too much favor to working people, why not bring forward a measure to repeal it in a manly way and let us vote upon it? Those who so think can vote for the meas-and let us vote upon it? Those who so think can vote for the measure; and if there are any of us who do not happen to so think we can vote against it; but I do not think it is well in the single department of public printing here in Washington to repeal the law and leave it in operation in all your navy-yards and in every other place where Government service is performed of a mechanical na-

I suppose, however, as the chairman of the Committee on Printing

I suppose, however, as the chairman of the Committee on Printing brings his powerful influence to bear in favor of the passage of this amendment, it will pass; but I think it is very unjust to those involved in it. It is not beginning economy at the right end.

Mr. ANTHONY. My friend from California says the Committee on Printing should have introduced this reform. The Committee on Printing did introduce it at a previous session, and it met the approbation of the Senate, but was lost in the House. Nor do I think it is proper to apply the term "pinching labor" when we pay the same price for labor that is paid in neighboring cities.

Mr. INGALLS. Is it not true that the conditions of labor are different here from what they are in the cities named in the amendment? Is not the demand more irregular and inconstant? Are not the hours entirely different? Is it not the case that a large number the hours entirely different? Is it not the case that a large number of printers are brought here upon whom only occasional demands are made for service? They are compelled to hold themselves in readimade for service? They are compelled to hold themselves in readiness to respond to any exigency that may arise. If that is the case, it seems to me that it would be unjust for us to say that precisely the same sum should be fixed as compensation for printers here as for those in Baltimore, or New York, or Philadelphia. I do not believe that a great body of men as intelligent as printers generally are would be guilty of the injustice of making a purely invidious discrimination between this and other points where labor is performed. If a higher compensation is demanded and paid here than in New York, or Boston, or Philadelphia, I believe the action must be because the conditions are so different that there is a necessity for higher compensation here than there.

Mr. ANTHONY. I am not aware of the different conditions that are unfavorable to labor here compared with New York, Philadelphia, or Baltimore. The prices of living are not higher here to persons who reside the whole year than they are there. The prices of living are higher to us who are here but a part of the year. We have to pay the same rent and some other expenses in the half year that we should have to pay in a whole year; but to persons who reside here the whole year the expenses are not higher than in Philadelphia, New York, or Baltimore.

Mr. INGALLS. But is not the demand irregular?
Mr. WITHERS. May I inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Printing whether I understood him to say that the Government was paying more in this city for the same amount and the same character of work than was being paid by the newspaper establish-character of work than was being paid by the hewepaper consuments of this city?

Mr. ANTHONY. I am told that the typographical union which fixes the price of printing allows its men to work in the newspaper offices or job offices in this city for lower prices than they exact at the Government Printing Office.

Mr. WITHERS. That of course meets the inquiry of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ALLISON. This bill was presented to the Committee on Appropriations with the understanding or statement that unless it was passed within two days the printing of the RECORD and necessary public printing with reference to the reports of investigating compublic printing with reference to the reports of investigating committees would be stopped. We, originating that appropriation bill in the Senate, sent it to the House of Representatives; and they place now upon this bill, which the chairman of the Committee on Printing informs us, and the Public Printer informs us, is absolutely necessary to pass immediately, important legislation. It may be right or it may be wrong; but we are presented with the alternative of stopping the public printing which is imperatively necessary or agreeing to a proposition which for the time being, at least, has not been before any committee. Now if this proposition is to pass, I trust the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will withdraw his motion to non-concur and have this measure referred to some committion to non-concur and have this measure referred to some committion to non-concur and have this measure referred to some committee of the Senate in order that it may be maturely considered; and, if this is a proper amendment, let it pass then; but to pass it now merely because it is imposed upon a bill, the sudden necessity of which is agreed to on all hands, I do not believe is right.

In addition to this, the regular appropriation for next year's printing has not yet passed. This amendment provides that this provision shall take effect after the present session of Congress closes. If it is a wise provision, and I do not say that it is not wise—the Senator from Ohio has given us some very good reasons why it should be adopted—why not let it apply to the next fiscal year when the regular appropriation bill comes in ?

lar appropriation bill comes in ?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio, that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think myself it would be better to let this commence on the 1st of July instead of the 4th of March, because I think it would be unfair to make this change occur in the midst of a season. If in order, I move to amend the amendment of the House so that it shall commence the 1st of July.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves to amend the amendment by striking out the words "the present session of Congress" and inserting "expiration of the current fiscal

Mr. INGALLS. I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing whether the statement that has been made is correct, that unless this bill passes now the printing of the Record and all the necessary congressional documents will be immediately suspended.

Mr. ANTHONY. Not the printing of the RECORD. The appropriamr. ANTHONI. Not the printing of the RECORD. The appropria-tion for the RECORD does not run out; but the appropriation for the congressional printing is about exhausted. The Public Printer told me yesterday, I think, that he would be able to print an appropria-tion bill that had been offered yesterday, but he thought that after that he would be obliged to stop. It is necessary to have this bill passed for the congressional printing, not for the printing of the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Ohio to the amendment of the House of Representatives

Mr. WINDOM. It seems to me this illustrates the impropriety of legislating in this way on appropriation bills. This proposition has been referred to no committee; the Committee on Printing have made no recommendation upon it; and the Senate proposes to take it up and amend it here without the consideration of any committee to whom it properly belongs.

Now, I think probably the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio that this is not strictly a general appropriation bill is true, but yet it seems to me that the principle applies to this as well as to any other bill. I think that the better way would be to non-concur and send it to a committee of conference, and at least it will have a little further consideration there and may be amended if deemed advisable.

I will say for myself that I am opposed to the amendment. I think it ought not to prevail. I believe that the men in the Printing Office are the most poorly paid men in the capital. I believe they work harder for the amount of money they receive than almost anybody else. They are required to work at all times of the night. They do a kind of work that is not excelled, if equaled, anywhere in the United States, and I am informed and believe it to be true that they do not make an average of $1,200 a year, even the best workmen. I may be mistaken in that, but I am informed that that is true. it seems to me that we are, I was going to say, tinkering with an amendment of importance that had better be referred to some committee for further consideration. I hope it may go to a conference committee at least.

Mr. MORRILL. I hope the Senator from Ohio will withdraw his amendment and that we shall concur or non-concur in the amendment of the House

Mr. SHERMAN. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment of the House of Representatives.
Mr. SARGENT. I ask for the yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas

20, nays 28; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Bailey, Barnum, Booth, Clayton, Cockrell, Davis, Hamilton, Johnston, Jones of Florida, Kelly, Kernan, McCreery, McDonald, Maxey, Merrimon, Morrill, Robertson, Sherman, and Withers—20.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Bruce, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Christiancy, Conover, Cooper, Cragin, Dawes, Dennis, Dorsey, Ferry, Goldthwarte, Ingalis, Logan, McMillan, Morton, Paddock, Patterson, Sargent, Spencer, Teller, Wallace, West, Windom, and Wright—28.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Bayard, Biame, Bogy, Boutwell, Conkling, Eaton, Edmunds, Frelinghnysen, "Gordon, Hamiln, Harvey, Hereford, Hitchock, Howe, Jones of Nevada, Mitchell, Norwood, Oglesby, Randolph, Ransom, Saulsbury, Sharon, Stevenson, Thurman, Wadleigh, and Whyte—27.

So the motion to concur was not agreed to.
Mr. WINDOM. My motion is to non-concur and that a committee of conference be appointed.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WEST. I wish to inquire from the Chair what is the condition of the pending business, so that we can understand it distinctly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The railroad bill is the unfinished business to come up on the conclusion of the bill which has been taken up by unanimous consent.

mr. WEST. Then I understand the railroad bill is laid aside informally for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands.

Mr. ALLISON. • I ask that the Indian appropriation bill, which is when Allison. I ask that the indian appropriation bill, which is under consideration, be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill (H. R. No. 4452) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, is under consideration, the Chair understands.

is under consideration, the Chair understands.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. ALLISON. I trust that motion will not prevail.

Mr. WEST. Is the motion debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not debatable. The question is on the motion for a recess.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHERMAN, (when his name was called). If this bill can be read between ten and twelve o'clock to-morrow I will vote "yea."

Mr. ALLISON. Before the result is announced I ask unanimous that this hill should be read:

consent to say that it is important that this bill should be read; it must be read at length. If that can be done between ten and twelve o'clock to-morrow, there will be no objection to an adjournment tonight; but we have had some understanding that no business shall be transacted.

Mr. SHERMAN.

Mr. SHERMAN. The mere reading would not be business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to that understanding? The understanding which has heretofore applied to the interval between ten and twelve o'clock is known to Senators.

Mr. PADDOCK. There are many Senators absent who were here when that understanding was made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair thinks.

Mr. WEST. I suggest that this does not conflict with the understanding. It simply enables the Clerk to read the bill, which is a matter of form and has to be done, and will consume so much time. If it is done between ten and twelve o'clock to-morrow we shall have those two hours to use afterward.

Mr. DAVIS. There are a large number of amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair tolerates discussion, if there be no objection.

there be no objection.

Mr. DAVIS. There are a large number of amendments attached to this bill. If the understanding is simply to read the bill and have the amendments acted on in their order afterward and go over it regularly, very well. I have no objection to letting the bill be read at ten o'clock, with the understanding that when the bill is taken up and acted upon afterward the amendments are to be considered regularly. Is that the understanding †

Mr. ALLISON. That is what I desire.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to simply reading the bill between ten and twelve o'clock to-morrow without considering or acting on the amendments? If there be no objection, such will be the understanding. The Chair hears no objection.

The result of the roll-call was then announced—yeas 32, nays 16;

YEAS—Messrs. Bailey, Barnum, Bogy, Bruce, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Clayton, Cockrell, Conover, Cooper, Davis, Dennis, Goldthwaite, Gordon, Hamilton, Hereford, Ingalls, Johnston, Kelly, McCreery, McDonald, McMillan, Maxey, Merrimon, Norwood, Paddock, Patterson, Robertson, Saulsbury, Stevenson, West, and Withers—32.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Anthony, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chaffee, Christiancy, Cragin, Dawes, Ferry, Morton, Sargent, Sherman, Spencer, Teller, Wallace, Windom, and Wright—16.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Bayard, Blaine, Booth, Boutwell, Conkling, Dorsey, Eaton, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Hamlin Harvey, Hitchcock, Howe, Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kernan, Logan, Mitchell, Morrill, Oglesby, Randolph, Ransom, Sharon, Thurman, Wadleigh, and Whyte—28.

So the motion was agreed to; and (at four o'clock and twenty-nine minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess till Thursday, February 8, at ten o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 1, 1877.

[CALENDAR DAY, February 7.]

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House (at ten o'clock a. m., Wednesday, February 7) resumed its session.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I move that the House take a further recess till the time unanimously agreed on yesterday, five minutes before twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to, and a recess taken accordingly. The recess having expired, the House re-assembled at eleven o'clock and fifty-five minutes a. m.

MARY K. PATTON.

Mr. BAGBY, by unanimous consent, reported from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, as a substitute for House bill No. 4156, a bill (H. R. No. 4609) granting a pension to Mary K. Patton; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be privated. to be printed.

MARY B. MARSH.

Mr. BAGBY also, by uranimous consent, reported back from the same committee, with a recommendation that it be passed, a bill (H. R. No. 3844) granting a pension to Mary B. Marsh; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. BAGBY also, by unanimous consent, reported back adversely from the same committee bills of the following titles; which were laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 3382) granting a pension to Mary Clark Bard, of Pennsylvania; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2717) granting a pension to Hugh McGovern.

ELIZABETH ROSE.

On motion of Mr. BAGBY, by unanimous consent, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the further consideration of the petition of Elizabeth Rose, widow, praying for a pension; and the same was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

ADJUDICATION OF PENSION CASES, ETC.

Mr. BAGBY also, by unanimous consent, reported from the Committee on Invalid Pensions a bill (H. R. No. 4610) to regulate the adjudication of pension cases, and to authorize the appointment of pension surgeons and to repeal sections 4744, 4771, 4772, 4773, 4774, 4775, and 4777 of the Revised Statutes; which was read a first and second time, ordered to be printed and recommitted, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

EVENING SESSION FOR PENSION BUSINESS.

Mr. BAGBY. I am directed by the Committee on Invalid Pensions to ask unanimous consent that an evening session, commencing at half past seven o'clock, may be ordered for Thursday the 15th instant, for the consideration of reports from that committee, and for no other

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that at the present time it would be advisable not to make such an assignment of business for a future day. He suggests that the resolution be withheld for the pres-

Mr. RUSK. Can we not do anything by unanimous consent?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. This order might interfere with the business in the joint meeting of the two Houses.

Mr. HALE. Of course, unless it should interfere with that business, we could by unanimous consent make this order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the safer way is to reserve this proposition, at least for the present.

The motion was withdrawn.

The SPEAKER, (at twelve o'clock m.) The Chair asks that business be suspended and that the Chaplain, by unanimous consent, be allowed to offer prayer.

There being no objection, prayer was offered by Rev. I. L. Townsend, Chaplain of the House.

DABNEY M. SCALES.

Mr. YOUNG, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4611) to remove the civil disabilities of Dabney M. Scales; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. YOUNG. I ask unanimous consent that this bill be put upon its passage at once.

There was no objection.

Mr. HURLBUT. The body of this bill, as well as the title, requires to be modified by striking out the word "civil" and inserting "po-

Mr. YOUNG. I have no objection to that modification.

The SPEAKER. The modification will be made.

Mr. CONGER. I ask that the petition accompanying this bill be

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

Your petitioner, Dabney M. Scales, a citizen of Memphis, Tennessee, respectfully represents to your honorable body that at the commencement of the late war between the States he was a cadet at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, having been appointed thereto from the fifth congressional district of Mississippi, and that when the State of Mississippi passed the ordinance of secession from the Federal Union he resigned from the academy at Annapolis and entered the navy of the Confederate States, where he continued to serve until the close of the war, since which time he has been a law-abiding and loyal citizen of the Government. He therefore prays your honorable body that the disabilities imposed upon him by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States may be removed.

DABNEY M. SCALES

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed; two-thirds voting in favor thereof.

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. MAISH, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 189) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, ordered to be printed and printed in the RECORD.

It is as follows:

Resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, (two-th-rds of each House concurring.) That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of said Legislatures, shall become and be a part of the Constitution, namely:

ARTICLE XVI.

Article 2, section 1, paragraph 2, to be made to read as follows: Each State shall be entitled to a number of electoral votes equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State shall be entitled in number of Senators and Representatives to which the State shall be entitled in Congress.

The first division of the twelfth amendment to the Constitution, ending with the words "directed to the President of the Senate," to be struck out, and the following substituted:

The citizens of each State who shall be qualified to vote for Representatives in Congress, shall cast their votes for candidates for President and Vice-President by ballot, and proper returns of the votes so cast shall be made under scal, within ten days, to the secretary of state or other officer lawfully performing the duties of such secretary in the government of the State, by whom the said returns shall be publicly opened in the presence of the chief executive magistrate of the State, and of the chief iustice or judge of the highest court thereof, and the said secretary, chief magistrate, and judge shall assign to each candidate voted for by a sufficient number of citizens a proportionate part of the electoral votes to which the State shall be entitled, in manner following, that is to say:

They shall divide the whole number of votes returned by the whole number of the State, and shall assign to candidates voted for one electoral vote for each ratio of popular votes received by them respectively, and, if necessary, additional electoral votes for successive largest fractions of a ratio shall be assigned to candidates voted for, until the whole number of the electoral votes of the State shall be distributed; and the said officers shall thereupon make up and certify at least three general returns, comprising the popular vote by counties, parishes, or other principal divisions of the State, and their apportionment of electoral votes as aforesaid, and shall transmit two thereof, under seal, to the seat of Government of the United States, one directed to the President of the Senate and one to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and a third unsealed return shall be forthwith filed by the said secretary in his office, be recorded therein, an the sad secretary in his spection.

Article II, section 2, clause 4 to be made to read as follows:

"The Congress may determine the time of voting for President and Vice-President and the time of assigning electoral votes to candidates voted for, which times shall be uniform throughout the United States."

Strike out the words "electors appointed," where they occur in the twelfth amendment to the Constitution, and insert in their stead the words "electoral votes."

GEORGE P. TURNER.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4612) to remove the political disabilities of George P. Turner, of Courtland, Alabama; which was read a first and second

The bill, which was read, provides (two-thirds of each House concurring therein) that the political disabilities imposed by the four-teenth amendment of the Constitution upon George P. Turner, a citizen of Courtland, Alabama, be, and the same are hereby, removed.

Mr. RUSK. I ask that the petition be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

COURTLAND, February 3, 1877.

To the honorable members of the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

I have the honor to request my political disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States be removed.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE P. TURNER.

Mr. HURLBUT. I shall have to object; the petition does not set forth how or why

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I will state to the gentleman from

Mr. HURLBUT. I object on that ground.
Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Let the bill be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.
Mr. HURLBUT. I have no objection to its reference.
The bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

NEW BERNE NATIONAL CEMETERY.

On motion of Mr. MONROE, by unanimous consent, an act (S. No. 1187) authorizing the Secretary of War to allow the interment in the National Cemetery at New Berne, in the State of North Carolina, of the remains of the late R. F. Lehman, lately commissioner of the United States circuit court in the eastern district of North Carolina, was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed. HANNAH L. LLOYD.

Mr. COX. I move, by unanimous consent, to take from the Speaker's table an act (S. No. 824) for the relief of Hannah L. Lloyd, as executrix, and George W. King, executor, of William Lloyd, deceased, and put it upon its passage at this time. There is but a very small amount involved.

Mr. EDEN. Let the bill be read.

Mr. EDEN. Let the bill be read.

The bill, which was read, directs the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Hannah L. Lloyd, executrix, and George W. King, executor, of William Lloyd, deceased, the sum of $582.55, it being the balance paid into the Treasury, after costs and expenses, arising from the sale of one-fourth interest in the brig Fanny, to which it appears they are entitled.

Mr. COX. There is a Senate report accompanying the bill.

Mr. CONGER. I insist these bills shall go to the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the bill is not before the House.

DIRECTORS OF NATIONAL BANKS.

Mr. BANKS, (by request,) by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4613) to provide for the election of directors of national banks; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed.

MOHAMMED KAHN.

Mr. NASH, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4614) for the relief of Mohammed Kahn, otherwise John Ammahae, late private in Company E, Forty-third New York Volunteers, granting him an invalid pension; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

NICHOLAS WAX AND OTHERS.

Mr. NASH also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4615) for the relief of Nicholas Wax, Mitchell Granary, and Moline Lange; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

MARSILVIA F. WOODARD.

On motion of Mr. CRAPO, by unanimous consent, an act (S. No. 1123) granting a pension to Marsilvia F. Woodard, mother of George R. Woodard, was taken from the Speaker's table, read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

BUILDING FOR CENTENNIAL EXHIBITS.

Mr. CLYMER. I ask unanimous consent to present for reference to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds a memorial of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and beg permission briefly to explain its import.

explain its import.

It sets forth that many foreign nations, states, and individuals, by whom articles were sent to the centennial exhibition at Philadelphia, have made noble and valuable gifts to the Government of the United States of objects of art, of fire-arms, of mineral and agricultural products, and of artistic and mechanic skill. It may not be disputed that the acceptance of them by the Government imposes an obligation that they shall be preserved and exhibited for the gratification and instruction of the people. Their preservation and exhibition must be confided to the national museum, of which by law the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution have the custody. They have presented for our consideration the necessity for erecting a suitable presented for our consideration the necessity for erecting a strate building for the purposes I have indicated, giving an estimate of its probable cost. I do not ask that the memorial be printed in the RECORD, as one of like import was presented to the Senate, which will be found in its proceedings of yesterday. I therefore ask its reference to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and reference to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and that the accompanying list, setting forth the names of the donors and the character of them, be printed in the Record for the information of the House and the country.

Mr. YOUNG. I will say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that there is already a bill pending before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, on which a favorable report has been prepared, and we only wait a meeting of the committee to order it to be reand we only wait a meeting of the committee to order it to be re-

Mr. CLYMER. I am delighted to have that in formation. But it can do the committee no harm to have the memorial referred to it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to present a memorial of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institute, and to have the same referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider. Is there objection?

Mr. CLYMER. I also ask that the list attached to the memorial be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania. I ask that the memorial itself be printed in the RECORD. Mr. CLYMER. With the accompanying list. There was no objection; and the memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered, with the accompanying list, to be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial and accompanying list are as follows:

mittee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered, with the accompanying list, to be printed in the Record.

The memorial and accompanying list are as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, beg leave respectfully to lay before you a question which has suddenly arisen, and which can be solved only by your anthority.

In the year 1846, on the organization of the Smithsonian Institution "for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," Congress, to the great relief of the Patent Office and other public buildings, devolved upon the regents of that institution the custody of "all objects of art and of foreign and curious research, and all objects of natural history, plants, and geological and mineralogical specimens belonging or hereafter to belong to the United States which may be in the city of Washington."

In accordance with this enactment, the institution has received and carefully preserved all the specimens which have been brought together from more than lifty public exploring expeditions, and has added specimens collected by itself, or obtained from foreign museums by exchange, till its present editice in the beginning of 1876 had become full to overflowing.

By an act bearing date July 21, 1876, additional duties were laid upon the Smithsonian Institution as custodian, and 84,500 were appropriated "for repairing and fitting up the so-called armory building on the mall between Sixth and Seventh streets, and to enable the Smithsonian Institution to store therein and to take care of specimens of the extensive series of the ores of the precious metals, marbles, building stones, coals, and numerous objects of natural history now next in Philadelphia, including other objects of practical and economical value, presented by various foreign governments to the national museum."

As a fruit of this act of the General Government, the Smithsonian Institution in Philadelphia, including o most part packed away in boxes, liable to injury and decay, or shall they be exhibited?

It was the act of Congress which ordered the acceptance in trust of these noble gifts to the United States. The receiving of them implies that they will be taken care of in a manner corresponding to the just expectations of those who gave them; and one of the prevailing motives of the donors was, that the productions of their several lands might continue to be exhibited. The intrinsic value of the donations is, moreover, enhanced by the circumstances under which they were made. They came to us in the one hundredth year of our life as a nation, in token of the desire of the governments of the world to manifest their interest in our destiny. This consideration becomes the more pleasing, when we bring to mind that these gifts have been received, not exclusively from the great nations of Europe from which we are sprung, or from the empire and republics on our own continent beyond the line, but that they come to us from the oldest abodes of civilization on the Nile, from the time-honored empires and kingdoms of the remotest eastern Asia, and from the principal states which are rising into intellectual and industrial and political greatness in the farthest isles and continents; from states which are younger than ourselves and bring their contributions as a congratulatory offering to their elder brother.

We have deemed it our duty to lay these facts and reflections before both Houses of Congress, and to represent to them, that if they in their wisdom think that this unequaled accumulation of natural specimens and works interesting to science, the evidence of the good-will to us that exists among men, should be placed where it can be seen and studied by the people of our own land and by travelers from abroad, it will be necessary to make an appropriation for the immediate erection of a spacious building. Careful inquiries have been instituted to ascertain the smallest sum which would be adequate to that purpose; and the plan of a

States Army. We beg leave further to represent that to accomplish the purpose there would be need of an appropriation of $250,000. This amount is required not as a first installment to be followed by others, but as sufficient entirely to complete the edifice.

plete the citifice.

Should this appropriation be made at an early day, the building could be ready for the reception of articles before the next session of Congress.

M. R. WAITE,
T. W. FERRY,
H. HAMLIN,
J. W. STEVENSON,
A. A. SARGENT,
HIESTER CLYMER,
BENJ. H. HILL,
GEO. W. MCCRARY,
PETER PARKER,
ASA GRAY,
GEO. BANCROFT,
Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

WASHINGTON, February 5, 1877.

List of the more important collections presented by foreign commissioners to the United States Government and taken charge of in behalf of the national museum by the Smithsonian Institution.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Dr. Ernesto Oldendorff, commissioner.

Ores of metals, minerals, pottery, tiles, stuffed animals, leathers and hides, nets, fishery products, samples of woods, fibers, seeds, grains, specimens of silk and wool in great variety.

This donation embraces almost the whole of the exhibit in agricultural hall and a large portion of that in the main building.

AUSTRIA.

Dr. Francis Migerka, commissioner.

Specimens of mineral wax, (ozockerite,) and a variety of mineral and industrial products.

BELGIUL.

Count D'Oultremont, commissioner.

Some specimens of industrial products.

BRAZIL

Dr. J. M. de la Silva Coutinho, commissioner.

Specimens of iron, coal, hides, leather, tiles and pottery, in great variety, specimens in large number of woods, vegetable fibers, substances used as foods, gums, resins, &c.

This collection embraces nearly the whole of the immense display in the agricultural building and a part of that in the main building.

CHILL.

Edward Shippen, esq., commissioner.

A collection of minerals and ores, artificial stone, tiles, terra-cottas, and an extensive variety of grains, seeds, and other vegetable products, embracing by far the largest part of the display of the Chilian government in the main building.

CHINA.

J. L. Hammond, commissioner.

The entire exhibit made by the commissioner of customs of China and displayed in the mineral annex. It includes a complete representation of the manners and customs of the Chinese, such as samples of their foods, medicines, clothing, their domestic and household utensils, their ornaments, objects used in their plays and domestic and household utensils, their ornaments, objects used in their plays and festivities, &c.

In the collection are numerous full-sized figures, beautifully executed and suitably dressed, representing the different ranks and classes in the community; many hundreds of clay figures about one foot in height, illustrating the different races of the empire; specimens of cotton and silk in great variety; samples of paper, leather, and the like; samples of pottery, such as vases, tea-pots, pipes; matting, caskets, &c.

This collection is of unparalleled interest, and cost the Chinese government a large sum of money. It will require a space fully equal to half of one of the halls of the national museum for its exhibition. There are also three ornamental gateways, three cases, and two pagodas as used in the main building for purposes of exhibition; specimens of wrought iron and other metals; musical instruments; bamboo ware; glass; specimens of tea, oils, and woods, tobacco, and sugar. The entire collection (exclusive of the ornamental gate-ways and cases) filled twenty-one large wagon-loads.

E. Brugsch, commissioner.

Collection of minerals, tiles, and pottery; garden products in great variety; samples of woods and a large collection of objects illustrating the habits and customs of the natives of Soudan, Nubia, and Abyssinia, such as musical instruments, weapons, clothing, &c.

FRANCE.

Captain Anfrye, commissioner.

No collective exhibit was made by the government, but Messrs. Haviland, of Limoges, France, presented a pair of centennial memorial vases valued at $17,000 and requiring the erection of a special kiln for their production, together with a large panel of tiles.

Mr. Bartels, commissioner.

Specimens of tiles, cements, asphalt-work, fire-brick, manufactures in metals, and woods from the commissioner; and from Mr. F. Krupp, of Essen, a very extensive display illustrating the mineralogy and metallurgy of the iron trade of Germany, with samples of the different manufactures made at the great gun-works at Essen. This collection was one of the largest and most complete at the exhibition, and attracted general attention. A special catalogue of this collection was printed by the exhibitor.

F. R. Hitchcock, commissioner.

Collections of the volcanic and other rocks and minerals, ropes and fibers, to-bacco, sugar, oils, models of boats, nets, and vegetable products in large variety.

ITALY.

Joseph Dassi, commissioner.

Samples of alabaster, terra-cotta, marbles, &c.

JAPAN.

Lieutenant-General Saigo Tsukmichi, commissioner.

A valuable series of tiles and other pottery, the large exhibit of the fisheries of Japan in the agricultural building, including both products and apparatus, skins and hides of animals, various food preparations, and a series illustrating the materials and manipulations employed in the manufacture of tea and silks; also manufactures of bamboo.

Dr. Mariano Barcena, commissioner.

The greater part of the exhibit of the natural products of the country as shown in the main building, including the ores of gold and silver, obsidian, woods, fibers, and other vegetable products, pottery and terra-cotta. Among the most notable mineral specimens may be mentioned an iron meteorite weighing four thousand pounds.

NETHERLANDS.

Dr. E. H. von Baumhauer, commissioner.

Agricultural products in considerable variety; specimens illustrating the fisheries of Holland, including cod-liver oil, &c., tiles, cements, &c.

William C. Christophersen, commissioner; Gerhard Gade, assistant commissioner.

A very large collection of ores and other specimens illustrating the netallurgy of iron, copper, nickel, &c. A collection illustrating the eatable fishes of Northern Europe, samples of prepared fishes, samples of food preparations, &c. Great variety of agricultural products.

ORANGE FREE STATE.

Charles W. Riley, commissioner.

A collection of agricultural products.

José Carlos Tracy, commissioner.

A series of the principal food and other vegetable products in that country.

PORTUGAL.

M. Jayme Batalho Reis, agricultural commissioner; M. Lourenco Malheiro, industrial commissioner.

The greater part of the very extensive exhibit of minerals, ores, &c., in the main building; also, pottery, samples of industrial products, glass-work, paper, &c., and a full series of the vegetable productions of the kingdom in nearly two thousand varieties. A portion only of this collection filled sixty large boxes.

RUSSIA

General Charles de Bielsky, commissioner; Captain Nicholsky and Captain Semelsh-ken, assistant commissioner.

An enormous collection illustrating the metallurgy of copper and iron, including different varieties of Russian iron and steel; the very extensive collection of minerals of Siberia exhibited by the School of Mines and valued at a high price; samples of rope and cordage, pottery, tiles, cement, and isinglass and other products of the sturgeon.

SPAIN.

Colonel F. Lopez Fabra, commissioner.

A collection of great magnitude, illustrating the mines and mining of coals, iron, copper and silver, salt, &c., in the kingdom of Spain; a very largenumber of bricks, tiles, earthenware and pottery; illustrations of the various fibers and other materials for basket-work, cordage; industrial products in great variety, including samples of paper, leather, &c. A complete series illustrating the agricultural resources of that country.

From the Philippine Islands, as one of the colonies of Spain, were received samples of native work in the form of baskets, nets, boats, &c., and hemp fibers.

SWEDEN.

C. Juhlin-Dannfelt, commissioner.

The entire exhibit of Sweden made in the agricultural department, illustrating the fisheries and agriculture of Sweden, including also specimens of fish, food-fish preparations. &c. specimens of peat working machinery, apparatus for deep-sea sounding and dredging, and also for collecting specimens of natural history; photographs of arctic scenery.

SIAM. No commissioner.

A collection illustrating the products, the industries, &c., of the kingdom of Siam, made for the centennial exhibition with the understanding that it should be presented to the United States at the close. This filled two hundred and sixteen boxes, and embraces many articles of great pecuniary value. This collection, with those from China and Japan, will require a room as large as the upper floor of the Smithsonian Institution, for satisfactory display.

SWITZERLAND.

Mr. Edward Guyer, commissioner.

Specimens illustrating the geology of the Alps and St. Gotthard Tunne.

TURKEY.

G. d'Aristarchi Bey, commissioner.

Illustrations of the metal work of the country, of its mines and minerals, its tiles and pottery, domestic and household utensils; samples of iron and steel, &c.

TUNIS.

G. H. Hcap, esq., commissioner.

A threshing-machine, such as has been used from the time of the ancient Car-

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, including colonies.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Colonel F. B. Sandford, commissioner.

A very large collection of the private exhibits of tiles, terra-cottas, bricks, and pottery, sanitary ware, as also many industrial products in great variety. Among the more notable articles in the series are collections of tiles and mosaic rooms from Messrs. Minton & Hollins, and many specimens from Messrs. Doulton, of Lambeth, among them several large vases. Some highly important deposits have also been made, subject to a recall after a certain period. Chief among these is the allegorical representation of America, a duplicate of that furnished by Messrs. Doulton to the Albert Memorial in London, embracing several colossal figures. This group is valued at $15,000. Also the large terra-cotta pulpit and front, and many other specimens of great variety; an extremely complete and important collection of samples of wools from all parts of the world, presented by Messrs John L. Bowes & Brothers, embracing over three hundred varieties each, suitably labeled, with prices marked, &c.; a similar collection of wools in the fleece, exhibited by Messrs, James Oddy and Sons.

A. A. Outerbridge, esq., commissioner.

A great variety of specimens of corals, shells, and other marine objects, models of boats, samples of stone, and wood.

Professor A. L. Selwyn, in charge of geological exhibit.

An extensive collection of the rocks of British North America; many hundreds of specimens exhibited by the geological survey, specimens of coals from all parts of the dominion; ores of different kinds, samples of iron, steel, and copper, stoneware, and pottery.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Augustus Morris, esq., commissioner.

The extensive exhibit illustrating the mining resources, the natural history and the botany and agriculture of the province including a large model of the gold products of the colony up to the year 1875, and specimens of coal-oil, shale, petroleum, &c.

NEW ZEALAND.

James Hector, esq., commissioner.

The entire exhibit of the animal, vegetable, and mineral kindoms of the colony, and also specimens illustrating its ethnology. Among these specimens is a model of the gold product of the colony and specimens of its coal.

OURENSLAND.

Angus Mackay, esq., commissioner.

Model of the gold product of the colony, specimens of ores and copper, iron, and gold; a large collection of native woods, fibers, and other products.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

S. Davenport, esq., commissioner.

A full series of all the exhibits from the animal, mineral, and vegetable kingdoms.

TASMANIA.

H. P. Welch, esq., commissioner.

Specimens of the iron and other ores, leather, woods, seeds, and grains, fibers, wools, &c.

Sir Redmond Barry, commissioner.

The entire collection of useful, economical minerals of the country exhibited by the mining department, specimens of stone-ware and other products, extensive collections of grains, wools, fruits, fibers, and woods, samples of paper, gums, &c.

VENEZUELA.

Mr. Leon de la Cova, commissioner.

The entire exhibit made by this country of minerals, ores, articles of materia medica, fruits, fibers, extracts, &c.

medica, fruits, fibers, extracts, &c.

In general it may be stated that from the countries mentioned in the foregoing the exhibits made by the commissioners in behalf of their respective governments, so far as relates to the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms and their applications, have been presented to the United States, in some cases without any exception whatever, in others all except a few duplicates which were presented to other foreign commissions or to institutions in the United States. Indeed, the only countries from which absolutely nothing was received were Denmark, Luxembourg, Bahamas, British Guiana, Cape of Good Hope, and Jamaica, the exhibits of these countries being either entirely private property or borrowed from the Colonial Museum in London and necessarily returned.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MILLS rose.

Mr. CONGER. Having seen the report accompanying the bill (S. No. 824) which the gentleman from New York [Mr Cox] desires to have put upon its passage, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. COX. I hope that bill will now be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. MILLS.]

HENRIETTA STRINGHAM.

Mr. MILLS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back the petition of Henrietta Stringham, widow of Rear-Admiral Stringham, for a pension, and moved that the commit-tee be discharged from the further consideration of the same, and that it be referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

F. V. GREEN AND J. J. SOWERBY.

Mr. MILLS also, by unanimous consent, reported back, with an adverse recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 4390) authorizing the appointment of Acting Passed Assistant Surgeon Francis V. Green as surgeon and of Acting Passed Assistant Surgeon Joseph J. Sowerby as assistant surgeon in the Navy, and moved that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the same, and that the accompanying report be printed. The motion was agreed to.

COUNTING THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

Mr. KNOTT. I am directed by the select committee on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House of Representatives in counting the electoral votes to make a partial report, which I send to the desk and ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The select committee on the powers, privileges, and duties of the House of Representatives in relation to the counting of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States would in part respectfully report to the House of Representatives the accompanying evidence taken by them in presuance of the order of the House, up to and including the 5th day of February, 1877, and ask that the same be printed.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the gentleman a question.
Mr. KNOTT. My colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Burchard,] desires to make a remark. After that I shall ask the previous question.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I desire to say on behalf of the minority that we do not assent to the proposition of the majority so far as concerns reporting the testimony at this time for printing. We have no objection to a resolution to print the testimony for the use of the committee, as it proceeds; but it is premature to report the tes-timony in part taken, as some of the witnesses have not yet been cross-examined and are now under examination.

Mr. KNOTT. I demand the previous question.
Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I yield a moment to the gentleman

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I yield a moment to the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE.]

Mr. KNOTT. I only yielded to my colleague on the committee to make a statement for himself.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Will the gentleman from Kentucky allow the gentleman from Maine to make a remark?

Mr. HALE. I only wish to ask a question.

Mr. KNOTT. Very well.

Mr. HALE. And that is, whether this is the testimony taken before this committee, a portion of which was printed by some parties outside of the Congressional Printer, to which attention has been called in the newspapers and also yesterday on the floor of this House? House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to answer that question.

Mr. KNOTT. I suppose that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] knew when he raised the question, before what committee this testimony was taken. As to any publication outside of the testimony, he knows more about it than I do, and I call for the previous question.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Will the chairman of the committee allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. KNOTT. Certainly.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Does he not propose under the order of the House that the committee shall print the testimony as it shall be taken, as it proceeds, without any further order of the House?

That is my understanding of the resolution.

Mr. KNOTT. I will state that these papers, the report of the testimony, are accumulating to that degree that we find it necessary to print them from time to time, as the evidence is taken, and it is the understanding of the committee that I am to report, as chairman of the committee, from day to day, the evidence as it may be taken, and

In propose to do so.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. Does that give the committee the power to print testimony that may hereafter be taken, or does the chairman propose to ask special consent to print testimony taken in future ?

Mr. KNOTT. The resolution only relates to the testimony already reported, and I will say to my friend that as soon as additional evidence is handed to me by the reporters I will ask the House to order its printing.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois. I will say to the House that this is in part the testimony that has been privately printed, some of it not being printed.

Mr. KNOTT. I call the previous question.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered;

and under the operation thereof the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KNOTT moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

H. L. LLOYD AND GEORGE W. KING.

Mr. COX. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] has agreed to withdraw his objections to the consideration of Senate bill 824, for the relief of Hannah L. Lloyd as executrix and George W. King executor of William Lloyd, deceased. And if any one else objects I would like to have he report read. There is only a very small amount of money involved.

The bill was read, as follows:

After our was read, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Hannah L. Lloyd, exceutrix, and George W. King, executor, of William Lloyd, deceased, the sum of $582.55, it being the balance paid into the Treasury, after costs and expenses, arising from the sale of one-fourth interest in the brig Fanny, to which it appears they are entitled.

Mr. COX. I ask that the bill be put upon its passage.

No objection was made; and the bill was taken from the Speaker's table, received its third reading, and was passed.

Mr. COX moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I must demand the regular order of business, which I believe would be the morning hour, as we have never had one on this legislative day, unless the Committee on Appropriations are prepared to go on with their business. I will yield, however, to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] on the Committee of the second secon mittee on Appropriations.

PUBLIC PRINTING DEFICIENCY,

Mr. WALDRON. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the bill (S. No. 1222) to provide for a deficiency in the appropriations for the public printing and binding for the current fiscal year, with a recommendation that it pass, and I ask unanimous consent that it be now considered in the House as in Commit-the of the Whole on the state of the Union. I will say to the House that there is a pressing necessity for the passage of this bill to-day.

Mr. KNOTT. I would ask the gentleman to yield to me to make a report which is necessary for the proper adjustment of the accounts of the House, and is in the interest of the employés of the House.

Mr. WALDRON. If I yield to one I must yield to all, so it will do the gentleman no good, for the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] would insist on the regular order.

The bill was read. It appropriates the sum of $350,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to supply a deficiency for congressional printing and binding, including the Congressional Record, and the necessary material therefor for the current fiscal year, provided that of the above amount $5,000 may be used for printing and binding for the Supreme Court.

for the Supreme Court.

for the Supreme Court.

Mr. WALDRON. I desire to say in explanation of this bill that the amount appropriated for the public printing for the current fiscal year was $91,000 less than the appropriation for the previous year. I desire to say further that the appropriation for the current year has been intrenched upon in consequence of the last session extending from the 1st day of July to the middle of August; by which means the expenses for six weeks of the next fiscal year, by taking out of the appropriation for the current year the appropriation for printing and binding, is already exhausted, and the Public Printer gives us notice that unless this appropriation be made now he will be compelled under the existing law to suspend work. I now yield, by inpelled under the existing law to suspend work. I now yield, by instructions from the Committee on Appropriations, to the chairman of the Committee on Printing to offer an amendment.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I offer the following amendment as a

Provided further, That from and after the close of the present session of Congress the Public Printer shall pay no greater price for labor performed by printers, bookbinders, and other employes in the Government Printing Office for each hour's work or piece-work than the average price paid for an hour's work or piece-work of the same description in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

Mr. CONGER. I raise the point of order upon that amendment that it involves new legislation.

Mr. DUNNELL. And I hope the gentleman will insist upon his point of order.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. The statute provides-

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. The statute provides—
Mr. CONGER. I insist upon my point of order that this amendment changes existing law and is new legislation, and does not show upon its face that it is a retrenchment of expenditure.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I will read the law upon the subject.
Mr. CONGER. I may remark that there is nothing in this amendment which shows whether the Government Printing Office pays more released to the provided that the provided in the same of the provided that the provided the provi or less now, or would pay more or less if this amendment should become law, than is paid in New York and other cities for this work. Those who remember the statistics which were furnished to the House I nose who remember the statistics which were firmished to the House during the debate upon this subject will be satisfied that in many cases the printing under this amendment would cost the Government more than is paid in other cities.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I would state that more is paid at the Government Printing Office than is paid in other cities.

Mr. CONGER. That does not appear upon the face of the amendment.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. It is not necessary that it should appear upon the face of the amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Then only the gentleman's word is to be taken as an offset to mine.

The SPEAKER. Under what rule does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] object to this amendment?

Mr. CONGER. Under the rule prohibiting new legislation upon

Mr. CONGER. appropriation bills.

The SPEAKER. That rule would apply as against à general appropriation bill. This is not a general appropriation bill. The Chair presumes that the gentleman from Michigan refers to Rule 120, which is as follows:

No appropriation shall be reported in such general appropriation bills, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law, unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress; nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order except such as, being germane to the subject-matter of the bill, shall retrench expenditures.

Mr. CONGER. If this is not a general appropriation bill, then the committee has no right to report it at this time.

The SPEAKER. It is in order to report it at this time because on yesterday the House by unanimous consent gave the Committee on Appropriations the right to report this particular bill at any time. Mr. CONGER. I hold that this is one of the regular appropriations of the Government.

The SPEAKER. It is not one of the appropriation bills to which Rule 120 applies.

Mr. CONGER. It is a deficiency in a general appropriation for printing which is made every year.

The SPEAKER. In the first place a deficiency appropriation bill is not known under the rules.

Mr. CONGER. It is a part of the annual appropriations made every year upon the report from the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not. Rule 77 indicates the general appropriation bills, which are ten in number, and include all the appropriation bills except the bill appropriating for rivers and harbors and the bill appropriating for deficiencies, which bills are omitted from the enumeration contained in Rule 77.

Mr. CONGER. If the Chair pleases, this is a part of the appropriations contained in the regular sundry civil appropriation bill; that bill is the place for this appropriation. The fact that it comes into the House in this form makes it none the less a general appropriation;

the House it this form makes it hole the less a general appropriation; it is a part of the sundry civil bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. CONGER. It is a part of the sundry civil bill reported at this time by leave of the House.

The SPEAKER. The answer to that is very plain. If this was one of the general appropriation bills it would not require unanimous consent of the House for the Committee on Appropriations to report it at any time.

Mr. CONGER. Because it was not coupled with the other matters of the appropriation bill. But the sundry civil bill might have had this sole appropriation, which belongs in that bill.

The SPEAKER. Yes, it might have had; but it does not have it. Mr. CONGER. But it is none the less a part of that bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the House has recognized this as an appropriation, not of the general character alluded to in Rule 77, as a part of the bills which it is the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to prepare and report. It is not an appropriation of the general character which the restrictive clauses of Rule 120 are intended to reach. In confirmation of the position of the Chair, the House on yesterday recognized the fact that this was not such an appropriation bill by giving unanimous consent that it might be reported at any time from the Committee on Appropriations; that took it out of the scope of any restrictive rule whatever.

Mr. CONGER. Then the point of order would lie against the bill,

Mr. CONGER. Then the point of order would be against the oil, that, containing an appropriation, this bill must receive its first consideration in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, at the instance of the gentleman reporting the bill, asked unanimous consent that it might be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole at this time, and the House has given unanimous consent for that manner of proceed-the House has given unanimous consent for that manner of proceeding with this bill.

Mr. CONGER. I have, of course, to submit to the ruling of the Chair. This subject-matter being one of the appropriations of the Government, an annual appropriation, I cannot see exactly how the spirit of it could be changed by the manner of introducing it.

The SPEAKER. The evil the gentleman complains of consists in the fact that the House incautiously gave unanimous consent on yesterday that the Committee on Appropriations might report this bill at any time, and also that it again incautiously gave unanimous con-at any time, and also that it again incautiously gave unanimous consent this morning that the bill should be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. While the Chair sympathizes with the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER,] under the rules there is no gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. Conger,] under the rules there is no remedy that he can think of.

Mr. Conger. Will the Chair allow me to make a suggestion? The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. Conger. I can see no limit to amendments of every character whatever that may be offered and affixed to this bill.

The SPEAKER. Yes, there is a limit; any amendment to be in order must be germane to the bill.

Mr. Conger. Admitting that, still anything in regard to printing, the whole subject-matter of what might be printed, would be germane to this bill; and in this way all the laws in regard to the printing might be changed. I only submit this as the conclusion which must follow from the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. Vance, of Ohio. This comes under the rule of the House. It is germane to the bill and in the line of economy.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the point of order is well taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the point of order is well taken. The gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. WALDRON,] as the Chair understands, demands the previous question on the bill and pending amend-

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I would like to say something. Mr. FORT. Does the gentleman from Michigan propose to yield for debate?

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I would like to make a few remarks, if the gentleman from Michigan will yield to me for five minutes.

Mr. WALDRON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. DUNNELL. I object, unless there is to be opportunity for reply.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. I hold in my hand a letter which I will ask the Clerk to read; but before it is read I will state that this matter of wages was carefully considered in the Joint Committee on Print-The chairman of the Senate committee and myself had frequent consultations upon this matter, and agreed that it was unjust for the Government to pay a greater price by almost 50 per cent. than is paid in first-class offices throughout the country for similar work. Consequently, about the middle of last August, we joined in writing a letter which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sin: In the opinion of the Joint Committee on Public Printing it would be "for the interest of the Government" that you pay such rate of wages as would be the average of what is paid to journeymen printers and bookbinders, and to women employed in printing and binding, in New York, Phtladelphia, and Baltimore. They also suggest that you employ such number of boys and apprentices as in your opinion will best promote the public service.

Any steps which you may take in these directions, without regard to the dictation of any society or other third party, will receive the cordial approval of the Joint Committee on Public Printing.

ng.

H. B. ANTHONY,
Chairman Committee on the part of the Senate,
JOHN L. VANCE,
Chairman Committee on the part of the House.

-, Public Printer. To -

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state further that the appropriation made at the last session of Congress would have been sufficient under ordinary circumstances to do all the public printing required in one year; and if the advice contained in the letter just read had been followed, the extraordinary amount of printing ordered could have been executed without calling for a deficiency appropriation. In justice to myself and the Printing Committee of the House, I will say that if the rules prevailing in private printing establishments throughout the country had been observed in the Government Printing Office, not one dollar of deficiency would have been asked at this session. In my judgment, the public printing for the current year could have been let out by contract at the figure appropriated by Congress at the last session and a handsome profit made by the contractor.

by the contractor.

I hold in my hand a letter from the Public Printer, directed to the clerk of printing records; and in support of what the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] has very properly said, I will read a portion

The last session of Congress, with the heavy amount of work incident upon the closing weeks of a protracted session, extended for more than six weeks into the appropriation of this year. This was an unlooked for occurrence.

The amount of printing and binding relating to the first session of the Forty-fourth Congress left to be completed under the present appropriation was very considerable; indeed that work was so heavy that in order to complete it before the commencement of the present session it was necessary to work the office in strong force during the entire recess.

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. WALDRON. As the House is considering this bill as in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule, and as five minutes have been allowed to the gentleman from Ohio to explain the amendament, I now yield five minutes to my colleague [Mr. CONGER] to oppose the amendment, after which I shall call for the previous question.

Mr. FORT. I think we ought to have this question discussed more fully.

Mr. FORT. I think we ought to have this question discussed more fully.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, the impracticability of this proposition has been proved before this House time and again when the same proposition has been made. The idea that we shall ascertain the average price of this labor in New York or Philadelphia through one year, or two years, or ten years, and adopt this average as the standard of prices in the Congressional Printing Office has been proved to be absurd, and indeed it is absurd on its face. In no other office throughout the United States or the world is this particular kind of printing required to be done with the speed and accuracy demanded from this office. It is almost entirely night-work. A large portion of it is that peculiar kind of work requiring great care and exactness. This work is different from the work anywhere else. Besides, the expense of living incurred by printers in Washington is greater than such expenses in New York or Philadelphia. It is not pretended that the printers here receive any more than they ought to receive, taking into consideration the kind of work and the hours at which it is performed. I do not know of any subject that had more thorough and careful investigation, more reports from committees, than this one on several occasions since I have had the honor to be a member of Congress; and it was the opinion of the House from time to time, as these gress; and it was the opinion of the House from time to time, as these matters have been brought before it, that the rule of payment for general work in other offices in other cities could not properly be applied to this class of work, whether done by the Government or by contractors. No contractor would agree to furnish the night-work which has to be furnished in preparing the long records of House proceedings.

proceedings.

Now the committee assume this congressional printing ought to be let to contractors. The fact is no contractor could take the contract to print this class of work and do it, if he were honest in his accounts, as low as the price it costs the Government now.

It seems, Mr. Speaker, as if every proposition which is made, this among others, is directed against the laborer, the night-laborer, the careful, painstaking, hard-working printers, who work while we sleep. That is the object of this amendment, to cut down the wages of the most laborious class of laborers in this city and country, men whose very lives can continue, as it is said, on the average from seven to ten most laborious class of laborers in this city and country, men whose very lives can continue, as it is said, on the average from seven to ten years only following this incessant night-labor. Why should these attacks constantly be made upon these laborers, this most faithful and devoted class to our interest and the interest of the country, who prepare and have ready for our perusal the records of our debates when we rise in the morning, although we may sit here until twelve at night? They work through the long nights in the preparation and printing that long reports from committees may speedily be laid before Congress for our consideration and action. Let reform come in some other direction, and do not strike with such fell hand upon the laborer alone, and that is the sole object of this amendment.

I endeavored to have this amendment ruled out by the Chair, but if that cannot be done I desire to meet it on its merits, and to ask the Representatives of laboring-men at least to stand by their interests in

Mr. FORT. If a member proposes an amendment, then is he not entitled to an hour on that amendment? last word.

The SPEAKER. It has never been so ruled. The gentleman from Michigan has the right, in the opinion of the Chair, to demand the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. I make this point of order: when the House permitted this to be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule, that carries with it the right to amend and to debate the amendments five minutes for and five minutes

Mr. FORT. Why, that is my point of order!

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order and holds the gentleman from Michigan has the right to demand the previous

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. FORT. Is not the gentleman from Michigan entitled to an hour to close debate?

The SPEAKER. He declines to use it.

Mr. FORT. I move to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered. I do not wish to antagonize the bill, but I do wish to antagonize the amendment.

Mr. WALDRON. I do not desire to debate the bill, and ask for the question. Mr. FORT.

Mr. FORT. I ask for a vote on my motion to reconsider.
Mr. WALDRON. I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the

Mr. FORT. I do not yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is bound to recognize the gentleman in charge of the bill to make such motion as will advance it.

Mr. FORT. Then I ought not to have been recognized. I have no antagonism with the gentleman from Michigan, but I wish to be heard on the amendment.

The motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. FORT. If this amendment is agreed to, then we ought to remove this capital to New York.

The SPEAKER. That is not a point of order.

Mr. BALLOU. Is it in order for me to make a statement?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

The question recurred on the amendment.
The House divided; and there were—ayes 86, noes 80.
Mr. CONGER demanded the yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered.
Mr. FORT. I ask the amendment be again read.

The amendment was again read.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 118, nays 105, not voting 67; as follows:

voting 67; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Ainsworth, Anderson, Ashe, Atkins, John H. Bagley, jr., Beebe, Blackburn, Bland, Blount, Boone, Bradford, Bright, John Young Brown, Backner, Samuel D. Burchard, Burleigh, Buttz, Cabell, John H. Caldwell, Candler, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clarke of Kentucky, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clarke, ir., of Missouri, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clarke, ir., of Missouri, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clark, jr., of Missouri, Cate, Chapin, John B. Clarke, ir., of Missouri, Chaper, Collins, Cook, Cowan, Culberson, Cutler, Davis, De Bolt, Dibrell, Durham, Eden, Egbert, Faulkner, Felton, Finley, Forney, Fuller, Gause, Glover, Gunter, Hale, Andrew H. Hamilton, Robert Hamilton, Hancock, Hardenbergh, Henry R. Harris, John T. Harris, Harrison, Hartridge, Hartzell, Hatcher, Haymond, Abram S. Hewitt, Hill, Hooker, House, Humphreys, Hurd, Frank Jones, Knott, Lamar, Franklin Landers, George M. Landers, Lane, Levy, Lewis, McFarland, Metcalte, Milliken, Mills, Morgan, Neal, New, Odell, Oliver, Piper, Potter, Rainey, Rea, Reagan, Riddle, John Robbins, William M. Robbins, Mhes Ross, Savage, Sayler, Scales, William E. Smith, Southard, Sparks, Springer, Stevenson, Stone, Teese, Terry, Thomas, Tucker, John L. Vance, Waddell, Waldron, Gilbert, C. Walker, Walling, Ward, Warner, Watterson, Erastus Wells, Whitehouse, Whitthorne, James Williams, Willis, Wilshire, Fernando Wood, Yeates, and Young—118.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Bagby, George A. Barley, John H. Baker, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Belford, Blair, Bradley, William R. Brown, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Belford, Blair, Bradley, William R. Brown, William H. Baker, Ballou, Banks, Belford, Blair, Bradley, William R. Brown, William P. Caldwell, Campbell, Cannon, Casson, Caswell, Chittenden, Cochrane, Conger, Crapo, Danford, Davy, Denison, Dunnell, Eames, Evans, Flye, Fort, Foster, Franklin, Frye, Goode, Goodin, Haralson, Benjamin W. Harris, Hathorn, Hendee, Henderson, Hopkins, Hoskins, Hubbell, Hunter, Hurbut, Hyman, Joyee, Kasson, Kell

Jere N. Williams, William B. Williams, James Wilson, Alan Wood, jr., and Woodburn—105.

NOT VOTING—Messrs. Abbott, Banning, Bass, Bell, Bliss, Horatio C. Burchard, Carr, Caulfield, Cox. Grounse, Darrall, Dobbins, Douglas, Durand, Ellis, Field, Freeman, Garfield, Gibson, Hays, Henkle, Goldsmith W. Hewitt, Hoar, Hoge, Holman, Hunton, Jenks, Thomas L. Jones, Kehr, King, Lawrence, Le Moyne, Lord, Lynde, Maish, MacDongall, McMahon, Meade, Miller, Money, Morrison, Payne, Phelps, John F. Philips, Poppleton, Powell, Purman, John Reilly, Rice, Sobieski Ross, Schleicher, Schumaker, Seelye, Sheakley, Singleton, Stanton, Stephens, Swann, Thompson, Martin I. Townsend, Washington Townsend, Charles C. B. Walker, Wheeler, Wike, Alpheus S. Williams, Benjamin Wilson, and Woodworth—67.

So the amendment was agreed to. During the roll-call,

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, stated that his colleague, Mr. PHILIPS, was detained in his room by sickness.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded. Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and

Mr. WALDRON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.
On motion of Mr. WELLS, of Missouri, the title to the bill was amended by adding the words "and for other purposes."

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WALDRON. I move that the rules be suspended and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of resuming the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. KNOTT. I ask the gentleman from Michigan to withdraw that motion for a moment till I can make a report from the Commit-that motion for a moment till I can make a report from the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CONGER. I object.

The question was taken on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and it was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. Eden in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

Mr. WALDRON. When the committee rose yesterday it was dividing upon the amendment offered by my colleague from Michigan, [Mr. Conger,] increasing the appropriation for printing and binding for the Patent Office from $25,000 to $41,000. The Committee on Appropriations have considered the amendment offered by my colleague propriations have considered the amendment offered by my colleague nd are of the opinion that it should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the pending amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 179 strike out "$25,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$41,000;" so that the paragraph will read:
For printing and binding for the Patent Office by the Public Printer, $41,000; and so much of sections 490, 491, and 492 of the Revised Statutes as authorizes and provides for the printing for gratuitous distribution of specifications and drawings of patents is hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. SAMPSON. I now submit the amendment indicated in the discussion of yesterday, as follows:

Strike out all of line 179 after the word "dollars," and all of lines 180, 181, 182, and 183; namely these words:

And so much of sections 490, 491, and 492 of the Revised Statutes as authorizes and provides for the printing for gratuitous distribution of specifications and drawings of patents is hereby repealed.

Mr. WALDRON. The Committee on Appropriations have considered that amendment and think it should be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

For rent of building on the corner of Eighth and G streets, known as "Wright's building," $3,000, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877; and hereafter no contract shall be made for the rent of any building, or part of any building, to be used for the purposes of the Government, until an appropriation therefor shall have been made in terms by Congress.

Mr. ATKINS. I offer the following amendment:

After "1877," in line 193, add the following: And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to terminate said lease on or before the 30th day of June next.

The object of the amendment is simply to direct the Secretary of the Interior to terminate the contract. This building, in which the Bureau of Education and Labor is placed, is what is known as Wright's building. There is no necessity whatever for renting this building. The Bureau of Education and Labor can be removed to building. The Bureau of Education and Labor can be removed to the Freedman's Bureau building, or to the building now occupied by the Pension Bureau. There is no necessity for renting Wright's building, and we desire to terminate the contract.

Mr. KASSON. I ask the Clerk to read the paragraph as it will be if amended.

The Clerk read the paragraph as proposed to be amended.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. COX. I offer the following amendment to come in at the end of the clause, after the word "Congress:"

And that this clause be regarded as notice to all contractors or lessors of any such building or part of building.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the amendment may be again read and meanwhile reserve the point of order.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. GOODIN. Where does that come in?

Mr. COX. At the end of the clause.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to that. I do not think it changes any law.

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the following paragraph:

To enable the Postmaster-General to provide for the manufacture of postal cards, $31,000.

Mr. HALE. I offer an amendment to come in after the paragraph just read, and ask that the letter which I send to the desk be read. It will explain itself.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment, as follows:

For the salary of the naval solicitor, from August 15, 1876, to June 30, 1877, $3,072.05.

Mr. HALE. Now read the letter.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, February 3, 1877.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,

Washington, February 3, 1877.

Sir: I have sent to Hon. Speaker of the House of Representatives (and your committee has probably received) the estimates of this Department for the ensuing fiscal year, and also for deficiencies of the current year. In those estimates is included an appropriation for the salary of the naval solicitor from Angust 15, 1876, to June 30, 1873, and also for the year ending June 30, 1878.

My present purpose is respectfully to urge the importance of making the appropriations required for the payment of that salary.

I was greatly surprised when I discovered that the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act of August 15, 1876, omitted all reference to that salary, and the Secretary of the Navy was equally surprised. To both Departments—the Navy Department and the Department of Justice—this omission was unfortunate, because the services of the naval solicitor, who acted also as naval judge-advocate-general, were very important, and unless General Belles, the incumbent of the office, would continue to perform its many duties trusting to the action of Congress in its session of 1876–77, very serious inconveniences and injuries to the public service must have ensued. He has remained faithfully at his post of duty, thus averting the evils that must otherwise have resulted from that omission.

The act creating the Department of Justice, and the Revised Statutes, make the office of naval solicitor a permanent part of that Department. The large number of cases, and of trials by courts-martial, and of questions presented for legal solution in the Navy Department, make the office of naval solicitor a bernament part of that Department. The large number of cases, and of trials by courts-martial, and of questions presented for legal solution in the Navy Department, make the office of naval solicitor a permanent part of that Department. The large number of cases, and of trials by courts-martial, and of questions presented for legal solution in the Navy Department

ALPHONSO TAFT Attorney-General.

Hon. WILLIAM S. HOLMAN,
Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives. Mr. HALE. This is merely to fill up a deficiency in the salary made by the action of the last year.

Mr. CLYMER. What is the amount of his salary?

Mr. HALE. Twenty-five hundred dollars. The amendment is a fair one.

Mr. CLYMER. Was his salary of $2,500 a year fixed by law?
Mr. BLOUNT. His salary is provided for in another bill; this is only to supply an omission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

For the National Museum in charge of the Smithsonian Institution: For restoring to their proper place in the National Museum cases are moved to the international exhibition, and re-arranging the collections, and for expenses and preservation of the collections, and for receiving, packing, and transporting the objects presented to the United States at the centennial by State and foreign governments, and for properly storing and preserving them until a proper disposition can be made of the same, $20,000.

Mr. WADDELL. I move to insert after line 208 the following: For tubs, pots, packing materials, labels, seeds, envelopes, grading, repairing wer, horse-hire, and manure for the Botanical Gardens, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.
The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows: For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 13, 1877, $200,000.

Mr. CLYMER. I move to strike out that paragraph. In view of the amendment already adopted it is unnecessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

To pay for two thousand copies of Barclay's Digest, ordered by resolution of the House of July 14, 1871, $2,000; and hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I offer the following amendment:

And for such additional service hereby required, the journal clerk shall be paid the sum of $1,000 per annum.

Mr. REAGAN. I wish to amend that paragraph by striking out a portion of the original text.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. But it is first in order to amend the text before taking the vote on striking out. Mr. REAGAN. I desire to amend the paragraph by striking out as

And hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct.

I offer this amendment because I am not sure that I appreciate or understand what would be the effect of this clause or the object of

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I think that it is first in order to consider my amendment before we take a vote upon striking out that part of the clause which I propose to amend. My amendment is one in the nature of perfecting the original text, and if the gentleman will allow us to take a vote on that then the House will have the two propositions before it, and they can strike out the whole if they see fit.

Mr. CLYMER. I would say to the gentleman from lowa that if this amendment be inserted by a vote of the committee it cannot afterward be stricken out.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. You can strike it out with other parts of the text, but I am not going to lead gentlemen into a trap.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the amendment in order.

Mr. REAGAN. Then I am not particular as to the order in which the question is put, but it seems to me that if my amendment prevails there would be no occasion for the gentleman from Iowa to of-

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That is the very thing I want to avoid. The theory of the law of amendments is that you may first perfect the text before a motion is made to strike out the text.

Mr. HOOKER. But before that the question should be taken on the motion to strike out, for unless there is additional labor the compensation of this clerk should not be increased.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That is true.
Mr. HOOKER. It is true.
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. But the Committee on Appropriations have

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. But the Committee on Appropriations have reported this provision and I want, if possible, to make it presentable before the vote is taken on striking it out.

Mr. HOOKER. I submit that the proposition of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Reagan] should be first considered by the committee, because it proposes to strike out that part of the clause which the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Wilson] proposes to amend, and in case of a failure on the part of the committee to accept that amendment then the motion of the gentleman from Iowa will be in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa proposes an amendment to the text of the paragraph, and it is clearly in order to vote on that before a motion to strike out the clause.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The Committee on Appropriations have thought fit to bring in this clause, and I think that the Committee of the Whole should have an opportunity of making it presentable, if possible, before a motion is entertained to strike it out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that the motion of the gentleman from Iowa is first in order.

man from Iowa is first in order.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. If we cannot make the clause presentable, by a majority vote we can then strike out the clause.

Mr. O'BRIEN. But if the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa prevails, will it then be in order to move to strike it out?

prevails, will it then be in order to move to strike it out?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes, you cannot strike out a, b, and c, after being inserted, but you can strike out a, b, c, and d. The Committee on Appropriations have seen fit to put the work of preparing and publishing a new digest upon a clerk of the House. Now, it cannot be necessary to call the attention of the gentlemen to the character of the services imposed upon this clerk. It is a work in which critical knowledge is needed. It requires an expert to do it. Every one who does it must study the laws and must have a comprehensive knowledge of parliamentary law. I have looked somewhat into the previous cost of getting up the Digest, and I find that we paid the old journal clerk $3,600 a year and his assistant $3,000.

Now, I do not know to what extent the House is held liable to pay Mr. Barclay for a copyright. I have too much respect and veneration for that gentleman to interfere with his rights, whatever they may be. The new work proposed to be put upon an officer of the House cannot be performed by him for the amount paid to him for his services at the Clerk's desk.

Instead of the journal clerk as heretofore receiving $3,600 a year, cannot be performed by him for the amount paid to him for his services at the Clerk's desk.

Instead of the journal clerk as heretofore receiving $3,600 a year, with an assistant journal clerk at $3,000 a year, the Committee on Appropriations propose to have all the work done for $2,500 a year. Now if this work is to be well done, it should be done in such a manner as to be intelligible, including as it does a compilation of all the decisions of the Chair that are well settled. If the new digest is to be prepared in such a way that it may be readily understood by the new members of Congress, as well as the old, then we ought to provide a sufficient remuneration to the gentleman who is to do it. From what little knowledge I have upon this subject I assert that no twenty-five-hundred-dollar clerk can be obtained to do it. You cannot expect a man to do this work for $2,500; it is unfair to ask any clerk to do it; the work will not be performed for that sum. If this additional work is to be imposed upon the journal clerk of the House, then I ask, as a matter of simple justice, that he be paid at least within $100 of the salary received by the old journal clerk, who also had an assistant.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Certainly.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. Did I understand the gentleman corrective as the state of the salary contents and the gentleman corrective as the state of the salary received by the old journal clerk, who also had an assistant.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Certainly.
Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. Did I understand the gentleman correctly as saying that our journal clerk now performs services for $2,500 a year for which the House formerly paid $6,600 ?
Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.
Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. The office of assistant journal clerk has been sholished.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. The office of assistant journal clerk has been abolished.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It has been.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. And the present journal clerk of the House does the work of both the old journal clerk and his assistant, and does it for the sum of $2,500?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. That is correct.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. I would select the gentlemen what is

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. I would ask the gentleman what is his amendment?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It is that if this new labor is put upon the journal clerk, who now journalizes our proceedings for $2,500 a year, he shall have an additional $1,000 for compiling the new digest.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. To make his entire compensation $3,500

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. To make his entire compensation $3,500 a year?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. For services for which the House formerly paid $6,600?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. When this matter was before the Committee on Appropriation from year to year for the purpose of printing Barclay's Digest was altogether an unnecessary expense; that there was no need of having this work done every year. We therefore came to the conclusion that, while we would not abandon the idea of making an appropriation at this time, yet we would devolve the duty of preparing this work hereafter upon the joprnal clerk of this House. It was the judgment of the Committee on Appropriations, and especially of the older members of that committee, that the additional labor required would not amount to much, that the clerk is obliged to compile the decisions of the Speaker anyway. I hope, therefore, that this manner of increasing salaries will not be resorted to and that this amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER. A question.

Mr. BLOUNT. Wait a moment.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will in a moment; not now. I do trust that the House will not adopt this amendment. This matter has been carefully considered; the very reasons brought forward by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Wilson] have been considered. If anything is to be done at all, if the question comes between an increase of salary and striking out this paragraph altogether, then, in the judgment of the Committee on Appropriations, the paragraph should be stricken out entirely; that is, if we are to elect between the two, I hope the House will not increase a salary in this way; and if it is thought necessary to do so, then I hope the paragraph will be stricken out altogether.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment has been

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment has been exhausted.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will suspend until order is restored in the Hall.

Mr. CLYMER. It seems impossible for the Chair to maintain order in the Hall this morning. I desire to give notice that, if this confusion continues, I shall ask for the enforcement of the rule, so that the floor of the House may be kept clear of those not entitled

Mr. COX. I hope that will not be done. Mr. CLYMER. I say that I give notice that I will do so if this confusion continues

Mr. COX. The gentleman ought to recollect that this is an excit-

Mr. COX. The gentleman ought to recollect that this is an exciting day; everybody is talking about other matters.

Mr. CLYMER. And to the great detriment of the public business.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am informed that the present compiler of Barclay's Digest, Mr. Barclay, receives $4,000 for each Congress on account of his copyright for the book known as Barclay's Digest. And in the event of there being three sessions in any one Congress he would receive $6,000 as copyright; that is, $1 for each copy taken by Congress. Now, if we are paying $1 for each copy, and there are ordered sufficient copies during two sessions of Congress to pay Mr. Barclay $4,000 for the copyright of this work, it seems to me it would be more economical to pay $1,000 additional compensation to the journal clerk for furnishing us a digest of the rules of this House, which will answer every purpose, without paying this copyright now which will answer every purpose, without paying this copyright now which will answer every purpose, without paying this copyright now provided by law.

Mr. BLOUNT. The committee do not propose to pay this copyright; we do not propose to have the Digest after this session.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then we will not have any Digest from session to session, unless we now provide for it. I think this additional compensation is so small, and the necessity for the compilation—

Mr. ATKINS. This is for a deficiency.

Mr. SPRINGER. This additional compensation is so small that I hope the House will adopt the amendment.

Mr. CLYMER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] and others have spoken of the copyright of Mr. Barclay. I do not understand that he has any copyright to this book; I do not think it possible for him to obtain one. If he had a copyright it would have to be so alleged in the book itself.

Mr. WADDELL. I have a statement from Mr. Barclay himself that he has copyrighted the book; and I have sent a page to the Librarian of Congress to get official information on this subject.

Mr. REAGAN. It is stated at the beginning of the Digest itself that it is copyrighted.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is copyrighted; and we are now paying $4,000 in each Congress for this copyright.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is copyrighted; and we are now paying $4,000 in each Congress for this copyright.

Mr. CLYMER. If I am in error in my statement I shall be glad to be corrected, although so far as I have examined the book I find no notice of the copyright, and such notice is required under the law.

I understand that this appropriation made from session to session is a species of gratuity given to Mr. Barclay; and certainly I for one do not begrudge it to him. But we all know that every new edition of this work is little more than a republication of the former one, with the exception perhaps of a few decisions which may have been made by the Speaker in the interval. The object of the Committee on Appropriations in reporting the provision contained in the bill was to put an end to what they considered an extravagance if not an The proposition is, that for the present session Mr. Barclay shall receive what has been customary and what perhaps in liberality to him, if not in justice, he is entitled to, but that here the matter should end; that hereafter as we may need new editions of this work, which will contain only the new rulings or decisions made from time to time by the Speaker, these decisions shall be compiled and published by one of the clerks at the desk. If it is conceived by the Committee of the Whole that for such service this officer should receive a moderate additional compensation, I for one will not object to it. But I submit that the payment of a dollar a volume each year for the republication of that which properly belongs to the House, and which has been published from time immemorial, should now cease.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the pending amendment is ex-

Mr. SPRINGER. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.
Mr. WADDELL. I renew it. If the preparation of this work is hereafter to be put upon the journal clerk of the House, it ought undoubtedly be paid for. The only question in which I feel an interest just now is as to the effect which the provision of the bill is to have upon Mr. Barclay. The provision is that we shall pay him for two thousand copies of the Digest furnished at this session, and that hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House. To the latter clause of the paragraph I now desire to call attention. I do not know how the House can take a copyright call attention. I do not know how the House can take a copyright and use it without paying for it. There is undoubtedly a portion of this volume which could not properly be copyrighted under the law; but for a portion there is a copyright.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does the gentleman hold that the rules of this House can be copyrighted?

Mr. WADDELL. No, sir; I am speaking of another portion of the back.

book.

Mr. BLOUNT. Or can the decisions of the Chair be copyrighted?
Mr. BLACKBURN. I wish to ask the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] whether it is not the fact that there are less olina [Mr. WADDELL] whether it is not the fact that there are less than ten pages of this work that can be copyrighted under the law. Mr. WADDELL. In answer to that question, I say that I do not know how many pages might or might not be copyrighted. I know the fact that a portion of this book is copyrighted; and if there should be any infringement of the copyright, the question of law would be for the courts to decide. I am now speaking of the Digest proper; it is this portion that is copyrighted; it is this that the provision of the bill refers to. I do not see how this House is to use this or get the benefit of it hereafter without paying for it. Whether Mr. Bareley had a right to copyright this work or not is I presume a question of the second of the copyright this work or not is I presume a question. clay had a right to copyright this work or not is, I presume, a ques-

Mr. BANKS. Does the gentleman propose to pay him?
Mr. WADDELL. The paragraph in the bill proposes to pay him.
Mr. BANKS. I would like to say a word on this question. It does not seem to me exactly proper that any person should have a copyright of the rules of the House or any portion of them. But sometimes what appears at first glance to be absurd may be so explained at the beautiful within the rules of recently the proper than the proper tha as to be brought within the rules of reason.

I remember very well, as do doubtless most other members, that for some years past the House has been governed by the principles and precedents laid down in what is called Barclay's Digest. Every member is once in a while set down by a citation from the Digest, and other members are allowed to continue on the floor upon the same au-thority. The journal clerk of the House is not required in pursuance of his regular duty to prepare a digest, to codify rules, collect precof his regular duty to prepare a digest, to coulty rules, collect precedents, analyze and arrange the parliamentary proceedings of the House, and make a code which is to be followed by the Chair and recognized and observed by members. It appears that Mr. Barclay, who was formerly our journal clerk, has done this work, that the House has accepted it, has been governed by it; and, as every member will doubtless admit, it is now substantially the parliamentary law of the

We refer first to the Digest, and if a question is raised we sometimes go back to the rule of the House; but unless some question is raised the Digest answers every purpose. Formerly we had nothing of this kind. I can remember a period when there was nothing but the plain simple rules of the House, no Digest, no collection of precedents, no analysis of the rules, no interpretation, no explanation given like that contained in the Digest. The Speaker and members of the House had to rely entirely upon the rules in their simplest form of expression. I do not know, sir, but that was the better course; indeed I think we have too many codes in the House to enable us to under-we have to many cotes in the House to enable as to inderstand pefectly what the rules are.

We have this Digest. It was prepared by Mr. Barclay voluntarily or at the suggestion undoubtedly of former Speakers of the House. I think it began chiefly with Mr. Colfax. I remember his saying to me at one time without this Digest he could not get along at all and wondered how previous Speakers did it. It was done at the suggestions of the beautiful the suggestion of the supplier of the supplier that the suggestion of the supplier of the supplie tion of members occupying the chair at various times by concurrence with members of the House. It was done by the labor of Mr. Barclay. He was the only man connected with the official corps of the House who was competent and had the time for it. Unquestionably, that being the case, it is his own private property. No one could claim any right to it. The Government could not claim it. From time to time allowance has been made in the way of compensation. I do not know whether too much or too little. If there is to be a change, as I understand, judging from the position taken by members before the House, it will involve the work of Mr. Barclay, which up to this time has been received by everybody as legislative parliamentary authority. If that work is to be taken into any new code, any new arrangement, any new combination, there is the clearest justice in allowing ment, any new combination, there is the clearest justice in allowing him compensation for it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOOKER. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. That amendment is now pending.

Mr. WADDELL. I withdraw it.

Mr. HOOKER. I renew it; and I desire, Mr. Chairman, to say a word or two on this proposition, or rather to address myself to what I conceive to be the question which ought primarily to be considered by the House, and that is, whether or not this clause in the bill as reported from the committee should be retained or not. For I really think, with due deference to the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. WILSON,] it is to be properly considered, first, as to whether or not the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Reagan] should prevail before you could consider the question as to what compensation you would give to the new officer for the labor you require him to perform.

Now this book contains, it is true, primarily the Constitution of the United States, the Rules of the House of Representatives, and Jefferson's Manual, but none of those works are embraced in the copyright. On the contrary, the copyright embraces only that which bears the title of Barclay's Digest of the Rules of the House of Representatives of the United States. On page 235 will be found this entry:

Entered according to act of Congress, in the year 1875, by John M. Barclay, in the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

I find that portion of the Digest contains about two hundred and thirty-two pages, containing it is true a repetition of the rules and a repetition of the provisions of the Constitution in many instances, repetition of the provisions of the Constitution in many instances, but containing the labor which Mr. Barelay has performed and the result which he arrived at as to what is the interpretation of the rules of the House under the Constitution. In the compilation of this work he has undoubtedly spent a large amount of time and labor and intellect, and there is nothing for which the American people have more respect than for labor honestly bestowed, and for the protection which the law gives when it is secured by being copyrighted, as this has been.

Mr. WADDELL. Let me ask the gentleman from Mississippi a question in that connection, as something has been said about copyrighting the Constitution and laws and rules of this House. Suppose the honorable gentleman from Mississippi were to write a work on constitutional or parliamentary law, in which he necessarily largely quoted from the laws, the Constitution, and the rules of this House, would he be the less entitled because of so making quotations to a would he be the less entitled because of so making quotations to a copyright under the law? Not in the least.

Mr. HOOKER. Certainly not; it would not be less my book on that account. It will be found the copyright pertains to what is properly called Barclay's Digest, and not to the Constitution, and not to the rules which are published. Evidently this must have been a work of great labor, requiring great discrimination, great experience, and this gentleman has given his labor and experience to the performance of the task. It is true you might authorize any other clerk to make a compilation of the rules and to lay down the law on the subject; but I venture to assert that the truth of the proposition of the gentleman from Massachusetts cannot be disputed, when any man is directed by the House under its bill to compile the rules and decisions, he could not possibly do so without embodying and taking as his guide the labor already performed by Mr. Barclay, and which occupies over two hundred and thirty pages of this Digest. [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOOKER. I desire permission to say a single word further to Mr. HOOKER. I desire permission to say a single word further to the committee.

the committee.

Mr. COX was recognized and yielded his time to Mr. HOOKER.

Mr. HOOKER. I beg further to say that I take this ground without knowing Mr. Barclay, only in so far as I know him from the fact that I have had occasion frequently while a member of this House to refer to this valuable book, a book so valuable, indeed, that if we should appoint another, a new officer of this House, to perform the labor and continue the work of making the compilation, it still could not be dispensed with. And simply because Mr. Barclay chanced to occupy the position of journal clerk of the House at the time he performed this valuable labor in his annotations on the rules of the House and rulings made by the various Sneakers thereon—I say simply House and rulings made by the various Speakers thereon-I say simply because he chanced to occupy that position, is no reason why the House or the Government should undertake by legislation to deprive him of the benefits of his labor.

the benefits of his labor.

You, Mr. Chairman, and the present Speaker of this House, and all former Speakers, from the time Mr. Barclay commenced these compilations which have been annually published by Congress or authorized by Congress to be published, have reaped the benefit of his labors; and if you put yourselves in the attitude of authorizing a compilation by a new officer you will still be dependent on Barclay's

Digest for what has occurred in the past; a digest so perfect, as has been well said by the gentleman from Massachusetts, that it is constantly referred to in the proceedings of the House, and may indeed be said to have become the authoritative exposition of the rules re-garded by every Speaker as binding and controlling the proceedings

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. Can the gentleman state how much Mr. Barclay has already received for this work?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not know how much he has received. I take it for granted that Mr. Barclay has received for what he has done only what Congress has appropriated for it each year. But because he has been paid for the services which he has rendered to past Congresses, is that any reason why he should not be paid by future Congresses, gresses, is that any reason why he should not be paid by future congresses for the use of his work?

Mr. BROWN, of Kentucky. I am informed that, as a matter of fact, he has received in addition to his regular salary as journal clerk over $50,000 for this work.

Mr. HOOKER. That does not matter so far as the general proposition I am now enforcing upon the House is concerned. If Mr. Barclay has a copyright on this work it cannot be infringed. I do not care how much the Government has paid him in the past. His copycare now much the Government has paid into in the past. This copyright is sacred and cannot be used by authorizing another officer to continue the compilation of the Digest, and I say it would be an act of gross injustice to this gentleman under these circumstances to deprive him of the benefit of his own labor in compiling this digest of the rules of the House and the rulings upon them.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Before the gentleman from Mississippi takes his seat I wish to ask him a question. I see that this copyright was taken out in the year 1875.

Mr. HOOKER. That has reference only to the last edition. Copyright had been taken out in like manner for the previous editions.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Is it not the fact that before this copyright ever was taken out this very work had been adopted by the House and used for its guidance in the conduct of its business for more than ten years? And I wish to ask further of the gentleman from Mississippi, or any other gentleman who advocates the view that he has expressed, whether in the two hundred and thirty-odd pages that have hear everyther this converted by this converted to the found. pressed, whether in the two hundred and thirty-odd pages that have been covered by this copyright there are as many as ten to be found exclusive of the rules of the House and the decisions of the Speakers and the statute laws of the United States—whether ten pages can be found that can properly be considered as covered by copyright?

Mr. HOOKER. Those are the proper subjects of a digest. If it did not embrace the rulings of the Speaker it would not be a digest.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will give the gentleman a portion of my time if he desires it

Mr. HOOKER. That is what I say in reply.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I wish further to ask the committee, supposing that to be true, that in these two hundred and thirty-odd pages there cannot be found ten which do not consist of rules of the House, decisions of the Speaker, and the statute laws of the United States, whether it is not about time that such a copyright should die?

Mr. HOÖKER. That does not make any difference. It is a digest of everything governing the proceedings of the House down to the

Mr. BLACKBURN. If $50,000 have been paid to an officer of this House for a work which he has copyrighted, when in the judgment of many of us he was not entitled to a copyright—the two hundred and thirty-odd pages covered by copyright not containing ten that are composed of subjects and matters entitled to be so covered—I think it is about time that the House should allow such a copyright to die; and I trust that the committee will be supported, and that this sinecure will be cut off.

this sinecure will be cut off.

Mr. BANKS. If the gentleman from Mississippi will withdraw the proforma amendment, I will renew it.

Mr. HOOKER. I withdraw the proforma amendment.

Mr. BANKS. I renew it.

I trust the committee will allow me to say a word in regard to this

I trust the committee will allow me to say a word in regard to this matter of compensation. It may or may not be too much. But it is one which the House has itself fixed. Mr. Barclay has been paid, as far as I remember, the sum fixed by the House of Representatives itself for the use of his Digest on each volume, for each copy printed. Now it is not to be charged against him that the Honse prints a large number of copies of his Digest, and that these copies are sent all over the country. Members of Congress use them in various ways—they do it for their own purposes—and if the compensation paid to Mr. Barclay is too large, that matter can be regulated by some other rule. It is not to be charged against Mr. Barclay that the cost of the work has reached this amount because it has been arranged by the House that he should receive a percentage on each copy.

work has reached this amount because it has been arranged by the House that he should receive a percentage on each copy.

Now one word with regard to the question of copyright. I cannot, and I do not think any other gentleman can, get a digest of the decisions of the laws of any court in this country without paying for it, and I cannot see any more impropriety in copyrighting the Digest of the rules of the House than in copyrighting a digest of the proceedings of a court. The copyright does not interfere in any way with the House. Its object is to prevent other persons from printing the Digest. That is what it is. If it is of any consequence, it does not affect us any more than the copyright of the proceedings of a court itself. of a court itself.

Mr. HOOKER. Allow me to suggest to the gentleman that if what was stated by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] be true, then the effect of the amendment is to transfer this copyright over from one man to another.

Mr. BANKS. That is true. The copyright does not affect us at all. Now let me say in regard to this compilation and what its value is, that it must be apparent to every member that a member cannot understand the complicated rules of the House by individual study. No man in the world can take these rules and come into the House and undertake to direct the proceedings of the House without something more than a mere personal study of the rules of the House. Mr. Barclay was here for nearly thirty years, certainly for twenty-nine years, and he knew and thoroughly understood the result and influence of the rules. He was thus enabled to make this compilation. It does not matter at all if there are not ten pages of original matter in the Digest, as stated by the gentleman from Kentucky; if there are only five pages of original matter, those five pages contain the very essence and spirit of the rules, and I undertake to say that without the Digest the business of the House could not go on so correctly as it does now. The reason that this digest is authority is because of the instinctive perception of what was right under the rules and right under parliamentary laws, and is of a thoroughly impartial character, for that is the character of the mind of Mr. Barclay. I have been here at differ-ent times when the House has been controlled by different parties and been under different influences, but I never knew any Speaker or any man interested in questions of parliamentary proceedings who did not rely, whatever party he belonged to, with the same confidence on Mr. Barclay's judgment; and no man during the long period of Mr. Barclay's service has undertaken to propose any innovation upon the complicated rules without consulting him. He is entitled to some comprehended rules without consisting finit. He is entitled to some compensation for this capacity, for the construction of his mind which enables him to decide upon these questions, and for the labor he has given to it. If we want a new code of laws for the House let us authorize some one to prepare them, but so long as we rely upon Barclay's Digest, let us not deprive him of the compensation due him.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Allow me a moment. I desire to bring the committee back to the matter really under discussion. I have not attacked Mr. Barclay's Digest. I agree with the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Hooker] and others who have spoken upon this question, that the present House and the next House cannot get along without it. I go further and say that no man can ever be a parliamentarian by studying the rules of the House. He has got to go to the foundations of parliamentary law and study the first rudiments of it. But this clause proposes an appropriation of $2,000 for Mr. Barclay's Digest, and I have not touched that; but the committee also propose that the journal clerk shall prepare a Digest of the proceedpropose that the journal clerk shall prepare a Digest of the proceedings; and certainly if that be the case he ought to be paid for doing it. This thing is growing every Congress and every year. Barclay's Digest, as you now have it, will not be an authority five years hence. The work must be carried on, and some day in the future, it may be five years hence, a new Digest will have to be prepared. When Mr. Barclay lost his position as journal clerk he lost the position that enabled him to go on and carry on his work. I do not propose to do without his Digest; the next House cannot do without it. But if the Digest is to be got up by the journal clerk of the House he ought to get $1,000 additional, so as to make his pay, instead of $2,500, $3,500. If the journal clerk of the House is to carry on this work he ought at least to get that amount of salary. My amendment does not interfere with the present contract.

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. WALDRON. Unless there can be a unanimous understanding about the vote being taken on the pending paragraph, I must move that the committee rise. I am willing, however, that the debate shall be extended ten minutes, so that the gentleman from Massachusetts be extended ten minutes, so that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SEELYE] may be heard.

Mr. BANKS. I withdraw my formal amendment.

Mr. SEELYE. I renew the amendment and I wish to say upon it but a single word. The value of this Digest I suppose makes it desirable for the House of Representatives. Nobody denies that. I suppose I may say it is indispensable; only why shall the author of it be paid on a copyright an amount of 50 per cent. on what is fairly considered the retail price of the book? Such a price was never paid by publishers to the other authors of the country on any book in the land, and it seems to me that this proposal is preposterous on the ground that it is an equable compensation. ground that it is an equable compensation.

Mr. BANKS. I rise to oppose the amendment.
Mr. WALDRON. Unless there can be an understanding that the committee will now proceed to vote, I will move that the committee rise for the purpose of obtaining from the House an order to close debate upon the pending paragraph.

Mr. REAGAN. Not upon the pending paragraph, for I have an amendment which I desire to offer to it.

Mr. WALDRON. When in the House I shall move to close debate, and I propose to allow sufficient time to enable the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Reagan] to offer his amendment and to have an opportunity to discuss it.

Mr. COX. Is it the proposition that the committee rise to close debate upon the pending amendments or upon the pending paragraph?

Mr. WALDRON. That can be determined when we get into the

The question was taken upon the motion that the committee rise; and it was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. EDEN reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, pursuant to the order of the House, had had under consideration a bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sympson, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate further insisted upon its amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill (H. R. No. 3828) establishing post-roads, agreed to the further conference asked by the House upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed as the managers of the conference on the part of the Senate Mr. Hamlin, Mr. Dorsey, and Mr. Davis.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House was requested, a bill of the following title:

A bill (H. R. No. 4284) authorizing the commissioners of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to buy in certain real estate and other property, and to sell the same at public or private sale, and for

The message further announced that the Senate had passed and requested the concurrence of the House in a bill and joint resolution requested the concurrence of the House in a bill and joint resolution of the following titles:

A bill (S. No. 1142) to authorize and empower the Secretary of the Interior to adjust and settle the accounts of the Kaskaskia, Peoria, Piankeshaw, and Wea Indians; and

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 30) to amend the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms, approved July 3, 1876.

The message also announced that the Senate, in pursuance of the Constitution, had proceeded to reconsider the bill (H. R. No. 4350) entitled "An act to abolish the board of police commissioners of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia, and to transfer its duties to the commissioners of the District of Columbia," sent by the House of Representatives to the Senate with the proceedings of the House thereon, and the message of the President returning the bill House thereon, and the message of the President returning the bill without his approval to the House, in which it originated, and the Senate had resolved that the bill do not pass, two-thirds of the Senate not agreeing to pass the same.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALDRON. I move that the rules be suspended and that the House now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the House now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of resuming and proceeding with the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill; and pending that motion I move that all debate upon the pending paragraph and the amendments thereto be limited to twenty minutes.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will say ten minutes; we have already occupied a great deal of time upon that paragraph.

Mr. REAGAN. I move to amend the motion so as to have the order limiting debate apply to the pending amendment.

limiting debate apply to the pending amendment.

Mr. COX. I think that it was the understanding when we came out of committee that the order to limit debate should apply to the out of committee that the order to limit debate should apply to the pending amendment.

Mr. WALDRON. If it is desirable to close debate upon the pending paragraph, then the motion should be adopted in the form I have given. If debate is closed only upon the pending amendment, then when that amendment has been disposed of other amendments can be offered and the debate continued indefinitely.

The SPEAKER. That is a subject within the control of the House.

Mr. REAGAN. I desire to say a word. I moved an amendment to the pending paragraph, and yielded to allow another amendment to come in and be acted upon before mine was considered. The committee rose with the understanding that debate was to be closed upon the pending amendment. If the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WALDRON] will reflect a moment, I think he must see that it would be a snap judgment to limit debate as he now proposes and thereby cut off my amendment. cut off my amendment.

The SPEAKER. The order would not cut off an amendment, it would cut off debate.

Mr. REAGAN. I know that; but I desire to be heard upon my amendment.

Mr. COX. It was understood when we rose that the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Reagan] should not be included in the motion to limit debate.

Mr. BLOUNT. I did not so understand it.

Mr. REAGAN. I so understood it.

The SPEAKER. The sense of the House can be tested upon the

The STEARER. The sense of the subsection of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] is also pending.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas wants debate closed only upon the pending amendment.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The gentleman from Texas moved his amendment, and I moved mine; mine was entertained to be voted on first. Now, if debate be closed upon the pending amendments, then it will be closed upon his amendment as well as upon mine. It is for his interest that I call attention to that point.

Mr. REAGAN. My amendment has not been discussed; I desire to state why I offer it.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. But if debate is closed upon the pending amendments, then the gentleman will cut off debate upon his amend-

Mr. REAGAN. I did not say "pending amendments," but my mo-tion is to limit debate upon the pending amendment. The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. REAGAN to the motion of Mr. Waldron, and it was not agreed to.

The question recurred upon the motion of Mr. Waldron to close all debate upon the pending paragraph and amendments thereto in twenty minutes after the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill shall have been resumed in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COX. I desire to call for a division upon the motion of the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. Reagan.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is rather late to call for a

The motion of Mr. Waldron to limit debate was then agreed to.

The question recurred upon the motion of Mr. Waldron that the rules be suspended and the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole upon the deficiency appropriation bill, and it was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole,

(Mr. EDEN in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the defi-ciency appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the order of the House, debate on the pending paragraph and amendments thereto is limited to twenty minutes

Mr. REAGAN. I desire to say a few words in support of the amendment I have offered.

Mr. WALDRON. Is not the pending amendment the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. WILSON?]

The CHAIRMAN. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. WALDRON. I suggest to the gentleman from Texas that it will be best to take the question first on that amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Add to the paragraph the following: And for such additional services hereby required, the journal clerk shall be paid the sum of $1,000 per annum.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were ayes 39, noes 59; no quorum voting.
Tellers were ordered; and Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, and Mr. REAGAN were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported-ayes 84, noes 62. So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I give notice that I shall ask a vote in the House upon this amendment.

Mr. REAGAN. I modify my amendment so as to strike out all of the pending paragraph after the word "dollars" where it first occurs, embracing the amendment just adopted. If my amendment be agreed to, the paragraph will then read:

To pay for two thousand copies of Barelay's Digest, ordered by resolution of the House of July 14, 1871, $2,000.

As to the question of copyright it is not pretended that there is any copyright of the Constitution or of Jefferson's Manual or of the Rules of the House. But there is a copyright for the Digest which is embraced in this volume and which covers more than two hundred pages. I do not propose to enter at all upon the question as to the right of the House to the use of this copyright or whether the exclusive right still remains with Mr. Barclay. That is not the point on which I wish to speak. I desire to call attention to the provision of this paragraph which may be construed as intended to divest Mr. Barclay of his copyright. The language is:

To pay for two thousand copies of Barclay's Digest, ordered by resolution of the House of July 14, 1871, $2,000; and hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct.

It appears evident that the word "Digest" as used in the latter clause refers to the "Digest" previously spoken of; that is, "Barclay's Digest."

Now, I do not propose to adopt legislation which may undertake to determine the legal rights of any one. If by virtue of his copyright Mr. Barelay has a title to this Digest, which he can use and dispose of, then I think we would undertake a great deal if we attempt in this way by legislation to divest this gentleman of the title to his copyright.

But I rose more particularly to repeat what has been said by several others, that we can hardly overestimate the great importance of a correct compilation of the rules in the government of this House and correct compilation of the rules in the government of this House and the disposition of its business. These rules are embraced in the Manual, in the rules of the House, in the action of the House, in its various resolutions, as included in the Digest and in the decisions of the Speaker interpreting those rules. The Digest which we now use has been prepared by a gentleman who, as we are informed by the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. Banks,] has had nearly thirty years' service in this particular branch of business; who is not only thoroughly conversant with the action of the House and the effect of its rulings, but who has made himself familiar with the provisions of the Constitution, the laws, and the rules of the House so as to be enabled to comprehend and to arrange with intelligence the judgments of the House, as recorded in the Digest. It seems to me that in any action which we may take justice requires us to have respect to the great length of service and the remarkable ability which have contributed to the proper preparation of this Digest. If anyone is to receive compensation for the annual correction and revision of the Digest, so as to make it conform to the new rulings and decisions of to receive compensation for the annual correction and revision of the Digest, so as to make it conform to the new rulings and decisions of the House, it appears to me that so long as the author of the Digest, who has proven his capacity for this work, is ready and willing to perform the service, there is a propriety and a justice in allowing him to go on and furnish this compilation. This view of the question does not require me to go into a consideration of the matter of legal right. Without regard to that question I submit that we ought to avail ourselves of the experience and ability which have furnished to us this Digest that has proved so valuable.

Mr. SEELYE. I move to amend the amendment so as to strike out the word "thousand," in the first line of the paragraph, and insert in lieu thereof the word "hundred;" so as to appropriate $200 instead of $2,000 for the use of this copyright. This $2,000, as we understand, is not designed to pay for the printing of these books; that work is entirely extra, and is done at the Government Printing Office without expense to Mr. Barclay. This sum of $2,000 is wholly in payment for the copyright of this work. Now, estimating the retail selling price of this book at $2 a copy, which would be a large price, 10 per cent., which is a common rate for copyright, would be about twenty cents a volume. I do not know of any book-publisher in the country who pays to any author more than 10 per cent. on the retail price of the book. I do know of many authors receiving less; I do not know of any author receiving more. I should like to know why Congress should may a convright of 50 per cent for any book hownot know of any author receiving more. I should like to know why Congress should pay a copyright of 50 per cent. for any book, however valuable it may be. I have therefore moved to amend so as to strike out $2,000 and insert $200.

Mr. REAGAN. I suggest that the amendment is not in order now.

Mr. REAGAN. I suggest that the amendment is not in order now. It is not an amendment to the pending amendment, but an independent amendment to another part of the paragraph.

Mr. SEELYE. I beg the gentleman's pardon. As I understood his amendment, this is properly in order.

Mr. REAGAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts is to the first part, which I do not propose to touch. It is an independent amendment and not an amendment to that offered by me. Mr. SEELYE. It is indifferent to me how it is brought in, provided

Mr. SEPLITE. It is indirected to the now it is considered by the House.

Mr. BANKS. Mr. Chairman, the reasoning of my colleague is proper in connection with the class of publications usually put upon the market, but it has no application to this particular work which is never printed but for the use of the House. How is it possible we can estimate the value of a copyright for a volume printed for the use of the House alone in comparison with a work like Macaulay's History and Macaulay's Essays which are printed by thousands and tens of thousands for general circulation?

Mr. SEELYE. If you will allow me to reply—

Mr. BANKS. I have but a few minutes, and I wish to state that I bought at my seat the other day a Digest of the Constitution of the United States not larger than this book in question for which I paid $4. And I am told by gentlemen around me of the legal profession

84. And I am told by gentlemen around me of the legal profession that it is a common thing to give one-half the selling price for the copyright of a law-book. It is different with that class of books with which my friend and colleague is so familiar, printed entirely with which my friend and colleague is so familiar, printed entirely for general circulation. The copyright has nothing to do with the case. We pay Mr. Barclay, journal clerk, by name, for the service and labor he supplied, for the experience and ability he brought to it. We pay him for that. We cannot take away his copyright, for that is protected by law. What we do by the bill is to take from him the work which he has done, paying him only $2,000 for the entire property he has in it. I do not think it is just.

Mr. COX. I rise to oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Massa-

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts is not now in order.

Mr. COX. What is the motion before the House?

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. COX. Then I will speak to that.

I desire simply to say, so far as the suggestion of the gentleman from Massachusetts is concerned, the Committee on Appropriations will tell us in the first place that this $2,000 is not too large a sum, and in the next place it has to pay for these books under the contract already existing, and under which some of the books if not all of them have been delivered.

Gentlemen say there has been no contract with Mr. Barelay. If Gentlemen say there has been no contract with Mr. Barclay. If they will turn to Barclay's Digest they will find that on March 15, 1871, a resolution was adopted—

That there be printed after the close of each session, and on the same terms as heretofore, the usual edition of the Constitution, Manual, Rules, and Barclay's Digest for the use of the members of the House at the next session thereafter.

That resolution has been continued from time to time, and this contract has been continued under it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SEELYE. What page is the gentleman from New York reading from?

Mr. COX. No page at all. It is a resolution in the front of the book, under which this book is printed every year.

Mr. BLOUNT. Now, while I agree with the gentleman from New

I think I am in favor of the amendment of the gentle-Mr. COX. man from Texas to strike out the latter clause for the regentle-man from Texas to strike out the latter clause for the reason that if this work is to be done at all by our journal clerk it ought to be done with full pay and compensation. One thousand dollars is not too large. But why do it at all ? This clause says it shall hereafter be done by the journal clerk of the House. The clause itself gives no authority. It requires further legislation. I would leave it to further legislation to strike out the whole clause, but for the present we must carry out the contract with Mr. Barclay.

Mr. SEELYE. I do not see how there is a contract to pay Mr.

Barclay $1 for every copy.

Mr. COX. I wish to say to my friend from Massachusetts that I have had some experience in book-making and fifty cents is not too

Mr. WALDRON. I raise the point of order that debate is exhausted under the order of the House.

Mr. COX. I am exhausted also. [Laughter.]
Mr. SPRINGER. I move to strike out the last word.
Mr. WALDRON. Debate has been exhausted by order of the

Mr. COX. I suggest to my friend from Illinois to read Barclay's

Digest. [Laughter.]
The CHAIRMAN. The time for debate has not expired, but debate on the pending amendment is exhausted.
Mr. SPRINGER. It seems to me that I know more about Barclay's

Mr. Statistics to the that I know more about Barelay Digest than my friend from New York. [Laughter.]
Mr. WALDRON. Is debate exhausted or not?
Mr. COX. If debate is not exhausted, I am entitled to the floor.
Mr. ATKINS. The Chair has not ruled on the question.

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. SPRINGER. I move to strike out the last word.
Mr. BLOUNT. Who is recognized?

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe I have the floor, if debate is not exhausted.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask if the Chair has not stated that no further amendment is now in order?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Springer] is speaking to the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. COX. Is debate in order on that amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment to strike out the last word.

Mr. COX. But is debate in order?

The CHAIRMAN. The time allowed for debate has not expired.

Mr. COX. I thought I was cut off because the time for debate had expired.

The CHAIRMAN. That was an error.

Mr. SPRINGER. The amendment of the gentleman from Texas, if I understand it rightly, is to strike out these words:

And hereafter the Digest shall be prepared and published by the journal clerk of the House, as the House shall from time to time direct.

There is also the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Wilson] to add to the paragraph. Now, if you strike out these words, the contract heretofore existing between the House and Mr. Barclay, if there is any contract, by which Barclay's Digest is printed every session, and by which we give $1 a volume for the volumes ordered by the House for the use of Congress, will be continued as heretofore; because it seems to be a continuing contract, and it is only by stopping the order for those volumes that we can escape paying the copyright of $1 a volume which is now being paid. Therefore, I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Texas will not be adopted, but that we will make a new provision in regard to not be adopted, but that we will make a new provision in regard to the publication of the digest of the rules and the decisions of the Speakers of this House.

Mr. SEELYE. Will the gentleman from Illinois inform us when, where, and how any such contract as this was ever entered into between Congress and Mr. Barclay?

Mr. SPRINGER. I have the resolution of the House before me.
Mr. SEELYE. Which simply directs that the book shall be printed.
Mr. SPRINGER. I will read the resolution. On the 15th of March, 1871, this resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That there be printed after the close of each session, and on the same terms as heretofore, the usual edition of the Constitution, Manual, Rules, and Barclay's Digest for the use of the members of the House at the next session thereafter.

Under this resolution, therefore, the books were printed for which an appropriation is to be made in the text of the bill as it now stands; and unless we make a new rule on that subject to stop this order we will be required to pay the additional $1 a volume for editions to be published hereafter. So it is cheaper for the House to retain the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa and also the text of the bill as it now stands. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Texas will not be agreed to.

I withdraw my amendment.
The CHAIRMAN. The time allowed for debate on the pending paragraph has expired.

Mr. BLOUNT. I understand that the time for debate is exhausted, but I understand further that I can offer, if I so desire, a substitute for the propositions now before the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can offer any amendment that would be in order.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I offer the following amendment:

After the word "dollars" in line 216 strike out the residue of the paragraph and

And that the aforesaid resolution is repealed.

That is, the resolution of the 14th of July, 1871.
Mr. SPRINGER. Is that amendment now in order?
The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be read by the Clerk. The amendment was read by the Clerk.

Mr. REAGAN. If the language of the paragraph be so changed it will have no meaning.

Mr. BANKS. Is that amendment in order? It changes the law. Mr. SPRINGER. I would suggest to the gentleman from Georgia Mr. SPRINGER. I would suggest to the gentleman from Georgia that if he desires to repeal this order, there are several resolutions which make these orders. I do not know to which of them he refers. Mr. BLOUNT. The language of the amendment is "the aforesaid resolution." That is the one which the gentleman from Illinois himself read.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman is mistaken. The resolution which I read was adopted on the 15th of March, 1871. The date of this resolution is the 14th of July, 1871.

Mr. BANKS. I make the point of order that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] is not in order because it changes an existing law. The CHAIRMAN. Rule 120 provides as follows:

No appropriation shall be reported in such general appropriation bills, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law—September 14, 1837—unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress, nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order except such as, being germane to the subject-matter of the bill, shall retrench expenditures.—March 13, 1838, and January 17, 1876.

Mr. BLOUNT. This certainly retrenches expenditures. The CHAIRMAN. The amendment proposes to repeal the resolution which provides for the payment of the $2,000, and therefore is in the line of retrenchment and within the one hundred and twentieth rule. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the gentleman from Georgia to include the resolution which I read.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman's amendment does not include the resolution under which the House is bound to take these books. Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I ask that the amendment be again reported.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the gentleman from Georgia to add to his amendment the resolution of the 15th of March, 1871, to the same

Mr. BLOUNT. I accept the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Does the gentleman from Georgia understand that this will leave all future Houses without a digest?

Mr. BLOUNT. Which they can provide for themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is not in order. Does the gentleman from Georgia modify his amendment?

Mr. BLOUNT. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will send it to the desk in writing.

Mr. HOOKER. Do I understand this amendment to be offered as Mr. HOOKER. Do I understand this amendment to be offered as a substitute for all the pending amendments?
Mr. BLOUNT. Yes, sir.
Mr. HOOKER. I hope it will be voted down.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as now modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the word "dollars" in line 216 and insert the following: And that the aforesaid resolution, and the resolution of March 15, 1871, and all other resolutions ordering copies of Barclay's Digest for the use of the House, are hereby repealed.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. BLOUNT, as modified; and on a division there were ayes 44, noes not counted.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The question recurred upon Mr. Reagan's amendment to strike out all after the word "dollars" in line 216 to the end of the clause.

The question was put; and on a division there were—ayes 51,

Mr. COCHRANE. No quorum has voted and I call for tellers. Tellers were ordered; and Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, and Mr. REAGAN were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported-ayes 66, noes 74.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

To pay the clerk of the select committee investigating the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, from December 4, 1876, to March 4, 1877, at $6 per day, $546.

Mr. SPRINGER. Has the House passed upon the paragraph in regard to the journal clerk?
The CHAIRMAN. It has

Mr. REA. I offer the following amendment:

To pay Eppa Norris for services as assistant engineer under the chief engineer of the House of Representatives from February 1, 1877, to June 30, 1877, at the rate of $1,200 per annum, $500.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. I desire to make the point of order on The assistant engineers provided for by law have already been appropriated for, and have been paid.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is not in order.

Mr. FORT. I offer the following amendment, to come in at the same point as the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri. To pay S. C. Mays for services as clerk of the Committee on the Expenditures in the Treasury Department, from December 22, 1876, to January 31, 1877, $246.

On the 12th day of January the House passed a resolution to furnish that committee with a clerk, and I suppose that it is only proper that he should be paid, and this amendment provides for his pay.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection myself to this amendment, and I will make none because the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wal-DRON] has charge of the bill.

Mr. WALDRON. Is this payment authorized by law?

Mr. FORT. It is, by a resolution of the House. Now, sir, I ask that the resolution which passed the House of Representatives January 12, 1877, be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Expenditures in the Treasury Department be allowed a special clerk for the remainder of the session, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee thereof, to receive the same compensation as clerks of regular committees

Mr. FORT. The amendment that I offered provides for $6 a day, and if gentlemen have anything to say on that rate of pay I will hear

Mr. WALDRON. Well, there is no objection to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COX. I offer the following amendment to come in in the same

To pay to John H. Dougherty for services under the Doorkeeper, from September 1 to December 4, 1876, at the rate of $3.60 per day, $350.

Mr. FOSTER. I must make the point of order upon that. It is a little ungracious to do it, but some one must rise to object to the extravagances of this extravagant House. I dislike very much to intravagances of this extravagant House. I district very much to interfere with my friend from New York.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the point of order?

Mr. FOSTER. I withdraw it.

Mr. COX. I thank my friend for withdrawing it.

Mr. FOSTER. But I give notice that I must hereafter object to this extravagance.

Mr. COX. I will state that this amendment is approved by the Committee of Accounts, who knew the facts in the case.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will let us have the facts.

This matter has not been before the Committee on Appropriations, and unless there is some good reason given why it should be adopted, I hope it will not be passed.

Mr. COX. The reason why the matter was not brought before the Committee on Appropriations was that I was absent on committee duty in Philadelphia and New York, but I have submitted it to the chairman of the Committee of Accounts, the gentleman from Maryland, [Mr. ROBERTS,] who approved it.

Mr. CLYMER. I think it is due to the Committee on Appropriation.

tions that the gentleman from New York should make some explanation in this cas

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

To pay stenographers to committees for services performed during the first session of the Forty-fourth Congress, as follows: To Eugene Davis, $676.50; to A. Johns, $339.25; to D. C. McEwen, $354; to E. Z. Brailey, $114.66; to James W. Tooley, $87; to John H. White, $163; to E. C. Bartlett, $6; in all, $1,740.41.

Mr. WALDRON. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to offer the following, to come in immediately after that paragraph:

To refund to John G. Thompson, Sergeant-at-Arms House of Representatives, the amount advanced by him to pay the necessary expenses of investigating committees ordered by the House of Representatives, $27,945, to be paid on vouchers to be approved by the Committee of Accounts.

I will state in explanation of that amendment that the Sergeantat-Arms has advanced the amount named in it in addition to the sums heretofore appropriated by Congress for the payment of these ex-

How much has been heretofore appropriated?

Mr. FOSTER. How much has been heretofore appropriated?
Mr. WALDRON. Thirty-five thousand dollars.
Mr. FOSTER. O, no! Sixty thousand dollars heretofore. I was not present in the committee this morning when this matter was before it, and I want to understand it. I do not rise to object to the amendment, but I understand that this is an appropriation for money amendment, but I understand that this is an appropriation for money already advanced and that there are large sums due for purposes of this sort, for which appropriations will come in hereafter.

Warrants for witness fees are to-day being hawked about this city and sold for sixty cents on the dollar. Now I have previously, in committee and out of committee, protested against this manner of making appropriations. This money has to be paid. I know there is willful, downright extravagance, but the money must be paid.

Why, sic, if you will look about the Sergeant-at-Arms's room of this House you will find there the familiar faces of almost every regular delegate to the Ohio democratic State convention, whose names apdelegate to the Ohio democratic State convention, whose names appear on his roll as deputy sergeants-at-arms. Respectable dead-beats are on his rolls. I presume they are necessary, and I presume they are good officers; I have not a word to say in regard to that. I have no doubt that these men make better sergeants-at-arms than any others would. But I might go over the names of these gentlemen and they would be found to be familiar to the whole country.

and they would be found to be familiar to the whole country.

Now I ask my democratic friends not to pinch these gentlemen, not to force them to sell their warrants for sixty cents on the dollar.

Make your appropriation $50,000 or $60,000. You have got to pay it, and you know it. Why come in here every week with a little appropriation of $25,000 or $30,000? Why bite the cherry in two? I tell you that $60,000 more will not meet your expenses. Why not appropriate what is necessary, and have done with it?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I would ask my colleague to give the names of these Ohio delegates that are on the roll of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. FOSTER. There is General Steadman: there is Mr. Donovan:

Mr. FOSTER. There is General Steadman; there is Mr. Donovan;

Mr. FOSTER. There is General Steadman; there is Mr. Donovan; there is Mr. Hill. Do you want any more?

Mr. SOUTHARD. Yes, I want the whole list.

Mr. FOSTER. Almost every regular delegate to our democratic State convention is on this Sergeant-at-Arms's roll. They are first-rate men, I tell you; they are good officers; I have not a word to say against them on that ground. And my colleague [Mr. SOUTHARD] should be proud of the fact that our fellow-citizens are employed by our Sergeant-at-Arms for this important service.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I understood the gentleman to reflect upon some

Mr. SOUTHARD. I understood the gentleman to reflect upon some of these gentlemen.

Mr. FOSTER. O; no!

Mr. SOUTHARD. I am glad that he considers these gentlemen proper men to discharge the functions of any office.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not wonder that whenever the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Foster] gets up and preaches about economy he laughs. It is certainly very funny.

Mr. FOSTER. Democratic economy is very funny. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLOUNT. The reason that he laughs is that he is never in earnest. You never hear any suggestion from him in the committeeroom or in the House on that subject unless he laughs when he makes it. Therefore his scolding, I take it, is nothing very serious; not worthy of consideration.

worthy of consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. Allow me to ask a question. Does not the gentleman know that a further appropriation for this purpose is absolutely necessary and will have to be made?

Mr. BLOUNT. Very well; whenever that comes up we will dis-ons it.

Mr. FOSTER. Can you not answer my question?

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman never makes any suggestion of economy in our committee-room; he never makes any here in the control of the state of the economy in our committee-room; he never makes any here in the House. He votes for nearly every proposition to increase the appropriation bills. Now the gentleman's statement is incorrect, not designedly so, in reference to the amount of money heretofore appropriated for these investigating committees in the Southern States. There was first an appropriation of $35,000; then there was another appropriation of $25,000 for the various investigating committees, not only those investigating in the Southern States but for the committees investigating other matters. That fund has not yet been consumed; there has not been as much as $10,000 of it consumed. But there may be a demand for it; we cannot be sure that there will not be a demand for it. If it is not expended it will remain in the Treasury of the United States. ury of the United States.

But as a matter of right toward the Sergeaut-at-Arms, without connecting that question with any other, I say that this appropriation should be made. The money having been advanced by the Sergeant-at-Arms and expended by the various investigating committees, the Committee on Appropriations thought it would be right and proper to make this appropriation in pursuance of the statement of the Sergeant-at-Arms, subject to revision by the Committee of Accounts. But the fact is that the $60,000 heretofore appropriated has not yet been exhausted.

Mr. ATKINS. I understand that the twenty-seven thousand and some odd hundred dollars embraced in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. WALDRON,] who has charge of this bill, was advanced by the Sergeant-at-Arms to pay the expenses of the committee that was sent to New York, the committee sent to South Carolina, the committee sent to Florida, and the committee that was sent to Louisiana. Not a dollar of the $27,945 that we are now asked to appropriate was used to pay any of these dead-beats the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FOSTER] speaks of as being around the room of the Sergeant-at-Arms. So the gentleman has absolutely misled the Honse. Mr. ATKINS. I understand that the twenty-seven thousand and

Mr. FOSTER. If I have misled the House by any statement I have made, I am very willing to take it back.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate upon the pending amendment has been exhausted.

Mr. FOSTER. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of saying that I did not mean to criticise these gentlemen harshly;

I said they were respectable.

Mr. ATKINS. The gentleman called them dead-beats.

Mr. FOSTER. I called them "respectable dead-beats."

Mr. ATKINS. That is a paradox. I never saw a dead-beat that ras respectable.

Mr. FOSTER. I have. You come out to Ohio and you will find them out there.

Mr. ATKINS. Among the republican party. [Laughter.]
Mr. FOSTER. No; among the democratic party. [Continued laughter.] I desire to ask my friend how they would get here on the roll of the Sergeant-at-Arms if they were not respectable people? I have not a word to say against this appropriation. The gentlement I have not a word to say against this appropriation. The gentlemen from Georgia [Mr. Blount] has seen fit to charge that I am guilty of all sorts of extravagance; I think unkindly and ungenerously to charge me with that. I do not think he intended to be uncandid about it, but nevertheless he was.

What I find fault with and have found fault with in the committee and in the House is that we have been doling out these appropria-tions, week in and week out, when I and other gentlemen have as-tions, week in and week out, when I and other gentlemen have asserted and have demonstrated beyond any question that the appropriations ought to be much larger than they have been.

I am not here to say who it is that is profiting by buying these warrants; but if we wanted to profit somebody, if we wanted to establish a brokerage in warrants, we are legislating in just the way to do it. The Committee on Appropriations know that they will be compelled to make further appropriations, and that very shortly, for this very purpose. Why should they bring in an appropriation bill one week to be followed by an appropriation for the same object the next

I do not object to the appropriation. The money has been expended. You gentlemen are responsible for it. I say there has been willful and reckless extravagance in this matter; but nevertheless you have incurred the liability, and I am willing it should be paid.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. The Sergeant-at-Arms appeared before the Committee on Appropriations this morning and stated that all this money had been paid by order of the chairmen of the respective committees; that no money has been paid merely upon his own order. It is due to him to make this statement.

The amendment of Mr. WALDRON was agreed to.

Mr. TERRY. I move to amend by inserting the following:

To make up deficiency in appropriation for Capitol police for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876:
For captain of police $88; three lieutenants, $200 each, $600; thirty privates, $184 each, $5,520; in all, $6,208.

Mr. WALDRON. I make the point of order on this amendment, that it changes existing law and is not in the line of retrenchment.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. FRANKLIN. This amendment does not change the existing law. In the act of last session there was no repeal of the law fixing these salaries.

The amendment I offer does not propose any change Mr. TERRY. The amendment I offer does not propose any change in the existing law. The appropriation made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, failed to give these employés the amount to which under the law they were entitled.

Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. In reply to the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. Terry,] I will state that in the appropriation bill there was a clause repealing all laws allowing salaries beyond the amounts fixed in that bill fixed in that bill.

Mr. TERRY. I would be very glad if the gentleman would refer me to the statute.

Mr. FRANKLIN. There is no such statute.
Mr. WELLS, of Missouri. If the gentleman will refer to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill passed last August, he will find a clause covering this very matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless there is a law authorizing this payment to these officers the point of order must be sustained.

Mr. ATKINS. The first paragraph of the act in question contained a provision that the amounts appropriated should be "in full compensation.

Mr. FRANKLIN. Even if the act does contain the words "in full compensation," those words do not change the law fixing the amount of these salaries.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has ruled upon the point of order, and no further debate upon it is in order.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I would like to say a word upon the point of order. I know that the Chair does not desire to rule erroneonsly.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is disposed of. Mr. HANCOCK moved to amend by inserting the following:

SURVEYING PUBLIC LANDS.
Amount due Jesse Applegate for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year
1871 and prior years  Amounts due A. Gesner and John S. Kincaid for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor general of Oregon, being a deficiency	$342	0
for the fiscal year 1874	1,073	4
Amounts due J. W. Meldrum, H. Meldrum, W. H. Odell, B. F. Vaughn, and N. O. Walden for surveys executed under contract with the surveyor-general of Oregon, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875  Amount due W. R. Ballard for surveys executed under contract with the	2, 618	8
surveyor-general of Washington, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	324	9
Amount due M. A. Williams for surveys executed under con'ract with	324	3
the surveyor-general of Florida, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	795	5

ed under contract with the ciency for the fiscal year 1875.	and Bailey & Burrill for surveys execut- surveyor-general of Utah, being a defi- llogg, McFarland & Bonnell, and Post &	$392 28	Amount due J. Rinehart for services rendered as acting agent in 1873, at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.  Amount due Charles H. Coleman for shoeing public animals during the	$400 00
Koch for surveys executed un of Montana, being a deficienc	ider contract with the surveyor-general	213 30	second quarter 1873, for the Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years. Amount due Daniel P. Mowner for services rendered as butcher, in sec-	27 00
with the surveyor-general of year 1875.	Louisiana, being a deficiency for the fiscal	484 13	ond quarter, 1873, at same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	133 50
Amount due T. F. White for s surveyor-general of Arizona, Amount due W. H. Carlton for	nrveys executed under contract with the being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875 surveys executed under contract with the la, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	351 10	This amount, to pay indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the same agency, in second quarter, 1873, namely: Pay of one laborer, $90, and one blacksmith, $82.50, as per statement of S. B. Bushnell, agent in charge, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	land.
Amount due William Maxwell	for surveys executed under contract with	103 24	Amount due W. W. Owen for services rendered as chief herder at the	172 50
To pay William F. Price for s	aska, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ervices as messenger in the office of the	646 31	Navajo agency, New Mexico. during the second quarter, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years Amount due Charles Harrison for services rendered as issuing clerk at	180 00
To pay L. F. Cartee, surveyor-	ia, being a deficiency for the fiscal year general of Idaho, for expenses incurred in	91 48	the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.  Amount due P. H. Williams for services rendered as issuing clerk at the	180 00-
Land Office, dated November year 1871 and prior years	s under instructions from the General 19, 1868, being a deficiency for the fiscal	299 94	same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years  Amount due A. C. Damon for services rendered as butcher at the same	180 00
A	INDIAN AFFAIRS. for services rendered as Indian agent for		agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years. Amount due Peter Whitney for services rendered as teamster at the	180 00
Pueblo Indians, in New Mexi a deficiency for the fiscal yea	co, during the second quarter, 1861, being r 1873 and prior years	271 25	same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	180 00
for transporting, in 1871, certs Kansas City to Baxter Spring	r, Fort Scott, and Gulf Railroad Company ain Wyandotte and Shawnee Indians from s, en route to the Indian Territory, being		Amount due Navajo Charley for services rendered as herder at the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	90 00
Pointe agency, Wisconsin, in	o for services rendered as clerk at the La June, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal		This amount, to pay liabilities incurred on account of the service at the Southern Apache agency, New Mexico, during the second quarter, 1873, namely, Richard Stackpole, foreman, $175, and Joseph Durand, issue.
November 6, 1871, at $8 per da	for services rendered from October 29 to ay, as commissioner to examine Cherokee		clerk, $150, as per statement of Benjamin M. Thomas, agent, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	325 00:
ficiency for the fiscal year 187 Amount due G. A. Crowell for	services rendered and expenses incurred	72 00	Amount due Felipe Madrille for beef, wheat, and flour furnished, in second quarter, 1873, for the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, being a de- ficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	164 25
and Eel River, during the fisc the books of the Indian_Offi	nt of annuities to the Miamies of Indiana al year ending June 30, 1873, as shown by ce, being a deficiency for the fiscal year		Amount due Jacob Krümmeck for subsistence furnished in March and April, 1873, for the service at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	103 25-
moval of the Indians of Whet	s for transportation furnished in the re- stone agency, from White River, Dakota,		Amount due Speigelberg Brothers for provisions furnished in April, 1873, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	43 25-for the fiscal year 1873 and p	akota, in 1872 and 1873, being a deficiency rior yearslians for arrears of annuities, under the	14, 488 92	Amount due Speigelberg Brothers for blankets, &c., furnished in January and February, 1873, for Indians visiting the New Mexico superintend- ency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	29 00
third article, treaty of May the said Shawnees for lands	10, 1854, being a part of the balance due ceded to the United States under the first a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and		Amount due Tom Navajo for services rendered as herder at the Navajo agency, in June, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.
Amount due the Kansas Pacific	Railroad Company for amount of charges	10, 406 39	Amount due W. W. Owens for amount advanced to Indian employés of the Navajo agency for herding during the first and second quarters, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	10 00
pany, on account of transport deficiency for the fiscal year For this amount to be applied	in payment for services rendered by em-	21 30	Amount due Lionel Ayres for amount advanced in goods and money to Indian employés at the Navajo agency, New Mexico, during the first and second quarters, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	388 00°
J. H. Stout, on file in the Ind year 1873 and prior years	ed during the fiscal year ending June 30, ation, Arizona, as by statement of Ageut ian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal	2, 594 28	Amount due Lionel Ayres for goods furnished the principal chiefs and head-men of the Navajo Indians during first and second quarters, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	228 00
This amount to re-imburse Cha agent, for amount expended cated at the Ponca agency, Da	rles P. Birkett, late United States Indian by him for the benefit of the Indians lo- kota Territory, during the fiscal year end- y the books of the Indian Office, being a de-		Amount due Serfine Chacon for repairing an ambulance belonging to the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, in February, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years Amount due John B. McCullough for postage-stamps furnished the	12 00
ficiency for the fiscal year 187 Amount due A. M. Jackson f		1,097 22	Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in May and June, 1873, being a defi- ciency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years. Amount due P. A. Wagner for ammunition furnished the western band	5 00 in 1861, being a deficiency for Amount due Joseph Ayers for	the fiscal year 1873 and prior years board and lodging furnished Silas F. Ken- le on business for the Indian Department,	160 00	of Shoshone Indians in Hamilton Nevada, in January, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years. Amount due William P. Harris for services rendered as blacksmith at	65 67
in 1861, being a deficiency for Amount due the B. B. B. and	the fiscal year 1873 and prior years C. Railroad Company for transportation adrick while on Government business in	5 00	the Klamath agency, Oregon, in the fourth quarter, 1871, as per voucher on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior year.	269 00
1861, being a deficiency for the Amount due steamer J. H. Be	e fiscal year 1873 and prior yearsll for transportation turnished late Agent ged on Government business in 1861, being	4 50	Amount due George W. Collins for services rendered as superintendent of farming at Alsea subagency, Oregon, in second quarter, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	66 66
a deficiency for the fiscal year Amount due J. Rinehart for	services rendered as acting agent at the co, in May, 1872, being a deficiency for the	15 00	Amount due F. H. Sawtelle for articles furnished the Siletz agency, Oregon, in the third and fourth quarters, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	9 49
fiscal year 1873 and prior yea Amount due Ignacio Archetola	of in May, 1872, being a deficiency for the for salt furnished in June, 1873, for the to, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	56 66	Amount due Northrup & Thompson for supplies furnished the Siletz In- dian agency, Oregon, in June, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	356 00
Amount due the Maxwell Land	Grant and Railway Company for rent of Cimarron agency, New Mexico, from Sep-	14 00	Amount due Abbey & Simpson for supplies furnished the Siletz agency, Oregon, in October, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	29 14
tember 30, 1872, to March 30, 1873 and prior years	1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year tella for services rendered in March, 1873,	85 00	Amount due Allen & Lewis for supplies furnished the Siletz agency, Oregon, in September, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	79 70 at the same agency, being a d	deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior or services rendered as blacksmith at the	17 00	Amount due H. P. Butler for transportation of flour to the Siletz agency, Oregon, in November, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years	64 66
	during the second quarter 1873, being a		Amount due E. Hartless for wheat furnished the Siletz agency, Oregon, in April, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	71 84
Amount due T. D. Burns for Abiquiu agency, New Mexi 1873 and prior years	supplies furnished in June, 1873, for the co, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	2,670 45	Amount due Frank Hill for transportation furnished for the service at the Siletz agency, Oregon, in November, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior years.	15 64
Amount due Louis Clark for 3, 1872, for the Indian service i fiscal year 1873 and prior yea	7721 pounds corn, furnished in December, n New Mexico, being a deficiency for the rs	75 45	Amount due S. R. Baxter for shoeing public animals belonging to the Si- letz agency, Oregon, in November, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal
Amount due W. B. Truax for e in connection with the service	xpenses incurred in traveling on business, e at the Pueblo agency, New Mexico, in ciency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior	1512	year 1873 and prior years.  Amount due George Elliott for services rendered as brick-maker at the Siletz agency, Oregon, in May, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal	13 00
Amount due James M. Rober	ts for expenses incurred in traveling on the service at the same agency, in October	58 33	year 1873 and prior years.  Amount due T. G. Richmond for board of mules belonging to the Siletz agency, Oregon, in March, 1872, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	25 29 and November, 1872, being a years	deficiency for the fiscal year 1873 and prior r fresh beef and mutton furnished in April	200 00	1873 and prior years .  Amount due Pardon Dodds for herding twenty-eight head of cattle at the Uintah Valley agency, Utah, from December I, 1872, to June 39, 1872,	10 50
1873, for the Abiquin agency	New Mexico, being a deficiency for the		at $50 per month, seven months, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	350 00

This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred in 1868 and 1869 by H. C. Cole, late Indian agent, in conducting the affairs of the Tulalip Indian agency, in Washington Territory, as per state- ment of Samuel K. Ross, brevet colonel United States Army, and late		This amount to meet liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Denver special agency, Colorado, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per statement of J. B. Thompson, agent, on file in the Indian Office. Items: Salary of agent, $300; and $277.36 for rent, fuel, superintendent of Indian affairs, on file in the Indian Office, being a de-	97, 553 44	lights, stationery, printing, medicines, &c., being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Agent E. H. Danforth for expenses incurred in traveling on	$577 36
ice at the La Pointe agency, Wisconsin, being for pay of employes, supplies, &c., as per statement of agent I. L. Mahan, dated December 8, 1875, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	3, 594 95	business in connection with the Indian service at White River, Colorado, as shown by vouchers 1 and 5, Abstract B, cash account, third quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	210 41
Amount due Charles Rich for supplies furnished Mixed Shoshones, Ban- nacks, and Sheepeaters, under contract, during the second quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	2, 755 35	This amount, to meet liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Grand River agency, Dakota, during the first and second quarters, 1874, on account of supplies furnished, as per vouchers on file in the
Amount due L. Speigelberg for beef furnished the Navajo agency, New Mexico, in May, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  This amount, to be applied in payment for services rendered by employes at the Navajo agency, New Mexico, during the fiscal year ending June	5, 285 98	Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  This amount, to meet liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Red Cloud agency, Dakota, being for pay of employés and incidental expenses for the first and second quarters, 1874, as per statement of
30, 1874, as per vouchers certified by agent W. F. M. Arney, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	3, 412 39	Agent J. J. Saville, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Todd Randall for one hundred tons of hay delivered at the	2, 509 62
goods and supplies to the Pawnee agency during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	247 77	Red Cloud agency, Dakota, in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Northern Pacific Railroad Company for balance due on ac-	1, 650 00
This amount for deficiency of money annuities, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, due the Prairie band of Pottawatomics, under treaty stipulations, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	4, 341 30	count of transportation of supplies to Fort Berthold, in December, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. This amount, to re-imburse Charles P. Birkett, late United States Indian	704 14
Amount due the Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity goods and supplies to the Shoshones and Bannacks and other bands of Idaho and Southeastern Oregon, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	2,710 96	agent, for amount expended by him for the benefit of the Indians located at the Ponca agency, Dakota Territory, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	30, 589, 31
Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity goods and supplies to the Sioux Indians during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	4, 238 61	This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Fort Hall agency, Idaho, during the first and second quarters, 1874, as per statement of Henry Reed, late agent, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.
Amount due Henry Housman for supplies furnished the Red Cloud agency in December, 1873, and January, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	339 66	of the service at Walker River and Pyramid Lake agency, Nevada, dur-
Amount due E. Nagle for oats, &c., furnished the Red Cloud agency in December, 1873, and April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	180 00	ing the second quarter, 1874, being for pay of employés, subsistence, seeds, traveling expenses of the agent, &c., as per statement of Agent C. A. Bateman, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fis-
Amount due S. F. Estis for ammunition furnished in July, 1873, for the Whetstone agency, Dakota, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due N. Huss for supplies furnished the Red Cloud agency in	112 00	cal year 1874  Amount due J. B. Lamay for the hire of an ambulance to Agent W. D. Crothers, in April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due Charles Robbins for services rendered as farmer at the Abi-	3, 585 06
November and December, 1873, and January and February, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Jules Ecoffey & Co. for supplies furnished the Red Cloud agency in August and September, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal	377 11	quiu agency. New Mexico, in March and April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due W. W. Owen for services rendered as chief herder at the	136 67 year 1874 Amount due Jules Ecoffey for the delivery at the Red Cloud agency, un- der contract, 119,000 feet of sawed lumber, in March, 1874, being a de-	94 85	Navajo agency, New Mexico, during the third quarter, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due W. W. Owen for services rendered as chief herder at the	120 00
ficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity goods and supplies purchased for the service at the White River agency,	1,779 05	same agency, in second quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Charles Harrison for services rendered as issue-clerk at	180 00
Colorado, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transportation fur-	947 97	same agency, during third quarter, 1873, being a deficiency for the fis- cal year 1874.  Amount due P. H. Williams for services rendered as issue-clerk at the	120 00
nished Indian agents in March and June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	158 55	same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due A. C. Damon for services rendered as butcher at same agen-	120 00
Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity goods and supplies purchased for Indians located in Arizona, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal	26 10	cy, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Peter Whitney for services rendered as teamster at the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	120 00 year 1874.  Amount due Harrington and Gilbert for running 1,780.80 feet of tunnel, 5 by 6 feet, through Mesa on the Colorado River Indian reservation, Arizona Territory, to bring water to the irrigating canal, as per agree-	2010	Amount due Navajo Charley for services rendered as herder at the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Pueblo agency, New Mexico, during the	30 00
ment dated August 28, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Harrington and Gilbert for running 1,173 feet of tunnel through Mesa, on the Colorado River Indian reservation, Arizona Ter-	12, 105 40	first and second quarters, 1874, as per statement and vouchers, certified by E. C. Lewis, late agent, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.
ritory, in June, 1874, under contract, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  This amount to meet liabilities contracted during the fiscal year ending	77 77	Amount due Agiela, Ute chief, for services rendered as guide from August 3 to October 25, 1873, at Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	50 00
June 30, 1874, at the Papago agency, Arizona, as per vouchers and statement of Agent R. A. Wilbur, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	3, 838 84	Amount due Z. Staab & Co. for supplies furnished the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Mexico, in November and December, 1873, and January and April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	149 14
Amount due H. W. Livingston for services rendered as laborer at the Colorado River reservation, Arizona, during the first and second quarters, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	331 00	Amount due Seligman Brothers & Co. for timber, &c., furnished in sec- ond quarter, 1874, for the New Mexico superintendency, being a defi- ciency for the fiscal year 1874	20 75
Amount due James Brown for services rendered as laborer on the irrigating canal at Colorado River reservation, Arizona, in June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  This amount to meet liabilities contracted on account of services rendered	54 00	Amount due O. C. Crothers for services rendered in March, 1874, at the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due A. Cayetana Garcia for subsistence supplies furnished dur-	77 41
by employés, &c., at the Moqui Pueblo Indian agency, in Arizona, dur- ing the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per estimates of Agent De-		ing the second quarter, 1874, for the New Mexico superintendency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Nanuello Griego for board furnished two Indian witnesses	69 05
frees, dated April 8 and June 20, 1874, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	1,336 38	in March, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Joseph J. Herrera for services rendered in June, 1874, at the Abiquiu agency, New Moxico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year
Tule River agency, California, in October 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year, 1874.  Amount due Mission and Pacific Woolen Mills for clothing furnished un-	237 36	1874. Amount due Probst & Kirchner for 207‡ pounds of beef furnished in June, 1874, for Indians at the same agency, being a deficiency for the der contract for the same agency in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Hooker & Co. for hardware furnished under contract for the same agency, in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	499 25	fiscal year 1874.  Amount due M. A. Breeden for rent of post-office box to the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Mexico, in June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	16 60 3 90
1874.  Amount due Murphy, Grant & Co. for goods, &c., furnished under contract for the same agency in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the	413 93	Amount due Maxwell Land Grant and Railway Company for rent of building for the use of the agent at Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in January, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Francisco Griego for keeping Indian horses in February and fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Fordham & Jennings for subsistence supplies furnished under contract for the same agency in October, 1873, being a deficiency	345 37	Amount due Francisco Griego for keeping Indian horses in February and March, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year, 1874. Amount due Thomas McDonald, for board furnished employés of the	25 50 for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Lindenburger & Burke for hats furnished under contract for the same agency in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal	266 59	Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due John Orme Cole, late Indian agent, for expenses incurred in	12 00 year 1874.  Amount due S. Greenbaum for transporting annuity goods and supplies to Hoona Valley reservation. California, under contract, during the fis-	35 53	October and November, 1873, in traveling on Government business, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Charles Probst for beef furnished in January, March, April,	177 55
cal year ending June 30 1874 heing a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	794 52	and May, 1873, for the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Charles Probst for beef furnished in June, 1874, for the	920 65
Amount due John Sap for 55,838 pounds of fresh beef furnished the Hoopa Valley reservation, California, under contract, during the first and second quarters, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due A. Brizzard for supplies furnished the Hoopa Valley reservation, California, in March, April, May, and June, 1874, being a defi-	5, 583 80	same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	877 70
ciency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Marcus C. Hawley & Co. for hardware furnished the Hoopa Valley agency, California, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874.	1,999 71	being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due William White for expenses incurred in traveling in April, 1874, on account of the Indian service in New Mexico, being a deficiency	4, 045 20 being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	121 72	for the fiscal year 1874	32 00

Amount due William White for services rendered as acting agent at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	$147 30	Amount due E. Andrews for articles of stationery furnished in April and May, 1874, for the office of the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Moxico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	$20 25
Amount due M. Traner for supplies furnished in April, 1874, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	73 63	Amount dae J. L. Göuld for services rendered as special agent in November, 1874, at the Navajo agency, Now Mexico, and for traveling expenses in returning to his home, being a deficiency for the fiscal year quiu ageney, New Mexico, in September, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Bernardo Sanchez for beef and mutton furnished in Au-	45 10	Amount due Thomas D. Burns for supplies furnished for the service at the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	G. Waller gust, 1873, for the service at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due A. G. Irvine for hardware furnished in June, 1874, for the	104 00 6 90	Amount due Charles Roselle for services rendered as teamster and la- borer at the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, in second quarter, 1874, service in New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Hfeld & Co. for supplies furnished the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Mexico in April and May, 1874, being a defi-		being a deticiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due Francisco Griego for hire of team for the service at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in April, 1874, being a deficiency for ciency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Z. Staab and Alexander Gusdorf for 2,900 pounds of flour furnished under contract in February, 1874, for the Abiquiu agency,	19 35	the fiscal year 1874  Amount due Francisco Griego for services rendered as interpreter at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in May, 1874, being a deficiency for
New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Z. Staab and Alexander Guzdorf for 12,000 pounds of flour furnished under contract in April and May, 1874, for same agency, be-	123 25	the fiscal year 1874  Amount due W. A. Crocker for services rendered as issue-clerk at the same agency, in May, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	55 55 53 33
ing a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due W. A. Crocker for services rendered in June, 1874, as clerk	510 00	Amount due Maurice Franer for supplies furnished the same agency in February, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due George Schafer for 414 leaves of bread furnished the Indians at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Julien Lopes for 25 cords of wood furnished in November,	40 00	at the Pueblo agency, New Mexico, in the second quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	34 50
1873, for the Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Charles H. Coleman for shoeing public animals in December,	75 00	Amount due Francisco Griego for transportation furnished two Indians, witnesses to United States court, from Cimarron to Santa Fé, New Mex- ico, in February, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	39 00
1873, and January and February, 1874, at the same agency, being a defi- ciency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Z. Staab & Co. for supplies furnished in April, 1874, for	56 00	Amount due John E. Murphy, for medicines furnished for the service in New Mexico during the second quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874
the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	155 00	This amount, to be applied in the payment of liabilities contracted on ac- count of the service at the Alsea subagency and the Siletz agency, Or-
Amount due Pedro Y. Jaramillo for beef and wheat furnished in May, 1874, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Culver & Hersey for ammunition furnished in May, 1874, in	194 00	egon, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per statement of J. H. Fairchild, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	12, 163 46
the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	94 00	This amount, to be applied in payment of liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Malheur agency, Oregon, during the fiscal year
1874, at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 A mount due William A. Crocker for rent of buildings from January 20 to April 20, 1874, for the service in New Mexico, being a deficiency for	8 88	ending June 30, 1874, as per statements of Agents Parish and Linville, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. This amount, to be applied in payment of salaries due employés, pur-	3, 897 00
the fiscal year 1874  Me William A. Crocker for services rendered at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, from February 1 to April 20, 1874, being a defi-	54 00	chases of tools, and repair of mills at the Klamath agency, Oregon, dur- ing the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per statement of Agent L. S. Dyar, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal ciency for the fiscal year 1874	166 66	year 1874	3, 825 00
account of the service at the Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, during the second quarter 1874, being for pay of employés and repairs on buildings, as per statement of Agent W. D. Crothers, on file in the		chases of supplies. &c., during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874. as per statement of Agent P. B. Sinnott, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	1,905 00
Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Jesus Alviso for services rendered as Navajo interpreter, from July 1 to August 31, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	1, 355 00	Amount due G. W. Dodge, late Indian agent, for expenses incurred in traveling from Salt Lake City, Utah, to Aurora, Illinois, in August, 1873 being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	128 00
Amount due Chivato (Indian) for services rendered as herder from July	84 24	Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity goods and supplies to Indians in Utah during the fiscal year ending
1 to August 31, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due J. W. Southwick for services rendered in May, 1874, at the Abiquiu agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	30 00	June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Pardon Dodds for herding twenty-eight head of cattle at the Uintah Valley agency, Utah, from July 1, 1873, to September 30,	631 45
1874 Amount due Don Vicente (Indian) for services rendered in May, 1874, at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	46 67 5 00	1873, at $50 per month, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due James M. Barker for services rendered as laborer at the Uintah Valley agency, Utah, during the second quarter, 1874, being	150 00
Amount due Chandler Robbins for traveling expenses in May, 1874, in connection with the service at same agency, being a deficiency for the		deficiency for the fiscal year 1874  Amount due James T. Taylor for services rendered as laborer at the same	150 00
fiscal year 1874 Amount due Chiome (Indian) for services rendered in June, 1874, at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	47 00 7 20	agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1374  Amount due Edward B. Critchlow for services rendered as laborer at the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	and the second
Amount due Fernandez Montana for 256 pounds of hay farnished in May, 1874, for same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Z. Staab & Co. for articles of stationery furnished in August	7 50	Amount due Robert C. Turner for services rendered as laborer and mail- carrier at the same agency, same quarter, being a deficiency for the	* 150 00
and September, 1873, for the Southern Apache agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due M. A. Breeden for articles of stationery furnished in May,	32 50	fiscal year 1874 A mount due Peter Van Houten for services rendered as carpenter at the	225 00
1874, for the Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, b.ing a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	17 20	same agency same quarter, being a denoiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due John Kelley for services rendered as blacksmith at the same agency same quarter, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	250 00
Amount due Francis Griego for hire of wagons and horses in April, 1874, for the service at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	10 00	Amount due Maurice K. Parsons for the delivery under contract of 43,593 pounds of fresh beef during the first and second quarters, 1874, at the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	4, 141 33
Amount due R. H. Longwell and A. Vison for services rendered and ex- penses incurred in connection with the service in New Mexico in June,	297 33	Amount due Daniel S. Moseby for services rendered as farmer at the same agency during the second quarter, 1874, being a deficiency for the 1674, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due R. H. Longwell for medicines, &c., furnished in November and December, 1873, for the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a		fiscal year 1874.  Amount due John A. Simms, agent, for expenses incurred in traveling on business in connection with the service at the Colville agency, deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Sixto Chavez for 1,500 pounds of corn furnished for the serv- ice at the Abiquin agency in May, 1874, being a deficiency for the fis-	16 70	Washington Territory, from July 3 to October 7, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transporting annuity	242 89
cal year 1874.  Amount due Pedro Y. Jaramillo for 6,120 pounds of wheat furnished the same agency in June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	105 00 306 00	goods and supplies to Indians located in Washington Territory, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a dedicioncy for the fiscal year 1874.
Amount due M. Traner for supplies furnished in second quarter 1874, for the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal	179 69	This amount to be applied in the payment of salaries of employes supplies, &c., liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Colville year 1874 Amount due Valentine Herbert for services rendered as teamster in May and June, 1874, at the New Mexico superintendency, being a deficiency		agency, Washington Territory, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per statement of Agent John A. Simms, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	2, 129 91 for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due S. Speigelberg for one saddle and three bridles furnished in June, 1874, for the New Mexico superintendency, being a deficiency for	120 00	This amount to be applied in the payment of liabilities contracted at the Central superintendency during the second quarter, 1874, on account of rent, care of Government animals, stationery, gas, storage, traveling expenses, &c., as per statement of Enoch Hoag, late superintendent of the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Frederick C. Bishop for services rendered as clerk at the office of the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Mexico in June,	32 50	Indian analis, on me in the indian Omce, being a dencicity for the 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	75 00	fiscal year 1874.  This amount for salary and traveling expenses of a special agent in Alaska, from July 1, 1873, to June 30, 1874, as per vouchers on file in cer in May and June, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Speigelberg Brothers for one sack of flour furnished in February, 1874, to Indians in New Mexico, being a deficiency for the	250 00	the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	1, 956 54
fiscal year 1874. Amount due George Chase for shoeing animals belonging to the Navajo agency, New Mexico, in October, 1873, and May and June, 1874, being	5 00	fering Kickapoo Indian captives at Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, pre- paratory to removal to a new location, during September and Novem- ber, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	565 66
Amount due William Bolander for repairing harness, &c., in April and June, 1874, for the superintendent of Indian affairs for New Mexico,	70 25	Amount due Joseph D. Gurnoe for services rendered as clerk at the La Pointe agency, Wisconsin, in August and October, 1873, being a defi- ciency for the fiscal year 1874	165 00
Amount due J. B. McCullough for rent of post-office box to the agent	14 45	Amount due J. A. Davis for balance on account for services rendered as superintendent at Red Cliff reservation, Wisconsin, and as clerk to the
at the Cimarron agency, New Mexico, in April, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	2 00	agent at the La Pointe agency, Wisconsin, from September 1, 1873, to February 6, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	250 00

		-5-B
Amount due G. A. Crowell for services rendered and expenses incurred in connection with the payment of annuities to the Miamies of Indiana and of Eel River, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a		1 deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due William Matthewson for 35,000 pounds of flour furnished in  May, 1874, for the subsistence of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache	$310 1- 2,352 8	1
Indians in Dakota, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due John H. Charles for balance due on flour, bacon, coffee, sugar, &c., furnished the Arickarees, Gros Ventres, and Mandans in September, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	9, 998 8	2
Amount due Durfee & Peck for flour, bacon, coffee, and sugar furnished for the same Indians in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	20, 684 2	3
Amount due F. A. Van Ostrand for flour, bacon, coffee, and sugar furnished for the same Indians in October, 1873, being a deficiency for the	1 500 0	13 fiscal year 1874.  Amount due D. W. Marsh for flour, bacon, coffee, and sugar furnished for the same Indians in September, 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	1, 500 0
Amount due the Union Pacific Railread Company for transporting an- nuity goods and supplies to Shoshones and Bannacks, and other bands in Idaho and Southeastern Oregon, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	473 6	1
Amount due Union Pacific Railroad Company for transportation furnished Indian delegations visiting Washington during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874		1 a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due George B. Duncan for services rendered as issue clerk at Southern Apache agency, New Mexico, in January, 1874, being a defi-	563 3
ciency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Henry Duane for services rendered as physician at the same agency in fourth quarter 1873, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	200 0
Amount due Andrew Berger for services rendered as blacksmith at the same agency in second quarter 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.		2
Amount due Louis Clark for beef and flour furnished in March, 1874, for Jicarilla Apaches in New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.	583-2	1
Amount due J. P. Chase for 7,4704 pounds fresh beef furnished in De- cember, 1873, and January, 1874, for Southern Apache agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	933 8	1 2
Amount due Luciano Chaner for 12,968 pounds of fresh beef furnished in March, 1874, for same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Frank Frenger for 19,733\(\frac{1}{2}\) pounds of fresh beef furnished in January and March, 1874, for same agency, being a deficiency for the	972 6	0
fiscal year 1874 Amount due Green & Lohenstein for supplies furnished in May, 1874, for Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, being a deficiency for the	1,608 5 fiscal year 1874 Amount due F. W. Haskell for sugar, coffee, and flour furnished in Feb- ruary, 1874, for Apaches of New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Estanilsado Montaya for 100,111 pounds of flour furnished in	3, 931 7	5
February, 1874, for Southern Apache agency, in New Mexico, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Pedro Montaya for erecting school-house in December, 1873, and furnishing sixteen tons of hay in August, 1873, for the same agency,	5, 005 5	5 being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  Amount due Numa Reymond for 48,518½ pounds of corn furnished in  January, 1874, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due John H. Riley for fresh beef furnished in the first and sec- ond quarters, 1874, for the Mescalero Apache agency, New Mexico, be-	1, 280 8	1
ing a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due William Rosenthal for corn and hay furnished in Septem- ber, 1873, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 Amount due Van C. Smith for beef furnished under contract in fourth	7, 165 6 168 0 quarter, 1873, and January, 1874, for the same agency, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Z. Staab for blankets, flour, and other supplies furnished in September, October, and November, 1873, and May, 1874, for the South-	9, 867 0	3 4
year 1874	3, 789 5	2
Amount due Henry G. Fonssant for 15,163 pounds of fresh beef furnished in May, 1874, for the Southern Apaches of New Mexico, being a defi- ciency for the service of the fiscal year 1874. Amount due Manuel Vigel for 20,800 pounds of mutton furnished in June,	1, 213 0	4
Amount due Paul Dowlire for supplies furnished the Mescalero Apache	1, 560 0	0 agency, New Mexico, in May, 1874, being a deficiency for fiscal year 1874 Amount due William Gentry for services rendered as teamster at the	96 0	0 3 same agency during a part of the first and second quarters, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. Amount due S. C. Agguire for services rendered, hire of teams, &c., plow-		0
ing, &c., in May, 1874, at the Rio Verde reservation, Arizona, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on	473 0	0 account of the service at the San Carlos division, White Mountain reservation, Arizona, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per vouchers and statement of Agent James E. Roberts, on file in the In-		1
dian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874.  This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Gila River agency, Arizona, during the first and second quarters, 1874, as per statement of Agent J. H. Stout,	4, 206 7	1
on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at Camp Apacho agency, Arizona, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per vouchers and statement of Agent	1, 167 5
James E. Roberts, on hie in the Indian Office, being a denciency for the	33, 372 9
Amount due W. B. Hooper & Co. for flour and barley delivered under contract during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, at the several agen- cies in Arizona, as per vouchers on file in the Indian Office, being a de-		1
ficiency for the fiscal year 1874	47, 518 0	7 1
contract during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, for the service in Arizona, as per vouchers on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874	13, 971 3	1

Amount due W. B. Hugus for supplies of flour, soap, &c., furnished during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, for the service of the San Carlos agency, Arizona, as per vouchers on file in the Indian Office, being	210 000	70
Amount due E. N. Fish & Co. for supplies of stationery, medicines, coffee, sugar, beans, flour, &c., furnished during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, for the service in Arizona, as per vouchers on file in the Indian	$10, 928
Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1874 This amount to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Rio Verde reservation, Arizona, being for salaries due employés for services rendered during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, as per vouchers on file in the Indian Office, being a	13, 559	77 deficiency for the fiscal year 1874. This amount, to be applied in the payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Lac Court Oreille reservation, Wisconsin, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, as per statement of J. L. Mahan, agent, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the	5, 020 fiscal year 1875. Amount due D. Provencher for 18.840 pounds of beef furnished the Nav- ajo agency, New Mexico, in April, 1875, being a deficiency for the fiscal	4, 369 year 1875 Amount due D. Provencher for 12,450 pounds of beef furnished the Nav- ajo agency, New Mexico, in March, 1875, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875  Amount due Marmion Brothers for corn delivered at the same agency in March, April, and May, 1875, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	620
Amounts due Walter G. Marmion for beef furnished the Navajo agency, New Mexico, in March, 1875, and F. K. Nichols & Son for yarn, &c., for same agency, in February, 1875, being a deficiency for the fiscal year	2, 080
Amount due John Sap for fresh beef delivered at the Hoopa Valley agency, California, in July, August, and September, 1875, as per vouch- ers on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year
1875. This amount to be applied in payment of indebtedness incurred on account of the service at the Round Valley agency, California, in the second quarter, 1875, as per estimate of Agent J. L. Burchard, on file in	1, 753
the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875.  Amount due Henry Cox for services rendered as inspector of Indian supplies at San Francisco, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, be-		63
ing a deficiency for the fiscal year, 1875.  Amount due Marcus C. Hawley & Co. for articles of hardware furnished the Hoopa Valley agency, in California, in July, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875.		. 00 for the fiscal year 1875.  This amount to meet liabilities contracted on account of the service at the Hoopa Valley agency, California, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, being for annuity supplies purchased of the following parties, namely: Fleischmann, Siehel & Co., $1,501.94; Murphy, Grant & Co., $631.63; C. H. Myers & Bro., $601.9; Fordham & Jennings, $760.98; Levi Stranss & Co., $496.59; J. C. Johnson & Co., $37.27; Dutton & Wythington, $74.62; Mission and Pacific Woolen Mills, $3,463.73; Crane & Brigham, $113.17; and Hecht Bros. & Co., $445.08, aggregating $7,585.		50
10, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875	7, 585
dians in December, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875  Amount due Wyman, Buckwalter & Co. for hardware furnished the Poncaagency in December, 1874, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875  Amount due Blall & Buerdorff for sundry articles furnished the same		30
This amount to re-imburse Charles P. Birkett, late United States Indian agent, for amount expended by him for the benefit of the Indians at	9	85
Ponca agency, Dakota, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875.  Amount due C. A. Broadwater for 175 head of beef-cattle delivered at Fort Peck, Montana, in May, 1875, under contract July 11, 1874, being	1,860	91
a deficiency for the fiscal year 1875.  Amount due Abram Hatch for 50 head of beef-cattle delivered at the Uintah Valley agency, Utah, during the second quarter 1875, as per receipt of J. J. Critchlow, agent, on file in the Indian Office, being a	4, 032	00 deficiency for the fiscal year 1875  Amount due for salary and traveling expenses of a special agent in Alaska from July 1, 1874, to October 7, 1874, as per vouchers of Agent E, D. Hall, on file in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal	2, 574	00 year 1875.  Amount due G. A. Crowell for services rendered and expenses incurred in connection with the payment of annuities to the Miamies of Indiana and Eel River, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, being a defi-		37
ciency for the fiscal year 1875.  Amount due Charles P. Birkett for services rendered as United States  Indian agent during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, being a de-	417	03
ficiency for the fiscal year 1875.  This amount, to be applied in the payment of expenses incurred in holding general council of Indians in the Indian Territory during the fiscal years 1875 and 1876 and prior years, as per statement of Enoch Hoag, late superintendent of Indian affairs, dated November 19, 1875, on file	133	33
in the Indian Office, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876 and prior years  Amount due Gibson & Tyler, balance due on blankets furnished under contract for the service at Leech Lake special agency, Minnesota, dur	17, 500	00
ing the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1876 To effect a transfer to close the account of Nicholas Boilvin, Indian agent, involving no expenditure of money from the Treasury, being for the	1.889	09
fiscal year 1873 and prior years	3, 148
Arizona, in 1874.  The Clerk was proceeding to read the foregoing amendment	2, 490
Mr. HANCOCK (interrupting) said: The amendment just embraces a number of small items which are included in E. Document No. 151, the items ranging from perhaps $4 to $3,000	sent xecuti 0, $4,0	up ive 00,
$6,000, or $7,000. I suppose that it will not add anything to the	e und	er-

Document No. 151, the items ranging from perhaps $4 to $3,000, $4,000, $6,000, or $7,000. I suppose that it will not add anything to the understanding of the merits of the amendment to read it through. It is merely an enumeration of items contained in the executive document to which I have referred. I ask that the reading be dispensed with.

Mr. HALE. I hope that the suggestion will be agreed to. The reading will take a great deal of time. The gentleman can explain to us the class of items which it embraces.

Mr. HANCOCK. These items, as I stated before, are small amounts relating mainly to the Indian Bureau of the Interior Department; some of them go back as far as 1861. They are deficiencies occurring in relating mainly to the Indian Bureau of the Interior Department; some of them go back as far as 1861. They are deficiencies occurring in the Indian service, sometimes by reason of the vouchers not reaching here in time to be paid out of the appropriation before it had been covered into the Treasury; at other times (and probably this is true of the larger amounts) these deficiencies have resulted from the insufficiency of the appropriations in the first instance. These items have all received the examination of that Department and are certified to be accurate and correct. In the main they are founded upon vouchers drawn upon appropriations that had been made, and are for service authorized to be performed.

I believe the subject has received the attention in some respects at least of the Committee on Appropriations, and I have heard of no one who disputes the accuracy of the fact that these sums of money are due by the Government and ought to be paid. Running through such a length of time as is shown by the executive document as is the case with these deficiencies, it must be expected provision for their payment could only be made by appropriating an aggregate sum covering them all, as is done in this instance. The several sums making up this aggregate amount are justly due to these parties, and they have been now already too long kept out of their money. These claimants merely say to the Government, in the language of the good book, "Pay me what thou owest."

Mr. CLYMER. What is the gross amount?

Mr. HANCOCK Four bundred and sixty four thousand one had "Pay me what thou owest."

Mr. CLYMER. What is the gross amount?

Mr. HANCOCK. Four hundred and sixty-four thousand one hundred and twelve dollars and thirty-eight cents to pay debts justly due and which have been accumulating since 1861.

Mr. WALDRON. These claims in the aggregate amount to about half a million dollars. They are made up of some one or two hundred items contained in the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury sent to this House at the last session. That letter was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and that committee came to the conclusion mittee on Appropriations and that committee came to the conclusion these were in fact claims against the General Government and should receive investigation and attention by the committee properly chargeable with that duty.

If the gentleman from Texas will turn his attention to page 9 of this document he will find from the notes attached to various items that the Secretary of the Treasury himself regarded them as private claims. The note attached to an item for surveying public lands says

The contingent fund of the office of the surveyor-general of Idaho would not admit, at the time the expenses were incurred, of the payment of this amount. The claim is a just one, and especially so from the fact that the surveyor-general acted under instructions from the General Land Office.

Mr. ELKINS. Is that included in this amendment?

Mr. WALDRON. It is.
Mr. ELKINS. I think not.
Mr. WALDRON. I should like to know wherein this letter of the Secretary of the Treasury the amendment of the gentleman from Texas begins?

Mr. HANCOCK. It is to come in after line 242.

Mr. WALDRON. I meant what items does it embrace. The various items included in the amendment of the gentleman from Texas were a year ago reported back by the Committee on Appropriations, and by order of the House were referred to the Committee of Claims. They have remained in possession of that committee until last week, when the committee reported them back without any recommenda-tion, when they were again referred to the Committee on Appropria-The committee may as well understand as far as the Committee on Appropriations is concerned there has been no examination into the justice and propriety of these claims, and therefore it is the judg-ment of that committee they should not be included in this deficiency bill.

Mr. WALDRON. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for the further statement that after full discussion a year ago, when the deficiency bill was under consideration, when the same effort was made as now to incorporate these items, after full and thorough discussion of the question the Committee of the Whole refused to adopt the amendment.

Mr. HANCOCK. But these just claims still remain due, and the obligation is still the same on the part of the Government to pay

Mr. CLYMER. I think, Mr. Chairman, this is an attempt at most unheard-of legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia is entitled to the floor. The confusion has been so great the Chair does not wonder the mistake was made.

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order that members shall resume their seats and cease conversation.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, as stated by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I think this is a most unheard-of proposition. Here is an attempt in a single amendment to secure the payment of scores of claims. It has been the practice of the Committee on Appropriations in respect to this class of claims to adopt as a safeguard, where the claim was as much as two years old, not to regard it at all, but to refer it to the Committee of Claims.

Mr. ELKINS. Do you say it has been customary to refer these claims to the Committee of Claims? If so, why was it that the Committee on Appropriations allowed the Adams Express Company $20,000 deficiency last session, and the American Bank-Note Company $30,000 deficiency in the regular deficiency bill?

Mr. BLOUNT. I have not time to go into those items at present.
Mr. ELKINS. I want to know why that was done, if you are going to refuse these claims.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will tell you some other time. I cannot answer that in the few minutes to which I am now entitled. I say that has been the practice of the committee in reference to these claims.

Mr. HANCOCK. How long has that practice obtained?

Mr. BLOUNT. I cannot answer, but gentlemen of the committee who have been members in the Forty-third Congress have stated it who have been members in the Forty-third Congress have stated it to have been the practice of the committee to refer all claims which had obtained that age to the Committee of Claims for investigation. During the last session the rule was adopted that all these claims should be referred to the Committee of Claims for examination, and approval or disapproval. As one of the representatives of the people I think there ought to be some indorsement pro or con of these claims. If they are right and proper let them be adopted singly, and not one or two hundred of them embraced in a single item under one appropriation, without an opportunity on the part of the members to have any conception of what is the character of each individual claim. It is the duty of this House to pass upon the propriety and justice of each claim; and they should not be put into the bill in this wholesale manner, to the extent of half a million of dollars. **

Mr. MAGINNIS. In what manner do they differ from any other

Mr. MAGINNIS. In what manner do they differ from any other deficiency contained in this bill?

Mr. BLOUNT. The committee have regarded these in the light of private claims which require investigation on the part of the Com-

Mr. MAGINNIS. Are they not all audited accounts just as every other account appropriated for in this bill?

Mr. BLOUNT. There has been a distinction practically between these claims and others.

Mr. MAGINNIS. There is no difference between any one of them and others that are embraced in this bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman may think so.

Mr. MAGINNIS. If there is, let the gentleman from Georgia show

Mr. ATKINS. I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, if the House will hear me, that the Committee on Appropriations have taken no position whatever in regard to this proposition.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. There is so much disorder in the Hall that if the gentleman will yield to me I will move that the committee rise

Mr. ATKINS. I think I can outtalk this noise if I try. I have just one statement to make, and it is this: It is that the Committee on Appropriations takes no responsibility whatever in regard to this proposition. The proposition has not been considered at this session by the committee. On the contrary, the committee has absolutely declined to consider it, and we have left it to members of the House to take their own course with regard to it without any recommendation whatever from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to interrupt the gentleman from Tenssee for a moment.

Mr. ATKINS. The gentleman may proceed; I have finished what had to say

Mr. ELKINS. Mr. Chairman, I think I was recognized a while ago.
Mr. BLOUNT. I understand that the gentleman from Tennessee yields to me. My friend from Tennessee says that the Committee on Appropriations have taken no position in reference to this matter.

Mr. ATKINS. I said that it had not been considered by the com-

Mr. ATKINS. I said that it had not been considered by the committee during this session.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask the gentleman, did not the Committee on Appropriations refuse to attach these claims to the appropriation bills of last winter? I further ask him if they were not before the Committee on Appropriations this winter, and if the judgment of the committee was not that they should be referred to the Committee of Claims, and if such was not the action of this House in obedience to the request of the committee?

Mr. ATKINS. I will say in reply to the gentleman—

Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Chairman, I believe the motion that the

Mr. ATKINS. I will say in reply to the gentleman— Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Chairman, I believe the motion that the committee rise is in order.

committee rise is in order.

The CHAIRMAN. It is.
Mr. WADDELL. Then I make that motion.
Mr. ATKINS. I hope my friend from North Carolina will not attempt to take me off the floor by a motion for the committee to rise.
It is not so often that I occupy the floor.
Mr. WADDELL. If the gentleman will permit me, I will say that members are engrossed with another subject and are not listening to his remarks.

his remarks.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not yield the floor for a motion that the committee rise. I am not speaking to the rest of the audience, but to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Blount] who is listening to me. The gentleman from Georgia must know that this very morning the committee declined to take any position in regard to these claims, and that it was distinctly understood the proposition should come into the House and that the committee would make no recommendation whatever to the House with regard to it. That was the distinct understanding this morning in the committee.

Now, sir, as far as I am concerned I simply rose for the purpose of Now, sir, as far as 1 am concerned I simply rose for the purpose of disclaiming for the Committee on Appropriations any responsibility whatever in regard to this proposition. And if it pleases the House to vote this large sum of money on its deficiency bill, why, it is their business and not the business of the Committee on Appropriations in any way whatever. Whether it is defeated or whether it is adopted makes no difference to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HOUSE. Have these claims ever been passed on by any committee.

mittee?

Mr. ATKINS. I understand the fact to be this: This deficiency was before the Committee on Appropriations at the last session and that committee referred the matter to the Committee on War Claims and the Committee of Claims. Those committees had the Claims and the Committee of Claims. Those committees had the proposition under consideration and referred them back to the Committee on Appropriations and asked us to act upon them. We have declined to act upon them.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask the gentleman before he takes his

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired and debate is exhausted on the pending amendment.

Mr. ELKINS. I renew the amendment.

Mr. ELKINS. I renew the amendment.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to explain this matter if gentlemen will give me their attention. These are debts against the Government approved and recommended for payment by the Secretary of the Treasury. They are vouchers, issued regularly and in due form by the officers of the Government for property furnished the Government. That is what they are, and they are certified as correct and proper. I want to read two or three of them as set forth in the amendment. Here is a voucher for $4.50. Here is another for $5. Here is a claim for beef, $123.

I read from the list transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury

I read from the list transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to the House. I will explain to the committee how these matters arose. The Government wanted the property of the people for its uses and its officers offered them what the people asked for it. Sometimes the supplies were furnished under contract and sometimes purchased at private sale. These officers, as is the invariable rule and custom, gave vouchers for what they purchased and these vouchers are taken and received by the people as money. Now it is proposed that Congress shall refuse to appropriate money to pay them the just debts of the Government.

I put the question to the committee: Why is this distinction made? Why cannot the people away on the distant frontier have their rights in this Congress and compensation for their property sold to the Government? All the officers of the Government, from the officer in the first place who purchased the supplies and issued the vouchers up to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of the Treasury, have approved these claims. How can you, then, except by almost criminal repudiation, hope to avoid paying these vouchers? And if you repudiate and refuse payment how can you expect anybody to have any respect or any confidence in the Government or its agents? You do not question these vouchers. Nobody does and nobody can. You do not intimate they are irregular or under suspicion of any kind, or that adequate consideration was not given the Government for each and every one of them, and that it has had and used for its purposes the people's property without compensation under a promise to pay.

They stand here before the House approved by all of the Departments of the executive branch of the Government through which they pass. Adams Express Company, with its millions of dollars of capital, can get its deficiencies allowed, as was the case last session, and in this Congress and compensation for their property sold to the Gov-

Company can get its claim allowed, as was the case last session, and yet Congress refuses to pay the vouchers of these persons who sur-rendered their property to the Government under solemn contract in

Have these claims been audited?

Mr. FORT. Have these claims been audited?

Mr. ELKINS. They have, as I have said before in substance. They have been examined, audited, and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. They have received the sanction of the Interior Department, passed the board of Indian commissioners, and now are reported to this House by the Secretary of the Treasury as amounts due by the Government of the United States, as the following letters will show:

Ing letters will show:

Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs,

Washington, D. O., April 17, 1876.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, by Department reference of the 15th instant, of a letter of Hon. S. B. Elkins, relative to certain deficiency items embraced in Executive Document 151, House of Representatives, for New Mexico, and in reply have to state that the vouchers covering the amounts estimated for have been examined and approved and are on file in this office, suspended, awaiting appropriation to meet the same.

The letter of Mr. Elkins is returned herewith.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. Q. SMITH, Commissioner.

The Hon, the SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

J. Q. SMITH, Commissioner.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, April 18, 1876.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, inquiring whether amounts due for incidental expenses of the Indian service in New Mexico, as set forth in letter of the honorable the Secretary of the Treasury of March 24, 1876, transmitting deficiency estimate to the House of Representatives, have been examined and found correct by this Department, I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of report dated 17th instant, from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to whom your letter was referred.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. CHANDLER, Secretary.

Hon. S. B. Elkins, House of Representatives.

Now the items in this amendment are the identical ones mentioned Now the items in this amendment are the identical ones mentioned in Secretary Chandler's letter and Executive Document No. 151. They are vouchers, and not claims. They have been already before Congress and the Departments. Now these are facts. I do not care how much they aggregate, the obligation to pay them is the same. I believe they amount in all to about $500,000 altogether, the deficiencies from all the Territories and some of the States for three or four cies from all the Territories and some of the States for three or four years. Why not pay them? You spend millions in paying other debts and claims not in anywise different from these. There is no reason or justice in refusing to pay these because these people live on the frontier. They have furnished supplies to the Government under contract and the obligation to pay is just as binding as if your Clerk had made a contract with some one here in the city to furnish stationery or anything else which is required for use in the House. I repeat that these was extensive but endited accounts the but the Govern that these are not claims, but audited accounts due by the Government, and they should not be put down as claims.

Mr. McGINNIS. I wish to ask the gentleman from New Mexico if it is not true that every one of these items is for the payment of an audited and settled account due under contract made by the Government in pursuance of law.

man to challenge them in any particular

man to challenge them in any particular—
[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. FORT. I would like to know for what reason these accounts were not paid by the Department if they had been audited.

Mr. ELKINS. Because there was no money appropriated to pay them and Congress has refused to appropriate, and this refusal, this wrong, and continued injustice is urged as a reason why payment should not be made now.

Mr. FORT. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman

Mr. FORT. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from New Mexico, [Mr. ELKINS.]

Mr. ELKINS. Congress would not appropriate this money because there was a presidential election pending and neither party would do it. Neither party had the courage to do this simple act of justice. The republican party would not do it in the Forty-third Congress because they wanted to make a good showing, and the democratic party would not do it in the first session of the Forty-fourth Congress because the presidential election was so near at hand and they wanted to make a better showing. In the name of justice let us adjust them to make a better showing. In the name of justice let us adjust them now. They must be adjusted some time or other, and the presidential election cannot now be influenced by anything we may do on this amendment. It is, fortunately or unfortunately I will not say, taken out of this House and the Senate and committed to fifteen good men out of this House and the Senate and committed to fitteen good men whose decision we will all approve.

Mr. CONGER. It is not settled yet.

Mr. ELKINS. I think it is pretty well settled now, and I appeal to you to do your duty and pay these debts. Some of these vouchers are for sums as low as $3, many for sums of five, ten, and twenty dollars. Now has it come to this complexion, that the Government will turn its back on these because they are small, and many of them for no other reason under the sun than payment has been refused by a former Congress? You make your Government despised and con-You make your Government despised and contemptible by such a course. You cannot hope for any kind of affection, loyalty, or respect either for Congress or for the Departments if you continue this injustice and neglect these matters of small moment to the Government, but involving all to the distant frontiersman and his family.

Mr. CONGER. Why does not the gentleman postpone the pressing of these claims until the presidential election is settled †

Mr. ELKINS. Well, it is about settled, as I have said, and quite so, so far as we are concerned. Some of the people I have the honor to represent whose vouchers are included in this amendment are on the verge of bankruptcy and some in want. They furnished the Government supplies when it needed them, and took vouchers which they ment supplies when it needed them, and took vouchers which they considered as good as money, that heretofore always passed for money. They cannot now pay their debts because the Government refuses to pay them. Up to 1873 Congress uniformly paid deficiencies, and all debts contracted by officers of the Government in the interests of the public service and the people were always promptly paid. And it is unfair and unjust after you have used the property of the people for your purposes to say you will not pay for it, because you had not wisely appropriated enough money. The people trusted the officers, your duly authorized agents, in selling their supplies, and by receiving and using them as you admit by these vouchers; by every rule of right, propriety, and justice you are bound to pay for them; and it is not economy to refuse, but gross and arbitrary injustice.

Mr. HARRISON. Nobody can now. [Laughter.] Mr. ELKINS. Adams Express Company, rich and powerful, and not in need, was paid a deficiency last session. Now why do you make a distinction here between the creditors of the Government? This cannot be defended. Treat all creditors alike. In this very bill you pay a lot of deficiencies. Why not refuse all or pay all? Now I ask that this amendment be adopted, as I believe it will. [Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ELKINS. I withdraw my formal amendment.

Mr. MAGINNIS. Mr. Chairman, I renew the amendment for the purpose of giving to several gentlemen the exact nature of these claims, or rather of these audited and settled accounts, which cannot fairly be called claims, and to trace them to their source. Under the provisions of the Indian appropriation bills, proposals are issued the provisions of the Indian appropriation bills, proposals are issued and contracts awarded. These contracts are many in number, and often there are several contractors at each agency. When the accounts from all these different agencies come in at the end of the year, it is often found that the total sum exceeds the appropriation, year, it is often found that the total sum exceeds the appropriation, though all the goods and supplies are furnished by the order and upon the requisition of the Department and vouchers issued. The last vouchers received fail of payment if the appropriation is exhausted, though they may be the most legitimate in the lot and the ones issued most strictly in accordance with law. This seems to have been the case in 1872, 1873, and 1874, when the debts under discussion were contracted. When the vouchers for these years all came in it was evident that they exceeded the appropriations. But all these vouchers were issued for supplies, delivered on contract, such contract made in accordance with the law, and consequently they were audited and passed by the Interior Department, then examined and passed by the board of peace commissioners, and finally examined, audited and allowed and ordered to be paid by the accounting officers of the Treasury; but when presented to the Treasurer for payment, not paid on account of want of funds. Thus it will be seen that they are not claims but deficiencies, and stand on exactly the same basis as every item reported by the committee and provided for in this deficiency bill. ficiency bill.

Gentlemen ask why they were not paid before, and that cry comes np from hundreds of unfortunate holders of vouchers who furnished supplies, expecting immediate payment. The reasons they have up from hundreds of unfortunate holders of vouchers who furnished supplies, expecting immediate payment. The reasons they have not been paid are not particularly creditable. The Secretary of the Treasury in 1874 sent in a list of these deficiencies to Congress. The Appropriations Committee, then under the chairmanship of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD,] was endeavoring to get its bills down so low that the coming democratic Congress, the Forty-fourth, could make no capital by cutting any lower, and so left out these items. The act was then denounced as repudiation, and the atten-tion of the House called to the fact that the credit of Government vouchers in the hands of poor people ought to be maintained as sa-credly as that of bonds in the hands of the rich. But the item was not put in, and the appropriations of the Forty-third Congress were smaller by the amount.

Last year the Secretary of the Treasury sent in another request for Last year the Secretary of the Treasury sent in another request for this deficiency, but the committee, I suppose, thinking the amount shirked over on to their shoulders by the previous committee, asked that it be referred to the Committee of Claims. The Committee of Claims, having considered the matter, report that they are not claims, but adjusted accounts regularly made, deficiencies, and ask the House to refer them back to the Committee on Appropriations, and, as the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Atkins] says, that committee has declined action and left the responsibility to the House. Now many of these are small amounts, most of 'them in fact, the large contractors usually getting their money before the appropriations run out. Their non-payment has so injured the credit of the Government in my Territory that farmers will sell supplies to Government for 25 per cent. less in cash than in vouchers.

In all this shuffling and shuttlecock business of tossing these accounts from committee to committee, no one has questioned the fact counts from committee to committee, no one has questioned the fact counts from committee to committee, no one has questioned the fact that they are justly due, that they have been regularly audited and allowed and certified by the accounting officers to have been contracted according to law; that, by the judgment of two of its own Departments and the extraordinary board of peace commissioners, they are awards against the Government which should have long ago been paid. To delay such payments, to repudiate such debts by non-payment is not only the worst possible policy, but an act of dishonesty of which the American Congress should be ashamed.

Mr. FENN. If I can have the attention of the committee, I will state that among these claims is one for a deficiency for furnishing supplies to the Malheur Indian reservation for labor performed. That account has been andited and certified to, but there was no approprisupplies to the Malheur Indian reservation for labor performed. That account has been audited and certified to, but there was no appropriation out of which it could be paid. The man making the claim has labored for this Government honestly and faithfully, but he received but one copy of the voucher, through a mistake of the agent, in place of triplicate vouchers which the law required. The voucher, therefore, had to be returned from Washington to be corrected, and in the mean time the appropriation out of which this claim would have been paid had been exhausted.

Mr. FORT. Was that the only reason why he did not get his pay?

Mr. FENN. That was the only reason in the world; the appropriation was exhausted and there was no appropriation out of which he could get his money.

could get his money.

I, sir, live upon the frontier, where men work for their living, and if any man living out there treated his creditors as the Government here treats them, he would be driven from the community and compelled to seek pastures new. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. WALDRON. I trust we shall now come to a vote.

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division there were—ayes 78, noes 61.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HANCOCK and Mr. BLOUNT were ap-

The committee divided; and the tellers reported that there were-ayes 90, noes 41. Mr. BLOUNT.

I will not call for any further count.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the amendment will be regarded as adopted.

Mr. CLYMER. I raise the point that no quorum voted, and I move that the committee now rise.

that the committee now rise.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not think the gentleman understood that I, as one of the tellers, withdrew the call for any further count.

Mr. CLYMER. If that be so, then I withdraw my objection that no quorum voted.

Mr. SHEAKLEY. I renew the objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection being made that no quorum has yet voted, the tellers will resume their places and continue the count.

The tellers resumed their places; and after further count reported that there were—ayes 97, noes 53.

So the amendment was agreed to.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLYMER. I give notice that I shall call for a vote in the House upon this amendment.

Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina. I move that the committee now

Mr. WALDRON. I hope the committee will continue in session a few minutes longer; I believe there is but one further amendment to be acted upon.

Mr. HOOKER. I hope that the committee will rise.

The question was taken upon the motion of Mr. VANCE, of North Carolina, and it was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. EDEN reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, pursuant to the order of the House, had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLOUNT, by unanimous consent, reported from the Committee on Appropriations a bill (H. R. No. 4616) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The points of order will be reserved.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DURAND, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill (H. R. No. 4617) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DURAND. I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Commerce, and that the accompanying report be printed; and also that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Commerce, who have had the same under consideration, beg leave to report a bill for the construction, preservation, repair, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The bill referred to makes provision for appropriations for the following objects to the amount stated, that is to say:

Tabulated statement of works provided for in river and harbor bill.

Labutatea statement of works provided for in river and naroor out.
Harbor at Boston, Massachusetts $	25, 000
Harbor at Provincetown, Massachusetts	1,000
	10,000
Taunton River, Massachusetts	5, 000
Providence River, Rhode Island	5,000
	35, 000
	00,000
Harbor at Wilmington, Delaware	4,000
Ice harbor at Chester, Pennsylvania	800
Schuylkill River, Pennsylvania	15, 000
	35,000
Harbor at Baltimore, Maryland	60,000
James River, Virginia	40,000
Cape Fear River, North Carolina	40,000
Harbor at Washington, District of Columbia	14,000
Roanoke River, North Carolina	3,000
Harbor at Savannah, Georgia	95, 000
Harbor at Brunswick, Georgia	5, 000
	15, 000
Mouth of Mississippi River	00,000
	28, 000
	20,000
	00,000

1877.	CONGRESSIO	MAL
Duachita River, Arka	ansas and Louisiana	$8,00
Red River, Louisiana.	mucing Lower Mississippi Piyan	35, (0
Mississippi Missouri	auging Lower Mississippi River	5, 00 65, 00
Mississippi River, bet	tween mouth of Illinois and Ohio Rivers	120, 00
Channel of Mississipp	pi River opposite Saint Louis	70, 00
Little Kanawha River	tween mouth of Hillions and Onlo Rivers pi River opposite Saint Lonis r, West Virginia e mouth of Yellowstone ver Hississippi River Mississippi River w Minusoda	5, 00
Missouri River, above	e mouth of Yellowstone	10, 000
opper Mississippi Ki	Ver	30, 000 95, 000
Rock Island Rapids	Mississippi River	10, 00
Calls of Saint Anthon	iv. Minnesota	5, 000
Cennessee River, belo	ny, Minnesota	200,000
Coosa River, Georgia	F	20, 00
hio River		130, 00
reat Kanawha Kivel	F	100,000
	·····	30, 000 7, 000
uperior Bay	Michigan  ), Wisconsin  , Wisconsin  , Wisconsin  Dity, Indiana	- 2,000
Jarbor at Manitowoo	Wisconsip	5, 00
Iarbor at Shebovgan	Wisconsin	3, 00
larbor at Milwankee	Wisconsin	20, 000
Iarbor at Michigan (	City, Indiana	35, 000
larbor at Chicago, Il	igton Territory d Columbia River	0,000
nake River, Washin	gton Territory	15, 000
ower Willamette an	d Columbia River	20, 000
larbor at Ludington,	, Michigan er, Michigan	10,000
Inrhor at Muskegon	Michigan	5, 000
Iarbor at Grand Hay	Michigan ren, Michigan nd Saint Mary's Falls Canal	8, 000 20, 600
aint Mary's River ar	nd Saint Mary's Falls Canal	100, 000
Iarbor at Cheboygan	, Michigan	15, 000
aginaw River, (mout	, Michiganth)	20,000
aginaw River		10,000
larbor at Lake Huro	n, Michiganio	75, 000
car our at Tolego, On	and Obio	30, 000 40, 000
Iarbor at Erie Penns	and, Ohiosylvania	25, 000
larbor at Buffalo, Ne	w York	50, 000
larbor at Oswego, No	w York ew York her Rivers, California ington California	50, 000
acramento and Featl	her Rivers, California	20,000
TOWN WATER OF IT THEFT	mg.ou, control have a construction of the control o	30, 000
pper Willamette Ki	ver, Oregon	10,000
vamination of surve	o, and Cyprus Bayou, Texaseys of rivers and harbors	30, 000 15, 000
vamination of surve	eys of South Pass, Mississippi River, &c	15, 000
lizabeth River, Virg	rinia	3, 500
larbor at Wilson, No	ew York	10,000
pper Monongahela l	River	10,000
Vicomico River, Mar	yland	5, 000
bjects mentioned in t vere submitted as de ave incorporated a p	lined to recommend new or additional apprepriate the following tabulated statement, and for which ssignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers provision in the bill reported which continues in fo	estimates s, but they rce all un
The committee decl bjects mentioned in twee submitted as de ave incorporated a xpended balances of f such balances is of	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers	ons for the estimates s, but they erce all un he lapsing
The committee deel bjects mentioned in toree submitted as de are incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorrisite.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in trere submitted as de are incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorrising.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in trere submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorristics.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in trere submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorristics.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in trere submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorristic.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in trere submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former averorristics.	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations. I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional ided, together with the amount of unexpended balance.	ons for the estimates, but they are all un he lapsing sed for the appropria
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobscot mproving harbor at mproving Richmond mproving Cocheco Emproving Merrimae mproving entrance of mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropriations from $71,687 70 5,000 00 14,478 00
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as de ave incorporated a p xpended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobscot mproving harbor at mproving Richmond mproving Cocheco Emproving Merrimae mproving entrance of mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropriations from $71,687 70 5,000 00 14,478 00
The committee deel bjects mentioned in terer submitted as de ave incorporated a pypended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobscot mproving harbor at improving Richmond mproving Cocheco Emproving Merrimae mproving entrance of mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.	ons for the estimates, but they were all un he lapsing sed for the appropriations from $71,687 77 5,000 00 14,478 0
The committee deel bjects mentioned in terer submitted as de ave incorporated a pypended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobscot mproving harbor at improving Richmond mproving Cocheco Emproving Merrimae mproving entrance of mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropriations from $71,687 70 5,000 00 14,478 00
The committee deel bjects mentioned in the rere submitted as deave incorporated a pypended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in the balance is objects mentioned are recommented former appropriation in the balance in the balance is object. The balance is object, and t	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 10,600 00 5,000 00 5
The committee declojects mentioned in the rever submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation proving Penobscot in proving Penobscot in proving Richmond proving Merrimae in proving Merrimae in proving harbor of mproving harbor at in proving harbor at provi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.000 \ 0.000 \ 0.000 \ 0.5,000 \ 0.000 \
The committee declojects mentioned in the rever submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation proving Penobscot in proving Penobscot in proving Richmond proving Merrimae in proving Merrimae in proving harbor of mproving harbor at in proving harbor at provi	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.000 \ 0.000 \ 0.000 \ 0.5,000 \ 0.000 \
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a preended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation proving Penobscot in the proving Barbor at improving Richmond more in the proving meriman proving marbor of more in proving harbor at improving h	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to	ons for the estimate s, but the estimate s, but the rece all un the lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0 \] 10,000 \ 0 \] 10,000 \ 0 \] 5,000 \ 0
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pyended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobacot mproving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving Merrimae mproving harbor at mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which ssignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to to to the acts making such appropriations.  I rivera and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balams.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, Messachusetts.  River, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropriates from $\frac{\xx_1}{5}$, 000 0 14, 478 0 5, 000 0 5, 000 0 10, 6
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pyended balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommen former appropriation mproving Penobacot mproving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving Merrimae mproving harbor at mprovi	the following tabulated statement, and for which ssignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers revision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to to to the acts making such appropriations.  I rivera and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balams.  River, Maine. Belfast, Maine. Island Harbor, Maine. River, Messachusetts.  River, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropriates from $\frac{\xx_1}{5}$, 000 0 14, 478 0 5, 000 0 5, 000 0 10, 6
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pynemic declaration of the submitted and th	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional add, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River in front of Jersey City. New Jersey.	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.000 \ 0
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pynemic declaration of the submitted and th	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional add, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River in front of Jersey City. New Jersey.	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.000 \ 0
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pynemic declaration of the submitted and th	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional add, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River in front of Jersey City. New Jersey.	ons for the estimates, s, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 11,478 00 10,600 00 5,000 00 10,000
The committee declojects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balance and proving Penobascot in proving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving harbor at mproving harbor of mproving harbor at mproving Harlem R mproving Passaic R mproving harbor at mproving ha	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 00 5,000 00 10,0
The committee declojects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balance and proving Penobascot in proving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving harbor at mproving harbor of mproving harbor at mproving Harlem R mproving Passaic R mproving harbor at mproving ha	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, s, but they ree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.
The committee declojects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balance and proving Penobascot in proving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving harbor at mproving harbor of mproving harbor at mproving Harlem R mproving Passaic R mproving harbor at mproving ha	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 00 5,000 00 10,0
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deve incorporated a preended balances of a such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submittee of the subm	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, s, but they ree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 \ 0.
The committee declojects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balance and proving Penobascot in proving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving harbor at mproving harbor of mproving harbor at mproving Harlem R mproving Passaic R mproving harbor at mproving ha	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 00 5,000 00 10,0
The committee declojects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a premeded balances of f such balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balances is objects mentioned in tabulated statement of tions are recommended in the submitted balance and proving Penobascot in proving Richmond mproving Richmond mproving harbor at mproving harbor of mproving harbor at mproving Harlem R mproving Passaic R mproving harbor at mproving ha	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 00 5,000 00 10,0
The committee declipiets mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a prepaded balances of such balances is of such balances is of such balances is of such that are recommentally as a submitted at the submitted balance of the submitted balances is of the submitted balances is of submitted balances of submitted balances of the submitted balance of the submitted balance of the submitted balance of the submitted balance before the submitted balance of the submitted balance before the submitted balanc	the following tabulated statement, and for which esignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional added, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Of Salem Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  Liver, New York.  River, New York.  River, New York.  Port Chester, New York.	ons for the estimates, so but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $\frac{1}{5},000 00 14,478 00 00 5,000 00 10,0
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pynches of such balances of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances of the balance of th	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee declipicts mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a pynches of such balances of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances is objects mentioned in the balance of such balances of the balance of th	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deal bjects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a py spended belances of functional submitted as deave incorporated a py spended belances of such balances is objects mentioned in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation in the submitted statement of the submitted statement o	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deal bjects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a py spended belances of functional submitted as deave incorporated a py spended belances of such balances is objects mentioned in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation in the submitted statement of tions are recommen former appropriation in the submitted statement of the submitted statement o	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deal bjects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a py spended balances of f such balances is of such balances is of such balances is of type to the such balances of f such balances is of type to the such balances is of type to the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance i	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deal bjects mentioned in tere submitted as deave incorporated a py spended balances of f such balances is of such balances is of such balances is of type to the such balances of f such balances is of type to the such balances is of type to the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance i	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treers submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of the such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balance of the suc	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to 10,000 to 5,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of f such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of such balances of such balances of the such balances of the such balance is of the such balance	the following tabulated statement, and for which signated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  River, new York.  River in front of Jersey City, New Jersey.  Iver, New Jersey.  Port Chester, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Burlington, Vermont.  Sk, Vermont.  Delaware Bay, near Lewes, Delaware.  t New Castle, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Creek, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as de ave incorporated a py xended balances of f such balances is of f such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of such balances of such balances of the such balances of the such balance is of the such balance	the following tabulated statement, and for which signated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  River, new York.  River in front of Jersey City, New Jersey.  Iver, New Jersey.  Port Chester, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Burlington, Vermont.  Sk, Vermont.  Delaware Bay, near Lewes, Delaware.  t New Castle, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Creek, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as deave incorporated a py representation of the such balances of f such balances is of f such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balances of the such balances of the such balances of the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance	the following tabulated statement, and for which signated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  River, new York.  River in front of Jersey City, New Jersey.  Iver, New Jersey.  Port Chester, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Burlington, Vermont.  Sk, Vermont.  Delaware Bay, near Lewes, Delaware.  t New Castle, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Creek, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in treer submitted as deave incorporated a py representation of the such balances of f such balances is of f such balances of f such balances is of the such balances of the such balances of the such balances of the such balances of the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance is of the such balance in the such balance is of the such balance	the following tabulated statement, and for which signated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in fo former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  Island Harbor, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.  Port Jefferson, Long Island Sound, New York.  River, new York.  River in front of Jersey City, New Jersey.  Iver, New Jersey.  Port Chester, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Rondout, New York.  Burlington, Vermont.  Sk, Vermont.  Delaware Bay, near Lewes, Delaware.  t New Castle, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Delaware.  River, Creek, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, Virginia.  nock River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.  oad River, North Carolina.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to
The committee deel bjects mentioned in twee submitted as deave incorporated a pxpended balances of f such balances is of such balances is of f such balances is of f such balances is of f such balances in the subjects mentioned in the subjects may be subjected by the subject may be subject to	the following tabulated statement, and for which seignated in the report of the Chief of Engineers rovision in the bill reported which continues in for former appropriations, so that all question as to to viated, and the same are preserved intact to be us the acts making such appropriations.  I rivers and harbors for which no new or additional aded, together with the amount of unexpended balans.  River, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Belfast, Maine.  Island Harbor, Maine.  River, New Hampshire.  k River, Massachusetts.  Fall Rarbor, Massachusetts.  Plymouth, Massachusetts.  New Bedford, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Fall River, Massachusetts.  Tagansett Bay, Rhode Island and Connecticut.  Stonington, Connecticut.  Milford, Connecticut.  Bridgeport, Connecticut.  Norwalk, Connecticut.	ons for the estimates, but they cree all un he lapsing sed for the appropria mees from $1,000 to 10,000 to

۰
ı	Improving Cypress Bayou, Texas	$13,000 00
ı	Improving White River above Jacksonport.	10,000 00
1	Improving White and Saint Francis Rivers Improving Rush Chute and the harbor of Burlington, Iowa	*******
ı	Improving Rush Chute and the harbor of Burlington, Iowa	10,000 00
ı	Improving harbor at Fort Madison, Iowa	10,000 00
ı	Removing bar in Mississippi River, opposite Dubuque, Iowa	15,000 00
ı	Improving Illinois River	65, 501, 78
ı	Improving Mississippi River above Fall of Saint Anthony	20,000 00
ı	Improving Minnesota River. Improving Chippewa River, Wisconsin	10, 023 44
ı	Improving Chippewa River, Wisconsin	10,000 00
ı	Improving Red River of the North, Minnesota	10,000 00
ı	Improving Hiawassee River, Tennessee	10,000 00
ı	Improving Cumberland River below Nashville, Tennessee
ı	Improving Cumberland River above Nashville, Tennessee	52,000 00
ı	Improving Oostenaula and Coosawattee Rivers, Georgia	*******
1	Improving Wabash River, Indiana Improving New River in Virginia and West Virginia.	102,600 00
ı	Improving New River in Virginia and West Virginia	15,000 00
ı	Improving harbor at Ontonagon, Michigan	25, 000 00
ı	Improving Eagle Harbor, Michigan Improving harbor at Menomonee, Wisconsin	19, 937 62
ı	Improving harbor at Menomonee, Wisconsin	11,500 00
	Improving harbor at Green Bay, Wisconsin	5, 400 00
	Improving harbor at Green Bay, Wisconsin
	Improving harbor at Ahnapee Improving harbor of Two Rivers	7, 260 00
	Improving harbor of Two Rivers	4,600 00
	Improving harbor at Port Washington, Wisconsin	8, 750 00
	Improving harbor of Racine, Wisconsin	8,000 00
	Improving harbor at Kenosha, Wisconsin	7,850 00
	Improving Fox and Wisconsin Rivers	156, 500 00
	Improving harbor at Calumet, Illinois	20, 059 00
	Improving harbor at Charlevoix, Michigan	10,000 00
	Improving harbor at Frankfort, Michigan	9, 910 42
	Improving harbor at Manistee, Michigan	19, 796 76
	Improving harbor at Pentwater, Michigan	10 143 50
۱	Improving harbor at Pentwater, Michigan Improving harbor at Black Lake, Michigan Improving harbor at Saugatuck, Michigan Improving harbor at South Haven, Michigan	20 629 65
l	Improving harbor at Sangatnek, Michigan	1 744 86
	Improving harbor at South Haven Michigan	6 590 27
ı	Improving harbor at Saint Joseph's, Michigan	4 365 00
	Improving Au Sable River, Michigan	1, 144 37
	Improving Detroit River, Michigan	2, 222 01
	Improving harbor at Monroe, Michigan	5 004 14
	Improving harbor at Port Clinton, Ohio	5, 016 20
l	Improving harbor at Sandusky City, Ohio	25, 106 77
I	Improving harbor at Vermillion, Ohio	4, 125 45
	Improving harbor at Fair Port, Ohio	2, 421 43
	Improving harbor at Ashtabula, Ohio	5,000 00
	Improving harbor at Dunkirk, New York	15, 500 00
	Improving harbor at Olcott, New York	10,000 00
	Improving harbor at Oak Orchard New York	1 984 64
	Improving harbor at Oak Orchard, New York Improving harbor at Putneyville, New York Improving harbor at Great Sodus Bay, New York.	3, 126, 56
	Improving harbor at Great Sodns Bay New York	6 871 19
	Improving harbor at Little Sodus Bay, New York	5 953 01
	Improving Oakland barbor California	40, 315 80
	Improving Oakland harbor, California.  Improving San Joaquin harbor, California	90,000,00
	Constructing canal around the cascades of Columbia River	20,000 00
	The total sum recommended to be appropriated in the bill, being $5	2,512,300, is Constructing canal around the cascades of Columbia River.

The total sum recommended to be appropriated in the bill, being $2,512,300, is $2,354,400 less than the amount appropriated by the river and harbor bill of last year, and is $10,707,800 less than the estimate made in the report of the Chief of Engineers.

This is a very great reduction from the estimates made for the improvement of the different works mentioned, but, in view of the financial condition of the country and the imperative demand for the greatest economy in the public expenditures of the Government, the committee did not deem that they were authorized to recommend a greater appropriation for the purpose than is provided for in the bill accompanying this report. While adhering in amount to the limit set, beyond which they would not pass, the committee have endeavored to do the greatest good to the greatest number by massing the appropriations at the more important points in different sections of the country, having reference to the number of people interested in the improvement, the necessities of the different sections of country tributary to points where given improvements are being made, the quality ad amount of trade and commerce to be affected or benefited by them, the condition and absolute requirements of the improvements either projected or in process of repair, construction, or completion, and also taking into account the amount of unexpended balances now credited to certain points by reason of former appropriations. Without entering into any argument as to the wisdom of limiting the appropriation to the amount specified in the bill, or as to whether other improvements than these mentioned should have received some appropriation for the next year, the committee can give the assurance that they have given each particular object for which estimates have been submitted their most careful attention. They have proposed a bill which commends itself to their judgment, and they most respectfully ask its favorable consideration.

WILLIAM W. WILSHIRE.

Mr. SAYLER, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee of Elections:

Resolved. That there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3.000 to WILLIAM W. WILSHIER, contestee, for expenses in the contest by Thomas W. Gunter against William W. Wilshire, third district of Arkansas, in the Forty-third Congress.

HENRY METCALFE.

Mr. HALE, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 190) authorizing First Lieutenant Henry Metcalfe, of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, to accept a decoration from the Sultan of Turkey; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered printed.

FREEDMAN'S SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY.

Mr. RIDDLE. I ask unanimous consent to have taken from the Speaker's table, the bill, with Senate amendments, (H. R. No. 4284,) authorizing the commissioners of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to buy in certain real estate and other property, and to sell the same at public or private sale, and for other purposes, for the purpose of concurring in the Senate amendments.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted, as follows: To Mr. Townsend, of New York, for five days.

IRWIN B LINTON.

Mr. POWELL, by unanimous consent, from the Committee of Accounts, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to Irwin B. Liuton, out of the contingent fund, the sum of $90 for services rendered by said Linton as clerk of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department from the 29th day of July to the 15th day of August, 1876.

Mr. POWELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DANIEL LEWIS.

Mr. POWELL also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved, That Daniel Lewis be paid the sum of $275 out of the contingent fund of the House for services rendered in the Doorkeeper's department from the 14th day of August, 1876, to January 2, 1877.

Mr. POWELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN AMMAHAIE, OR AMMAHAE.

Mr. FINLEY, (by request,) by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 4618) explanatory of an act directing the Second Auditor to settle the pay and bounty accounts of John Ammahaie, or Ammahae, passed June 30, 1876; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

PAY OF COMMITTEE CLERKS.

Mr. KNOTT. On the 20th of December last the Committee on the Judiciary were instructed to report a construction of certain clauses in an appropriation bill in order to enable the Committee of Accounts to audit the accounts of this House. We have been waiting for weeks an opportunity to make the report. It is highly important that the report be made, and I ask unanimous consent to make it now.

Mr. CONGER. Let it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as 10110Ws:

The Judiciary Committee, to whom was re erred a resolution of 20th December, 1876, instructing the committee "to inquire whether by the appropriation act of August 15, 1876, the twenty-one clerks to committees therein mentioned are entitled to receive as compensation during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, the amount per diem designated in said act for their actual services," have had the same under consideration and make the following report:

The bill begins with this provision:

"That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated in full compensation, for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, for the objects hereinafter expressed," (nage 143.)

(page 143.)

service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, for the objects hereinafter expressed," (page 143.)

On page 146 the following provision occurs:

"For twenty-one clerks to committees, at $6 per day during the session,$15,120."

Your committee believe that the construction of the last-named provision, in connection with the first, is that the twenty-one clerks named are entitled to $6 per diem from the 39th day of June, 1876, to 30th day of June, 1877, for each day during the first and second sessions of this Forty-fourth Congress embraced within that fiscal year.

Your committee therefore report the following resolution and recommend that it be adopted by the House:

**Resolved**, That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, at the rate of $6 per diem from July 1 to August 31, 1876, inclusive, to the clerks of the twenty-one committees designated by the Committee of Accounts as the committees for payment to clerks of which provision was made in the act of Congress approved August 15, 1876, entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes," deducting therefrom any amount which the clerks of said committees respectively may have heretofore received during the time named.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to have this proposition lie over a day or

Mr. CONGER. I desire to have this proposition lie over a day or two. I shall not then object to its consideration.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made; the resolution is not before the

RECESS.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. I move that the House now take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning; and pending that motion I ask unanimous consent that when the House shall re-assemble it shall, without the transaction of any business, take a further recess until five minutes before twelve o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana in regard to the order of business to-morrow morning ?

There was no objection.

The motion for a recess was then agreed to; and accordingly (at four o'clock and thirty-five minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk under the rule, and referred as stated:

By the SPEAKER: Remonstrance of citizens of Philadelphia against the passage of the bill (S. No. 796) for the further extension of a patent for buckles to Sheldon S. Hartshorn, to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. BANNING: The petition of Rufus S. Lord, S. T. Herring, and H. C. Burrell, for the passage of the House bill providing that pensioners may be provided with a truss upon application, to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLAIR: A paper relating to the establishment of a postroute between Jefferson and Highland, New Hampshire, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BLAND: A paper relating to the establishment of a post-route from Marshfield by way of Ava to Yellville, Arkansas, to the same committee.

By Mr. BRADLEY: The petition of A. R. Mather and 65 others, of Montcalm County, Michigan, for cheap telegraphy, to the same com-

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois: The petition of citizens of Wau-kegan, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Commit-tee of Ways and Means.

By Mr-BURLEIGH: The petition of Enoch Allen and others, of East Parsonfield, Maine, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: The petition of J. S. Underhill and 29 others, of Tonica, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CANNON, of Illinois: The petition of Stone & Gere and other citizens of Tolono, Illinois, of similar import, to the same com-

By Mr. CROUNSE: The petition of G. W. Pugh and others, of Nebraska, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DANFORD: Three petitions, signed respectively by R. Brinkerhoff and other citizens of Mansfield, John Dunlap of New Athens, and Wesley Sandige and 27 others of Beach City, Ohio, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means. By Mr. DOUGLAS: The petition of H. H. Lewis, for the removal of his political disabilities, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FAULKNER: The petition of George W. Murphy, of Morgantown, West Virginia, to have refunded to him certain costs and expresses incurred for medical attendance for a disabiled United States.

expenses incurred for medical attendance for a disabled United States soldier, to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FORT: The petition of 54 citizens of Ford County, Illinois, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. GARFIELD: Two petitions, one from citizens of Batavia, the other from citizens of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, of similar import, to the same committee.

Also, the petition of citizens of Ashtabula County, Ohio, for an appropriation for the improvement of Ashtabula harbor, to the Committee on Commerce.

mittee on Commerce.

By Mr. GOODIN: Three petitions from citizens of Leavenworth, Ellsworth, and Thayer, Kansas, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. JOYCE: The petition of citizens of Orwell, Vermont, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LANDERS, of Connecticut: Two petitions, one from John B. Carrington and 28 others, of New Haven, the other from Charles Underwood and others, of Tolland, Connecticut, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEAVENWORTH: The petition of Frank Hikock, Justus Newell, and 20 other citizens of Onondaga, New York, of similar im-

Newell, and 20 other citizens of Onondaga, New York, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. MACKEY: The petition of citizens of Clearfield County, Penusylvania, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. McDILL: Memorial of 203 settlers in the Des Moines Valley, Iowa, asking for redress of grievances, to the Committee on Public Lands.

lic Lands.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: Two petitions, one from citizens of Louisville, the other from citizens of Springfield, Kentucky, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. OLIVER: Two petitions, one from W. H. Nelson and other citizens of Sibley, Iowa, the other from H. G. Grattan and other citizens of Waukon, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. PACKER: Two petitions, one from citizens of Pittsburgh, the other from citizens of Shrewsbury, Pennsylvania, of similar import, to the same committee.

port, to the same committee.

By Mr. PHILLIPS, of Kansas: Resolutions of the Legislature of Kansas, in reference to settlers on Osage ceded lands, to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. PIERCE: Two petitions, one from Gardner S. Burbank and others of Fitchburgh, the other from Life Baldwin and others of others of Fitchburgh, the other from Life Baldwin and others of Boston, Massachusetts, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. SAMPSON: The petition of B. M. Webster and 26 other citizens of Essex, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. SPRINGER: The petition of citizens of Petersburgh, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. STEELE: The petition of citizens of Evanstown, Wyoming Territory, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. STEVENSON: The petition of R. B. Latham and 100 other citizens of Logan County, Illinois, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. TEESE: Five petitions from citizens of Jamestown and Newark, New Jersey, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. THORNBURGH: The petition of John L. Shepard and others, of Tennessee, for cheap telegraphy, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. THROCKMORTON: The petition of B. R. Milam and other citizens of Parker County, Texas, of similar import, to the same com-

By Mr. TUCKER: Two petitions, one from citizens of Farmville, and the other from citizens of Berryville, Virginia, for the repeal of the bank-tax laws, to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. TUFTS: The petition of H. P. Elliott and other citizens of Marion, Iowa, of similar import, to the same committee.

By Mr. WIGGINTON: The petition of the board of supervisors of Los Angeles, California, the common council, and the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Los Angeles, for an appropriation to improve the harbor at Wilmington, California, to the Committee on Commerce.

IN SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 8, 1877-10 a. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The recess having expired, the Senate resumes its session. The unfinished business is House bill No. 4452, which will be read as in Committee of the Whole.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4452) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. WITHERS, (at ten o'clock and twenty-five minutes a. m.) I move that the Senate take a recess until twelve o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate re-assembled at twelve o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. S. H. Hall, D. D., of New York City.

The Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, February 7, was read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented the credentials of A. H. Garland, elected by the Legislature of the State of Arkansas a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1877; which were read and ordered to be filed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT protempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Third Auditor of the Treasury, recommending an appropriation of $10,000 for the payment of Montana war claims, an appropriation of $5,000 for the payment of Dakota war claims, and that the Secretary of War be authorized by law to designate some officer to make awards on said claims, vice Colonel James A. Hardie, deceased; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WINDOM presented two petitions of citizens of Minnesota, praying for the passage of an act allowing pensioners the amount of arrears to which they would be entitled by a removal from the statutes of the unjust limitation which has debarred many from receiving their just dues, and that they be entitled to receive in all cases pension from date of discharge of the soldier; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BARNUM presented the petition of Calvin Adams, praying for an extension of his patent for an improvement in making locks for doors; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented the petition of Seth Thomas and others, citizens of Connecticut, praying for the transfer of the telegraph business to the superinterdence of the Post-Office Department, and for cheaper telegraphic facilities; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. JOHNSTON presented the petition of B. Lewis Blackford, praying Congress to purchase forty-two hundred volumes of the Annals and Debates of Congress from 1789 to 1824; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. MERRIMON presented resolutions of the Legislature of North Carolina, approving of the passage of the act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the late the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877, and thanking the committee that reported it, without distinction of party, for their labors and their patriotism; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. KERNAN presented the memorial of F. N. Goddard and others, citizens of New York, remonstrating against the extension of a patent granted to Sheldon S. Hartshorn for an improvement in buckles; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. TELLER presented the petition of James Taylor, Robert Tramper, and others, commissioners for the eastern band of the Cherokee Indians of North Carolina, praying for the passage of a law for the completion of their land titles and the final settlement of their accounts, &c.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

accounts, &c.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. WHYTE presented the memorial of John H. Semmes and others, citizens of the District of Columbia, praying for the payment of rent for their building in Washington City, known as the Seaton House, lately occupied by the Government for the accommodation of the Pension Bureau; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of members of the Chickasaw Nation of Indians residing in the Choctaw district, praying for an equitable division of the school funds belonging to said nation; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be writted to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WRIGHT, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1065) for the relief of William T. Duvall, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1064) for the relief of L. H. and G. C. Schneider, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. WRIGHT. I will state in this connection that those two cases arise out of the same transaction, and there is but, one report accom-arise out of the same transaction, and there is but one report accompanying both bills.

Mr. BOGY, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 534) for the relief of Rosetta Hert, (late Rosetta Scoville,) Charles C. Benoist, Emily Benoist, and Logan Fanfan, half-breed Indians, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. BOOTH, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4261) to provide for the sale of desert lands.

ferred the bill (H. R. No. 4261) to provide for the sale of desert lands in certain States and Territories, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. CRAGIN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1010) for the relief of Julius S. Bohrer, master in the United States Navy, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. WEST. The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4187) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes, have instructed me to report it with sundry amendments. sundry amendments.

I am also directed to report without recommendation an amendment submitted by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, relating to the carriage of the mails between San Francisco and China.

Mr. SARGENT. To that amendment that is reported without recommendation I wish to offer an amendment for the purpose of having it printed.

The amendment was ordered to be printed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MORRILL asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1235) to authorize the taking of certain parcels of land for the Congressional Library, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

AMENDMENT TO AN APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. DORSEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 4559) making appropriations to supply defi-ciencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WRIGHT. I desire to ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 429) for the relief of Charles C. Campbell, of Washington County, Virginia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to that motion?
Mr. INGALLS. Is that the salt-works bill?
Mr. WRIGHT. There are no salt-works about it.
Mr. INGALLS. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas objects, and the motion cannot be entertained.

Mr. WRIGHT. Do I understand that one objection will carry the bill over ?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One objection prevents a motion being entertained to go to the Calendar during the morning hour.

Mr. WRIGHT. Then I shall object to every motion of the kind.

Mr. WINDOM. I move to proceed to the consideration of the re-

Mr. WINDOM. I move to proceed to the consideration of the report of the Committee on Appropriations on House bill No. 4540, which is on the Vice-President's table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota moves to take from the table the bill indicated by him.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. President, I trust that I can have the attention of the Senator from Kansas while I say a word with reference to this bill. I am very sure this bill ought not to take five minutes.

Mr. WINDOM. I believe I have the floor; but if the Senator from Iowa can negotiate with the Senator from Kansas for his bill, I have no objection.

no objection.

Mr. WRIGHT I wish to make a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears

Mr. WRIGHT. This bill was passed by the House at the last ses-on. It was reported from the Committee on Claims of the Senate at the last session. It was recommitted, and has been reported again at this session, having the unanimous report of the committee of the House and of the committee of the Senate. The bill is not for a very House and of the committee of the Senate. The bill is not for a very large amount. It is in favor of a man who made sacrifices during the war, and who has shown his loyalty beyond all question. It is for property which was taken from him and used by our Army. He is poor, almost to destitution. His family are sick and in want, by reason of being deprived of the very means that are proposed to be given to him by this bill. It is a matter of the utmost difficulty to have bills considered from the Committee on Claims. We make reports here from our committee, and about two out of ten are reported favorably. We are abused by claimants who are unsuccessful; and it is next to impossible to get the attention of the Senate.when we bring a bill before the Senate.

I insist that my friend from Kansas shall allow this bill to be taken up. As I have already said, there are no salt-works in it; there is no proposition to pay for a thing in connection with the salt-works, but simply to pay for the property that was taken by our officers, which they certify that they took and used. I say again that I trust there will be no objection to taking up this bill. I have tried three or four times to get the bill up; it is a fair bill for the relief of an honest, when here a truncaling in want by reason of being de-times to get the bill up; it is a fair bill for the relief of an honest, poor man, who has been struggling in want by reason of being deprived of this very money.

Mr. SARGENT. I suppose we will go to the Calendar before a great while and take up matters in their order. It is very important in the condition of the business of the country that the appropriation bills should be considered. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is upon his feet, desiring to get the audience of the Senate to one of those bills which are pressing, and as soon as the morning hour expires we want to get on with the regular Indian appropriation bill. I warn the Senate that unless we take this course these important hills will iam at the last of the session and perhaps all the important bills will jam at the last of the session and perhaps all the appropriation bills cannot be attended to, and if not passed it will create the necessity and the expense of an extra session of Congress. We know this is an exceptional year; that there are certain matters occupying the attention of the Senate by turn which are liable to take occupying the attention of the Senate by turn which are liable to take up a great deal of time, exciting in their nature, which distract the attention of the two Houses for ordinary public business. Now when there is a lull in that excitement it seems to me it would be very well for us to pursue diligently the necessary business of the Senate. I therefore trust that any appeal made while there is a pending appropriation bill for the taking up of relief bills will not be heeded.

Mr. WRIGHT. I want to say one word more. This is the first appeal I have made for a bill of this kind for almost a month. I have not objected to a single bill proposed to be brought up when in the not objected to a single bill proposed to be brought up when in the morning hour. This bill comes from a committee that seems to be almost outlawed here, and it seems utterly impossible to get their bills considered. I think this bill would have been passed long before this if the Senator from Kansas had not interposed, for I do not think there can be any objection to it. But of course I cannot insist that it shall be considered under the rule, that objection not being withdrawn

Mr. SARGENT. I only make objection because the Committee on Appropriations desire to proceed now with their business. intervals, and long intervals, when such bills as those of my friend can come before the Senate. Probably when we pass the pending appropriation bill we shall not want the attention of the Senate again for a day or two, and private bills can then be considered.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa withdraw his motion ?

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from California objects to it.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made to the motion of the gentleman from Iowa, it cannot be entertained.

JAMES B. EADS.

Mr. WINDOM. I move to proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 4540, known as the Eads bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I ask the Senator from Minnesota to allow me to take up a bill that will not occupy five minutes.

Mr. WINDOM. I would be glad to accommodate the Senator from Virginia, but really I cannot do it in this case. This bill ought to be acted upon one way or the other. I have no doubt it will take but a very few minutes, and the Senator will have time after this bill is acted on and before the conclusion of the morning hour to get up his bill. bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California has objected to going to the Calendar. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Minnesota.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4540) to provide for the payment of James B. Eads for the construction of jettles and other auxiliary works to make a wide and deep channel between the South Pass of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico, under contract with the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to indefinitely postpone the bill, moved by instructions from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. DAVIS. I am disposed to favor the indefinite postponement of this bill, but I wish to inquire of the Chair what effect a vote indefi-this bill, but I wish to inquire of the Chair what effect a vote indefinitely postponing the bill would have upon the report accompanying the bill? I cannot agree with all contained in the report accompanying the bill from the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An indefinite postponement of the bill, if carried in the affirmative, disposes of the bill.

Mr. DAVIS. The Chair probably did not understand my inquiry. There is a report with the bill from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted at the time that the bill was reported from that committee. I ask what effect an indefinite postponement of the bill. mittee. I ask what effect an indefinite postponement of the bill would have upon that report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It disposes of the consideration of the report with the bill. The report is connected with the bill.

Mr. DAVIS. Then affirmative action on this motion would be an

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report goes with the bill.

Mr. DAVIS. That was my understanding, and I presume the chairman understands that the indefinite postponement of the bill would also indefinitely postpone the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report concludes with a recommendation of the indefinite postponement of the bill, and therefore to indefinitely postpone the bill would be a ratification or indersement of the report.

Mr. WALLACE. That is what I was about to ask, whether we do not affirm the conclusions of the committee and affirm the report by indefinitely postponing the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore.

That is the nature of the report. Mr. DAVIS. I expect to give my vote to indefinitely postpone the bill, but not for the reasons assigned in the report in full. The report purports to construe the law, and says, among other things:

The committee is clearly of the opinion that Mr. Eads is entitled, under the law, to receive at once the bonds therein described, at par, in payment of the said requisition of the Secretary of War in his favor, Congress having failed to "previously provide for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money."

I cannot fully indorse the committee on that point. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General have each passed upon this question, and, as I understand, clearly the Secretary of the Treas-ury thinks that money and not bonds is due Mr. Eads. That I am not prepared to speak of, nor do I desire to speak of it. My opinion is that it was originally intended that Captain Eads should have the bonds provided the money was not furnished for the payment of the debt. It is a debt. I think Eads deserves great credit. I think he deserves the sympathy of the nation and of us all for his manly effort and its final accomplishment; but to say that the Government must issue bonds because it could not pay or did not pay on the very day that the demand was made, I am not prepared to vote for.

I believe that the law as it now stands ought to be construed by the Attorney-General. I am sure from what has already taken place on the part of the Secretary of the Treasury that he will refer the maton the part of the Secretary of the Treasury that he will refer the matter to the Attorney-General; and if the law requires bonds, Captain Eads will get them; if it requires money, which I am inclined to believe it does, or if the Government has a right to pay money, then I think the Attorney-General will so decide. Therefore I am willing that this question shall go to the Department in order that it may be determined by the Attorney-General, and that not only for the present case but in the future. But in doing so I do not wish to be understood to indorse what I have read as well as some other sections of the report, although a majority of the Committee on Appropriations thought differently from myself.

thought differently from myself.

Mr. President, there is another question involved in this case. There is some doubt (I do not know how much; there certainly was doubt in the mind of the Secretary of War and with the Secretary of the Treasury, for the latter referred the question to the Attorney-General) whether or not the conditions have been fully complied with. I do not express the doubt, for I know nothing on that subject; but if you will read the report you will find that the Secretary of War had some doubt, and that the Secretary of the Treasury joined in it, and that the matter was finally referred to the Attorney-General, and he expressed the opinion, that provided certain things had been done Captain Eads was entitled to his pay, but not one word was said as to whether it should be paid in bonds or money. I feel now as if that question ought to go to the Attorney-General, and I believe by the indefinite postponement of the bill it will go there.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations when in his judgment this sum of $500,000 actually be-

Appropriations when in his judgment this sum of $500,000 actually be-Came due to Captain Eads?

Mr. WINDOM. On the 19th day of January. It was due to him before that time but he was entitled to receive it from the Treasury on that day, the day that the Secretary of War drew his warrant.

Mr. MORRILL. Has a warrant been drawn?

Mr. MORRILL. Has a warrant been drawn I
Mr. WINDOM. A warrant was drawn on the 19th of January.
Mr. MORRILL. A requisition?
Mr. WINDOM. It was a requisition. It is called a warrant, how-

Mr. MORRILL. A requisition. It is called a warrant, however, although that may not be the exact term.

Mr. MORRILL. From the whole tenor of this act it is perfectly obvious that it was the intention of Congress to reserve the option to the United States to pay this sum in either money or bonds. It was not known perhaps at that time whether the revenues of the country would be sufficient to pay all the expenditures, and therefore the option was reserved. It does seem to me clearly that if we should pay this man in money, we certainly comply with the contract. I cannot regard it in any other light, and therefore I hope, with the Senator from West Virginia, that this matter will be determined by some tribunal of justice or by the courts, and that we here shall make the appropriation as it comes to us from the House.

Mr. WINDOM. I do not want to detain the Senate, for I am very anxious to have a vote one way or the other on this question this morning; but I do want to refer to the legal argument of my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALLACE] yesterday. It appears to me that the construction which he gives to this statute if given to a contract between individuals would work remarkably well in favor of the debtor. He says that the bonds are to be issued in payment of this debt unless the money is provided before the bonds are issued. I say that the money must be provided before the warrant is drawn. The Senator from Pennsylvania says it must be provided by the law before Senator from Pennsylvania says it must be provided by the law before the warrants are issued. According to his construction there is no time whatever fixed for the issue of the bonds. He says that unless the money is paid before the bonds are issued, which have no time fixed, the bonds must be issued.

Mr. WALLACE. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. WINDOM. Let me go on with my illustration and the Senator can then answer it. Suppose the Senator has agreed upon the performance of certain conditions on my part that he will give me his note, provided he does not pay me before that day. He does not pay me. I perform the condition. I go to him and demand his note. He says I am not entitled to the note if he has provided the money before he gives the note, and there is no time in which he is to give his note; and it occurs to me he will indefinitely postpone my payment. I think that is the construction he gives to this law.

Mr. WALLACE. The Senator errs. He certainly does not understand what I said. I said the whole subject was left to the Secretary of the Treasury as I read the statute, and that unless we appropriate the money which would be paid on a draft from the Treasurer of the United States indorsed by the Secretary of the Treasury of course we have not the option; but if the Secretary of the Treasury of course we have not the option; but if the Secretary of the Treasury does not issue the bonds until we make an appropriation. In other words, if we novelde here an appropriation of the money then we have the right to make the appropriation. In other words, if we novelde here an appropriation of the money then we have the right to make the appropriation. In other words, if we novelde here an appropriation of the money then we have the right to make the appropriation. In other words, if we novelde here an appropriation of the money then we have the right to make the appropriation. then we have the right to make the appropriation. In other words, if we provide here an appropriation of the money before the bonds are issued, that is our right; and I argue that because the contract expressly says that the warrants are to be issued at the time the Secretary of War, through the engineer, determines that the depth of water has been ascertained. Therefore it is clear that the money could not be appropriated before the issuing of the warrants. was the argument I intended to make.

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator is entirely mistaken in the last proposition. The Government had made a contract with a private citizen to perform a certain work. There were certain conditions connected with the performance of that contract. We have reason to suppose that those conditions have been complied with, and it was the duty of Congress at the last session to make a contingent appropriation for this purpose. I want to say here that I think it would have been done but for the desire to keep the appropriations down to a nominal and a very low amount. Hence the appropriation was postponed and this gentleman has to pay the penalty for it. With reference to my other criticism upon the Senator from Pennsylva-

Mr. SHERMAN. I was about to ask whether the Senator moved the appropriation at the last session.

Mr. WINDOM. I did not, because I was well aware that it would not carry if I did. The Senator from Pennsylvania, in commenting yesterday upon the terms of this contract in the law, says:

Previous to what? The Senator from Minnesota says, previously to the issuing of the warrant. I say previously to the issuing of the bonds, and that is what the ecretary of the Treasury says.

Now the word "previously" here construed by him is the language found in the statute, which provides

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the binds * * * unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

It does seem to me that the construction that I have given to the

It does seem to me that the construction that I have given to the honorable Senator's argument is a very fair one. If the word "previously" refers to the issuance of the bonds, then the law is a nullity, for there is no time fixed for the issuing of these bonds unless it be the time previously to the issuing of these bonds unless it be the time previously to the issuing of the bonds; but upon his construction the whole thing is afloat. The bonds may not be issued for a year or five years; the money may not be appropriated, and if the money be not appropriated before the bonds are issued we may appropriate it whenever we please.

The private citizen who undertook this great work did not make the contract with separate Departments of the Government to play fast and loose with each other and in that way; but he made it with the Government as an entirety, as a unit. We did not mean to say that the Secretary of the Treasury might withhold the bonds, nor did we, until Congress had made the appropriation, or, in other words, that the one might depend upon the act of the other and each might postpone the other indefinitely, as the construction of the Senator from Pennsylvania would, in my judgment; but the understanding and intent of the contract, as I said yesterday, was, and I think it is plainly expressed in the words, that when this work was performed the contractor should have the terms of the contract. I never was clearer in regard to any construction in my life.

Mr. MORRILL. Let me call the attention of the Senator from Minnesota to the first paragraph in section 14 of the law, which reads as follows:

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved.

That is a separate and distinct paragraph. Now where this option is distinctly reserved to the United States it seems passing strange to me that you can make a contract which money will not pay.

to me that you can make a contract which money will not pay.

Mr. WINDOM. I want to answer that proposition of the Senator from Vermont, for he states it very distinctly and clearly. He reads the first part of the proposition so far as it is applicable to his own interest; but when the law has provided an explanation as to how that option is to be exercised, he ceases reading just at that point.
The law says that the Government has the option. Let me read the part again which the Senator has just quoted:

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved.

That is true and if you stop there that option is indefinite, but it is not an option suggested by my honorable friend from Michigan [Mr. Christiancy] that the Government may refuse to do either; but the following words in that section explain precisely how that option is to be exercised and when it cease

Mr. MORRILL. Let me say to the honorable Senator that the option continues all the time in the United States, and does not change for the benefit of the payee in any particular. It only provides a means by which the Secretary of the Treasury shall be able to pay if he has not the money.

Mr. WINDOM. I wish to ask the Senator a question. Following these words which I have quoted, the law says:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States—

I omit the words that describe them-to said Eads or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid war-rants of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the sum by the necessary appropriations of

The words of the statute are that the Secretary is directed to issue these bonds unless a certain condition is complied with. That condition is that the money must be appropriated before the warrant is issued. What does the Senator understand by the words "unless the money is appropriated?"

Mr. MORRILL. I understand the Senator from Minnesota to take the last part of this section and to throw away entirely the first part which gives the option to the United States.

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator from Vermont is very well

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator from vermont is very wen aware of the construction which the courts always give to a statute, that the whole of it is to be construed together.

Mr. MORRILL. That is my idea.

Mr. WINDOM. I construed the law of the section as one. In the first place there is an express declaration that the Government reserves the option but reserves it upon a certain condition explained in the section. That condition is that the Government shall do a certain the section. tain thing by a certain time. The Government did not do that thing by that time and this option ceases because it was only by compliance with that condition that its option could continue.

Mr. BOOTH. I only wish to make one suggestion, and that is that the words of the section read by the honorable Senator are no part of the contract between this Government and Mr. Eads. It is simply a direction to a ministerial officer to pay a debt in a particular way in the event the Government does not have the money to pay the debt, and it is no part of the consideration of this contract whatever, and no part of the terms of the contract between the Government and Mr. Eads

Mr. WINDOM. That is the first time in my life I have ever heard that the payment for a contract was no part of it. The contractor understands that the pay is a very material part of his contract when he expends two or three millions of dollars to do a job of work before he realizes anything for it.

he realizes anything for it.

Mr. BOOTH. I presume I am very unfortunate in failing to make myself understood. I did not mean to say anything so absurd.

Mr. WINDOM. I thought the Senator could not mean that, and hence I thought he must have misread the statute.

Mr. BOOTH. I have read the statute, and more than that I have heard the Senator read it. What I endeavored to say is that that part of the statute which refers to the payment in bonds was simply a direction to the Secretary to pay with bonds, if we did not pay the money; that it was simply a ministerial direction, but that it was no part of the contract between this Government and Mr. Eads that it should be paid in bonds.

Mr. WINDOM. Does the Senator hold that Mr. Eads had no interest in the manner and time of the payment of the contract?

Mr. BOOTH. Certainly he had.
Mr. WINDOM. This is the manner given in the statutes, which provides for the manner and time of payment.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, as a member of the committee I had this matter under investigation, and I am very clear in my construction of what the statute is. Although it may be presumption in me to undertake to give a legal construction of the statute, as I do not belong to the profession of the law, yet, still, when lawyers differ so widely as to what is the construction of a statute, perhaps a view coming from a non-professional man might have some influence. I look then at the statute as it stands and consider it in connection with the contemporaneous and incidental history of this whole matter. I find here that the preservation of the navigation of the Mississippi was a problem which taxed the inventive genius of the engineers of was a problem which taxed the inventive gentles of the engineers of this land for years; and they had never been able to solve the problem of how that should be effected; that pending the consideration of various projects which were proposed for the effectuation of that object, a gentleman comes forward and suggests a scheme by which this may be secured; he furnishes to the Congress of the United States his plans and specifications and his reason for the faith which is in him; and although he encountered the opposition of a very large majority of all the skilled engineers in the land, yet still his project had in it such elements as commend it to the favorable consideration of the Congress. He came forward and said he was willing to undertake this job on his own responsibility and at his own cost, provided Congress would assure him the payment of a certain amount of money when the work was consummated. Congress undertook to meet him upon that ground and framed a bill which the contemporaneous hisapon that ground and framed a bill which the contemporaneous history of the whole case shows conclusively was designed to place his pay beyond all contingencies of congressional appropriations, and to make it absolutely and positively sure that, when twenty feet of water had been attained of the requisite width for a channel, the Secretary of War should be thereby at once directed to issue his warrant upon the Treasury for the payment of the amount. That constitutes one step in the process, which is to be considered alone.

The first consideration therefore is whether that has been done. The whole report shows that this has been done, that the work has

The whole report shows that this has been done; that the work has been a success; that the man who undertook so much risk, the man who relied upon his own genius and skill to carry a certain object, has triumphed; and he comes now before Congress and asks that they shall pay him the money which under this act they have obligated themselves to pay.

If it were a mere question of money, if it were not complicated by the issue of bonds, there would be no difficulty whatever about it; but when we come to look at the provisions of the act itself it is stated that the option of discharging this obligation herein assumed is reserved to the United States. That is clear and plain, and, as the Senator from Minnesota states, if the act stopped there, there would be no question about it. That this option exists on the part of the Government is true, but it exists only up to a certain period of time. It is not an indefinite option, that must extend through any uncertain period of time; but it is an option which is fixed by the terms of the act itself. That option expires when the work is done and the Secretary of War issues his warrant upon the Treasury. option ends; and, if at that particular period of time the money has not been provided by definite appropriation to meet this obligation, then the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to issue the bonds of the United States under certain conditions. The whole difficulty turns upon the use of the word "previously" in the act:

Unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

Now to take the construction of the word "previously," as announced by my friend from Pennsylvania particularly; that that word refers to the issue of the bonds alone, it seems to me, would place us in this category: That the Congress of the United States, in endeavoring to secure this man Eads the payment of his money beyond all controversy when he shall have completed his contract according to his agreement, absolutely placed it in the power of an official of this Government to postpone indefinitely his payment either in money or bonds; because, if the bonds cannot be issued until the appropriation is made it seems to me that until Congress chooses to make this anis made, it seems to me that until Congress chooses to make this appropriation this man may be kept out of both money and bonds for an indefinite length of time. It, in other words, would reduce his claim to that of any other claimant of a sum of money due by the claim to that of any other claimant of a sum of money due by the United States Government; and our experiences here show how these claims—I do not care how well founded they may be, I do not care how clear the evidence may be upon which they are sustained and supported—are postponed from session to session and from year to year. Many claims are now pending before us on which the Government itself admits the money is due the applicant, and yet the claimants cannot realize their money. Therefore, I say it cannot be possible that the Congress of the United States and Mr. Eads, the other contracting party, would have entered into an arrangement which contracting party, would have entered into an arrangement which left his pay contingent upon such a great uncertainty as this.

It is argued that the word "previously" must refer to the issue of the bonds, and not to the issuing of the warrant of the Secretary of the Treasury, because it would otherwise require us to do what they the Treasury, because it would otherwise require us to do what they assume to be an unheard-of thing to make an appropriation in advance of the time when it was required or when it is due. That is done in appropriation bills. It is perfectly competent for this Congress, and it is constantly in the habit of making appropriations which are to be utilized at a future period, and it would have been perfectly competent for Congress at the last session or at the beginning of this session to have passed an appropriation for this specific purpose in view of the probable completion of this contract by Eads under the terms of this act. Therefore, it seems to me that the word "previously" must, in view of the antecedent and contemporaneous history of this matter, be construed to refer to the completion of the work and the issuance by the Secretary of War of the warrants upon the Treasury.

I do not propose to argue upon the other branch of the proposition which has attracted some attention, that is, as to the premium that is due upon the bonds, and that by receiving bonds this man Eads would receive a larger amount than the terms and letter of his contract with the Government provides, because it does not in my view of the question enter as an element into a proper consideration of this matter at all. The question is whether Eads is entitled to the bonds now by the terms of the act to be issued because the Government has failed to provide by an appropriation the money necessary to meet this payment. If he is thus entitled under his agreement with the Government, it is not the question for us to argue here as to whether the bonds will realize a premium or not. I presume if the bonds were at a depreciation instead of a premium, there would not be so much trouble about paying him in bonds.

Mr. SARGENT. There would not be so much desire on his part to get them.

Mr. WITHERS. I think likewise; I agree fully with the Senator on that point; but I do not think the question at issue is affected at all whether the bonds are at a premium or at a discount, except that it places the Congress of the United States in what I consider to be the humiliating position of endeavoring to dicker with this man whose genius has overcome the greatest difficulty that has ever been encountered in modern engineering; and, instead of raising a monu-ment to his genius as a public benefactor, we are trying to screw him down and deprive him of the compensation to which, under the contract, he is justly entitled.

tract, he is justly entitled.

Mr. MORTON. Mr. President, to me this matter seems to be a mere matter of law and contract; and if by the terms of the contract Captain Eads is entitled to the bonds, it seems to me that no consideration should prevent Congress or the Secretary of the Treasury from giving them to him. The first important and controlling provision of the law is contained in section 13, and that is, that Captain Eads is entitled to the pay just as soon as the money is due. As soon as it is determined that an installment is due, then the Secretary of War is required immediately to draw the warrants. The tis the first prois required immediately to draw the warrants. That is the first provision, that he is entitled to be paid an installment just as soon as it is ascertained that an installment is due. Then comes the next sec-

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States, either in money or bonds, is expressly reserved.

I understand that to mean that when it is ascertained that an in-I understand that to mean that when it is ascertained that an installment is due, as he is entitled to immediate payment, the Secretary of the Treasury has the option, if an appropriation has been made, to pay him in money or to pay him in bonds. The option depends entirely upon the fact, if on the very day when he is entitled to the installment there is an appropriation of money; and if there be an appropriation of money, but the Government has not got the money to spare, and cannot pay it conveniently; or if it should turn out that the bonds are worth less than their face, less than the money, the Government then has the option on that day to pay him in bonds or money.

Mr. MORRILL. May I ask the Senator from Indiana, what he thinks the instruction to the Secretary of the Treasury would be, provided that this bill should be indefinitely postponed? The House has already voted that he is entitled to the money. The Senate will have voted, if they vote to indefinitely postpone the bill, that he shall have the bonds. What will the Secretary of the Treasury consider it to be his duty to do under the circumstances, the House having interested him are way and the Senate theother.

structed him one way and the Senate theother.

Mr. WEST. There are no instructions at all, if there is no legisla-

Mr. MORTON. There would in that case be no instruction at all; and the Secretary would be left to the performance of his duty as prescribed by the law. The first point, and I shall repeat it again, is that he is entitled to be paid the day the installment is found to be due. If on that day there is an appropriation made by Congress the Secretary of the Treasury has the option to pay him in money or bonds, whichever is for the interest or the convenience of the Government. But now comes the remaining part of the section:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States, bearing 5 per cent. Interest, of the character and description set out in the act entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the public debt," approved July 14, 1870, to said Eads or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid warrants of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

It amounts to this: if Congress had previously provided an appro-It amounts to this: if Congress had previously provided an appropriation of money, then the Secretary of the Treasury would have the option to pay in money or bonds; but if Congress had not previously provided for the appropriation, then the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to issue the bonds, and he has got no option in the matter. It seems to me there can be nothing plainer than, first, that the law provides that on the very day that the Secretary of War decides that the installment is due, Captain Eads is entitled to payment; and if on that day there be an appropriation made by Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury may pay in money or bonds, whichever is for the interest of the Government; but if on that day there is no appropriation to pay in money, then he is required to be paid in bonds, because Captain Eads is entitled to receive payment in money or in bonds on the very day that the installment is decided by the Secretary of War to be due.

Mr. WRIGHT. Do I understand the Senator to hold that if there has been previously an appropriation made for this work, then it is at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury to pay in bonds or money 9

Mr. DAWES. At any time previous to the issue of the bonds.
Mr. WRIGHT. That it is at the option of the Secretary if the appropriation has been made?

Mr. WEST. O, no.
Mr. MORTON. It seems to read that way:
That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved.

States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved.

But then follows the absolute direction, the positive command, that if at that time there is no appropriation, the Secretary shall issue the bonds. Now, if on that day there was an appropriation, then the Secretary of the Treasury might pay in money or bonds, whichever he thought proper. One thing is certain, that he is entitled to payment one way or the other at once; and if there is no money appropriated to pay the debt, then it must be paid in bonds. Now, if the bonds were under par, if they were not worth the money, he might be compelled to take them and suffer the loss; but if it so happens that they are worth more than their face, and the Government is not prepared to give the money on that day, then he is entitled to that advantage. It seems to me it is a mere matter of law and of honest contract. He takes the chances; and if the chance falls in his favor He takes the chances; and if the chance falls in his favor contract. He takes the chances; and if the chance falls in his favor he is entitled to it. If it is against him he is bound to suffer a loss.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning hour has expired.

Mr. WINDOM. I hope the Senator from Iowa will yield for a few moments. I think we can dispose of this bill within that time and let the Indian appropriation bill go over informally. This is an appropriation bill also and must be acted upon one way or the other.

Mr. BOGY. This will take but a few moments more, and we may as well dispose of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the duty of the Chair to call up the unfinished business, and the Chair will then entertain a motion to postpone it.

to postpone it.

The Chair will state that House bill No. 4452 was the pending busi-

The Chair will state that House bill No. 4452 was the pending business when the Senate took a recess yesterday, with the understanding that the railroad bill should not lose its place.

Mr. WEST. The railroad bill was informally laid aside.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was informally laid aside. Unless some Senator calls for the regular order, the primary order, the Chair will consider the Indian appropriation bill the unfinished business.

Mr. BOGY. I move that the pending order be postponed in order to proceed with the consideration of the Eads bill.

Mr. ALLISON I hope the Senator will not make the motion in that way. I have no objection to this discussion going on for a few minutes if the vote can be reached.

Mr. WINDOM. Let it go on for a few moments, subject to a call for the recorder.

for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SARGENT. Subject to a call for the Indian appropriation bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair understands. The Chair hears no objection, and the Indian appropriation bill will be Chair hears no objection, and the Indian appropriation bill will be informally passed over.

Mr. BOGY. It will only take a few moments to dispose of this bill. As I said before, this is the construction of a specific contract, specific in its terms. By the act of March 3, 1875, a contract was entered into by Captain Eads, by which he undertook, for payments to be made at stipulated periods of time, to do a certain work. That work has been done at his own risk, at his own expense, and an expense far exceeding the amount of money which is due him now. The payment of the first installment has been due him for months. As early as November a commission appointed by the Government of the most smivember a commission appointed by the Government, of the most eminent engineers in the country, went to the mouth of the Mississippi to examine this work and ascertain if it was done in a substantial, scientific manner, and they approved it. The Government sent to the mouth of the Mississippi three of the most eminent engineers of this country to examine this work and report upon it. The examination took place, and a report was made that the work had been done in a scientific manner. in accordance with the contract; that the depth and width required to entitle Captain Eads to his first payment had been obtained, and that the character of the work was perfectly in accordance with the contract. He then clearly is entitled to this first payment of $500,000.

What are the terms of the contract with regard to this bill? The Senator from California [Mr. BOOTH] said awhile ago that this portion of the law was not a part of the contract, but was merely directory to the Secretary of the Treasury. The whole law in relation to this enterprise is the contract; there is no other contract. All the terms and the conditions in that section of the law authorizing this work and the conditions in that section of the law authorizing this work and the payment for it form the contract, and nothing else; and this is as much a part of the contract as any portion of the law. By that contract he was entitled to receive $500,000 when a given depth and width of water were obtained. That depth has been obtained; the width has been obtained; the work is done; but the Government for a double purpose no doubt did retain the option to pay in bonds or to pay in money. The object of this option is very plain: It is, first, for the protection of the Government, if the Govphain: It is, first, for the protection of the Government, if the Government desires to avail itself of the option, and, secondly, it was a necessity for Captain Eads; because, if a portion of this work is done, and either the first or the second or the third payment becomes due, and Congress is not in session, and no provision were made for the payment, how is he to go on with the work? Therefore the option was retained by the Government to pay him bonds in the event that one of these installments should fall due during a recess of Congress. As an illustration, in all likelihood one of these payments will be due next July, when he will have obtained an additional depth of water in accordance with his contract. Suppose no previous appropriation has been made and he makes his application to the Secretary of the Treasury for his bonds, being clearly entitled to payment, nobody denying the fact that he is entitled to a second installment, and in denying the fact that he is entitled to a second installment, and in the month of July, Congress not being in session, how is he to obtain his payment? If it be not in the power of the Secretary of the Treas-ury to pay him he must wait until Congress again convenes and can pass upon this question. He must wait for an appropriation. The option of Government is to pay him in bonds or in money. While that is true and nobody denies that it is an option to be exercised by the Government whenever it pleases, yet it must exercise that option. At some period it must make an appropriation of the money. tion. At some period it must make an appropriation of the money. A payment being due in July, if there is no appropriation of money, clearly Captain Eads would be entitled to his payment; and it would not be competent for the Secretary of the Treasury to tell him, "I will postpone paying you until the next meeting of Congress, to see if Congress will not make an appropriation." If it be competent for the Secretary of the Treasury to postpone payment for one day he can postpone for months, until the meeting of Congress.

To me it is the clearest thing in the world that according to the terms of this contract he is entitled to payment either in bonds or in money, and it is competent for the Government to nay him in either.

terms of this contract he is entitled to payment either in bonds or in money, and it is competent for the Government to pay him in either, if the Government had taken the proper steps in accordance with the terms to pay him in either; that is, if an appropriation had been made by Congress. The appropriation not having been made by Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury has no right to withhold from him the payment for one day, because he is entitled to the bonds. It was a necessity. Why a necessity? This man is doing a gigantic work, for which he has expended more than a million dollars. It would be an impossibility for him to carry on this work unless he could now and then received and the carry on this work unless he could now and then received. lars. It would be an impossibility for him to carry on this work un-less he could now and then receive partial payments from the Government.

It was said by the Senator from California [Mr. SARGENT] awhile ago that Captain Eads would not be very solicitous to obtain these bonds if they were not worth a premium. That is very true, and it is very reasonable that it should be true. The bonds being worth a premium of course it makes him more solicitous to get these bonds, and there is nothing wrong about that. If he is entitled to the bonds, and there is nothing wrong about that. If he is entitled to the bonds, the bonds being worth a premium, as a matter of course he is more anxious to obtain the bonds than if they were not at par; but that does not change the contract. On the other hand, if the bonds were not worth par, the option having been retained by the Government to pay this debt either in money or bonds, the Government, by not making an appropriation, could force him to take the bonds. He has no option in this thing. The option was retained by the Government. He himself had no option. He was required to do a certain work at his own expense, at his own great risk, not at the risk of the failure of his scientific projet, but on account of a failure of the elements. He incurred great risks and expended large sums of money; yet he had no option; he was to take bonds or money at the option of the Government, provided an appropriation was made prior to his application for the bonds. On the 19th of January, when he applied for the bonds, this work having been completed in accordance with the contract, which is not denied but admitted all around, he was under the terms of this law entitled to payment, and there being no appropriation to pay him in money he was entitled to payment in bonds. If it was compactant for the Searchean entitled to payment in bonds. propriation to pay him in money he was entitled to payment in bonds. If it was competent for the Secretary to postpone paying him at that time, next July when the second installment will be due it will again be competent for the Secretary of the Treasury to tell him, "You must wait until the next session of Congress, to ascertain if it be not the will of Congress to make an appropriation to pay you." The fact that Congress is in session only made it more convenient for the Secretary of the Treasury to submit this question to Congress, but it does not change the legal aspect of the case at all. The debt but it does not change the legal aspect of the case at all. The debt is due. He has a right to have bonds, and the fact that the bonds are worth a premium is no doubt the reason why he is more solicitous; but if the Government had been vigilant and if the appropriation had been made this loss to the Government would not have taken

I will do the justice to the Secretary of the Treasury to say that he requested in his annual report that this appropriation should be made. It is our own fault that the appropriation has not been made. We have been negligent in the discharge of our duty. I say "we;" I intend to include both branches of Congress. We have not been faithful, because the subject was brought to the mind of Congress in the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury and we were asked to make this appropriation in order to enable the contract to be carried out by the payment of the money. This was not done, and, as I said at the beginning of my argument, it is a plain construction of a very plain contract. He is entitled to payment in money or in bonds, and the money can only be paid when an appropriation has previously been made. No appropriation having been previously made, when the work is done and the warrant is presented, he is clearly entitled to the bonds, no matter whether they be worth a premium or not. If they are worth a premium, it is a good reason why he should be more solicitous for the bonds, and that ought to be a good reason why Congress should have made this previous appropriation, which it did not do. Mr. KERNAN. Will the Senator from Missouri allow me to put a question to him?

Mr. BOGY. Yes, sir. Mr. KERNAN. It seems to me we ought to pass this House bill. Mr. KERNAN. It seems to me we ought to pass this House bill. It appears by the report that this gentleman, Mr. Eads, came to the Secretary of War on the 19th of January and requested a warrant on the Treasury for $500,000 in money. The report says that on the 20th of January he demanded payment. How do we know officially anything about it further than that? The requisition is out to pay him half a million of money. I think it is the duty of Congress to appropriate the money, and then if he does not choose to take it, or if he has some other right, let that come up in a proper form in the Senate. If we refuse to pass the House bill, it is equivalent to saying that if he chooses to have the money we will make him wait and take bonds. I think we shall do our duty if we pass the House bill. He seems to have had no right to money until about the 19th of January. The House must have very promptly acted upon the matter by appropriating the money for the bill came here on the 30th of January. Without passing upon the question whether the Government will or will not pay the money, or whether he can or cannot get bonds, I think we should do our duty as the requisition is out, by passing the House bill appropriating the money to pay the requisition, and if he does not choose to take it, if he thinks he has some other legal right, let that question come here; but the question now is, shall we refuse to not choose to take it, if he thinks he has some other legal right, let that question come here; but the question now is, shall we refuse to appropriate the money which his requisition calls for?

Mr. BOGY. My friend from New York said he would ask me a question, and it is very evident that my friend is a lawyer and that he is in favor of encouraging litigation, because his argument is this: if we make this appropriation and Captain Eads refuses to take the money, then he can resort to some other means of obtaining the money in bonds. That means a long lawsuit. It is the argument of a lawyer and I have no doubt of a very good lawyer; but that kind of an argument will not enable this gentleman to carry on this gigantic enterprise at the mouth of the Mississippi River, involving an expenditure of millions of dollars. It is not in the power of any one man to carry on a large Government work at his own private expense and individual risk unless he can now and then get payment from the Government. If you drive him to litigation for his payment, I presume my friend would encourage a second, and a third, and so on, and in the mean time the mouth of the Mississippi River would not be opened. We of the West think that our trade and our commerce with the country and the world turn upon the opening of the mouth of the Mississippi. The litigation suggested by the Senator from New York would not do us any good at all. We want that river opened that we may carry on our commerce and trade and bring our products to the markets of the world. We want it done speedily; and that cannot be done if this gentleman is crippled in his means to accomplish that work.

Mr. KERNAN. It is no answer to my argument to say that it is only made by a lawyer. My friend is a lawyer as I am, and I think on all these questions other men differ as well as lawyers. He seems to think that there is something else that can be done

Mr. BOGY. I will remark to my friend that I said that we should talk as men and not as lawyers.

talk as men and not as lawyers.

Mr. KERNAN. How does my friend know that this gentleman does not want the money which he called for on the 20th of January with his requisition? Why does he not remedy this matter by offering an amendment that he shall be paid in bonds? He might not want to take them. I think our duty is first to take some action which if he chooses to take money, he cannot six months hence want to take them. I think our duty is first to take some action by which if he chooses to take money, he cannot six months hence come to us and say, "Your officers would not pay me bonds and you would not appropriate the money." I think the act would be fairer to him if we should pass the House bill appropriating the money, unless there is some other proposition than a remote postponement with no arrangement to have him paid bonds. If we appropriate the money we do not say he has not a right to the bonds. We leave that to the officers of the Government, and if he comes here then presenting the case on some papers we can then do what we think is right. ing the case on some papers we can then do what we think is right by directing bonds to be issued; but to have no money appropriated and no requisition paid, and to say we will leave it just as it is, I think is unjust to the man and that it is likely to lead to litigation. Therefore if there is no other proposition I think we should appropriate the money to pay the requisition which he received on the 19th, and if for any reason he prefers not to take the money then, we ought to hear him and pay him in some other way if we choose. I think that hear him and pay him in some other way if we choose. I think that is the honest way of dealing with the question, whether a man is a lawyer or a layman.

Mr. SHERMAN. I need not assure the Senate that I am a friend of the gentleman to whom this money or these bonds are due, and of the project and the scheme which he is engaged in carrying out. Indeed I regard it as one of the most wonderful improvements of our age, and if he succeeds he is well deserving of the money that he will probably gain under this contract. But I am, I confess, a little displeased at the manner in which this bill is presented and in which it is pressed. The money is due to Mr. Eads and was due to him on the 20th day of January last; and not one dollar before that time. The Government of the United States was not indefault to Mr. Eads on the very day that the papers were properly presented to the Secretary of War, and he made a requisition, not dated on the 19th as is said in the report here but on the 20th. I have a telegram before

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator is mistaken about that. The mistake is in the date of his paper instead of in the report.

Mr. SHERMAN. It may be, but I received a telegram from the Secretary of the Treasury stating that the requisition was dated January 20.

January 20. Mr. WEST. Mr. WEST. If the Senator will pardon me, the warrant of the Secretary of War was dated on the 19th, but the requisition of the Secretary of the Treasury was dated on the 20th.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not care sufficiently about the date exactly to raise a dispute, but this requisition was dated January 20.
Mr. WEST. I corroborated what the Senator said, if he understood me, that the warrant was dated on the 19th and the requisition was dated on the 20th. That is what the Senator wanted to say, I take it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I said that the requisition was dated on the 20th.

Mr. SHERMAN. I said that the requisition was dated on the 20th. In the ordinary course of the payment in the Treasury Department sometimes it might require a week perhaps before the money for which that requisition was made could be paid; but the Secretary of the Treasury, observing that no appropriation had been made, at once communicated to Congress. I have here the report of the Secretary of the Treasury and I ask the attention of the Senate to this report from the Secretary of the Treasury dated on the 22d of January.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 22, 1877.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 22, 1877.

SIR: I would respectfully invite the attention of Congress to the terms of section—of the act approved March 3, 1875, (18 Statutes, part 3,) under which the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to issue bonds of the United States, bearing 5 per cent. Interest, to James B. Eads, of Saint Louis, Missouri, or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the "warrants" of the Secretary of War, unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriation of money in favor of said Eads, on account of the construction of jettles, &c., to maintain the channel between the South Pass of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico, and to the fact that I am now in receipt of a requisition from the honorable Secretary of War calling for the payment of $500,000 to said Eads.

Congress having reserved the option of discharging the obligations assumed by the United States in this matter either in money or bonds, I have to recommend that an appropriation of $500,000 be at once made to enable the Government to make payment to Mr. Eads, it not being wise, in my judgment, to increase the interest-bearing debt of the United States for the purpose of paying obligations of the Government at any time when there is money in the Treasury available for such a purpose.

purpose. Very respectfully,

LOT M. MORRILL, Secretary.

Hon. T. W. FERRY, President of the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. We all know the prompt action with which requisitions are usually paid. Application was made here to Congress for an appropriation. It must be remembered that in an official communication upon which this requisition is based, the retary of War notified Congress that probably by the 1st of February payment would be due. The official information laid before Congress by the Executive Department shows that Congress would be expected to make an appropriation by the 1st of February of this present year. The very moment this bill came to the House it was acted upon promptly by the Committee on Appropriations, and reported to the House, and the House would have passed it immediately, and did pass it before the 1st day of February, but then oppositions are the statement of the bill are the statement of the statement sition occurred to the passage of the bill, an interested opposition on the part of the gentleman to whom the money or bonds were due, to prevent its passage. It appears here that upon the motion of Mr. Buck-NER, a member from Missouri, a proposition was made, as follows:

NEE, a member from Missouri, a proposition was made, as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to deliver to said James B. Eads, or his assigns or legal representatives, the sum of $500,000 in bonds of the United States, as provided for by an act entitled "An act making provision for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1875, the Secretary of War having determined that said sum is due to said Eads by the terms of a certain written contract entered into by said Eads with the United States under and by the provisions of said act of March 3, 1875.

Therefore, it would seem that the little delay that has occurred has occurred on the part of the claimant for the bonds, who interposed this claim for the bonds instead of the money. That caused a delay in the passage of the bill until the 30th day of January. If the Senate had taken up and passed this bill on the 30th day of January, the day it came here, no doubt, on the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the money would have been appropriated, and the requisition would have been paid before the probable time fixed by the Secretary when the money would become due ble time fixed by the Secretary when the money would become due, the 1st of February.

Under the circumstances, I think there has been a substantial and Under the circumstances, I think there has been a substantial and honest and faithful effort on the part of the United States to comply with its obligation, and we are not governed by the mere term of three days' grace or by a formal protest. If we have substantially complied with this contract, we have a right to the option reserved in the contract. There is no doubt about that. We are not bound by three days' grace. We are not liable to be protested for non-payment. We are bound to do the thing honestly and squarely, to use the Missouri term, and we are not to be taken up on pin-hooks and technicalities. It is true that by the technical phraseology of this law it was contemplated that Congress would make the appropriation in advance, but did the Committee on Appropriations of either House propose it? On the contrary, the officer whose duty it was to make the requisition tells us that the money would probably be needed on the 1st of February, and the appropriation would have been passed on the 1st of February, and before that time, but for the interposition of parties who wanted the debt paid in bonds.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to ask him a question?

him a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not care to be interrupted, but I will hear a

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I wish to know whether Captain Eads was at all responsible for the neglect of Congress to make the appropriation, or for any error of the Secretary of War or anybody else in the calculation as to when the payments would probably be due?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not know that Mr. Eads was responsible. What I object to is that he tries to take advantage of a temporary delay of a day or two in the passage of this bill. I am told I drew this section, and the Government carefully reserved to itself the right of outline is but it contemplated a previous appropriation.

of option; but it contemplated a previous appropriation.

Mr. WEST. I would ask the Senator—

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish the Senator would not interrupt me. This is a directory provision. It is not in the nature of a penalty. It simply contemplates that Congress shall make an appropriation previously, and if it does not do it, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay this requisition by bonds. Within the life-time of an ordinary requisition, within the time fixed by the Secretary of War in his official report giving Congress notice of the necessity of an appropriation that appropriation is to be made, or if not made, it has been defeated in the interest of Mr. Eads, who has no right to complain. I think that Mr. Eads ought to be contented with the ordinary appropriation provided by law, and so the House of Representatives considered. They had this matter before them and debated it and decided upon it. The Secretary of the Treasury tells you that it is not convenient or wise or well for the Government to issue 5 per cent. bonds when these bonds are far above par in gold, that it is not well to have a new issue of United States bonds to the amount of $500,000. Therefore he asks Congress to make the appropriation, as the United States have the option to pay one or the other, not upon a three days' grace or upon an actual default of delivery as upon a technical contract, as for instance in the purchase of oats and beans, but it is a square and frank appeal to the justice and good sense of Congress. I think the actual observance of the faith of the United States as pledged by that law to Captain Eads would be substantially complied with by a prompt appropriation now of the money; and if a few days' delay has occurred he must blame himself rather than Congress. I say myself that if Congress should adjourn now without appropriating money in advance for the payment due in April there would be a submoney in advance for the payment due in April there would be a substantial failure to comply with the language of the law, and so the Secretary of the Treasury would naturally issue the bonds. But this language must be construed together, and must be presumed to have had a reasonable intent. If Congress pays him the $500,000 by this appropriation bill he may get his money to-morrow, and there is an end of it. The delay has been caused by himself in his desire to get bonds rather than money.

Let me state to the Senate some of the troubles that will occur if these bonds are issued. In the first place we know as an extend fact these bonds are issued. In the first place we know as an actual fact, and I regret it, as every Senator regrets it, that the Secretary of the Treasury, whose signature is necessary to carry these bonds into execution, is sick, and in no condition to transact this business. I have ecution, is sick, and in no condition to transact this business. I have his opinion here in writing. The Government has the option. Who knows that he will issue these bonds, and will not a delay be created to Captain Eads? The description of the bonds is pointed out; they are 5 per cent. bonds. The limit of that class of bonds has been reached and passed already. I think under a fair construction of the act 5 per cent. bonds may be issued; but they could only be issued by stamping them anew. The 5 per cent. bonds now having passed away, they could only be issued by stamping upon them by some contrivance the authority of the law under which they are issued. No doubt that can be done in time at the Treasury Department and No doubt that can be done in time at the Treasury Department, and if hurried up it might be done in a few days; but we are compelled to resort to this extraordinary way of issuing a new class of bonds in order to avoid a technical objection made.

That is not all. Another difficulty may occur, it is true of a small nature: a complication in the Treasury accounts. If these bonds are treated as money this bill must be construed as an appropriation of so much money; otherwise the accounts will be confused and rendered complicated. No doubt all that could be overcome, and Mr. Eads might get his bonds, if Congress would say so; and I think that probably we should be compelled under the law to grant bonds, if Congress would say so; and I think that probably we should be compelled under the law to grant bonds, if Congress would say so; and I think that probably we should be compelled under the law to grant bonds, if Congress would say so; and I think that probably we should be compelled under the law to grant bonds, if Congress would say so; and I think that probably we should be compelled under the law to grant bonds. gress now fails to make this appropriation. Perhaps Mr. Eads would get his bonds in due time; but it is not Congress that has prevented the appropriation, it is Mr. Eads. It is not Congress that has prevented the appropriation; it is the gentleman who is to receive the benefit of it. Congress is now ready, and the Senate is to-day ready to pass and would have passed the bill the very day it came here approiating half a million of dollars, but for the fact that it has been prevented and delayed by the gentleman who desires bonds instead. I think, therefore, that there has been on the part of Congress every desire to do this gentleman justice. Believing in him as much as any man on this floor, and desirous of promoting in every way his enterprise, and wishing to do exact justice to him, I think it is a little too narrow to call upon us for an issue of those bonds when we are ready to pay the money and when we have the money in the

I shall vote, therefore, for the appropriation bill as it came from the House

Mr. WEST. Mr. President, there is much that I should like to say in connection with this subject, but the Senate has been detained for some little time listening to the views of gentlemen, and I will try and trespass upon their patience but a moment. Having been, I think I may without any egotism or vanity, the leading member of this body interested in the consummation of this great scheme, it has possibly impressed itself more vividly upon my mind and my memory than upon the memory of any other member. But, be that as it may, the actual condition and the actual intention of the committee which reported this bill was evidenced and given expression to most clearly this morning by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. WITHERS] when he said that it was the intention of the committee and the intention of the legislation to put the payments provided for in this measure beyond the possible contingency of legislative action in the future. That is what is contended for now. It is a very narrow view to take of the subject to say that Mr. Eads wants these bonds because they bear a premium. Mr. Eads asks nothing but justice from Congress. no premium.

Let us understand what is justly due to him under the law. I take occasion to express my surprise at the enunciation on the floor of the occasion to express my surprise at the enunciation on the floor of the Senate, by the chairman of the Committee on Finance, that when money is due by the Government of the United States the Government can pay it when it suits its convenience. He said that this money was due Captain Eads; he said that it was due to him on the 19th of January. Take the assertion in regard to that and put it side by side with one bond of the United States due at that time and you would be repudiated and dishonered, if you would not meet it at the moment it was due. That is the temper of the Finance Committee, when a promise of the United States is given by statute to pay a debt due on a certain day; you may take your own time to pay it and when a promise of the United States is given by statute to pay a debt due on a certain day: you may take your own time to pay it and your own convenience and your own manner. How will that agree with the bonds of the United States which are now current throughout the financial centers of the world? Is a bond of the United States any stronger than a solemn act of Congress? Is the promise con-veyed upon a piece of parchment any stronger or more binding upon the Government than that upon the archives of the Government in tis legislation and by its statutes? I hold not. Let us see what Congress promises to do, and let us see if to-day it is not in default and dishonored by its non-compliance with the terms of the agreement. I read from the statute:

That the conditions herein prescribed being fully complied with, the United tates hereby promise and agree to pay to said Eads—

Now let us see on what terms, when and how, the United States "promise and agree to pay to said Eads"—

When a channel of twenty, feet in depth. and of not less than two hundred feet in width, shall have been obtained by the action of said jetties and auxiliary works, $500,000 shall be paid. * * *
That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to carry into effect the provisions of this act on behalf of the United States, and * * * to draw his warrants upon the Treasurer of the United States in favor of said Eads.

As soon, by the necessary examination and report on the part of officers charged with the supervision of the construction and progress of this work, it was ascertained and reported that the requisite of this work, it was ascertained and reported that the requisite depth of the water was obtained there, that money was due, and one half hour after when you did not pay it you were dishonored. You had made no appropriation. Congress is at fault, not this man.

But it is said that Congress has reserved the option to pay. Yes, it did reserve the option to pay and that option, as has been demonstrated here by the Senator from Indiana, expired at the moment the demand was made, when there was no appropriation. As to this story that the friends of this measure have delayed the appropriation. I cannot see what foundation there is for it.

tion, I cannot see what foundation there is for it.

Furthermore, Captain Eads does not ask for these bonds now, because the bonds are more valuable to him than the money; but he asks that the precedent may be established, that his appropriations and the sums due him in all time to come may be placed where the original act designed to place them—beyond the contingency of conoriginal act designed to place them—legyond the contingency of congressional action. What would be the result if you were to establish this precedent to-day? We know by telegrams, and I tell it wita great satisfaction, that to-day the other $500,000 have been earned. To-day there are twenty-two feet of water over the bar at the mouth of the Mississippi, notwithstanding the creakings that we have had from the opponents of the measure, but it cannot be certified to here during the time that Congress is in session, and by establishing this precedent of paying him at your will you leave him to wait for twelve months for his second payment, and so on.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to ask my friend a question.

Mr. WEST. I return the Senator's courtesy. He declined to yield to me; but now I shall listen to him.

Mr. SHERMAN. I yielded to the Senator.

I beg your pardon.

AN. I ask the Senator, then, why does not the Com-Mr. SHERMAN. mittee on Appropriations to day before the sun rolls round pass the appropriation, saying to him the United States will give the money as soon as he comes with another claim?

Mr. WEST. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." The Committee on Appropriations deal according to their judgment with every case as it comes before them. But such is the fact. It is not to get the premium on these bonds, but to do what Congress contemplated, what the committee contemplated, what is just and right, to prevent Congress from having any authority in the premises when the money is earned: that is all.

Let me say that Captain Eads does not come here for consideration.

I opine that as years roll by he will be a greater man than any one in this body. Little will any consideration conferred by the Senate of the United States upon such a genius ever reflect upon him when such a monument to his greatness stands as the open and unvexed flow of the waters of the Mississippi to the ocean. No, sir, little did I think here a day or two ago when the Senator from New York [Mr. Conkling] in his place appealed to us to be just, that there would be such an application of that maxim as I find here to-day in this

A great government can seize advantage at too much cost. A government is never so great as when it is just.

You are dishonored by your non-payment on the 19th of January, and you can do the man justice now and remove all obstacles in the way of future payments that may be due him by establishing a precedent when he demands the money that it is your duty to have pro-when he demands the money that it is your duty to have provided in the Treasury.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY. I do not propose to occupy many moments of time on this question. The Senator from Ohio has referred to the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury saying that it is unwise to issue bonds when they are above par and that it is wiser to pay in cash. I believe the wisest course for this Government is to perform its contracts in good faith. That is the question, and the only question. tion. The Government is to perform its contracts according to their legal effect when the other contracting party demands it. As has well been remarked here, the Government is in default. The only question with me is, what is the kind of contract which the Government has made with Captain Eads and that stands upon the statute? There can be no question that the option was given to this Government to pay either in money or in bonds. The first part of the section to which reference is made clearly gives that option:

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States, either in money or bonds, is expressly reserved.

Then the section proceeds to prescribe the time and manner in which that option is to be exercised, and that is the whole of the rest of the section. What is that time and manner in which the Government may exercise that option? It is that whenever a payment shall become due under that section that option must be exercised. It must be exercised either before or at the time when the duty of payment is thrown upon the Government, and that option is lost if not then exercised. Such is the effect of this statute. I proceed to read the rest of the section for the purpose of showing more clearly that such is the fact :

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue the bonds of the United States bearing 5 per cent, interest of the character and description set out in the act entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the public debt," approved July 14, 1870, to said Eads or his legal representatives, in payment at par of the aforesaid warrants of the Secretary of War unless—unless the Congress of the United States shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriations of money.

And here is the turning point-

Previously to what, Mr. President? Previously to the time when the duty of payment devolved upon the Government. It is unnecessary for me to spend more time on this point. It has been so clearly and so well illustrated by the Senator from Minnesota on my left and by the Senator from Indiana this morning that I could only repeat what they have said. I have never seen in the course of my life a clearer provision of statute than this appears to be to my own mind, and how any man can contrive to force a doubt into it or squeeze a doubt out of it exceeds my comprehension.

Mr. MAXEY. A government to be respected must deal with scrupulous honesty to its own people. As was stated very properly, this is simply a question of contract. What is that contract? The Government of the United States contracted and agreed with James B. Eads that if he would deepen the channel of the Mississippi River at its mouth twenty feet, and to a width of two hundred feet he should receive $500,000. When? Whenever the Secretary of War should by his certificate declare that that work had been done in accordance with that contract. The Secretary of War sends his engineers down to the mouth of the Mississippi River to examine that work. They report that the work has been done according to the contract, and the Secretary of War issues a warrant to James B. Eads, showing what? Secretary of War issues a warrant to James B. Eads, showing what That in strict accordance with that contract there was on that day due to him the sum of $500,000. Very well. Now it is contended here that the Government of the United States had the option to pay that $500,000 in money or in bonds. When I When the contract fell due, which was when the work was done, acknowledged so by the Secretary of War and when he had given his warrant upon the Secretary of the Treasury for that amount of money. That warrant was presented to the Secretary of the Treasury and demand made. Then the Secretary of the Treasury had the right to pay the $500,000 in money or bonds, in other words to exercise the option. If he failed to exercise the right of option on that day, eo instanti, the right of option ceased. But what else? Does the contract stop there? Not at all. The contract goes on to declare that if there has not been previously appropriated by Congress the money to pay this claim, then the Secretary of the Treasury is to issue the bonds at their par value to the extent of $500,000. Congress had not made the appropriation, the money was not paid, the option was lost; and under that state of things the Secretary of the Treasury was directed to issue those bonds. He did not do it, and the only question is, did Captain Eads have a right to it? Sir, there cannot be a clearer proposition of law. It seems to me that Captain Eads had the perfect right to these bonds.

This contract was close; it was required that he should expend his

This contract was close; it was required that he should expend his money, not upon the west pass, for he was limited to the south pass; not upon the southwest pass, but he was to increase the depth of water there to twenty feet. If he had got it to only nineteen and a half feet, although the Government would have been benefited by that increase, yet if he had failed to come up to the very strictest letter of the law he would not have been entitled to one solitary dollar. But when he did deepen it to twenty feet remaining all the risks himself. when he did deepen it to twenty feet, running all the risks himself, the Government having no risk whatever; when the contract was as close as it was possible to make a contract with a citizen, and when he complied with the contract in every particular, and when that fact was acknowledged by the Government by the issuance to him by the Secretary of War of his certificate, and he presents that and it is not paid, I ask you if he has not, under the strict letter of this statute, the right to those bonds; and is it jast, is it fair for this Government to avail itself of this grandest improvement of the age and stickle at a strict compliance with the contract? I do not be-lieve that it would send this Government before the world in a very fair light to refuse to stand up to a contract such as this.

Mr. ALLISON rose.
Mr. WINDOM. I see the Senator from Iowa is rising to ask to take up the Indian appropriation bill; and I wish to anticipate him by asking the Senate to vote on this question without further debate.

Mr. ALLISON. If a vote can be taken now I will waive my purpose, but otherwise I must insist on the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. WRIGHT. I wish to be heard about three minutes on this bill.

I shall not resist the proposition to take up the other bill, however,

Mr. WINDOM. I think the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Allison] had better let us have three minutes more. I think possibly we can get a vote at the end of that time.

get a vote at the end of that time.

Mr. ALLISON. I give way to my colleague.

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not understand that in this question we have anything to do with the grandeur of this improvement. I do not understand that we have anything to do with the question as to whether these bonds are above or below par. It has been suggested, and I think it is a very pertinent suggestion too, that if these bonds were under par the probabilities are that there would not be such an insistment on the part of the person for different legislation from what the House has given. The question is: What is a fair construction of this statute? My friend the Senator from Michigan says he does not see how it is possible for any person to squeeze a doubt out of it. Nor do I. The difference is he thinks it is perfectly clear one way; and I think it is just as clear the other way. It has been inway; and I think it is just as clear the other way. It has been insisted all the time that this provision in the fourteenth section giving the option to the Government must be exercised at a particular time, else the party is entitled to the bonds. It occurs to me that if that be the construction of the statute it is very strange that it had not read differently from what it does. It reads:

That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved.

Reserved to the Government. I understand that what follows after that means this and no more: It is a direction to the Secretary of the Treasury as to the kind of bonds he shall issue, or how it is that the bonds are to be gotten out of the Treasury. I submit this question: If it were intended that he was entitled absolutely to these bonds unless a prior appropriation had been made, why was not this language used: "That the option of discharging the obligations herein assumed by the United States either in money or bonds is expressly reserved, but the said Eads shall be entitled to the bonds of the United reserved, but the said Eads shall be entitled to the bonds of the United States, unless there has been a prior appropriation?"

Why not put the provision in that way, that the said Eads is entitled to the bonds unless there has been a prior appropriation? My construction is that the right is reserved expressly to the Government, and then it is said, as a direction to the Secretary of the Treasury, that these bonds shall be issued of such a form, or be made bearing such a data and this being a direction to him there is no possible. such a date, and this being a direction to him there is no penalty.

such a date, and this being a direction to him there is no penalty. There is no provision, there is no right given to Eads in the first instance to demand these bonds in the event that there is no appropriation.

Now, I think, in all candor and in all fairness, there is no bad faith on the part of the Government in this thing. Almost immediately after this requisition was made, the very next day, he demands the bonds and immediately Congress proceeds to make the appropriation. I think that when they have done that, they have done all that he has any right to demand. I think with the Senator from Louisiana it is a matter of vital importance that we settle this question right now; for if we shall settle it upon a false basis, on a precedent that is unfair and cannot be sustained, we shall be led into error for years to come. It seems to me to be perfectly clear that we ought to pass the House bill and not indefinitely postpone it and leave this matter so leave and convolvement that where the Govern loose and so undetermined that you cannot tell where the Government stands or Mr. Eads either.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WALLACE in the chair.) The question is on the indefinite postponement of the House bill.

Mr. WEST and Mr. WINDOM called for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOOTH, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from Indiana, [Mr. MORTON.] If he were here he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

The call of the roll was concluded, and the result was announced—yeas 30, nays 24; as follows:

yeas 30, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Bogy, Bruce, Chaffee, Christiancy, Clayton, Cockrell-Cooper, Cragin, Davis, Dawes, Dennis, Dorsey, Ferry, Goldthwatte, Hamilton, Harvey, Hitcheock, Ingalls, Johnston, Jones of Florida, Maxey, Mitchell, Norwood, Spencer, Teller, West, Windom, and Withers—30.

NAYS—Messrs. Balley, Barnum, Boutwell, Cameron of Wisconsin, Conkling, Conover, Eaton, Hereford, Kelly, Kernan, McCreery, McDonald, Merrimon, Morrill, Paddock, Ransom, Robertson, Sargent, Saulsbury, Sharon, Sherman, Stevenson, Wallace, and Wright—24.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alcorn, Anthony, Bayard, Blaine, Booth, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Gordon, Howe, Jones of Novada, Logan, McMillan, Morton, Oglesby, Patterson, Randolph, Thurman, Wadleigh, and Whyte—21.

So the motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. George M. Adams, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. No. 824) for the relief of Hannah L. Lloyd as executrix and George W. King executor of William Lloyd, deceased.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4284) authorizing the commissioners of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to buy in certain real and other property, and to sell the same at public or private sale, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 4198) to authorize the President to restore Thomas J. Spencer to his former rank in the Army; and

A bill (H. R. No. 4611) to remove the political disabilities of Dabney M. Scales, of Memphis, Tennessee.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4452) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with proceedings.

amendments.

The first amendment was to insert after line 9:

For pay of one superintendent of Indian affairs for the tribes in Dakota, $2,500: Provided, That $500 of said amount shall be available on the 1st day of April next.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 14, to strike out "sixty-eight" and insert "seventy" in the item appropriating for the pay of agents of Indian affairs, making seventy the number.

Mr. DAVIS. It will be noticed that this is an increase of two Indian agents. I believe I am right in that?

dian agents. I believe I am right in that?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. DAVIS. I only call the attention of the Senate to the fact that it appears to be quite a large number, yet I believe in the total it is an increase of but two.

Mr. ALLISON. That is all.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 24, to strike out the word "two" and insert "three," and in the same line, after the word "namely," to insert the words "Hoopa Valley." so as to read. ley;" so as to read:

Three for the tribes in California, namely, Hoopa Valley, Round Valley, and Tule River agencies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 32, to strike out the word "nine" and insert "eleven," and in the same line, after the word "namely," to insert the words "Red Cloud, Spotted Tail;" so as to make the clause read:

Eleven for the tribes in Dakota, namely, Red Cloud, Spotted Tail, Yankton, Poncha, Crow Creek, Standing Rock, Cheyenne River, Fort Berthold, Sisseton, Devil's Lake, and Lower Brulé agencies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 47, to strike out the word "seven" and insert "five;" and in line 48, after the word "Omaha," to strike out the words "Red Cloud, Spotted Tail;" so as to make the clause

Five for the tribes in Nebraska, namely, Great Nemaha, Omaha, Winnebago, Otoe, and Santee agencies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 64, to strike out the word "four" and insert "five;" in line 65, after the word "Maricopa," to insert "Papago;" and in line 66, after the word "hundred," to insert "and three;" so as to make the clause read:

Five for the tribes in Arizona, namely, Colorado River, Pima and Maricopa, Papago, San Carlos, and Moquis Pueblo agencies; in all, $103,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 132, to increase the total appropriation for pay of interpreters from $22,800 to $32,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 136, to increase the appropriation for additional payment of interpreters from $5,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 137, to strike out "$2,500" and insert "$3,000," and, in line 138, to strike out "$7,500" and insert "$9,000;" so as to make the clause read:

For pay of three Indian inspectors, at $3,000 each, $9,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 141, to increase the appropriation "for necessary traveling expenses of three Indian inspectors" from $4,500 to $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 143, to increase the appropriation "for buildings at agencies and repairs of the same" from $15,000 to

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 162, to insert:

For buildings at the Kiowa agency, including school building, $20,000.

Mr. DAVIS. The committee agreed to this amendment, but I do not recollect now the necessity for it. It is an appropriation of $20,000 for new buildings. I would be glad if the Senator from Iowa would explain the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. This appropriation is intended to cover buildings at the Kiowa agency. For instance, they have now no buildings at this agency of any account belonging to the tribe. They are obliged this agency of any account belonging to the tribe. They are obliged to use the buildings under the control and direction of the War Department even for their ordinary stores; and, inasmuch as we are under an obligation to build a school building at this agency, it was deemed wise to make a single appropriation which should cover the necessary buildings, including a school building. It is a very necessary appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 441, to increase the appropriation for the "purchase of flour and meat" for the Crow Indians from $75,000 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after the word "dollars" in line

Part thereof to be paid per copita, as per said article, and the remainder to be expended for their benefit; and the sum appropriated for like purpose by the act of August 15, 1876, may be expended in the same manner.

So as to read:

Kansas: Ransas:
For interest in lieu of investment on $300,000, at 5 per cent. per annum, per second article of treaty of January 14, 1846 $10,000; part thereof to be paid per capita, as per said article, and the remainder to be expended for their benefit; and the sum appropriated for like purpose by the act of August 15, 1876, may be expended in the same manner.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 633, to increase the appropriation for the Mixed Shoshones, Bannacks, and Sheepeaters, from $15,000 the $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 646, to increase the appropriation for eight of ten installments to be used by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in purchasing such articles as the condition and necessities

The Navajoes may indicate to be proper, from $15,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 702, to strike out the words "having jurisdiction of Indian affairs" and insert the words "of the Interior;" so as to read:

For nine of ten installments, to be expended by the Secretary of the Interior, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the following proviso in line 710 after the word "dollars:"  $\ensuremath{\textit{Provided}}\xspace$  , That said Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes shall remove to their eservation in the Indian Territory.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 733, after the word "Secretary" to strike out the words "having jurisdiction of Indian affairs" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 736, after the word "the" to strike out the words "Commissioner of Indian Affairs" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Secretary of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 741, after the word "over," to strike out the words "one-fifth" and insert "one-third;" so as to read: Out of funds belonging to them now in the Treasury of the United States, $100,000, of which amount not over one-third shall be paid to the said Indians per capita.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the amendment of the committee by inserting "one-half" instead of "one-third." Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations considered this question very carefully; and, after a careful consideration, deemed it wise to allow the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to expend per capita one-third of this sum, deeming that a wiser distribution of the fund than to allow the Osages one-half of the whole sum. I do not think it is a very important amendment either way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WALLACE in the chair.) The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Kansas to waive his amendment until the committee's amendments are passed over.

Mr. INGALLS. I have no objection to that course.

Mr. ALLISON. That amendment may be considered as passed over.

Mr. INGALLS. I agree to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be reserved for future action.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 742, after the words "per capita," to insert the following:

And out of this appropriation he is hereby authorized to pay for goods and supplies furnished the Osage Indians while upon a hunt during the season of 1875 and 1876 to an amount not exceeding $14,000.

Mr. BOGY. I do not know exactly what step to take; but at the proper time I will make an objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is now before the Senate.

Mr. BOGY. Let it be passed over for awhile. Mr. INGALLS. Let it be passed over. Mr. BOGY. I ask to reserve the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from Missouri has any objection to this amendment let him make it known now.

Mr. BOGY. Let us go through with the whole bill, and let that come up after a while. Mr. ALLISON. I pr come up after a while.

Mr. ALLISON. I prefer to have this amendment passed upon now.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa in charge of the bill asks that the amendment be passed upon now.
Mr. BOGY. The Senate simply has no information on the subject; none whatever. We have no information whatever; and this seems to me to be a very loose appropriation, that we shall appropriate $14,000 out of the Osage funds to pay the expenses perhaps of a hunting party. There is no evidence furnished to the Senate. There might have been some furnished to the committee; but there ought to be some evidence furnished to us here to justify a vote. It is said to be some evidence furnished to us here to justify a vote. It is said to be to pay for goods and supplies furnished the Osage Indians while to be to pay for goods and supplies furnished the Osage Indians while upon a hunt during the seasons of 1875 and 1876 to an amount not to exceed $14,000. I have never seen anything quite so loose as this. Why should the other Indians who did not go upon that hunting excursion, who did not participate in that pleasure, pay for these parties who went there? The idea that it took $14,000 to supply Indians who went out hunting buffalo is something remarkable. Gentlemen in the city of Philadelphia and the city of Saint Louis often go upon large excursions and take large quantities of good eatables and good drinkalles with them, and they are quite expensive excursions; yet large excursions and take large quantities of good eatables and good drinkables with them, and they are quite expensive excursions; yet I have never heard of one so expensive as this. What do these Indians want? They have their ponies, their guns, and their ammunition. Was it liquors, or oysters, or what? What goods, what provisions were supplied? When they go out to hunt buffalo they supply themselves with provisions. It would be an utter impossibility to supply a hunting party of Indians with such an amount of goods for that purpose; yet my friend from Iowa says the Department has the evidence. I might be converted, but it would require very good testimony to convert me into the belief that $14,000 would be necessary to equip a hunting party of Indians. Who are these Indians? For whom is the appropriation designed? From what State or Territory are thoy? I do not think the appropriation has any business here at all. I do not know on what ground the committee recommends it. It struck me as being a very singular thing to appropriate $14,000 to supply goods for a hunting party of Indians. I do not understand it at all.

do not understand it at all.

Mr. ALLISON. I am very glad to see my friend from Missouri so careful of the funds of the Osage Indians. I am glad to see that he is not disposed to touch these sacred funds without the most careful

Mr. BOGY. Not without their consent.

Mr. BOGY. Not without their consent.

Mr. ALLISON. I am very glad particularly that he desires that these trust funds in the Treasury of the United States shall be carefully protected from intrusion. I quite concur with him. The Committee on Appropriations did not agree with this provision without the fullest examination and without ample testimony. The truth is, as my friend very well knows, because he is familiar with the habits of the Indians that when the did not the state when the of the Indians, that when an Indian tribe start upon a hunt they do not start equipped as gentlemen do who may leave Saint Louis or other cities for that purpose, but they go out once a year for the purpose of supplying themselves with food and provisions by means of the hunt. During the winter of 1875 and 1876, as the testimony which I hold in my hand shows, but which I do not care to trouble the Senate to have read, they went out upon this hunt, I believe into the then Territory and now State of Colorado, at least a distance of three care four hundred miles from the agency, and while there, not finding or four hundred miles from the agency, and while there, not finding game, the whole country having been burned over, not finding a single buffalo, these Indians, comprising nearly the entire tribe, were in a condition of starvation, and the agent of these Indians at that in a condition of starvation, and the agent of these Indians at that time sent out provisions for the purpose of relieving them and bringing them back to the agency. These matters are fully set forth in papers which I have in my hand. At a regular council of these Indians afterward they asked that this sum should be paid. The agent now in charge of these Indians (and I will say, as I pass, he is a most intelligent and most careful agent with reference to the interests of this tribe) recommends the payment of this sum. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommends the payment of this sum, so that this item comes here with all the testimonials that it is possible for it. this item comes here with all the testimonials that it is possible for it to have, and I trust there will be no objection to the amendment.

Mr. BOGY. I cannot understand how it is possible that a sum so large as this should be necessary for a hunting-party.

Mr. ALLISON. The sum may be large, but of course these accounts must be scrutinized as all accounts are scrutinized. The appropriation is not exceeding a certain sum. Of course these accounts must pass as all accounts in the Indian Bureau pass.

Mr. BOGY. If we pass this appropriation, the amount will be covered with beautiful and accurate vouchers to sustain every one of them, perhaps made in the city of Washington; but they will be perfectly and elegantly made, there is no question about that. It is an utter impossibility that this amount of money could have been reutter impossibility that this amount of money could have been required for this purpose. The Indians who go out upon these excursions require nothing at all. They have their ponies; they have their guns and their ammunition, and it is very little that they need. It is a wilderness, a prairie country. They travel out, camp out, cook their own food, and kill their own game from the very day they leave their homes until they return, and the country could not be so bare of game at any time but what they would find enough to make a living all over that country. The hunt may not have been profitable. They may not have found any large quantity of buffaloes so as to make it a profitable hunt; but to think they were not able to make a living, I say, is an utter impossibility. A white man, a hunter, could make a living in that country at any time under any circumstances, and these Indians could not have wanted any part of this money for this purpose of going on a hunting excursion. It is not for provisions, for goods and supplies. What goods do they need to go hunting Mr. ALLISON. Blankets.

Mr. BOGY. Blankets! They have their blankets. They might have been supplied with blankets before; but this money was expended while upon a hunt, not to start out with but while they were upon a hunt, and that these $14,000 were furnished to them is an utter impossibility. The amendment ought not to pass. I am careful apon a nunt, and that these $14,000 were furnished to them is an utter impossibility. The amendment ought not to pass. I am careful of the Indian funds; I desire to be and have always been; and that is the reason why I do not want these loose appropriations made. I offered an amendment the other day which my friend from Iowa himself opposed, I believe, in the committee, as I have been informed; perhaps I have no right to say so.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not see how the Senator from Missouri could be informed of what occurred in committee.

Mr. BOGY. Perhaps I have no right to say so. That amendment provides that in all cases of the expenditure of Indian money the Indians should be consulted, as they ought to be consulted, especially the Osage Indians who are intelligent. The chief of that tribe is a the Osage Indians who are intelligent. The chief of that tribe is a very intelligent man, a man of good education, who speaks good English. There ought to be no money belonging to a tribe spent without their consent. I know the money is expended by the Interior Department; but let it be done with their knowledge and with their consent, so as to prevent the immense wastage which is taking place, as has been the history of Indian appropriations for many years back. Within the let the years a million of money has been appropriated. Within the last ten years a million of money has been appropriated for the Indians which there is nothing to show for now. Therefore I object to this amendment, because I cannot be made to believe that $14,000 could have been necessary to furnish these Indians and equip them to go out on a hunting expedition. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The question being put, a division was called for; and there wereayes 17, noes 9; no quorum voting.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not a quorum voting. What action

Mr. ALLISON. Such action as is proper when a quorum does not I am perfectly willing that the amendment shall be passed over for the present, so that we may get through with the amendments

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to pass upon these amendments as we go

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to see the bill proceed. If this amendment can be reserved till the bill is reported to the Senate, nothing will be lost by either party and it will not lose any time. amendment be passed upon now favorably and let us go along and the Senator from Missouri can have it reserved, if he sees proper to do so, when we come into the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair defers to the wish of the Senator who has the bill in charge.

Mr. ALLISON. Let the amendment be agreed to pro forma.

Mr. BOGY. I made that offer two or three times.

Mr. ALLISON. I did not understand the Senator from Missouri.

I understand the Senator from Missouri to agree now that this amendment shall be agreed to pro forma and that we shall take a vote on it in the Senate.

Mr. BOGY. I made that offer two or three times to my friend, and he was very obtuse if he did not understand me.

Mr. ALLISON. I am obliged to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be considered as agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert, after line 746, the following:

For this amount, to be expended for the Osage Indians, in accordance with section 12 of the act of July 15, 1870, being interest on the net avails of Osage trust and diminished-reserve lands sold prior to November 1, 1876, as follows: On $941,447.66, from November 1, 1876, to January 12, 1877, $9,285.51; on $891,447.66, from January 12, 1877, to July 1, 1877, $20,759.74; and on $791,447.66, from July 1, 1877, to November 1, 1877, $13,335.33; in all $43,380.58.

Mr. BOGY. I shall ask to reserve that for a vote in the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me for a moment, I will state that this amendment is in accordance with the absolute requirement of the treaty. It is an appropriation simply for the interest upon funds now in the Treasury, upon which we are obliged to pay interest. I certainly think my friend can have no objection to it

Mr. BOGY. Will the Senator explain it ? If this amount is to be expended for the Osage Indians, how is it to be expended ? I object-expended for the Osage Indians, now is it to be expended? I objected to the loose mode of expenditure in the hunting expedition, and I should like to have the thing specified.

Mr. ALLISON. It is to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, of course.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, among the appropriations for the Pawnees, to insert in line 784, after the word "dollars," the following proviso:

Provided, That $5,000 of this sum may be used in the erection of a school-building.

So as to read:

For support of two manual labor schools, per third article of same treaty, $10,000: Provided, That $5,000 of this sum may be used in the erection of a school-building.

Mr. BOGY. I should like to reserve that amendment also; for it seems to me the sum of $5,000 for the erection of a school-house for Indians is entirely too large. A log-house costing about $250 is entirely too much. There is no necessity in the world for spending $5,000 in such a way. I therefore should like to reserve that amendment for a vote when we get in the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator only wishes a separate vote on it in the Senate, and there is no objection to that of course.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 793, to increase the appropriation for the pay of physicians and purchase of medicines for the Pawnees from $8,000 to $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PADDOCK. I should like to inquire if the amendment at line 785 has been agreed to. The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been agreed to, but reserved for separate action in the Senate.

Mr. PADDOCK. I wish to inquire where the money has been ex-

Mr. PADDOCK. I wish to inquire where the money has been expended. These Indians were removed, as I understand, from their former reservation to the Indian Territory.

Mr. ALLISON. This money is to be expended at their new location. Mr. PADDOCK. That is satisfactory.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 802, in the appropriations for the Pawnees, to increase the item for "teachers and fuel, books and stationery, for schools," from $3,000

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 825, to increase the appropriation to carry on the work of aiding and instructing the Poneas in the arts of civilization, and for subsistence and clothing, from $5,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, in line 1021, after the word "secretary," to strike out the words "having jurisdiction of Indian affairs."
The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1060, after the word "secretary," to strike out the words "having jurisdiction of Indian affairs" and insert "of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1071, in the appropriations for the Six Nations of New York, after the word "four," to insert the words "thousand five hundred dollars;" so as to read:

For permanent annuity, in clothing and other useful articles, per sixth article of treaty of November 17, 1794, $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, after line 1093:

For pay of additional employés at the several agencies for the Sioux in Nebraska and Dakota, $47,000.

I will reserve that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reserved for the action of the Senate.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 1102, after "million," to insert the words "two hundred and fifty thousand;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That $50,000 of this appropriation may be used for the selection of a location, the construction of necessary buildings, and the removal of the said Sioux Indians to the Missouri River: And provided further. That the sum of $15,000 of this appropriation, in addition to that heretofore appropriated, may be used for the removal and permanent location of the Poncas in the Indian Territory.

For this amount, for subsistence, including the Yankton Sioux and Poncas, and for other purposes of their civilization, $1,250,000: Provided, That $50,000 of this appropriation may be used for the selection of a location, the construction of necessary buildings, and the removal of the said Sioux Indians to the Missouri River: And provided further, That the sum of $15,000 of this appropriation, in addition to that heretofore appropriated, may be used for the removal and permanent location of the Poncas in the Indian Territory.

Mr. PADDOCK. In line 1107 I propose to strike out the word "fifteen" and insert "thirty," and in line 1110 after the word "Poncas" to insert the words "and Santees," in order that provision may be made for the removal of the Santees as well as the Poncas to the Indian Territory. I will state in this connection that the Santees are now, so to speak, squatters on the public lands in the county of Knox, in the State of Nebraska, and have no defined residence. They ought either to have a permanent reservation in that section of the country, or they ought to be removed elsewhere; and, as I believe the true policy of the Government is to remove all these Indians to the Indian Territory, I propose the amendment to the amendment of the committee

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska moves to amend the amendment as he indicates. It is before the Senate.

Mr. BOGY. If it could be done, I would be willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska for the time being, so that the whole matter may be considered in Senate. I am opposed entirely to the removal of any more Indians to the Indian Territory, whether they be Poncas or Santee Sioux; but at the same time, I would be willing to let the amendment be adopted for the time being to be reconsidered in the Senate, if that can be done.

Mr. ALLISON. I trust the Senator from Nebraska will not press his amendment.

Mr. PADDOCK. I certainly shall.

Mr. ALLISON. I quite agree with him that it would be wise to remove the Santees to the Indian Territory if they are willing to go, and if there is a place there where they can go and be supported or support themselves as well as they can where they are now; but we have no recommendation from the Indian Bureau or from the Secretary of the Interior upon this point, and I think it might be postponed tary of the Interior upon this point, and I think it might be postponed until we can have a further examination of the subject.

Mr. PADDOCK. Although there may be no recommendation on that subject here from the Indian Office, the necessity of this measure is patent to every citizen of Nebraska; and, if either of these tribes is to be removed to the Indian Territory, it ought to be the Santees, because the Poncas are on a reservation which they own. They are fixed and established there, and rightfully there; but the Santees are not so circumstanced. They are upon the public lands of the United States, which the settlers of that country wish to occupy. They are in the neighborhood of settlements, where the settlers desire to have them removed. There is no sense, or propriety, or decency in asking for the removal of the Poncas from a permanent reservain asking for the removal of the Poncas from a permanent reserva-in asking for the removal of the Poncas from a permanent reservation and asking that the Santees, who are not upon any reservation, should be left in that country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER put the question on the amendment to the amendment, and declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask for the yeas and nays on this question. It is a very important question to my State. I want to know whether my neighbor from Iowa is disposed to allow this sort of thing, which is so damaging to the interests of my State, to continue. I think it is a great wrong and a great injustice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska demands the yeas and nays on the pending amendment.

Mr. BOGY. The Senator from Nebraska is doing himself an injustice. I think it may be proper that these Indians should be removed

I think it may be proper that these Indians should be removed to the Indian Territory, but I certainly will not contend that the Senate has the information necessary to certify that removal. The Senator may know the fact himself; I do not deny that it may be so; but no information has been given to the Senate or to the committee which would justify affirmative action upon this subject at all. I think the Senator's amendment cannot be pressed properly, although I do not deny the facts which he has stated. They are within his knowledge, and perhaps within the knowledge of his colleague, but they edge, and perhaps within the knowledge of his colleague, but they do not come to the Senate in any way which would justify the Senate in voting for the amendment. I would be myself opposed to it under any condition; but let that be as it may, I do not think other Senators can vote merely upon his statement, giving to his statement the very fullest credence that I would give to that of any Senator; but it does not come to us in a proper shape. That is all.

Mr. PADDOCK. I state the facts exactly as they come to me from reliable and thrifty citizens of my State, living in that section.

Mr. BOGY. I do not deany that Mr. BOGY. I do not deny that.

Mr. PADDOCK. And not only from one community but from many

Mr. BOGY. I do not deny the assertion made by the Senator, but the amendment does not come to us in a way to justify us in voting

Mr. PADDOCK. I should like to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs if it is not true that the Poncas are on a permanent reservaation.

Mr. ALLISON. The Poncas are on a reservation.

Mr. BOGY. Are not the Santees?

Mr. ALLISON. But the different Sioux tribes claim that under the treaty of 1868 they are entitled to the reservation now occupied by the Poncas; and there seems to be a sort of hereditary quarrel between the Poncas and the Sioux.

Mr. PADDOCK. Are not the Poncas Sioux? To what Sioux does the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs refer?

Mr. ALLISON. I allude now more particularly to the Brûlé Sioux. My friend from Nebraska perfectly well understands that within the last year the Poncas were unable to raise their crops for the reason that they were constantly infested by bands of Sioux warriors; and it has been deemed advisable by the Department that these Poncas should be removed to the Indian Territory or to some other reservation, in order that the other tribes of Sioux may occupy this reservation. With reference to the Santees, these Santee Sioux, if I understand the facts correctly, went to their present reservation many years ago. They occupied that reservation, or, if it was land of the United States, they occupied it as white men occupy the unoccupied lands of the United States. These Santees dress as white men, they conduct farming operations as white men do, in the northeastern portion of Nebraska. Now, to remove these Indians without their consent and without some arrangement or understanding with them would be unjust to them. They have erected valuable buildings upon this reservation, and it does not seem just to do it. It does not seem to me that we should take this set without house first the set has the set of th should take this step without having first at least the recommendation of the Department of the Interior, which is responsible for the management of our Indian affairs. That is all I have to

Mr. PADDOCK. My friend states it as a fact that it is a reservation. Is it a reservation at all? Are they not squatters upon the public lands?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not say that these lands have been set apart Mr. ALLISON. I do not say that these lands have been set apart to these Indians as a reservation; but we, in our treaty with the Santee Sioux, agreed to give them lands to till. They have taken possession of these unoccupied lands, and they have occupied them for many years. Now, are we by legislation, without consulting them, to remove them from the soil which they have tilled for these years, and move them to another territory? I say it is unfair to them them.

Mr. PADDOCK. The truth is, as I understand it, that these Santees have not been there so many years as my friend represents them to have been. They have been there for a very short time comparatively speaking. They are temporarily there. As I understand, it was not contemplated when they were put there to have them remain permanently; and for the same reason that the Senator claims they should remain there, I claim, in the interest of the white people of that country who desire those lands, that they should go away. They can be just as well and better provided for in the Indian Territory than they can be there, and inasmuch as it will be necessary very shortly to make a permanent reservation for these Indians, it may as well be done at once and have the matter over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska insist on demanding the yeas and nays?

Mr. PADDOCK. Yes, sir; I insist on calling the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered. The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the following proviso in lines 1112, 1113, 1114, and 1115:

And the President of the United States is hereby directed to prohibit the removal of any portion of said Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory unless the same shall be hereafter authorized by act of Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1189, to insert:

For the erection of agency buildings on the southern portion of the Ute reservation, as required by article 4 of the agreement made with the Ute Indians, ratified by act of Congress approved April 29, 1874, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1285, to increase the appropriation for the care, support, education, &c., of the "Sioux at Fort Peck agency, the Assinaboines, and Gros Ventres," from $75,000 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1296, to increase the appropriation for the care, support, education, &c., of the "Arickarees, Gros Ventres, and Mandans," from $75,000 to $85,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1303, after the word "hundred," to insert the words "and twenty-five;" in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert the words "in all;" and in line 1304, before the word "thousand," to insert the words "and twenty-five;" so as to

For this amount, to subsist and properly care for the Apache Indians in Arizona and New Mexico who have been or may be collected on reservations in New Mexico or Arizona, namely, for those in Arizona, $300,000, and for those in New Mexico, $125,000; in all, $425,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1307, after the word "subsistence," to insert the words "and civilization," and in line 1309, before the word "who," strike out "and transportation of the same;" so as to

For subsistence and civilization of the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, and Wichitas who have been collected upon the reservation set apart for their use and occupation, $250,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOGY. I desire to call attention to an amendment passed over, which I did not object to, on page 46, line 1112. This is stricken

And the President of the United States is hereby directed to prohibit the removal of any portion of said Sioux Indians to the Indian Territory unless the same shall be hereafter authorized by act of Congress.

I should prefer that this claim should not be struck out of the bill, and therefore I will reserve it for action in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reserved.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 1333, to increase the appropriation for the care, support, education of the care, support, education for the care, tion, &c., of Indians of the Central superintendency from $20,000 to

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1340, to increase the appropriation for the care and subsistence of the Kansas Indians from $5,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1351, after the word "Secretary," to strike out the words "having jurisdiction of Indian affairs" and insert "of the Interior," and in line 1352, after the word "food," insert the word "schools;" so as to read:

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to provide, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, settlements, clothing, food, schools, agricultural implements, and seeds for the Modoc Indians that have been removed to and are now residing within the Indian Territory, $7,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1384, to increase the appropriation for the n cessary transportation of goods, provisions, and other articles for the various tribes of Indians from $200,000 to $219,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1393, after the word "that," to strike out the word "hereafter;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That contracts involving an expenditure of more than $2,000 shall be vertised and let to the lowest responsible bidder.

Mr. DAVIS. I think we had better reserve that amendment as others have been reserved for the Senate. That is an amendment, I believe, on which the committee itself divided, as to striking out "hereafter." I will submit to the chairman whether we shall act nion it now, or whether he prefers to leave it for the Senate. I say to him that I have a decided opinion upon this subject, as he knows, and that I desire to pay some little attention to the matter.

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator from West Virginia object to striking out the word "hereafter?"

Mr. DAVIS. I do. If the Senator will recollect that in the committee we had some considerable talk about it, and there was a vote upon it. Unless the chairman desires otherwise, I would prefer that the reserved for the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reserved for future action in the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. That is, it will be agreed to pro forma and reserved for a vote in the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. I would prefer that it be not passed upon now, and hope the Senator will not ask that it be now agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I think, if the Senator will call to mind the discussion in the committee, which I will not speak of here, he will not object really to the adoption of this amendment. The law now is that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs shall not make an expenditure exceeding $1,000 without public advertisement. This amendment changes an existing law if you leave the word "hereafter" in; that is to say, in the future the Commissioner of Indian Affairs may pay $2,000 on advertising. While we were willing to concede to the House that for moneys appropriated under this bill we would allow him to advertise to the extent of two thousand instead of one thousand dollars, yet we did not wish to so change the law as to authorize in all the future his making contracts to the extent of $2,000 without public letting instead of $1,000 as now provided by law.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator is certainly mistaken. The law now contains, and the last appropriation bill contained the word "hereafter.

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly; but it stands in the law "hereafter $1,000." Here we say "hereafter $2,000;" and therefore we change

Mr. DAVIS. Then, if the Senator desires it, why not strike out "two" and insert "one," and let the word "hereafter" remain? Then it will be just as it was in the last appropriation bill. But the Senator just transposes it. The committee say that "hereafter" must come out and the word "two" before "thousand" must stay in; which, of course, is a change from what we had last year or in previous years. However, I think it best to let the amendment be passed over to be acted upon hereafter.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be passed over. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 1407, after the word "approved," to strike out the word "twenty-second" and insert "twenty-third;" so as to read:

To complete the survey of the lands of the Cherokee Indians of North Carolina, recently acquired from W. H. Thomas by purchase, the Secretary of the Interior, as directed by the act of Congress approved 23d day of June, 1874, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1409, after the word "of," to strike out the word "one" and insert "two," and after the word "dollars," in line 1410, to strike out:

To be paid out of the moneys placed to the credit of the eastern band of Chero-kee Indians upon the books of the Treasury Department under act of August 15, 1876, entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent ex-penses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with vari-ous Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Or so much thereof as may be necessary.

So as to read:

Is hereby authorized to expend the sum of $2,500, or so much thereof as may be

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1419, to strike out the following

For this amount, to pay Marcus Erwin, of Asheville, North Carolina, for services as attorney in examining the papers in the purchase of a judgment on W. H. Thomas in behalf of the North Carolina Cherokees, $300; to be paid out of the moneys placed to credit of eastern band of Cherokees on the books of the Treasury August 15, 1876.

Mr. BOGY. I have some information in regard to this amendment. A gentleman called upon me yesterday and told me that this should not be stricken out; that this Mr. Erwin has rendered the services mentioned in the bill here and is entitled to reasonable compensa-tion, and he thought the $300 was about a fair compensation for the work which he did and which is mentioned in the item. I have no work which he did and which is mentioned in the item. I have no positive information, but I presume the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Merrimon] has, because this is a North Carolina case.

Mr. ALLISON. This clause was struck out for two reasons. First, we supposed it to be in the nature of a private claim and that it ought not to be in this bill. Secondly, we had no information as to the justice of the claim, and we did not know but that the House committee might have some information. Therefore we proposed to strike it out and the conformace can cartainly rejected; it is not and strike it out, and the conference can certainly re-instate it if upon strike it out, and the conference can certainly re-instate it if upon examination the proper information is furnished.

Mr. MERRIMON. I have no personal knowledge about this matter further than that Mr. Erwin, I know, was counsel for the Indians, but what his fees amounted to, when due, and how they were to be paid, I do not know. I only know he was counsel, and I dare say he is entitled to the money or this provision would not have been inserted in the House bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I think very likely the Committee on Appropriations had not sufficient information to justify them in recommending the appropriation; and, therefore, we struck it out, and if it is correct we can put it in in conference, as I suppose we shall have a conference on this bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1427, after the word "the" to strike out the words "Commissioner of Indian Affairs" and insert the words "Secretary of the Interior;" and in line 1429, after the word "appropriation," to strike out the word "bill" and insert "act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 1433 to insert:

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to employ counsel to defend suits now pending against the North Carolina Cherokees, $1,500; said amount to be expended out of the funds in the United States Treasury belonging to said North Carolina Cherokees.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1455 after the word "advertising," to insert the words "at rates not exceeding regular commercial rates;" in line 1457, after the word "twenty," to insert the word "five;" and in the same line after the word "dollars," to insert the words "to be available immediately;" so as to read:

To pay the expenses of purchasing goods and supplies, under contract, for the Indian service, including advertising, at rates not exceeding regular commercial rates, inspection, and all other expenses connected therewith, including telegraphing, $25,000, to be available immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 1461 to increase the appropriation "for the support of schools not otherwise provided for, for the tion "for the support of schools not otherwise provided for, for the support of industrial schools, and for other educational purposes for the Indian tribes," from $25,000 to $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was after line 1462 to insert:

For the services, at not exceeding fifty cents per day each, of Indian police in maintaining order and prohibiting illegal traffic in liquor on the several Indian reservations, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOGY. I wish to reserve that amendment when we get into

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri asks that that amendment be reserved. It will be reserved.

The next amendment was to insert, after line 1466:

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the care and support of the Otter Tail, Pillager, Pembina, and Mississippi Chippewa Indians, on the White Earth reservation in Minnesota, and to assist them in their agricultural operations, $5,000; and for the erection of a suitable building for a grist-mill in connection with the saw-mill on said reservation, $5,000; in all, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was to insert, after line 1475:

The next amendment was to insert, after line 1475:

